Statement of Principles of Internal Revenue Tax Administration

The function of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Internal Revenue Code. Tax policy for raising revenue is determined by Congress.

With this in mind, it is the duty of the Service to carry out that policy by correctly applying the laws enacted by Congress; to determine the reasonable meaning of various Code provisions in light of the Congressional purpose in enacting them; and to perform this work in a fair and impartial manner, with neither a government nor a taxpayer point of view.

At the heart of administration is interpretation of the Code. It is the responsibility of each person in the Service, charged with the duty of interpreting the law, to try to find the true meaning of the statutory provision and not to adopt a strained construction in the belief that he or she is "protecting the revenue." The revenue is properly protected only when we ascertain and apply the true meaning of the statute.

The Service also has the responsibility of applying and administering the law in a reasonable, practical manner. Issues should only be raised by examining officers when they have merit, never arbitrarily or for trading purposes. At the same time, the examining officer should never hesitate to raise a meritorious issue. It is also important that care be exercised not to raise an issue or to ask a court to adopt a position inconsistent with an established Service position.

Administration should be both reasonable and vigorous. It should be conducted with as little delay as possible and with great courtesy and considerateness. It should never try to overreach, and should be reasonable within the bounds of law and sound administration. It should, however, be vigorous in requiring compliance with law and it should be relentless in its attack on unreal tax devices and fraud.

These principles of tax administration were previously published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin as Revenue Procedure 64-22, 1964-1 (Part I) C.B. 689. They are restated here to emphasize their importance to all employees of the Internal Revenue Service.

Introduction

The Internal Revenue Bulletin is the authoritative instrument of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for announcing official rulings and procedures of the Internal Revenue Service and for publishing Treasury Decisions, Executive Orders, Tax Conventions, legislation, court decisions, and other items of general interest.

It is the policy of the Service to publish in the Bulletin all substantive rulings necessary to promote a uniform application of the tax laws, including all rulings that supersede, revoke, modify, or amend any of those previously published in the Bulletin. All published rulings apply retroactively unless otherwise indicated. Procedures relating solely to matters of internal management are not published; however, statements of internal practices and procedures that affect the rights and duties of taxpayers are published.

Revenue rulings represent the conclusions of the Service on the application of the law to the pivotal facts stated in the revenue ruling. In those based on positions taken in rulings to taxpayers or technical advice to Service field offices, identifying details and information of a confidential nature are deleted to prevent unwarranted invasions of privacy and to comply with statutory requirements.

Rulings and procedures reported in the Bulletin do not have the force and effect of Treasury Department Regulations, but they may be used as precedents. Unpublished rulings will not be relied on, used, or cited as precedents by Service personnel in the disposition of other cases. In applying published rulings and procedures, the effect of subsequent legislation, regulations, court decisions, rulings, and procedures must be considered, and Service personnel and others concerned are cautioned against reaching the same conclusions in other cases unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same.

Cumulative Bulletin 1988-1 is a consolidation of all items of permanent nature published in the weekly Bulletins 1988-1 through 1988-26 for the period of January 1 through June 30, 1988.

The Internal Revenue Cumulative Bulletin is prepared in three parts as follows:

Part I.—1986 Code.
This part includes rulings and decisions based on provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. Arrangement is sequential according to Code and regulations sections. The code section is shown at the top of each page.

Part II.—Treaties and Tax Legislation.
This part is divided into two subparts as follows: Subpart A, Tax Conventions, and Subpart B, Legislation and Related Committee Reports.

Part III.—Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous.
To the extent practicable, pertinent cross references to these subjects are contained in the other Parts and Subparts. Included in this Part is a list of persons disbarred or suspended from practice before the Internal Revenue Service.

Notice of Proposed Rulemaking
The preambles and text of proposed regulations that were published in the Federal Register during this six-month period are printed in this section.

The Bulletin Index-Digest System, a research and reference service supplementing the Bulletin, may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents on a subscription basis. It consists of four Services: Service No. 1, Income Tax; Service No. 2, Estate and Gift Taxes; Service No. 3, Employment Taxes; Service No. 4; Excise Taxes. Each Service consists of a basic volume and a cumulative supplement that provides (1) finding lists of items published in the Bulletin, (2) digests of revenue rulings, revenue procedures, and other published items, and other published items, and (3) topical indexes of Public Laws, Treasury Decisions, and Tax Conventions.

Definition of Terms

Revenue rulings and revenue procedures (hereinafter referred to as "rulings") that have an effect on previous rulings use the following defined terms to describe the effect:

Amplified describes a situation where no change is being made in a prior published position, but the prior position is being extended to apply to a variation of the fact situation set forth therein. Thus, if an earlier ruling held that a principle applied to A, and the new ruling holds that the same principle also applies to B, the earlier ruling is amplified. (Compare with modified, below).

Clarified is used in those instances where the language in a prior ruling is being made clear because the language has caused, or may cause, some confusion. It is not used where a position in a prior ruling is being changed.

Distinguished describes a situation where a ruling mentions a previously published ruling and points out an essential difference between them.

Modified is used where the substance of a previously published position is being changed. Thus, if a prior ruling held that a principle applied to A but not to B, and the new ruling holds that it applies to both A and B, the prior ruling is modified because it corrects a published position. (Compare with amplified and clarified, above).

Obsoleted describes a previously published ruling that is not considered determinative with respect to future transactions. This term is most commonly used in a ruling that lists previously published rulings that are obsoleted because of changes in law or regulations. A ruling may also be obsoleted because the substance has been included in regulations subsequently adopted.

Revoked describes situations where the position in the previously published ruling is not correct and the correct position is being stated in the new ruling.

Superseded describes a situation where the new ruling does nothing more than restate the substance and situation of a previously published ruling (or rulings). Thus, the term is used to republish under the 1986 Code and regulations the same position published under the 1939 Code and regulations. The term is also used when it is desired to republish in a single ruling a series of situations, names, etc., that were previously published over a period of time in separate rulings. If the new ruling does more than restate the substance of a prior ruling, a combination of terms is used. For example, modified and superseded describes a situation where the substance of a previously published ruling is being changed in part and is continued without change in part and it is desired to restate the valid portion of the previously published ruling in a new ruling that is self contained. In this case the previously published ruling is first modified and then, as modified, is superseded.

Supplemented is used in situations in which a list, such as a list of the names of countries, is published in a ruling and that list is expanded by adding further names in subsequent rulings. After the original ruling has been supplemented several times, a new ruling may be published that includes the list in the original ruling and the additions, and supersedes all prior rulings in the series.

Suspended is used in rare situations to show that the previous published rulings will not be applied pending some future action such as the issuance of new or amended regulations, the outcome of cases in litigation, or the outcome of a Service study.

Cumulative List of Announcements Relating to Decisions of the Tax Court Published in the Internal Revenue Bulletin from January 1, 1988 thru June 30, 1988

It is the policy of the Internal Revenue Service to announce in the Internal Revenue Bulletin at the earliest practicable date the determination of the Commissioner to acquiesce or not acquiesce in a decision of the Tax Court which disallows a deficiency in tax determined by the Commissioner to be due.

Notice that the Commissioner has acquiesced or nonacquiesced in a decision of the Tax Court relates only to the issue or issues decided adversely to the Government.

Actions of acquiescences in adverse decisions shall be relied on by Revenue officers and others concerned as conclusions of the Service only to the application of the law to the facts in the particular case. Caution should be exercised in extending the application of the decision to a similar case unless the facts and circumstances are substantially the same, and consideration should be given to the effect of new legislation, regulations, and rulings as well as subsequent court decisions and actions thereon.

Acquiescence in a decision means acceptance by the Service of the conclusion reached, and does not necessarily mean acceptance and approval of any or all of the reasons assigned by the court for its conclusions.

No announcements are made in the Bulletin with respect to memorandum opinions of the tax court.

The announcements published in the weekly Internal Revenue Bulletins are consolidated semiannually and annually. The semiannual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for July and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the first half of the year and the annual consolidation appears in the first Bulletin for the following January and in the Cumulative Bulletin for the last half of the year.

The Commissioner ACQUIESCES in the following decisions:

Taxpayer	Docket No.	Report

[1] Acquiescence relating to whether an asset, which the taxpayer holds out for both lease and sale and which the taxpayer has previously elected to depreciate under the Class Life Asset Depreciation Range (CLADR) system set forth in section 1.167(a)-11 of the regulations, must be removed from the appropriate vintage account and its accumulated depreciation removed from the depreciation reserve of the vintage account when the asset is sold during the regular course of business after having initially been leased.

[2] Acquiescence relating to whether in cases where the Tax Court has jurisdiction to redetermine a deficiency in the underlying income tax, does the court also have jurisdiction to determine overpayments of additions to tax under sections 6651(a)(1), 6651(a)(2), and 6654 of the Code, with respect to that portion of the additions to tax applied to income tax reported on the return.

[3] Acquiescence relating to whether petitions can obtain small tax case designation under section 7463 of the Code and Tax Court Rules 170 et seq by conceding a certain monetary portion of respondent's deficiency determination without conceding the underlying issue which originated the notice of deficiency.

[4] Acquiescence relating to whether the transactions in gold were part of petitioner's commodity futures trade or business so that the interest incurred to carry the gold was not subject to the investment interest limitation of section 163(d) of the Code.

[5] Nonacquiescence relating to whether an accrual method taxpayer must include in its gross income for 1975 amounts representing claimed refunds of New York State franchise taxes and New York City general corporate taxes paid for 1972 which became refundable by virtue of a 1975 net operating loss carried back to 1972.

[6] Nonacquiescence relating to whether petitioner's constructive receipt of a Keogh account distribution by virtue of the government's levy on the account causes the Keogh owner to also be liable to the 10 percent premature distribution tax under section 72(m)(5) of the Code.

[7] Nonacquiescence relating to whether, in the absence of the relevant Postal Service Form 3877, respondent can prove the mailing and date of mailing of the statutory notice of deficiency by means of testimony showing the custom and habit of respondent's employee regarding the mailing of statutory notices.

Section 42.—Low-Income Housing Credit

Low-income housing credit; January 1988 appropriate percentages. This revenue ruling provides guidance to taxpayers concerning the general methodology that the Treasury Department will use in computing the monthly appropriate percentages for the 70-percent present value credit and the 30-pecent present value credit. The appropriate percentages for the 70-percent present value credit and the 30-percent present value credit for January 1988 are set forth. The appropriate percentages for succeeding months will be announced in the monthly revenue ruling containing the applicable federal rates.

Rev. Rul. 88-6

Section 42(a) of the Internal Revenue Code, which was added by section 252 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 106, provides that the amount of the low-income housing credit determined under section 42 for any tax year in the credit period is an amount equal to the "applicable percentage" of the qualified basis of each qualified low-income building. Section 42(f)(1) defines the term "credit period" with respect to any building as the period of 10 tax years beginning with the tax year in which the building is placed in service or, at the election of the taxpayer, the succeeding tax year.

In the case of any qualified low-income building placed in service by the taxpayer after 1987, section 42(b)(2)(A) of the Code provides that the term "applicable percentage" means the appropriate percentage prescribed by the Secretary for the month in which the building is placed in service. Section 42(b)(2)(B) provides that the percentages prescribed by the Secretary for any month shall be percentages that will yield, over a 10-year period, amounts of credit that have a present value equal to (i) 70 percent of the qualified basis of new buildings that are not federally subsidized for the tax year, and (ii) 30 percent of the qualified basis of existing buildings and new buildings that are federally subsidized for the tax year.

Under section 42(b)(2)(C) of the Code, the present value under subparagraph (B) of section 42(b)(2) is determined (i) as of the last day of the first year of the 10-year period referred to in section 42(b)(2)(B), (ii) by using a discount rate equal to 72 percent of the average of the federal mid-term rate and the federal long-term rate applicable under section 1274(d)(1) to the month in which the building was placed in service and compounded annually, and (iii) by assuming that the credit allowable under section 42 for any year is received on the last day of such year.

The formula used to calculate the appropriate percentages for the 70-percent and 30-percent present value credits is shown in Table 1.

Table 1

Calculation of the Appropriate Percentage

Let:

AFR_M = mid-term applicable federal rate with an annual period for compounding, expressed as a percent

AFR_L = long-term applicable federal rate with an annual period for compounding, expressed as a percent

$i = (1.0 - 0.28) \times ([AFR_M + AFR_L] \div 200)$

$PV = 1.0 + ([1.0 - (1.0 \div [1.0 + i]^9)] \div i)$

If AP_{70} stands for the appropriate percentage for the 70-percent present value credit and AP_{30} stands for the appropriate percentage for the 30-percent present value credit, then, to express AP_{70} and AP_{30} as percents:

$AP_{70} = 70 \div PV$

$AP_{30} = 30 \div PV$

The model on the basis of which the above computations are made assumes 10 equal annual credit amounts. The legislative history contemplates that such a pattern of credits is to be used for these computations. See generally S. Rep. No. 313, 99th Cong., 2d Sess. 759-60 (1986), 1986-3 (Vol. 3) C.B. 759-60. Thus, the computations yield the same appropriate percentages for all buildings placed in service in a given month, regardless of whether taxpayers make the election under section 42(f)(1) of the Code to defer the credit period and regardless of the extent to which section 42(f)(2) causes the credit amounts actually received to deviate from the model described above.

The appropriate percentages determined under section 42(b)(2) of the Code for buildings that are placed in service in January 1988 are as follows:

9.15% for the 70-percent present value credit.

3.92% for the 30-perecent present value credit.

Because the computation of the monthly appropriate percentages is based in part on an average of the long-term and mid-term applicable federal rates, for months after January 1988 the monthly appropriate percentages for the 70-percent and 30-percent present value credits will be published in the monthly revenue ruling containing the applicable federal rates.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953; SUBCHAPTER H, PART 602—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Investment Credit for Qualified Progress Expenditures

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to the investment credit for qualified progress expenditures. Changes in the applicable tax law were made by the Tax Reduction Act of 1975 [1975-1 C.B. 545], the Tax Reform Act of 1976 [1976-3 C.B. (Vol. 1)1], and the Revenue Act of 1978 [1978-3 C.B. (Vol. 1)1]. These regulations provide the public with guidance needed to comply with the law.

DATES: The amendments to the Income Tax Regulations under the Tax Reduction Act of 1975 (1975 Act) (new §1.46-5) are effective upon publication and apply to taxable years ending after December 31, 1974. The amendments under the Tax Reform Act of 1976 (1976 Act) (§1.46-5(m) as applied to certain property) are effective upon publication and apply to taxable years ending after December 31, 1976. The amendments under section 312(b)(2) of the Revenue Act of 1978 (§1.46-5(m) as applied to certain property) are effective upon publication and apply to taxable years ending after December 31, 1978.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains final amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 46(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, relating to the investment credit for qualified progress expenditures. These regulations were published in proposed form in the FEDERAL REGISTER on January 30, 1979 (44 FR 5910). A public hearing was held on June 27, 1979. After consideration of all comments regarding the proposed amendments, those amendments are adopted, as revised, by this Treasury decision.

Before the 1975 Act, the investment credit was available only in the year in which property was placed in service. Section 46(d) (as added by the 1975 Act) allows taxpayers to elect the investment credit for qualified progress expenditures made during construction of certain property. The property must be new section 38 property that takes at least two years to construct and has an estimated useful life of 7 years of more.

This Treasury decision adds a new §1.46-5 to provide rules for claiming the investment credit under section 46(d) for qualified progress expenditures. Under these rules, qualified progress expenditures made during a taxable year are added to a taxpayer's qualified investment otherwise determined under §1.46-3 for that year. However, expenditures made in a taxable year beginning before 1980 are not allowed in full in computing qualified investment for that year, but are phased-in over a 5-year period.

The final regulations amend §§1.47-1 and 1.47-3 to provide rules for recapturing the investment credit for progress expenditure property. In general, those rules are similar to the rules for recapture for other section 38 property. Special rules apply, however, for recapture involving certain leased property.

The final regulations also reflect certain amendments made by section 301 of the 1975 Act, sections 1701(b) and 1703 of the Tax Reform Act of 1976, and sections 311(a) and 312(b)(2) of the Revenue Act of 1978. Section 301 of the 1975 Act provides an alternative limitation on the amount of tax liability that may be offset by investment credit for public utility property. Sections 1701(b) and 1703 of the 1976 Act provide a similar limitation for railroad and airline property. Section 312(b)(2) of the 1978 Act consolidates the alternative limitations on railroad and airline property into sections 46(a)(8) before its repeal by section 205(b)(2)(A) of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982. The final regulations apply the alternative limitation to progress expenditure property that is public utility, railroad, or airline property for the period that those limitations are in effect.

The final regulations do not reflect subsequent amendments to the Code, such as those relating to recovery property made to section 46(d) by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, or the repeal of the alternative limitations on the investment credit for utility, airline, and railroad property.

DEFINITION OF CONSTRUCTION

Section 46(d)(2)(A) defines progress expenditure property, in part, as any property which is being constructed by or for the taxpayer, which has a normal construction period of two years or more, and which will be new section 38 property in the hands of the taxpayer when it is placed in service. Section 1.46-5(c)(2)(ii) of the proposed regulations defined construction as building or manufacturing property from materials and component parts. That section further provided that construction did not include activities such as cultivating orchards, raising livestock, or creating a motion picture film or videotape. Some commentators argued that the exclusion of these activities from the meaning of construction is not supported by section 46(d) or the legislative history. The commentators contended specifically that orchards may be treated as new section 38 property in the year in which they reach an income-producing stage and that there is no basis to exclude any particular type of new section 38 property from progress expenditure treatment. They also argued that the proposed regulations were inconsistent with Rev. Rul. 69-249 (1969-1 C.B. 31), which held that the underlying purpose and principles of "construction" as used in section 48(b) of the Code are equally applicable to the planting and development of an orchard.

As evidenced by the examples of ships, pipelines, and machinery in the legislative history (H.R. Rep. No. 19, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. 37-43 (1975)), Congress intended in defining progress expenditure property that the term "construction" have its ordinary meaning. Section 48(b) contains a transitional rule which determines the portion of the basis of property to be taken into account when computing the investment credit. For purposes of the transitional rule, property is divided into two categories: property constructed by the taxpayer and property acquired by the taxpayer. Although an orchard is not constructed in the ordinary sense of the word, an orchard was properly assigned to that category in order to apply section 48(b) to the facts of the ruling. Because the provisions of sections 46(d) and 48(b) have different purposes, a similar stretching of the meaning of "construction" is neither mandated nor intended in order to implement section 46(d). Accordingly, §1.46-5(d) of the final regulations provides that property, which is being constructed by or for the taxpayer, is progress expenditure property only if it is built or manufactured from materials and component parts. Thus, progress expenditure property does not include property such as orchards, vineyards, livestock, or motion picture films or videotapes.

Another commentator suggested that the proposed definition of construction would arguably exclude from the definition of qualified progress expenditures for non-self-constructed property an amount paid for designs or plans or to acquire materials to be used in construction because it is not an amount paid "for construction" under section 46(d)(3)(B)(i). To clarify the interpretation of "for construction", §1.46-5(j)(1) of the final regulations provides examples of expenditures for construction of non-self-constructed property. Whether an amount paid to acquire materials for use by a taxpayer's employees in construction of a portion of non-self-constructed property is a qualified progress expenditure is determined under §1.46-5(j)(2) of the final regulations (see discussion of qualified progress expenditures below). Materials acquired by a taxpayer and delivered to a manufacturer or contractor for construction may constitute an amount paid in the form of property under §§1.46-5(d)(3)(iii) and 1.46-5(j)(4) of the proposed and final regulations, respectively.

NORMAL CONSTRUCTION PERIOD

General Rule

Under section 46(d)(2)(B), the normal construction period begins on the date physical work on construction of the property begins and ends on the date when it is expected that the property will be available for placing in service. For a determination of the normal construction period, §1.46-5(c)(2)(i) of the proposed regulations provided that physical work on construction does not include preliminary activities such as planning or designing, securing financing, exploring, researching or developing. One commentator recommended that the final regulations provide a general rule and examples describing the types of activities that constitute the commencement of physical work on construction. Other commentators suggested that the normal construction period should be measured from the earlier of the beginning of on-site construction of progress expenditure property or the start of off-site manufacture of a component unique to the progress expenditure property. Instead of a general rule, §1.46-5(e)(1) of the final regulations provides that the time when physical work on construction commences is based on the facts and circumstances of each case, because of the diversity of activities that may mark the onset of construction. That section also provides that physical work on construction may include the manufacture of a component to be placed in service as part of the property if designated specifically for that property. Generally, physical work on construction does not include physical activity that is not necessary to complete construction of the property, nor does it include physical work on construction of a building or other property that will not be new section 38 property when placed in service.

Taxpayers also observed that a blanket description of research and development as not constituting the beginning of physical work on construction was overly broad and could be construed to disqualify work on property any part of the cost of which is deductible under section 174. Accordingly, these activities have been removed from the list of excluded activities in §1.46-5(e)(1)(i) of the final regulations. Section 1.46-5(e)(1)(iii) clarifies that research and development activities in a laboratory or experimental setting are not physical work on construction. Whether other activities mark the beginning of physical work on construction will be determined from the facts and circumstances of each case as provided in §1.46-5(e)(1)(ii) of the final regulations.

Section 1.46-5(c)(2)(iv) of the proposed regulations, interpreting section 46(d)(2)(B)(ii), provided that the normal construction period ends on the date it is expected the property will be available to be placed in service. One commentator believed that the phrase in the statute "available for placing in service" should be interpreted in the same manner as the phrase "placed in service" so that the regulations under section 46(d) coincide with §1.46-3(d). The rule remains unchanged in the final regulations (§1.46-5(e)(1)(iv)). There is no support in the legislative history for construing obviously different phrases similarly. Further, §1.46-3(d) provides rules for determining when section 38 property is placed in service for purposes of computing qualified investment and claiming the investment credit in the proper taxable year. The provision of the final regulations only determines the time when construction of property has been completed, not when the investment credit for that property is allowed.

Estimate of normal construction period

Section 1.46-5(c)(2)(iii) of the proposed regulations required a taxpayer to attach to its income tax return a statement of the basis relied upon in estimating the normal construction period. In response to several comments, §1.46-5(e)(2) of the final regulations requires a taxpayer to attach a statement only if the estimate is not based on normal industry practice. The rule in the final regulations is prospective only.

Integrated unit

Both the proposed and final regulations provide that, if property is to be placed in service as part of an integrated unit, the normal construction period is determined for the unit as a whole. Under §1.46-5(c)(2)(v) of the proposed regulations, property is part of an integrated unit only if the operation of that item is essential to the performance of the function to which the unit is assigned. Although one commentator urged that the definition was too restrictive and difficult to apply, the definition remains unchanged in §1.46-5(e)(3)(ii) of the final regulations. The definition has been amplified, however, to explain that property essential to the performance of the function to which the unit is assigned includes property the use of which is significantly connected to that function and which effects the safe, proper, or efficient performance of the unit. The final regulations also provide that generally property must be placed in service at the same time to be considered part of the same integrated unit.

In response to several comments, §1.46-5(e)(3)(iii) clarifies that physical work on construction of an integrated unit may commence at a site different from the main construction site of the unit.

QUALIFIED PROGRESS EXPENDITURES

Whether progress expenditure property is self-constructed or non-self-constructed determines what amounts attributable to construction of the property may be treated as qualified progress expenditures. Self-constructed property, as defined in section 46(d)(5)(A), is property more than half of the construction expenditures for which it is reasonable to believe will be made directly by the taxpayer. All other property is non-self-constructed (section 46(d)(5)(B)). Under section 46(d)(3)(B), qualified progress expenditures for non-self-constructed property are amounts actually paid to another person for construction but only to the extent that the payments represent progress in construction. Progress is generally measured by the percentage of construction completed during a taxable year. Construction is presumed to occur not more rapidly than ratably throughout the construction period unless the taxpayer establishes otherwise by clear and convincing evidence. For self-constructed property, qualified progress expenditures are amounts properly chargeable to capital account during a taxable year with respect to that property (section 46(d)(3)(A)). Section 1.46-5(h)(1) of the final regulations makes clear that those amounts include both direct costs (for example, labor, materials, and parts) and indirect costs (for example, overhead and insurance). Because progress is expected to correspond to progress expenditures in the case of self-constructed property, the expenditures are not subject to the requirement of actual payment and the percentage-of-completion limitation applicable to expenditures for non-self-constructed property.

Commentators observed that the proposed regulations did not adequately consider property that is not entirely self-constructed or non-self-constructed. Section 1.46-5(h)(2) of the final regulations provides that amounts paid by the taxpayer to another person for construction of a portion of an item of self-constructed property are not subject to the limitations of section 46(d)(3)(B) (relating to actual payment and progress in construction) imposed upon expenditures for non-self-constructed property. For example, the percentage-of-completion limitation does not apply to payments made to a manufacturer for a turbine used in a ship if that ship is self-constructed property. Those payments are eligible for progress expenditure treatment when properly chargeable to capital account. Section 1.46-5(h)(3) of the final regulations provides rules for determining when amounts paid or incurred with respect to self-constructed property are properly chargeable to capital account.

For property that is non-self-constructed, but for which the taxpayer makes some construction expenditures directly, section 1.46-5(j)(2) of the final regulations provides that the rules of section 46(d)(3)(B) (relating to actual payment and progress in construction) and paragraph (j) of the regulations apply to determine if any expenditure (whether or not made directly by the taxpayer) is a qualified progress expenditure for non-self-constructed property. Wages actually paid to a taxpayer's employees are presumed to correspond to progress in construction. Other amounts, including expenditures for materials, parts, and overhead, must be actually paid, not borrowed from the payee, and attributable to progress made in construction.

Section 1.46-5(d)(3)(ii) of the proposed regulations required that a taxpayer apply the percentage-of-completion limitation to amounts paid to each manufacturer or contractor in each taxable year. Thus, progress is measured on a manufacturer by manufacturer basis, so that the taxpayer takes into account only those progress expenditures made to a manufacturer that was [sic] made progress (H.R. Rep. No. 19, supra, at 39). In response to comments that the proposed rule is unduly burdensome if applied at a subcontractor level, §1.46-5(j)(3) of the final regulations applies the requirement only with respect to persons that have a direct contractual relationship with the taxpayer (taking into account the progress made by those persons' subcontractors), rather than with respect to each subcontractor.

If, after the first year of construction, there is a change in either the total cost to the taxpayer or the total cost of construction by another person, §1.46–5(d)(3)(vi) of the proposed regulations required the taxpayer to recompute the percentage-of-completion limitation on the basis of the revised cost. Under the proposed rule, the recomputation would affect only years subsequent to the taxable year of change. Commentators contend that the recomputation should also apply to the taxable year in which the change occurs. This suggestion is adopted in §1.46–5(j)(6)(ii) of the final regulations.

While §1.46–5(c)(2)(i) of the proposed regulations excluded certain preliminary activities from a determination of the normal construction period, the proposed regulations did not specifically exclude from the definition of qualified progress expenditures amounts incurred prior to the commencement of the normal construction period. Taxpayers suggested that, once property has been determined to have a normal construction period of two years or more, such amounts should be eligible for progress expenditure treatment and should be included in qualified investment when made, or in any case, no later than in the year in which physical work on construction commences. The suggestion is not adopted. The regulations interpret the statute in a manner consistent with the legislative history, which provides that "progress expenditures", as well as "progress", are not to be taken into account to the extent that they occur before the start of the normal construction period (H.R. Rep. No. 19, supra, at 39). Accordingly, §1.46–5(g)(2)(i) of the final regulations excludes such amounts from the definition of qualified progress expenditures. That section also summarizes other amounts that are ineligible for progress expenditure treatment.

Section 46(d)(4)(A) does provide a limited "catch-up" rule. Under that section, property which is to be a component of, or otherwise included in, progress expenditure property is to be taken into account (1) at a time not earlier than the time it is irrevocably devoted to use in the progress expenditure property, and (2) as if the taxpayer (at that time) had expended an amount equal to that portion of the cost of the component which is properly chargeable to capital account with respect to the property. Thus, under §1.46–5(h)(3)(i), expenditures for component parts and materials for self-constructed property may not be considered chargeable to capital account until physical work on construction begins and the materials or parts become irrevocably devoted to use in the property.

Taxpayers have suggested that section 46(d)(4)(A) is also applicable to non-self-constructed property, and that once a component part is irrevocably devoted to the property and chargeable to capital account, the taxpayer is treated as having expended (i.e., paid) an amount equal to the cost of the component part that has been charged to capital account. This amount, therefore, is a qualified progress expenditure without the application of the payment, progress, or borrowing rule. This suggestion is not adopted. Section 46(d)(4)(A) refers to the cost of a component part or other property which is properly chargeable to capital account with respect to the progress expenditure property in which the component part or other property is to be included, thus paralleling the definition of qualified progress expenditures for self-constructed property in section 46(d)(3)(A). Furthermore, the committee report refers specifically to self-constructed property in its explanation of "irrevocably devoted" as used in section 46(d)(4)(A) (H.R. Rep. No. 19, supra, at 38). There is no indication that Congress intended section 46(d)(4)(A) to override the payment, progress, and borrowing rules.

DEFINITION OF SELF-CONSTRUCTED PROPERTY

Self-constructed property is defined in section 46(d)(5)(A) as property more than half of the construction expenditures for which it is reasonable to believe will be made directly by the taxpayer. Under §1.46–5(d)(5) of the proposed regulations, construction expenditures are considered made "directly" by the taxpayer only if the taxpayer uses its own employees to construct the property. The majority of comments objected that this rule is unduly restrictive and inconsistent with the interpretation of the terms "construction completed by the taxpayer" in section 48(b) and "constructed by the taxpayer" in §1.48–2(b)(1).

Under §1.48–2(b)(1), property is constructed by the taxpayer if the work is done for him in accordance with his specifications. Courts interpreting this provision have focused on the taxpayer's right of control over construction (Public Service Company of New Mexico v. United States, 431 F.2d 980 (10th Cir. 1970); Lykes Bros. Steamship Co., Inc. v. United States, 513 F.2d 1342 (Ct. Cl. 1975)). In both cases, the property for which the investment credit was claimed was held to be acquired within the meaning of section 48(b)(2), rather than constructed by the taxpayer. The Service has announced that it will follow Lykes Bros. and a similar case, Pacific Far East Line, Inc. v. United States, 513 F.2d 1355 (Ct. Cl. 1975), in cases with identical factual situations. If a taxpayer engages the services of a contractor to construct property and the facts and circumstances show sufficient involvement of the taxpayer in the construction, the property is considered constructed by the taxpayer for purposes of section 48(b) (Rev. Rul. 77–107, 1977–1 C.B. 6).

As discussed in connection with the definition of construction, sections 46(d) and 48(b) have different purposes and need not be read in pari materia. Congress, aware of the distinction in section 48(b) between property constructed by the taxpayer and acquired property, used different terminology and established two different categories of progress expenditure property under section 46(d). The operating rules of section 46(d) governing expenditures for non-self-constructed property are designed to ensure that the investment credit is allowed only if the taxpayer has borne sufficient economic detriment and to prevent manipulation of the timing of the credit. These policy concerns exist whether the property is constructed by either a closely supervised or a completely independent contractor. Section 1.46–5(k)(1) of the final regulations, therefore, adopts the proposed rule for determining whether expenditures for construction are made directly by the taxpayer.

Section 1.46–5(k)(1) clarifies that construction expenditures include both direct costs, such as wages and materials, and indirect costs, such as overhead, attributable to construction of the property. Expenditures are considered made directly by the taxpayer only to the extent that the expenditures directly benefit the construction of the property by the taxpayer's employees. Thus, expenditures for material and supplies, which are used by employees of the taxpayer to construct progress expenditure property, are considered made directly by the taxpayer.

ELECTION

Under §1.46-5(g)(1) of the proposed regulations, the election under section 46(d) is binding for all progress expenditure property constructed or acquired by the taxpayer. Several commentators argued that the election should be made on a project-by-project basis. Because section 46(d) prescribes the timing of a credit, its effect is analogous to prescribing a method of accounting. The final regulations adopt the proposed rule, requiring a taxpayer to apply the progress expenditure election consistently to all eligible property.

Section 1.46-5(g)(1) of the proposed regulations also requires that the election under section 46(d) be made by each partner rather than by a partnership. The suggestion that the partnership make the election is not adopted because the investment credit affects the computation of tax and not the computation of taxable income. Thus, section 703(b), which generally requires a partnership to make elections affecting the computation of taxable income, is not applicable to the election under section 46(d). Section 1.46-5(o)(1) of the final regulations adopts the proposed rule to give each partner the flexibility to choose progress expenditure treatment and to ensure that the election binds the taxpayer even if it leaves the partnership. The final regulations also make clear that the election applies to all of a partner's progress expenditure property including property held in its own capacity.

Under §1.46-5(g)(2) of the proposed regulations, an election under section 46(d) must be made by filing a written statement containing specified information with the original return for the first taxable year to which the election will apply. In response to several comments, this requirement is not adopted in the final regulations. Instead §1.46-5(o)(2) provides that the election under section 46(d) is to be made on Form 3468. A transitional rule is also provided so that elections before the adoption of the final regulations will not be invalidated.

TRANSFERRED PROPERTY

Under §1.46-5(a)(2) of the proposed regulations, a transferee is entitled to qualified progress expenditures in the year the transferor, as a result of the transfer, must recapture the credit for progress expenditures previously allowed, and in subsequent years, if the transferee otherwise would be entitled to claim the credit with respect to that property. Taxpayers commented that it was unclear whether the transferee could treat the full amount paid to the transferor as qualified progress expenditures in addition to future payments for construction.

Section 1.46-5(r) of the final regulations contains a more comprehensive rule for transferred property with respect to which the transferor's election does not carry over to the transferee, and with respect to which the transferor must recapture the credit (if claimed). The transferee may treat the amount paid to the transferor as a payment for construction of the property to the extent that (A) it is properly includible in the basis of the property, (B) the taxpayer can show the amount is attributable to construction costs paid or chargeable to capital account after physical work on construction of the property began, and (C) it does not exceed the amount by which the transferor has increased qualified investment for qualified progress expenditures incurred with respect to the property (or would have increased qualified investment if the transferor had made an election under section 46(d)), plus any amount that would have been treated as a qualified progress expenditure by the transferor had the property not been transferred.

Once the status of the property as self-constructed property or non-self-constructed property in the hands of the transferee has been determined, all rules governing that type of property apply in determining the amount of the credit for qualified progress expenditures allowed to the transferee for that property. For example, the transferred property must have a normal construction period of two years or more in the hands of the transferee. Also, if the property is non-self-constructed property in the hands of the transferee, the transferee's expenditures with respect to the property (including the amounts paid to the transferor that are treated as amounts paid for construction) are subject to the limitations of section 46(d)(3)(B) (relating to actual payment and progress in construction). In the case of non-self-constructed property, however, the transferee determines the limitations of section 46(d)(3)(B) using the normal construction period of the transferor.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291 AND REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this final rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required. The Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the final regulations contained herein are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these final regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6).

PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

The collection of information requirements contained in these regulations have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in accordance with the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. These requirements have been approved by OMB.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Parts 1 and 602 are amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.  Section 1.46-5 also issued under 26 U.S.C. 46(d)(6) and 26 U.S.C. 47(a)(3)(C).

Par. 2. Section 1.46-1 is amended by adding at the end of paragraph (g) a new paragraph (g)(6) and by adding at the end of paragraph (n) new examples (6) and (7) to read as set forth below.

§1.46-1 Determination of amount.

* * * * *

(g) Transitional rule for regular and ESOP credit. ***

(6) Qualified progress expenditures. For progress expenditure property that is constructed, reconstructed, or erected by the taxpayer within the meaning of §1.48-2(b), the ten-percent credit applies in the year the property is placed in service to the portion of the qualified investment that remains after reduction for qualified progress expenditures under section 46(c)(4), but only to the extent that the remaining qualified investment is attributable to construction, reconstruction, or erection after January 21, 1975. For progress expenditure property that is acquired by the taxpayer (within the meaning of §1.48-2(b)) after January 21, 1975, and placed in service after that date, the ten-percent credit applies in the year the property is placed in service to the entire portion of qualified investment that remains after reduction for qualified progress expenditures.

(n) Examples. ***

Example (6). (i) Corporation X, a calendar year taxpayer, constructs a ship on which it begins construction on January 1, 1973, and which, when placed in service on December 31, 1980, has a basis of $450,000. Of that amount, $100,000 is attributable to construction before January 22, 1975. X makes an election under section 46(d) (qualified progress expenditures) for taxable years after 1975.

(ii) For 1976, 1977, 1978, and 1979, qualified progress expenditures total $200,000. The ten-percent credit applies to those expenditures.

(iii) For 1980, qualified investment for the ship is $450,000. Under section 46(c)(4), X must reduce this amount by $200,000, the amount of qualified progress expenditures taken into account. The ten-percent credit applies to the portion of the remaining qualified investment attributable to construction after January 21, 1975 ($150,000). The seven-percent credit applies to the portion of qualified investment attributable to construction before January 22, 1975 ($100,000).

Example (7). (i) Corporation Y agrees to build a ship for Corporation X, which uses the calendar year. In 1973, Y begins construction of the ship which X acquires and places in service on December 31, 1980. X makes an election under section 46(d) for taxable years after 1974. The contract price is $400,000.

(ii) For 1975, 1976, 1977, 1978, and 1979, qualified progress expenditures total $250,000. The ten-percent credit applies to those expenditures.

(iii) For 1980, qualified investment for the ship is $400,000, which is the contract price. X must reduce qualified investment by $250,000, the amount of qualified progress expenditures. The ten-percent credit applies to the $150,000 of qualified investment that remains after reduction for qualified progress expenditures.

Par. 3. Section 1.46-3 is amended by adding a new sentence at the end of paragraph (a)(1) to read as follows:

§1.46-3 Qualified investment.

(a) In general. ***

(1)  See §1.46-5 for special rules for progress expenditure property.

* * * * *

Par. 4. A new §1.46-5 is added immediately after §1.46-4 to read as follows:

§1.46-5 Qualified progress expenditures.

(a) Effective date. This section applies to taxable years ending after December 31, 1974. This section reflects amendments to the Internal Revenue Code made only by the Tax Reduction Act of 1975, the Tax Reform Act of 1976, and the Revenue Act of 1978.

(b) General rule. Under section 46(d), a taxpayer may elect to take the investment credit for qualified progress expenditures (as defined in paragraph (g) of this section). In general, qualified progress expenditures are amounts paid (paid or incurred in the case of self-constructed property) for construction of progress expenditure property. The taxpayer must reasonably estimate that the property will take at least 2 years to construct and that the useful life of the property will be 7 years or more. Qualified progress expenditures may not be taken into account if made before the later of (i) January 22, 1975, or (ii) the first taxable year to which an election under section 46(d) applies. In general, qualified progress expenditures are not allowed for the year property is placed in service, nor for the first year or any subsequent year recapture is required under section 47(a)(3). There is a percentage limitation on qualified progress expenditures for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1980. For a special rule relating to transfers of progress expenditure property, see paragraph (r) of this section.

(c) Reduction of qualified investment. Under section 46(c)(4), a taxpayer must reduce qualified investment for the year property is placed in service by qualified progress expenditures taken into account by that person or a predecessor. A "predecessor" of a taxpayer is a person whose election under section 46(d) carries over the taxpayer under paragraph (o)(3) of this section.

(d) Progress expenditure property. Progress expenditure property is property constructed by or for the taxpayer, with a normal construction period of 2 years or more. The taxpayer must reasonably believe that the property will be new section 38 property with a useful life of 7 years or more when placed in service. Whether property is progress expenditure property is determined on the basis of facts known at the close of the taxable year of the taxpayer in which construction begins (or, if later, at the close of the first taxable year to which an election under section 46(d) applies). For purposes of this paragraph (d), property is constructed by or for the taxpayer only if it is built or manufactured from materials and component parts. Accordingly, progress expenditure property does not include property such as orchards, vineyards, livestock, or motion picture films or videotapes.

(e) Normal construction period—(1) In general. (i) The normal construction period is the period the taxpayer reasonably expects will be required to construct the property. The period begins on the date physical work on construction of the property commences and ends on the date the property is available to be placed in service. The normal construction period does not include, however, construction before January 22, 1975, nor construction before the first day of the first taxable year for which an election under section 46(d) is in effect. Physical work on construction of property does not include preliminary activities such as planning, designing, preparing blueprints, exploring, or securing financing.

(ii) The determination of the time when physical work on construction commences is based on the facts and circumstances of each case. Physical work on construction of property may include the physical work done by a subcontractor on a component specifically designated as part of the property. Also, the commencement of physical work on construction may occur at a site different from the main site of construction of the property. For example, if a shipyard orders a turbine before it begins work on building a ship, the normal construction period of the ship is measured from the time the subcontractor commences physical work on construction of the turbine (if it is normal for such work to precede the work of the main contractor).

(iii) Generally, physical work on construction does not include physical activity that is not necessary to complete construction of the property, nor does it include physical work on construction of a building or other property that will not be new section 38 property when placed in service. Physical work on construction also does not include research and development activities in a laboratory or experimental setting.

(iv) The normal construction period of property ends on the date it is expected the property will be available to be placed in service. Property is considered available to be placed in service when construction is completed and the property is available for its assigned function or available for delivery to the site of its assigned function. It is not necessary that property be in a state of readiness for a specifically assigned function. Nor is it necessary that it actually be delivered to the site of its assigned function.

(2) Estimates. Taxpayers should refer to normal industry practice in estimating the normal construction period of particular items. A different period may be used if special circumstances exist making it impractical to make the estimate on the basis of normal industry practice. The estimate must be based on information available at the close of the taxable year in which physical work on construction of the property begins, or, if later, at the close of the first taxable year for which an election under section 46(d) is in effect for the taxpayer. If the estimate is reasonable when made, the actual time it takes to complete the work is, in general, irrelevant in determining whether property is progress expenditure property. However, if there is a significant error in estimating the normal construction period, it may be evidence that the estimate was unreasonable when made. For taxable years ending after April 1, 1988, a taxpayer not relying on normal industry practice to estimate the normal construction period of particular property must attach to the tax return for the taxable year in which physical work on construction of the property beings (or, if later, the first taxable year for which an election under section 46(d) is in effect) a statement of the basis relied upon in estimating the normal construction period of the property.

(3) Integrated unit. (i) In determining whether property has a normal construction period of 2 years or more, property that will be placed in service separately is to be considered separately. For example, if two ships are contracted for at the same time, each ship is considered separately under this paragraph. However, for property that will be placed in service as an integrated unit, the taxpayer must determine the normal construction period of the integrated unit. If the normal construction period of the integrated unit is 2 years or more, the normal construction period of each item of new section 38 property that is a part of the integrated unit is considered to be 2 years or more. Thus, the normal construction period of an integrated unit may be 2 years or more even if no part of the unit has a normal construction period of 2 years or more.

(ii) Property is part of an integrated unit only if the operation of that item is essential to the performance of the function to which the unit is assigned. Property essential to the performance of the function to which the unit is assigned includes property the use of which is significantly connected to that function and which effects the safe, proper, or efficient performance of the unit. Generally, property must be placed in service at the same time to be considered part of the same integrated unit. Properties are not an integrated unit, however, solely because they are to be placed in service at the same time.

(iii) The normal construction period for an integrated unit begins on the date the normal construction period of the first item of new section 38 property that is part of the unit begins. It is not necessary that physical work commence at the main construction site of the integrated unit. The period ends on the date the last item of new section 38 property that is part of that unit is available to be placed in service. Property that is not new section 38 property, such as a building, is not considered part of an integrated unit for purposes of determining the normal construction period of that unit. For example, if a manufacturing plant has a normal construction period of two years or more but the equipment (i.e., new section 38 property) to be installed in the plant has a normal construction period of less than two years, the plant and the equipment do not constitute an integrated unit with a construction period of two years or more and the equipment is not progress expenditure property.

(4) Examples. The following examples illustrate this paragraph (e).

Example (1). On July 1, 1974, corporation X begins physical work on construction of a machine with an estimated useful life when placed in service of more than 7 years. For its taxable year ending June 30, 1975, X makes an election under section 46(d). For purposes of determining on June 30, 1975, whether the machine is "progress expenditure property", the normal construction period is treated as having begun on January 22, 1975. Thus, the machine will be considered to be progress expenditure property on June 30, 1975, only if the estimated time required to complete construction after June 30 is at least 18 months and 22 days (i.e., 2 years less the period January 22, 1975, through June 30, 1975).

Example (2). (1) Corporation X constructs a pipeline in two sections and simultaneously begins physical work on construction of each section on January 1, 1976. One section extends from city M to city N. The other extends from city N to city O. Oil will be transferred to storage tanks at both city N and city O. Corporation X also begins construction on January 1, 1976, of a pumping station necessary to the operation of the pipeline from city M to city N. Construction of a pumping station necessary to the operation of the pipeline from city N to city O begins on June 30, 1977. For 1976, corporation X makes an election under section 46(d).

(ii) The section of pipeline from city M to city N and the associated pumping station will be available to be placed in service on January 1, 1977. Construction of the section of the pipeline from city N to city O will be completed on June 30, 1977. However, that section of the pipeline will not be available to be placed in service until completion of the associated pumping station on January 1, 1978.

(iii) The section of pipeline from city M to city N and the section from city N to city O must be considered separately in determining the normal construction period of the property. Each section will be placed in service separately. However, each section of the pipeline and the associated pumping station may be considered an integrated unit. The pumping stations are essential to the operation of each section of pipeline. Each section of pipeline and the associated pumping station are placed in service at the same time.

(iv) The section of pipeline from city M to city N and the associated pumping station are not progress expenditure property, because the normal construction period of that unit is only 1 year (January 1, 1976, to January 1, 1977).

(v) The section of pipeline from city N to city O and the associated pumping station are progress expenditure property, because the normal construction of that integrated unit is 2 years (January 1, 1976, to January 1, 1978). It is immaterial that neither the construction period of that section of pipeline (January 1, 1976 to June 30, 1977) nor the construction period of the associated pumping station (June 30, 1977 to January 1, 1978) is 2 years.

(vi) Assume the pumping station associated with the pipeline from city N to city O includes backup pumping equipment that will be used only if the primary pumping equipment fails. The backup equipment is part of the integrated unit because it serves to effect the safe or efficient performance of the unit.

(f) New section 38 property with a 7 year useful life—(1) In general. The taxpayer must determine if property will be new section 38 property with a useful life of 7 years or more when placed in service. The determination must be made at the close of the taxable year in which construction begins or, if later, at the close of the first taxable year to which an election under section 46(d) applies for the taxpayer.

(2) Determination based on reasonably expected use. The determination of whether property will be "new section 38 property" (within the meaning of §§1.48-1 and 1.48-2) when placed in service must be based on the reasonably expected use of the property by the taxpayer. There is a presumption that property will be new section 38 property if it would be new section 38 property if placed in service by the taxpayer when the determination is made. For example, in determining if property is an integral part of manufacturing under section 48(a)(1)(B)(i), it will be presumed that property will be new section 38 property if the taxpayer is engaged in manufacturing when the determination is made. Also, significant steps taken to establish a trade or business will be evidence the taxpayer will be engaged in that trade or business when the property is placed in service.

(3) Estimated useful life. The determination of whether property will have an estimated useful life of 7 years of more when placed in service must be made by applying the principles of §1.46-3(e). If the estimated useful life is less than 7 years when the property is actually placed in service, the credit previously allowed under section 46(d) must be recomputed under section 47(a)(3)(B).

(g) Definition of qualified progress expenditures—(1) In general. A taxpayer's qualified progress expenditures are the sum of (i) qualified progress expenditures for self-constructed property (determined under paragraph (h) of this section), plus (ii) qualified progress expenditures for non-self-constructed property (determined under paragraph (j) of this section). Only amounts includible under §1.46-3(c) in the basis of new section 38 property may be considered as qualified progress expenditures.

(2) Excluded amounts. Qualified progress expenditures do not include:

(i) In the case of non-self-constructed property, amounts incurred (whether or not paid)—

(A) Before the normal construction period begins, or

(B) Before the later of January 22, 1975, or the first day of the first taxable year for which an election under section 46(d) applies for the taxpayer;

(ii) In the case of self-constructed property, amounts chargeable to capital account—

(A) Before the normal construction period begins, or

(B) Before the later of January 22, 1975, or the first day of the first taxable year for which an election under section 46(d) applies for the taxpayer,

(See, however, section 46(d)(4)(A) and paragraph (h)(3)(i) of this section, relating to the time when amounts for component parts and materials are properly chargeable to capital account);

(iii) Expenditures with respect to particular property in the earlier of—

(A) The taxable year in which the property is placed in service, or

(B) The taxable year in which the taxpayer must recapture investment credit under section 47(a)(3) for the property or any subsequent year;

(iv) Expenditures for construction, reconstruction, or erection of property that is not section 38 property; or

(v) Amounts treated as an expense and deducted in the year paid or accrued.

(h) Qualified progress expenditures for self-constructed property—(1) In general. Qualified progress expenditures for self-constructed property (as defined in paragraph (k) of this section) are amounts properly chargeable to capital account in connection with that property. In general, amounts paid or incurred are chargeable to capital account if under the taxpayer's method of accounting they are properly includible in computing basis under §1.46-3. Qualified progress expenditures for self-constructed property include both direct cost (e.g., labor, materials, parts) and indirect costs (e.g., overhead, insurance) associated with construction of property to the extent those costs are properly chargeable to capital account.

(2) Property partially non-self constructed. If an item of property is self-constructed because more than half of the construction expenditures are made directly by the taxpayer, then any expenditures (whether or not made directly by the taxpayer) for construction of that item of property are not subject to the limitations of section 46(d)(3)(B) and paragraph (j) of this section (relating to actual payment and progress in construction).

(3) Time when amounts paid or incurred are properly chargeable to capital account. (i) In general, expenditures for component parts and materials to be used in construction of self-constructed property are not properly chargeable to capital account until consumed or physically attached in the construction process. Component parts and materials that have been neither consumed nor physically attached in the construction process, but which have been irrevocably allocated to construction of that property are properly chargeable to capital account. Component parts and materials designed specifically for the self-constructed property may be considered irrevocably allocated to construction of that property at the time of manufacture of the component parts and materials. Component parts and materials not designed specifically for the property may be considered irrevocably allocated to construction at the time of delivery to the construction site if they would be economically impractical to remove. For example, pumps delivered to sites of construction of a tundra pipeline may be treated as irrevocably allocated to that pipeline on the date of delivery, even if they would be usable, but for their location on the tundra, in connection with other property. Component parts and materials are not to be considered irrevocably allocated to use in self-constructed property until physical work on construction of that property has begun (as determined under paragraph (e)(1)(ii) of this section). Mere bookkeeping notations are not sufficient evidence that the necessary allocation has been made.

(ii) A taxpayer's procedure for determining the time when an expenditure is properly chargeable to capital account for self-constructed property is a method of accounting. Under section 446(e), the method of accounting, once adopted, may not be changed without consent of the Secretary.

(4) Records requirement. The taxpayer shall maintain detailed records which permit specific identification of the amounts properly chargeable by the taxpayer during each taxable year to capital account for each item of self-constructed property.

(i) [Reserved].

(j) Qualified progress expenditures for non-self-constructed property—(1) In general. Qualified progress expenditures for non-self-constructed property (as defined in paragraph (l) of this section) are amounts actually paid by the taxpayer to another person for construction of the property, but only to the extent progress is made in construction. For example, such expenditures may include payments to the manufacturer of an item of progress expenditure property, payments to a contractor building progress expenditure property, or payments for engineering designs or blueprints that are drawn up during the normal construction period.

(2) Property partially self-constructed. If an item of property is non-self-constructed, but a taxpayer uses its own employees to construct a portion of the property, expenditures for construction of that portion are made directly by the taxpayer (see §1.46-5(h)(1)). Subject to the limitations of paragraph (g) of this section, those expenditures are qualified progress expenditures for non-self-constructed property if they satisfy the requirements of paragraph (j)(4), (5), and (6) of this section. Wages actually paid to the taxpayer's employees are presumed to correspond to progress in construction. Other amounts, including expenditures for materials, parts, and overhead, must be actually paid, not borrowed from the payee, and attributable to progress made in construction by the taxpayer.

(3) Property constructed by more than one person. The percentage of completion limitation (as prescribed in paragraph (j)(6) of this section), including the presumption of ratable progress in construction, applies to an item of progress expenditure property as a whole. However, if several manufacturers or contractors do work in connection with the same property, the progress that each person makes toward completion of construction of the property must be determined separately. Section 46(d)(3)(B) is then applied separately to amounts paid to each manufacturer or contractor based on each person's progress in construction. For example, assume the taxpayer contracts with three persons to build an item of equipment. The taxpayer contracts with A to build the frame, B to build the motor, and C to assemble the frame and motor. Assume each contract represents 33 1/3 percent of the construction costs of the property. If, within the taxable year in which construction begins, A and B each complete 50 percent of the construction of the frame and motor, respectively, amounts paid to A during that taxable year not in excess of 16 2/3 percent of the overall cost of the property, and amounts paid to B during that taxable year not in excess of 16 2/3 percent of the overall cost of the property, are qualified progress expenditures. Section 46(d)(3)(B) does not apply, however, to persons, such as lower-tier subcontractors, that do not have a direct contractual relationship with the taxpayer. If, in the above example, A engages a subcontractor to construct part of the frame, section 46(d)(3)(B) is applied only to amounts paid by the taxpayer to A, B, and C, but the portion of construction completed by A during a taxable year includes the portion completed by A's subcontractor.

(4) Requirement of actual payment. Qualified progress expenditures for non-self-constructed property must be actually paid and not merely incurred. Amounts paid during the taxable year to another person for construction of non-self-constructed property may be in the form of money or property (e.g., materials). However, property given as payment may be considered only to the extent it will be includible under §1.46-3(c) in the basis of the non-self-constructed property when it is placed in service.

(5) Certain borrowing disregarded. Qualified progress expenditures for non-self-constructed property do not include any amounts paid to another person (the "payee") for construction if the amount is paid out of funds borrowed directly or indirectly from the payee. Amounts borrowed directly or indirectly from the payee by any person that is related to the taxpayer (within the meaning of section 267) or that is a member of the same controlled group of corporations (as defined in section 1563(a)) will be considered borrowed indirectly from the payee. Similarly, amounts borrowed under any financing arrangement that has the effect of making the payee a surety will be considered amounts borrowed indirectly by the taxpayer from the payee.

(6) Percentage of completion limitation. (i) Under section 46(d)(3)(B)(ii), payments made in any taxable year may be considered qualified progress expenditures for non-self-constructed property only to the extent they are attributable to progress made in construction (percentage of completion limitation). Progress will generally be measured in terms of the manufacturer's incurred cost, as a fraction of the anticipated cost (as adjusted from year to year). Architectural or engineering estimates will be evidence of progress made in construction. Cost accounting records also will be evidence of progress. Progress will be presumed to occur not more rapidly than ratably over the normal construction period. However, the taxpayer may rebut the presumption by clear and convincing evidence of a greater percentage of completion.

(ii) If, after the first year of construction, there is a change in either the total cost of construction by another person, the taxpayer must recompute the percentage of completion limitation on the basis of revised cost. However, the recomputation will affect only amounts allowed as qualified progress expenditures in the taxable year in which the change occurs and in subsequent taxable years. The recomputation remains subject to the presumption of pro rata completion.

(iii) If, for any taxable year, the amount paid to another person for construction of an item of property under section 46(d)(3)(B)(i) exceeds the percentage of completion limitation in section 46(d)(3)(B)(ii), the excess is treated as an amount paid to the other person for construction for the succeeding taxable year. If for any taxable year the percentage of completion limitation for an item of property exceeds the amount paid to another during the taxable year for construction, the excess is added to the percentage of completion limitation for that property for the succeeding taxable year.

(iv) The taxpayer must maintain detailed records which permit specific identification of the amounts paid to each person for construction of each item of property and the percentage of construction completed by each person for each taxable year.

(7) Example. The following example illustrates paragraph (j)(6) of this section.

Example. (i) Corporation X agrees to build an airplane for corporation Y, a calendar year taxpayer. The airplane is non-self-constructed progress expenditure property. Physical work on construction begins on January 1, 1980. The normal construction period for the airplane is five years and the airplane is delivered and placed in service on December 31, 1984.

(ii) The cost of construction to corporation X is $500,000. The contract price is $550,000. Corporation Y makes a $110,000 payment in each of the years 1980 and 1981, an $85,000 payment in 1982, a $135,000 payment in 1983, and a $100,000 payment in 1984.

(iii) For 1980, corporation Y makes an election under section 46(d). Progress is presumed to occur ratably over the 5-year construction period, which is 20 percent in each year. Twenty percent of the contract price is $110,000. The percentage of completion limitation for each year, thus, is $110,000.

(iv) For each of the years 1980 and 1981, the $110,000 payments may be treated as qualified progress expenditures. The payments equal the percentage of completion limitation.

(v) For 1982, the $85,000 payment may be treated as a qualified progress expenditure, because it is less than the percentage of completion limitation. The excess of the percentage of completion limitation ($110,000) over the 1982 payment ($85,000) is added to the percentage of completion limitation for 1983. One hundred and ten thousand dollars minus $85,000 equals $25,000. Twenty-five thousand dollars plus $110,000 equals $135,000, which is the percentage of completion limitation for 1983.

(vi) For 1983, the entire $135,000 payment may be treated as a qualified progress expenditure. The payment equals the percentage of completion limitation for 1983.

(vii) For 1984, no qualified progress expenditures may be taken into account, because the airplane is placed in service in that year.

(viii) See example (2) of paragraph (r)(4) of this section for the result if Y sells its contract rights to the property on December 31, 1982.

(k) Definition of self-constructed property—(1) In general. Property is self-constructed property if it is reasonable to believe that more than half of the construction expenditures for the property will be made directly by the taxpayer. Construction expenditures made directly by the taxpayer include direct costs such as wages and materials and indirect costs such as overhead attributable to construction of the property. Expenditures for direct and indirect costs of construction will be treated as construction expenditures made directly by the taxpayer only to the extent that the expenditures directly benefit the construction of the property by employees of the taxpayer. Thus, wages paid to taxpayer's employees and expenditures for basic construction materials, such as sheet metal, lumber, glass, and nails, which are used by employees of the taxpayer to construct progress expenditure property, will be considered made directly by the taxpayer. Construction expenditures made by the taxpayer to a contractor or manufacturer, in general, will not be considered made directly by the taxpayer. Thus, the cost of component parts, such as boilers and turbines, which are purchased and merely installed or assembled by the taxpayer, will not be considered expenditures made directly by the taxpayer for construction. (See paragraph (h)(3) of this section to determine when such cost is properly chargeable to capital account.)

(2) Time when determination made. The determination of whether property is self-constructed is to be made at the close of the taxable year in which physical work on construction of the property begins, or, if later, the close of the first taxable year to which an election under this section applies. Once it is reasonably estimated that more than half of construction expenditures will be made directly by the taxpayer, the fact the taxpayer actually makes half, or less than half, of the expenditures directly will not affect classification of the property as self-constructed property. Similarly, once a determination has been made, classification of property as self-constructed property is not affected by a change in circumstances in a later taxable year. However, a significant error unrelated to a change in circumstances may be evidence that the estimate was unreasonable when made.

(3) Determination based on certain expenditures. For purposes of determining whether more than half of the expenditures for construction of an item of property will be made directly by the taxpayer, the taxpayer make take into account only expenditures properly includable by the taxpayer in the basis of the property under the provisions of §1.46-3(c). Thus, property is self-constructed property only if more than half of the estimated basis of the property to be used for purposes of determining the credit allowed by section 38 is attributable to expenditures made directly by the taxpayer.

(l) Definition of non-self-constructed property. Non-self-constructed property is property that is not self-constructed property. Thus, property is non-self-constructed property if it is reasonable to believe that only half, or less than half, of the expenditures for construction will be made directly by the taxpayer.

(m) Alternative limitations for public utility, railroad, or airline property. The alternative limitations on qualified investment under section 46(a)(7) and (8) for public utility, railroad, or airline property (whichever applies) apply in determining the credit for qualified progress expenditures. The determination of whether progress expenditure property will be public utility, railroad, or airline property (whichever applies) when placed in service must be made at the close of the taxable year in which physical work on construction begins or, if later, at the close of the first taxable year for which an election under section 46(d) is in effect. If, at that time, the taxpayer is in a trade or business as a public utility, railroad, or airline (as described in section 46(c)(3)(B) and 46(a)(8)(D) and (E), respectively), it is evidence the property will be public utility, railroad, or airline property when placed in service.

(n) Leased property. A lessor progress expenditure property may not elect under section 48(d) to treat a lessee (or a person who will be a lessee) as having made qualified progress expenditures.

(o) Election—(1) In general. The election under section 46(d)(6) to increase qualified investment by qualified progress expenditures may be made for any taxable year ending after December 31, 1974. Except as provided in paragraph (o)(2) of this section, the election is effective for the first taxable year for which it is made and for all taxable years thereafter unless it is revoked with the consent of the Commissioner. Except as provided in paragraphs (o)(2) and (3) of this section, the election applies to all qualified progress expenditures made by the taxpayer during the taxable year for construction of any progress expenditure property. Thus, the taxpayer may not make the election for one item of progress expenditure property and not for other items. If progress expenditure property is being constructed by or for a partnership, S corporation (as defined in section 1361(a)), trust, or estate, an election under section 46(d)(6) must be made separately by each partner or shareholder, or each beneficiary if the beneficiary, in determining his tax liability, would be allowed investment credit under section 38 for property subject to the election. The election may not be made by a partnership or S corporation, and may be made by a trust or estate only if the trust or estate, in determining its tax liability, would be allowed investment credit under section 38 for property subject to the election. The election of any partner, shareholder, beneficiary, trust, or estate will be effective for that person, even if a related partner, shareholder, beneficiary, trust, or estate does not make the election. An election made by a partner, shareholder, beneficiary, trust, or estate applies to all progress expenditure property of that person. For example, an election made by corporation X, which is a partner in the XYZ partnership, applies to progress expenditure property the corporation holds in its own capacity and also to its interest in progress expenditure property of the partnership.

(2) Time and manner of making election. An election under section 46(d)(6) must be made on Form 3468 and filed with the original income tax return for the first taxable year ending after December 31, 1974 to which the election will apply. An election made before March 2, 1988, by filing a written statement (whether or not attached to the income tax return) will be considered valid. The election may not be made on an amended return filed after the time prescribed for filing the original return (including extensions) for that taxable year. However, an election under this section may be made or revoked by filing a statement within an amended return filed on or before May 31, 1988, if the due date for filing a return for the first taxable year to which the election applies is before May 31, 1988.

(3) Carryover of election in certain transactions. In general, an election under section 46(d)(6) does not carry over to the transferee of progress expenditure property (or an interest therein). However, if under section 47(b) the property does not cease to be progress expenditure property because of the transfer, the election will carry over to the transferee. If so, the election will apply only to the property transferred. For rules relating to the determination of qualified progress expenditures of the transferee, see paragraph (r) of this section.

(p) Partnerships, S corporations, trust, or estates—(1) In general. Each partner, shareholder, trust, estate, or beneficiary of a trust or estate that makes an election under section 46(d) shall take into account its share of qualified progress expenditures (determined under paragraph (p)(2) of this section) made by the partnership, S corporation, trust, or estate. In determining qualified investment for the year in which the property is placed in service, the basis of the property is apportioned as provided in §§1.46-3(f), 1.48-6, or 1.48-5 (whichever applies). Each partner, shareholder, trust, estate, or beneficiary that made the election must reduce qualified investment under section 46(c)(4) for the year the property is placed in service by qualified progress expenditures taken into account by that person.

(2) Determination of share of qualified progress expenditures. The share of qualified progress expenditures of each partner, shareholder, trust, estate, or beneficiary that makes an election under section 46(d) must be determined in accordance with the same ratio used under §§1.46-3(f)(2), 1.48-5(a)(1), or 1.48-6(a)(1) (whichever applies) to determine its share of basis (or cost). The last sentence of §1.46-3(f)(2)(i) must be applied by referring to the date on which qualified progress expenditures are paid or chargeable to capital account (whichever is applicable).

(3) Examples. The following examples illustrate this paragraph (p).

Example (1). (i) Corporation X contracts to build a ship for partnership AB that qualifies as progress expenditure property. The contract price is $100,000. Physical work on construction of the ship begins on January 1, 1980. The ship is placed in service on December 31, 1983.

(ii) The AB partnership reports income on the calendar year basis. Partners A and B share profits equally. For A's taxable year ending December 31, 1980. A makes an election under section 46(d). B does not make the election.

(iii) For each of the years 1980, 1981, 1982, and 1983, the AB partnership makes $25,000 payments to corporation X. The payments made in 1980, 1981, and 1982 are qualified progress expenditures. The 1983 payment is not a qualified progress expenditure, because the ship is placed in service in that year.

(iv) For each of the years 1980, 1981, and 1982, A may take into account qualified progress expenditures of $12,500 because A had a 50 percent partnership interest in each of those years.

(v) For 1983, qualified investment for the ship is $100,000. A and B's shares are $50,000 each, because each had a 50 percent partnership interest in 1983. However, A must reduce its $50,000 share for 1983 by $37,500, the amount of qualified progress expenditures taken into account by A. B's share is not reduced, because B did not take into account qualified progress expenditures.

Example (2). (i) The facts are the same as in example (1) except that on June 30, 1983, the partnership agreement is amended to admit a new partner, C, to share profits equally. There is no special allocation in effect under section 704 with respect to the ship.

(ii) For each of the years 1980, 1981, and 1982, A may take into account qualified progress expenditures of $12,500 because A has a 50 percent partnership interest in those years.

(iii) For 1983, A, B, and C's share of qualified investment is $33,333 each, because each had a 33 1/3 percent partnership interest in that year. A must reduce its share to zero, because it took $37,500 into account as qualified progress expenditures. In addition, the excess of the $37,500 over the $33,333 applied as a reduction is subject to recapture under section 47(a)(3)(B). B and C's shares are not reduced, because neither taxpayer took into account qualified progress expenditures.

(q) Limitation on qualified progress expenditures for taxable years beginning before 1980—(1) In general (i) Under section 46(d)(7), qualified progress expenditures for any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1980, are limited. The taxpayer must apply the limitation under section 46(d)(7) on an item by item basis. In general, the taxpayer may take into account the applicable percentage (as determined under the table in section 46(d)(7)(A)) of qualified progress expenditures for each of those years. In addition, the taxpayer may take into account for each of those years 20 percent of qualified investment for each of the preceding taxable years determined without applying the limitations of sections 46(d)(7).

(ii) The applicable percentage under section 46(d)(7)(A) may be applied only for one taxable year that ends within a calendar year in determining qualified investment for an item of progress expenditure property. For example, calendar year partners of a calendar year partnership may increase qualified investment for 1976 by 20 percent of qualified progress expenditures made in 1975 for an item of property. If the partnership incorporates in 1976 and the taxable year of the corporation begins on July 1, 1976, and ends on June 30, 1977, qualified investment of the corporation for its taxble year beginning on July 1, 1976, cannot be increased by 20 percent of the 1975 expenditure.

(2) Example. The following example illustrates this paragraph (q).

Example. (i) Corporation X contracts with A on January 1, 1976, to build an electric generator that qualifies as non-self-constructed progress expenditure property. A will build the generator at a cost of $125,000. Corporation X agrees to pay A $150,000. Corporation X reports income on the calendar year basis. Corporation X makes an election under section 46(d) for 1976. Physical work on construction begins on January 1, 1976. Corporation X makes payments of $30,000 to A for construction of the generator in each of the years 1976, 1977, 1978, 1979, and 1980. A incurs a cost of $25,000 in each of those years for construction of the property. The property is placed in service in 1980.

(ii) For 1976, X may increase qualified investment by $12,000, 40 percent of the payment made in 1976.

(iii) For 1977, corporation X may increase qualified investment by $24,000. Eighteen thousand dollars of that amount is 60 percent of the 1977 payment. The remaining $6,000 is 20 percent of the $30,000 payment made in 1976.

(iv) For 1978, corporation X may increase qualified investment by $36,000. Twenty-four thousand dollars of that amount is 80 percent of the 1978 payment. The remaining $12,000 is 20 percent of the $30,000 payment made in 1976, plus 20 percent of the $30,000 payment made in 1977.

(v) For 1979, corporation X may increase qualified investment by $48,000. Thirty thousand dollars of that amount is 100 percent of the 1979 payment. The remaining $18,000 of that amount is 20 percent of the $30,000 payments made in each of the years 1976, 1977, and 1978.

(vi) Qualified investment for corporation X for 1980 is $30,000. The $30,000 is the basis (or cost) of the generator ($150,000), reduced by qualified progress expenditures allowed with respect to that property ($120,000).

(r) Special rules for transferred property—(1) In general. A transferee of progress expenditure property (or an interest therein) may take into account qualified progress expenditures for the property only if—

(i) The property is progress expenditure property in the hands of the transferee, and

(ii) The transferee makes an election under section 46(d) or the election made by the transferor (or its predecessor) carries over the transferee under paragraph (o)(3) of this section.

(2) Status as progress expenditure property. (i) If the transfer requires recapture under section 47(a)(3) and §1.47-1(g) (or would require recapture if the transferor had made an election under section 46(d)), then—

(A) For purposes of determining if the property is progress expenditure property in the hands of the transferee, the normal construction period for the property begins on the date of the transfer, or, if later, on the first day of the first taxable year for which the transferee makes an election under section 46(d), and

(B) For purposes of determining whether the property is self-constructed or non-self-constructed in the hands of the transferee, the amount paid or incurred for the transfer of the property will not be considered a construction expenditure made directly by the transferee.

(ii) If the transfer does not require recapture under section 47(a)(3) and §1.47-1(g), and the election carries over to the taxpayer under paragraph (o)(3) of this section, the property does not lose its status as progress expenditure property because of the transfer.

(3) Amount of qualified progress expenditures for transferee. (i) If the transfer does not require recapture under section 47(a)(3) and §1.47-1(g), and the election carries over to the taxpayer under paragraph (o)(3) of this section, the transferee must determine its qualified progress expenditures—

(A) By using the same normal construction period used by the transferor,

(B) By treating the property as having the same status as self-constructed or non-self-constructed as the property had in the hands of the transferor, and

(C) In the case of non-self-constructed property, by taking into account any excess described in section 46(d)(4)(C)(i) (relating to the excess of payments over the percentage-of-completion limitation) or section 46(d)(4)(C)(ii) (relating to the excess of the percentage-of-completion limitation over the amount of payments) that the transferor would have taken into account with respect to that property.

(ii) If the transfer requires recapture under section 47(a)(3) and §1.47-1(g) (or would require recapture if the transferor had made an election under section 46(d)), the amount paid or incurred for the transfer will be considered a payment for construction of that property to the extent that—

(A) It is properly includible in the basis of the property under §1.46-3(c),

(B) The taxpayer can show the amount is attributable to construction costs paid or chargeable to capital account by the transferor or other person after physical work on construction of the property began, and

(C) It does not exceed the amount by which the transferor has increased qualified investment for qualified progress expenditures incurred with respect to the property (or would have increased qualified investment but for the "lesser of" limitation of section 46(d)(3)(B) or the absence of an election under section 46(d)), plus any amount that would have been treated as a qualified progress expenditures by the transferor had the property not been transferred.

Once the status of the property as self-constructed or non-self-constructed property in the hands of the transferee has been determined, all rules under this section for determining the amount of qualified progress expenditures for that type of property apply. For example, if the property is non-self-constructed in the hands of the transferee, amounts merely incurred (but not paid) for the transfer are not taken into account as qualified progress expenditures. Actual payment is necessary (see paragraph (j)(3) of this section). In applying section 46(d)(3)(B)(ii), the amount paid or incurred for the transfer (to the extent that it qualifies as a payment for construction under the first sentence of this paragraph (r)(3)(ii)) is considered to be part of the overall cost to the transferee of construction by another person, and the portion of construction which is completed during the taxable year is determined by taking into account construction that was completed before the constructed property was acquired by the transferee. If the transferee makes an election under section 46(d) and this section for the taxable year in which the transfer occurs, then for purposes of applying the presumption in section 46(d)(4)(D) that construction is deemed to occur not more rapidly than ratably over the normal construction period, the transferee's normal construction period is considered to have begun on the date on which physical work on construction of the acquired property began.

Example (1). Corporation X begins physical work on construction of progress expenditure property for corporation Y on January 1, 1976. Y accurately estimates a 3-year normal construction period and elects under section 46(d) on its return for its taxable year ending December 31, 1976. On January 1, 1978, Y sells the contract rights for construction of the property to corporation Z, which uses a fiscal year ending June 30. Qualified progress expenditures allowed to Y in 1976 and 1977 are subject to recapture under section 47(a)(3f. Because Z's normal construction period for the property is less than 2 years (January 1, 1978 to January 1, 1979), the property is not progress expenditure property in Z's hands. Z may not elect progress expenditure treatment for the property.

Example (2). (i) Assume the same facts as in the example in paragraph (j)(7) of this section, except, on December 31, 1982, Y sells its contract rights to the property for $340,000 to corporation Z, which also uses the calendar year. Z pays Y the full $340,000 on that date. The property is still to be placed in service on December 31, 1984, and will not be available for placing in service at an earlier date. Z makes payments to X of $135,000 on December 31, 1983, and $110,000 on December 31, 1984.

(ii) The investment credit allowed Y in 1980 and 1981 for qualified progress expenditures is subject to recapture under section 47(a)(3) and Y may not treat its $85,000 payment in 1982 as a qualified progress expenditure.

(iii) For purposes of determining if the airplane is qualified progress expenditure property with respect to Z, the normal construction period for the property for Z begins on December 31, 1982, the date of transfer. Since the remaining construction period is two years, the property is progress expenditure property if it otherwise qualifies in Z's hands.

(iv) Only $305,000 of the $340,000 payment to Y can qualify as a qualified progress expenditure, because only that amount is attributable to construction costs paid by Y and does not exceed the sum of the amount by which Y increased qualified investment in 1980 and 1981 for qualified progress expenditures ($220,000) and the amount that Y would have treated as a qualified progress expenditure in 1982 ($85,000).

(v) Assume that Z cannot establish that progress in construction has been completed more rapidly than ratably. If Z makes an election under section 46(d) for 1982, then for purposes of applying the percentage of completion limitation, Z's normal construction period is considered to begin on January 1, 1980. Progress is presumed to occur ratably over the 5-year construction period, which is 20 percent in each year.

(vi) For 1982, Z may treat the full $305,000 as a qualified progress expenditure because it is less than the percentage of completion limitation, $330,000 ($110,000 a year for 1980, 1981, and 1982).

(vii) For 1983, Z may treat the entire $135,000 payment as a qualified progress expenditure, since it does not exceed the percentage of completion limitation for that year, $135,000 ($110,000 plus the $25,000 excess from 1982).

(viii) For Z's taxable year ending December 31, 1984, no qualified progress expenditures may be taken into account because the property is placed in service during that year.

Par. 5. Section 1.47-1 is amended by adding a new sentence at the end of paragraph (a)(1)(i) and by adding a new paragraph (g) to read as follows:

§1.47-1 Recomputation of credit allowed by section 38.

(a) General rule—(1) In general. (i)  For special rules relating to recomputation of credit allowed by section 38 if progress expenditure property (as defined in §1.46-5(d) ceases to be progress expenditure property with respect to the taxpayer, see paragraph (g) of this section.

(g) Special rules for progress expenditure property. Under section 47(a)(3), a recapture determination is required if property ceases to be progress expenditure property (as defined in §1.46-5(d)). Property ceases to be progress expenditure property if it is sold or otherwise disposed of before it is placed in service. For example, cancellation of the contract for progress expenditure property or abandonment of the project by the taxpayer will be considered a "disposition" within the meaning of §1.47-2. A cessation occurs if progress expenditure property ceases to be property that will be section 38 property with a useful life of 7 years or more when placed in service. In general, a sale and leaseback is treated as a cessation. However, see paragraph (g)(2) of §1.47-3 for special rules for certain sale and leaseback transactions. Recapture determinations for progress expenditure property are to be made in a way similar to that provided under §§1.47-1 through 1.47-6. Reduction of qualified investment must begin with the most recent credit year (i.e., the most recent taxable year the property is taken into account in computing qualified investment under §1.46-3 or 1.46-5).

Par. 6. Section 1.47-3 is amended by revising so much of paragraph (g) as precedes "Notwithstanding the provisions of" in the first sentence and by adding a new paragraph (g)(2). These new and revised provisions read as set forth below.

§1.47-3 Exceptions to the application of §1.47-1.

(g) Sale-and-leaseback transactions—(1) In general. ***

(2) Special rule for progress expenditure property. The sale and leaseback (or agreement or contract to lease-back) of progress expenditure property (including any contract rights to the property), in general, will be treated as a cessation described in section 47(a)(3)(A) with respect to the seller-lessee. However, a sale and leaseback (or agreement or contract to leaseback) will not be treated as a cessation to the extent qualified investment passed through to the lessee under section 48(d) in the year the property is placed in service equals or exceeds qualified progress expenditures for the property taken into account by the lessee. If a sale-leaseback transaction is treated as a cessation, qualified investment must be reduced and the credit recomputed, beginning with the most recent credit year (i.e., the most recent year property is taken into account in computing qualified investment under §1.46-3 or 1.46-5). The amount of the reduction is the amount, if any, by which qualified progress expenditures taken into account by the lessee in all prior years exceeds qualified investment passed through to the lessee under section 48(d). This paragraph (g)(2) does not apply to any progress expenditure property that has been placed in service by a vendor-lessee (as described in paragraph (g)(1) of this section) prior to a sale-leaseback of that property in a transaction described in paragraph (g)(1) of this section.

PART 602—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Par. 7. The authority citation for Part 602 continues to read as follows:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX, TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Investment Credit for Movie and Television Films

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to the investment credit for movie and television films and tapes. Changes to the applicable law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1976. The regulations revise the definition of a qualified film and affect taxpayers that own movie and television films or tapes which they place in service.

DATES: The regulations are generally effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1974.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

One June 3, 1982, the FEDERAL REGISTER published proposed amendments (47 FR 24142) under section 48(k) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. Section 48(k) was added to the Code by the Tax Reform Act of 1976 to provide for an investment credit under section 38 for qualified films and tapes. Section 48(k)(1)(B) provides that "the term 'qualified film' means any motion picture film or video tape created primarily for use as public entertainment . . . [but] does not include any film or tape the market for which is primarily topical or otherwise essentially transitory in nature."

Pursuant to the existing regulations under section 48(k), the subject matter of the film or tape determines whether the market for that film or tape is topical or transitory. The proposed regulations proposed to amend §1.48-8(a)(3) to provide additional specificity as to the definition of a film that has a transitory market. The proposed regulations stated that a market for a film is essentially transitory if in the normal operation of the particular market for which the film is produced, films are generally shown once. By example, the proposed regulations provided that the market for serialized daytime dramas is essentially transitory in nature because films or tapes produced for that market usually are shown once. A number of comments were received, and a public hearing was held on October 14, 1982. After consideration of all comments, the Internal Revenue Service has promulgated these final regulations, which withdraw the proposed amendments relating to the definition of topical or transitory films and tapes. In addition, these final regulations amend the existing regulations under section 48(k) to remove the reference to game shows and variety shows as examples of topical or transitory films and tapes. As a result, the determination of whether or not a film or tape of such a game or variety show is topical or transitory will be made on a case-by-case basis.

These regulations do not reflect the repeal (with certain specified exceptions) of the regular investment credit by section 211 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

Although a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicited public comment was issued, the Internal Revenue Service concluded when the notice was issued that the regulations are interpretive and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 does not apply. Accordingly, the final regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6).

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this final rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis is not required.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS
PART 1

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 continues to read as follows.

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.

Par. 2. Section 1.48-8 is amended by revising paragraph (a)(3)(iii) to read as follows:

§1.48-8 Motion picture and television films and tapes.

(a) Entitlement to investment credit

(3) Qualified film

(iii) Topical or transitory films and tapes. The term "qualified film" does not include any film or tape the market for which is primarily topical or is otherwise essentially transitory in nature. A film or tape is topical or essentially transitory in nature if it primarily deals with events and personalities of current interest at the time the film or tape is place in service. It does not matter that a film or tape which is topical or essentially transitory in nature may be shown in subsequent years or is actually shown in subsequent years. Topical or transitory films or tapes include news shows such as the evening new and news specials relating to current affairs, interview shows such as "The Tonight Show" or "Meet the Press", award shows, and shows consisting of sporting events. Topical or transitory films and tapes do not include dramatic shows (including dramatized recreations of recent events) or situation comedy shows which present entertainers as characters in a dramatization.

Part VI.—Alternative Minimum Tax

Section 56.—Adjustments in Computing Alternative Minimum Taxable Income

26 CFR 1.56-1T: Adjustment for the book income of corporations (temporary).

Corporate Alternative Minimum Tax Book Income Adjustment of Foreign Corporations

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides rules for computing the alternative minimum tax adjustment for the book income of foreign corporations. Changes to the applicable law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. These regulations affect corporate taxpayers and provide them with guidance necessary to determine their alternative minimum tax liability.

In addition, the text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text to the proposed regulations  [LR-55-87, page 929, this Bulletin].

EFFECTIVE DATE: Taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

This document contains temporary regulations relating to the book income adjustment to the corporate alternative minimum taxable income of foreign corporations under section 56(c)(1) and section 56(f) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (Code), as amended by section 701 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Pub. L. 99-514, 100 Stat. 2320). The temporary regulations provided by this document remain in effect until superseded by final regulations on these subjects.

These temporary regulations are intended to address only the issues raised by section 56 relating to the book income adjustment of foreign corporations. No inference should be drawn regarding issues not expressly addressed in the regulations. In addition, unless otherwise stated, no inference should be drawn from the issues addressed in these regulations to the determination of the book income adjustment by United States corporate taxpayers.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

In General

Section 882 of the Code, as amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1986, provides that for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, a foreign corporate taxpayer (foreign taxpayer) engaged in a trade or business in the United States during the taxable year shall be taxable as provided in section 55, relating to the alternative minimum tax, on its taxable income that is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States. Under section 56(c)(1) of the Code, a foreign taxpayer, when computing corporate alternative minimum taxable income for purposes of determining its alternative minimum tax for taxable years beginning in 1987, 1988, and 1989, must include an adjustment for the net book income of such taxpayer (the "book income adjustment").

Section 56(f)(1) provides that the book income adjustment is computed by increasing alternative minimum taxable income by 50 percent of the amount (if any) by which the adjusted net book income of the taxpayer exceeds alternative minimum taxable income for the taxable year (determined without regard to the book income adjustment and the alternative minimum tax net operating loss deduction). Adjusted net book income equals the net book income of the taxpayer shown on its applicable financial statement with certain adjustments. In general, a taxpayer's applicable financial statement is its financial statement that has the highest priority, determined in the following order: (a) a financial statement required to be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission; (b) a certified auditied financial statement used for credit purposes, for disclosure to shareholders or for any other substantial non-tax purpose; (c) a financial statement (but not a tax return) that is required to be provided to the Federal government or an agency thereof, a state government or an agency thereof, or a political subdivision of a state or an agency thereof; or (d) any other financial statement used as a statement for credit purposes, for reporting to shareholders, or for any other substantial non-tax purpose (an unaudited financial statement). If a taxpayer does not have any financial statement, or only has an unaudited financial statement and makes an election, the book income adjustment is computed using current earnings and profits.

On April 28, 1987, the Federal Register (52 F.R. 15305) published temporary regulations under sections 56(c)(1) and (f) of the Code (T.D. 8138) [1987-1 C.B. 3] that provide guidance for computing the alternative minimum tax book income adjustment. Those temporary regulations did not address all issues relating to the computation of the book income adjustment by a foreign taxpayer. Section 1.56-1T(c)(5)(ii), relating to the applicable financial statement of a foreign taxpayer conducting a trade or business in the United States, was specifically reserved.

Net Book Income of a Foreign Taxpayer

Generally, §1.56-1T(b) of the temporary regulations, relating to the determination of net book income, is applicable in determining the net book income of a foreign taxpayer. However, §1.56-1T(b) is amended by these temporary regulations to provide that in the case of a foreign taxpayer net book income is limited to the income or loss reported on the applicable financial statement of the foreign taxpayer that is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States ("effectively connected net book income").

Effectively connected net book income includes book income or loss attributable to an item that would be treated as effectively connected under the principles of section 864(c), or any other applicable provision of the Code and the regulations thereunder. For example, if for tax purposes the disposition of a United States real property interest would be treated as effectively connected with a trade or business in the United States under section 897, then the book gain or loss attributable to such disposition would be treated as effectively connected net book income.

Effectively connected net book income does not include any amount of book income or loss attributable to an item that would qualify as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States under section 864(c) but for a specific exclusion in any provision of the Code. Consequently, effectively connected net book income does not include any amount attributable to exempt foreign trade income of a foreign sales corporation (FSC) that is treated as foreign source income that is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States under section 921(a) and the regulations thereunder. However, dividends paid by a FSC may be includible in the net book income of the dividend recipient under the rules of §1.56-1T(b)(2)(iv) of the temporary regulations.

Effectively connected net book income also excludes any amount that is attributable to income that qualifies as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States but that is exempt from United States taxation under section 894 of the Code, relating to amounts exempt under the provision of a United States income tax treaty. In addition, effectively connected book income excludes amounts that are exempt from United States taxation under sections 883, 892 and 895 of the Code.

Section 1.56-1T(b)(5) provides that if a taxpayer does not have an applicable financial statement, or only has an unaudited financial statement and makes the election described in §1.56-1T(c)(2), net book income equals current earnings and profits for the taxable year. The temporary regulations are revised to provide that under these circumstances, a foreign taxpayer shall use effectively connected earnings and profits rather than current earnings and profits. Effectively connected earnings and profits are computed using the rules of section 884(d), relating to effectively connected earnings and profits for purposes of the branch profits tax. However, in computing effectively connected earnings and profits for purposes of the book income adjustment, the exceptions set forth under section 884(d)(2)(B) through (D) are not applicable.

Applicable Financial Statement of a Foreign Taxpayer

The rules set forth in §1.56-1T(c) of the temporary regulations, relating to the determination of the applicable financial statement for purposes of computing the book income adjustment, generally apply in determining the applicable financial statement of a foreign taxpayer conducting a trade or business in the United States. However, §1.56-1T(c)(5)(ii) is amended to provide special rules for determining the applicable financial statement of a foreign taxpayer.

Under §1.56-1T(c)(5)(ii), the applicable financial statement of a foreign taxpayer is the statement prepared by its United States trade or business that has the highest priority under §1.56-1T(c)(3). Section 1.56-1T(c)(1)(ii) is revised to provide that a statement will be a certified audited statement if it is certified to be fairly presented by either an independent Certified Public Accountant, or a similarly qualified professional in any foreign country. Section 1.56-1T(c)(5)(ii)(B)(1) clarifies that an applicable financial statement of a foreign taxpayer may be prepared under the generally accepted accounting principles of a foreign country. However, under §1.56-1T(c)(5)(ii)(B)(2), a financial statement must be prepared in United States dollars to be considered as an applicable financial statement.

Section 1.56-1T(c)(5)(ii)(C) provides special priority rules if a foreign taxpayer has more than one financial statement of equal priority. Under §1.56-1T(c)(5)(ii)(C)(1), the applicable financial statement of a foreign taxpayer that has more than one financial statement of equal priority reporting on the same United States trades or businesses is the financial statement that reports the greatest amount of adjusted net book income. If, however, the financial statements report on different trades or businesses, §1.56-1T(c)(5)(ii)(C)(2) provides that the applicable financial statement is that financial statement reflecting the greatest amount of gross receipts attributable to United States trades or businesses. If after applying §1.56-1T(c)(5)(ii)(C)(2) the taxpayer still has financial statements of equal priority, the applicable financial statement is that financial statement resulting in the greatest amount of adjusted book income.

If a United States trade or business of a foreign taxpayer modifies its financial reporting and the principal purpose of such action is to reduce adjusted net book income, §1.56-1T(c)(5)(ii)(D) provides that the District Director may, based on all the facts and circumstances, determine the taxpayer's applicable financial statement.

Adjustments to Net Book Income of a Foreign Taxpayer

The rules of §1.56-1T(d) of the temporary regulations, relating to adjustments to net book income, apply when determining the net book income adjustment of a foreign taxpayer. However, a new §1.56-1T(d)(7) is added to provide for special adjustments to net book income for foreign taxpayers. These rules require a foreign taxpayer to include any effectively connected net book income of the foreign taxpayer that is not reported on the applicable financial statement, and to exclude any amount reported on the applicable financial statement that is not treated as effectively connected net book income. For example, if the applicable financial statement of a foreign taxpayer only reports on one of its two businesses conducted in the United States, the effectively connected net book income amount reported on the applicable financial statement must be adjusted to include amounts attributable to income effectively connected to the operation of the other business in the United States.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

No general notice of proposed rulemaking is required by 5 U.S.C. 553(b) for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the Regulatory Flexibility Act does not apply, and no Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is required for this rule. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis therefore is not required.

§1.56–1T Adjustment for the book income of corporations (temporary)

* * * * *

(b) Adjusted net book income ***

(6) Additional rules for computation of net book income of a foreign corporate taxpayer—(i) Adjusted net book income of a foreign taxpayer. Adjusted net book income of a foreign corporate taxpayer ("foreign taxpayer") means the effectively connected net book income (as defined in paragraph (b)(6)(ii) of this section) of the foreign taxpayer, after taking into account the adjustments under the rules of paragraph (d) of this section.

(ii) Effectively connected net book income of a foreign taxpayer—(A) In general. Effectively connected net book income of a foreign taxpayer is the income or loss reported in its applicable financial statement (as defined in paragraph (c)(5)(ii) of this section), but only to the extent that such amount is attributable to items of income or loss that would be treated as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States by the foreign taxpayer as determined under either the principles of section 864(c) and the regulations thereunder, or any other applicable provision of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. Thus, if for tax purposes an item of income or loss is treated as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States, then the income or loss reported on the foreign taxpayer's applicable financial statement attributable to such item is effectively connected net book income. See paragraph (b)(7), Examples (10), (11) and (12) of this section.

(B) Certain exempt amounts. Effectively connected net book income does not include any amount attributable to an item that is exempt from United States taxation under sections 894, 883, 892 or 895 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. See paragraph (b)(7), Examples (13) and (14) of this section.

(iii) Computation of net book income of a foreign taxpayer using current earnings and profits. If a foreign taxpayer does not have an applicable financial statement or only has a statement described in paragraph (c)(1)(iv) of this section and makes the election described in paragraph (c)(2) of this section, net book income for purposes of this section is equal to the foreign taxpayer's current earnings and profits that are attributable to income or loss that is effectively connected (or treated as effectively connected) with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States. Effectively connected current earnings and profits are computed under the rules of section 884(d) and the regulations thereunder, relating to effectively connected earnings and profits for purposes of computing the branch profits tax, but without regard to the exceptions set forth under section 884(d)(2)(B) through (D). For purposes of this section, effectively connected current earnings and profits are not reduced by any remittances or distributions. Effectively connected current earnings and profits take into account Federal income tax expense and any foreign tax expense; however, see paragraph (d)(3) of this section for adjustments to net book income with respect to certain taxes.

(7) Examples. ***

Example (9). Corporation I is a United States corporation with a 100 percent owned subsidiary, J, a foreign sales corporation (FSC). I uses a calendar year for both financial accounting and tax purposes. Income from J is consolidated in I's applicable financial statement. I and J do not file a consolidated tax return. In 1987, J pays a dividend to I of $100 out of J's earnings and profits. For purposes of this example, it is assumed that the distribution is made out of the profits attributable solely to foreign trade income determined through use of the administrative pricing rules of section 925(a)(1) and (2). Accordingly, the distribution is eligible for the 100 percent dividends received deduction under section 245(c). Although I's applicable financial statement is adjusted to eliminate income or loss attributable to J, the entire amount of the dividend distribution must be included in I's adjusted net book income pursuant to paragraph (b)(2)(iv) of this section.

Example (10). Corporation K is a foreign corporation incorporated under the laws of country X. K uses a calendar year for both financial accounting and tax purposes. In 1987, K actively conducts a real estate business, L, in the United States. The financial statement that is used as K's applicable financial statement (as determined under paragraph (c)(5)(ii) of this section) discloses total net income of $150. Of this amount, $100 is attributable to L's real estate business. $50 is attributable to dividends paid to L from its investment in certain securities. The securities investment is not connected with L's real estate business. Under the rules of section 864, only $100 is effectively connected to the conduct of a trade or business in the United States. Thus, K's effectively connected net book income for 1987 equals $100.

Example (11). Assume the same facts as in Example (10) except that K's applicable financial statement also discloses $75 attributable to investment real property located in the United States, so that the net income amount reported on the financial statement equals $225. The $75 of income is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States. K, for regular tax purposes, makes an election under section 882(d) to treat this income as effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States. As a result, K's effectively connected net book income for 1987 equals $175 ($100 + $75).

Example (12). Corporation M is a foreign corporation that actively conducts a manufacturing business, N, in the United States. M is a calendar year taxpayer for both financial accounting and tax purposes. In 1987, the financial statement that is used as M's applicable financial statement (as determined under paragraph (c)(5)(ii) of this section) reflects an anticipated loss from the sale of a division of N. For Federal income tax purposes the loss is not recognized in 1987, but rather is recognized in 1988 when M sells the division. In determining M's effectively connected net book income for 1987, the anticipated loss reported on M's 1987 applicable financial statement is taken into account because the reported loss is effectively connected to the conduct of a trade or business in the United States under the principles of section 864.

Example (13). Corporation O is a foreign corporation that is engaged in the international shipping business. O is incorporated under the laws of X. O is a calendar year taxpayer for both financial accounting and tax purposes. In 1987, O actively conducts a shipping business, P, within the United States. The statement that is used in 1987 as O's applicable financial statement (as determined under paragraph (c)(5)(ii) of this section) discloses income of $100 that is attributable to P's operation of ships in international traffic. Under section 864, $50 is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States. However, the United States income tax treaty with X exempts from United States income tax any income derived by a resident of X from the operation of ships in international traffic. Thus, pursuant to paragraph (b)(6)(ii)(B) of this section, no amount of P's income is includible in O's effectively connected net book income.

Example (14). Assume the same facts as in Example (13) except that there is no United States income tax treaty with X. However, X by statute exempts United States citizens and United States corporations from tax imposed by X on gross income derived from the operation of a ship or ships in international traffic. Under section 883(a), P's income of $50 that is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States is exempt from United States taxation. Thus, pursuant to paragraph (b)(6)(ii)(B)(2) of this section, no amount of P's income is includible in O's effectively connected net book income.

(c) Applicable financial statement. (1) In general. ***

(ii) Certified audited financial statement. A certified audited financial statement that is used for credit purposes, for reporting to shareholders or for any other substantial non-tax purpose. Such statement must be certified by a Certified Public Accountant or a similarly qualified professional who is licensed in any foreign country and who is independent, as defined in the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants Professional Standards, Code of Ethics (ET), Section 101, or other similar standard in accordance with the standards of the profession in any foreign country. ***

(5) Special rules. ***

(ii) Applicable financial statement of a foreign taxpayer with a United States trade or business—(A) In general. The applicable financial statement of a foreign taxpayer conducting one or more trades or businesses in the United States is the financial statement prepared by any such trade or business (or attributable to more than one such trades or businesses) that has the highest priority as determined under paragraph (c)(3) of this section. See paragraph (c)(6), Example (15) of this section.

(B) Special rules for applicable financial statement of a trade or business of a foreign taxpayer—(1) Financial statement prepared under foreign generally accepted accounting principles. Subject to the rules of this section, a financial statement prepared by a United States trade or business using generally accepted accounting principles of a foreign country may be an applicable financial statement under this paragraph (c). See paragraph (c)(6), Example (16) of this section.

(2) Financial statement prepared in United States dollars. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(5)(ii)(D) of this section, the financial statement of a United States trade or business must be prepared in United States dollars in order to be considered the applicable financial statement of the foreign taxpayer under this paragraph (c). See paragraph (c)(6), Example (17) of this section.

(C) Special rule for statements of equal priority. If a foreign taxpayer has two or more financial statements of equal priority (determined under paragraphs (c)(3)(i) and (c)(3)(ii) of this section and this paragraph (c)(5)(ii)), the foreign taxpayer's applicable financial statement is determined under either paragraph (c)(5)(ii)(C)(1) or (2) of this section, whichever is applicable.

(1) Two or more financial statements reporting on the same trades or businesses. If two or more financial statements of equal priority report on the same United States trades or businesses, the applicable financial statement of the foreign taxpayer is determined under the rule of paragraph (c)(3)(iii) of this section. In applying this rule, adjusted net book income (as defined under paragraph (b)(6)(ii)(A) of this section) shall be used. Thus, the financial statement that results in the greatest amount of adjusted net book income is the foreign taxpayer's applicable financial statement.

(2) Two or more financial statements reporting on different trades or businesses. If two or more financial statements of equal priority report on different United States trades or businesses, the foreign taxpayer's applicable financial statement is—

(i) The financial statement that reflects the greatest amount of gross receipts attributable to United States trades or businesses, or

(ii) If after applying the rules of paragraph (c)(5)(ii)(C)(2)(i) of this section, the foreign taxpayer still has financial statements of equal priority, the rules of paragraph (c)(3)(iii) of this section apply (using effectively connected adjusted net book income).

See paragraph (c)(6), Example (18) of this section.

(D) Anti-abuse rule. The special rules of this paragraph (c)(5)(ii) will not apply if a trade or business conducted in the United States by a foreign taxpayer modifies its financial reporting and the principal purpose of such action is to reduce the amount of the book income adjustment. In such cases, the District Director may, based upon all the facts and circumstances, determine the taxpayer's applicable financial statement. See paragraph (c)(6), Example (21), of this section.

(6) Examples. ***

Example (15). Corporation U is a foreign corporation incorporated in A. U is a calendar year taxpayer for both financial accounting and tax purposes. U actively conducts three real estate businesses, X, Y and Z, in the United States. In 1987, X prepares a certified audited financial statement that it provides to its United States creditor. In addition, in 1987, X, Y and Z each prepares unaudited financial statements that they provide to U for incorporation in U's worldwide financial statement. Under paragraph (c)(5)(ii)(A) of this section, U's applicable financial statement is the certified audited financial statement prepared by X. However, pursuant to paragraph (d)(7) of this section, an adjustment is required to include any of U's effectively connected net book income that is not included in X's certified audited financial statement (e.g., the effectively connected net book income attributable to Y and Z).

Example (16). Corporation A is a foreign corporation incorporated in Z. A is a calendar year taxpayer for both financial accounting and tax purposes. A actively conducts a real estate business, B, in the United States. B prepares a certified audited financial statement for 1987 using the accounting principles of Z that it provides to A for incorporation into A's worldwide financial statement. In addition, B prepares a review statement for 1987 using United States generally accepted accounting principles that it provides to its United States creditors. Under paragraphs (c)(5)(ii)(A) and (c)(5)(ii)(B)(1) of this section, the financial statement prepared under the accounting principles of Z is the applicable financial statement.

Example (17). Assume the same facts as in Example (16) except that amounts are reported on B's certified audited financial statement in the currency of Z and amounts are reported on B's review statement in United States dollars. Since the review statement is prepared in United States dollars, under paragraph (c)(5)(ii)(B)(2) of this section, it is the applicable financial statement.

Example (18). Corporation C is a foreign corporation incorporated in Z. C is a calendar year taxpayer for both financial accounting and tax purposes. C actively conducts two real estate businesses, D and E, in the United States. D and E each separately prepare a certified audited financial statement for 1987 that they provide to their United States creditors. D's financial statement reports gross receipts of $100. E's financial statement reports gross receipts of $200. Under paragraph (c)(5)(ii)(C)(2) of this section, E's certified audited financial statement is the applicable financial statement and must be adjusted under the rules of paragraph (d)(7) of this section to include effectively connected book income attributable to D.

Example (19). F is a foreign corporation incorporated in X. F is a calendar year taxpayer for both financial accounting and tax purposes. F actively conducts a banking business, G, in the United States. G has been engaged in business in the United States since 1977. For the years 1977 through 1986, G did not prepare a separate financial statement. However, each year G provided F with its books, records and other raw financial data. F used this data in preparing its worldwide financial statement. G provides F with its 1987 books and records on January 5, 1988, in accordance with its historic practice. On February 15, 1988, G prepares an unaudited financial statement for calendar year 1987 that it provides to F. The principal purpose of creating this financial statement is to reduce net book income. Under these facts, the financial statement provided by G is not intended to be reasonably relied upon by F in preparing its worldwide financial statement. Therefore, for purposes of computing net book income, G's financial statement has not been used for a substantial non-tax purpose.

Example (20). Assume the same facts as in Example (19) except that for purposes of preparing F's 1987 worldwide financial statement, G does not provide F with any raw financial data, and G only provides F with an audited financial statement that is prepared for a substantial non-tax purpose. Under these facts, the financial statement provided by G is intended to be relied upon by F in preparing its worldwide financial statement. Therefore, for purposes of computing net book income, G's financial statement has been used for a substantial non-tax purpose.

Example (21). Corporation H is a foreign corporation incorporated in I. H is a calendar year taxpayer for both financial accounting and tax purposes. H actively conducts a real estate business, J, in the United States. For the years 1976 through 1986, J prepared a certified audited financial statement using United States dollars that it provided to H. In 1987, J prepares a certified audited financial statement using the currency of I. The principal purpose of the modification of J's financial reporting is to reduce the amount of the book income adjustment. Given these facts, the District Director may determine that J's 1987 certified audited financial statement prepared in the currency of I is J's applicable financial statement for 1987, and such statement must be converted into United States dollars based upon the translation used to prepare the certified audited financial statement in the currency of I. Accordingly, the effectively connected net book income of J for 1987 is the effectively connected net book income reported on the financial statement that has been converted into United States dollars.

(7) Adjustments for foreign taxpayers with a United States trade or business—(i) In general. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(6) of this section, the book income adjustment with respect to a foreign taxpayer with a United States trade or business is computed based on the effectively connected net book income of the foreign taxpayer (as defined in paragraph (b)(6)(ii) of this section). The net book income amount reported on the applicable financial statement of the foreign taxpayer (as determined under paragraph (c)(5)(ii) of this section) must be adjusted to—

(A) Include effectively connected net book income attributable to a trade or business conducted in the United States by the foreign taxpayer that is not reported on the applicable financial statement. Such amounts shall be determined from a financial statement (determined under paragraph (c) of this section and adjusted under the rules of this paragraph (d)) that would have qualified as an applicable financial statement of such excluded trade or business or upon effectively connected earnings and profits (if the rules of section (b)(6)(iii) of this section apply), and

(B) Exclude any amount reported on such applicable financial statement that does not qualify as effectively connected net book income.

See paragraph (d)(7)(ii), Example (1) of this section.

(ii) Example. The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example.

Example. Foreign corporation A a calendar year taxpayer for financial accounting and tax purposes, is incorporated in X. A actively conducts two real estate businesses, B and C, in the United States. B prepares a certified audited financial statement that it provides to its United States creditor. C does not prepare a financial statement. The certified audited financial statement prepared by B is treated as A's applicable financial statement under paragraph (c)(5)(ii) of this section. B's certified audited financial statement, in addition to amounts related to the conduct of its real estate business, also reports income received from its investment in United States securities, unrelated to its conduct of business in the United States that does not qualify as effectively connected net book income. In order to determine A's effectively connected net book income from the net book income reported on the applicable financial statement, such statement must be adjusted to exclude amounts attributable to the securities. In addition, book income or loss attributable to C, to the extent effectively connected to its business in the United States, must be included in the effectively connected net book income reported on B's financial statement. Since C does not have a financial statement, C's effectively connected net book income is determined by computing its effectively connected earnings and profits under paragraph (b)(6)(iii) of this section.

Subchapter B.—Computation of Taxable Income
Part I.—Definition of Gross Income, Adjusted Gross Income, Taxable Income, etc.

26 CFR 1.61-2T: Taxation of fringe benefits.

Fringe benefits; aircraft valuation formula. For purposes of section 1.61-2T(g) of the temporary regulations, relating to the rule for valuing noncommercial flights on employer-provided aircraft, the Standard Industry Fare Level (SIFL) cents-per-mile rates and the terminal charges in effect on December 31, 1987, and for prior periods are set forth. Rev. Rul. 87-101 superseded.

Rev. Rul. 88-40

For purposes of the taxation of fringe benefits under section 61 of the Internal Revenue Code, section 1.61-2T(g) of the Temporary Income Regulations provides a rule for valuing noncommercial flights on employer-provided aircraft. Section 1.61-2T(g)(5) of the temporary regulations sets forth an aircraft valuation formula to determine the value of such flights. The value of a flight is determined under the base aircraft valuation formula (also known as the Standard Industry Fare Level formula or SIFL) by multiplying the SIFL cents-per-mile rates applicable for the period during which the flight was taken by the appropriate aircraft multiple provided in section 1.61-2T(g)(7) and then adding the applicable terminal charge. The value of a particular flight during the first 6 months of a calendar year is determined by using the SIFL rates and terminal charge in effect on December 31 of the preceding year. The value of a particular flight during the last 6 months of a calendar year is determined by using the SIFL rates and terminal charge in effect on June 30 of that year.

Therefore, to determine the value of a noncommercial flight taken on an employer-provided aircraft during the first six months of 1988 for purposes of section 1.61-2T(g), the applicable terminal charge and SIFL rates are those in effect on December 31, 1987.

The terminal charge in effect on December 31, 1987, is $25.20 and the SIFL rates in effect on December 31, 1987, are $.1378 per mile for the first 500 miles, $.1051 per mile for 501 through 1500 miles, and $.1010 per mile for miles over 1500.

The following chart sets forth the cumulative terminal charges and SIFL mileage rates:

Period	Terminal Charge	SIFL Mileage Rates
1/1/85-6/30/85	$27.05	Up to 500 miles = $.1480 per mile 501-1500 miles = $.1128 per mile Over 1500 miles = $.1085 per mile
7/1/85-12/31/85	$25.62	Up to 500 miles = $.1402 per mile 501-1500 miles = $.1069 per mile Over 1500 miles = $.1028 per mile
1/1/86-6/30/86	$26.19	Up to 500 miles = $.1433 per mile 501-1500 miles = $.1092 per mile Over 1500 miles = $.1050 per mile
7/1/86-12/31/86	$26.02	Up to 500 miles = $.1423 per mile 501-1500 miles = $.1085 per mile Over 1500 miles = $.1043 per mile
1/1/87-6/30/87	$23.80	Up to 500 miles = $.1302 per mile 501-1500 miles = $.0993 per mile Over 1500 miles = $.0954 per mile
7/1/87-12/31/87	$23.95	Up to 500 miles = $.1310 per mile 501-1500 miles = $.0999 per mile Over 1500 miles = $.0960 per mile
1/1/88-6/30/88	$25.20	Up to 500 miles = $.1378 per mile 501-1500 miles = $.1051 per mile Over 1500 miles = $.1010 per mile

2-Percent Floor on Miscellaneous Itemized Deductions

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury

ACTION: Final and temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides temporary regulations under new section 67 of the Internal Revenue Code relating to the 2-percent floor on miscellaneous itemized deductions. The text to the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text of proposed regulations cross-referenced in the notice of proposed rulemaking  [LR 97-86, page 923, this Bulletin]

DATES: The regulations apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains temporary Income Tax Regulations under section 132 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Pub. L. 99-514, 100 Stat. 2113). That section added new section 67 to the Internal Revenue Code. Section 67(c) directs that regulations be issued relating to the indirect deduction through pass-through entities of amounts for expenses that would be subject to the 2-percent floor on miscellaneous itemized deductions if paid or incurred directly by an individual. In addition section 67(c) directs that regulations be issued relating to the reporting requirements that are necessary to carry out the purposes of the section.

These temporary regulations are issued under the authority contained in Internal Revenue Code sections 67(c) and 7805 (100 Stat. 2114, 26 U.S.C. 67(c); 68A Stat. 917, 26 U.S.C. 7805, respectively).

2-PERCENT FLOOR ON MISCELLANEOUS ITEMIZED DEDUCTIONS

Pursuant to section 67 of the Code, §1.67-1T(a)(1) of the temporary regulations disallows deductions for miscellaneous itemized deductions in computing the taxable income of individuals (i.e., so-called "below-the-line" deductions) to the extent that the aggregate of such expenses does not exceed 2 percent of the individual's adjusted gross income. Examples of expenses that, if otherwise deductible, are subject to the 2-percent floor include unreimbursed employee business expenses, expenses for the production or collection of income such as investment advisory fees and the cost of safe deposit boxes, and expenses for tax advice. To the extent that any other limitation is placed on the amount of a miscellaneous deduction, that limitation generally applies prior to the application of the 2-percent floor. For example, pursuant to section 274(n) the amount allowable as a deduction for meal and entertainment expenses cannot exceed 80 percent of the amount of such expense that is otherwise deductible. The 2-percent floor is applied to the amount allowable after application of the 80-percent limitation.

The term "miscellaneous itemized deduction" means the deductions allowable from adjusted gross income in determining taxable income other than the deductions listed in §1.67-1T(b) of the temporary regulations, such as the deductions under sections 163, 164, and 217 relating to interest, taxes, and moving expenses, respectively.

Temporary §1.67-1T(c) provides that, if a taxpayer incurs expenses that relate to both a trade or business activity and production of income or tax preparation activity, the taxpayer shall allocate such expense between the activities on a reasonable basis.

MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

Section 1.67-1T(d) of the temporary regulations provides that the 2-percent floor is applied prior to the application of the $3,000 limitation on deductions for living expenses of Members of Congress referred to in section 162(a). The amount of miscellaneous itemized deductions of a Member of Congress that is disallowed because of the 2-percent floor is allocated between deductions for living expenses (within the meaning of section 162(a)) and other miscellaneous itemized deductions of a Member of Congress.

REIMBURSED AND UNREIMBURSED EMPLOYEE EXPENSES

Temporary §1.62-1T(e)(1) provides that expenses paid or incurred by an employee that are otherwise deductible from gross income in computing taxable income and for which the employee is reimbursed by the employer, its agent, or third party (for whom the employee performs a benefit as an employee of the employer) under an express agreement for reimbursement or pursuant to an express expense allowance arrangement may be deducted from gross income in computing adjusted gross income (i.e., so-called "above-the-line" deductions). The same rules apply with respect to amounts allowable as a deduction under section 162(h)(1)(B) to state legislators that are reimbursed by the state.

Section 1.62-1T(e)(1) of the temporary regulations provides generally that, if an employee is reimbursed by his or her employer, its agent, or a third party in an amount less than the total expenses paid or incurred by the employee, the determination of to which of the employee's business expenses the reimbursement applies and the amount of each expense that is covered by the reimbursement is made on the basis of all of the facts and circumstances of the particular case. Section 1.62-1T(e)(2) of the temporary regulations provides rules for allocating reimbursements between meal and entertainment expenses and other business expenses when the facts and circumstances are not clear and the employee pays or incurs meal or entertainment expenses. Section 274(n)(2) excepts from the 80-percent limitation contained in section 274(n), by cross-reference to section 274(e)(3), expenses paid or incurred by an employee, in connection with the performance by the employee of services for the employer, under a reimbursement or other expense allowance arrangement with the employer, but only to the extent the employer does not treat such expenses under section 274(e)(2) as compensation to the employee and as wages for purposes of withholding. In this situation the 80-percent limitation applies to the employer.

For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, any portion of the amount allowable to state legislators as a deduction pursuant to section 162(h)(1)(B) that is not reimbursed by the state or a third party is allocated among expenses for lodging, meals, and incidental expenses in the manner described in §1.62-1T(e)(4) of the temporary regulations.

Temporary §1.62-1T(f) defines the phrase "reimbursement or other expense allowance arrangement." In addition, a payment under a reimbursement or other expense allowance arrangement must be identified either by making a separate payment or by specifically indicating the separate amount if both wages and the reimbursement or expense allowance are combined in a single payment. It shall be presumed that any amounts treated as compensation to an employee by an employer on the employer's return of tax under chapter 1 of the Code and as wages to such employee for purposes of chapter 24 of the Code (relating to withholding of income tax at source of wages) do not constitute reimbursements or other expense allowances for purposes of section 62. This presumption may be rebutted by clear and convincing evidence to the contrary that includes evidence of an obligation by the employee to make an adequate accounting to the employer for the employee's business expenses.

TREATMENT OF PASS-THROUGH ENTITIES

Temporary §1.67-2T provides rules for the application of section 67 to holders of interests in pass-through entities. In general, an "affected investor" in a pass-through entity is required to separately take into account as an item of both income and expense an amount equal to his or her allocable share of the "affected expenses" of the pass-through entity for purposes of determining his or her taxable income. In general, the expenses so taken into account are treated as paid or incurred by the affected investor in the same manner as paid or incurred by the pass-through entity.

A pass-through entity includes, pursuant to temporary §1.67-2T(g), a grantor trust, a partnership, an S corporation, a common trust fund, a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company, and a real estate mortgage investment conduit (REMIC). It does not include an estate, a nongrantor trust, a cooperative, a real estate investment trust, or other entities such as a qualified pension plan, an individual retirement account, or an insurance company holding assets in a separate asset account to fund certain variable contracts.

Section 1.67-2T(b) of the temporary regulations provides rules for the application of section 67 to affected investors in partnerships, S corporations, and grantor trusts and temporary §1.67-2T(d) provides such rules for affected investors in common trust funds. In addition, section 1.67-2T(c) of the temporary regulations cross-references temporary §1.67-3T for rules regarding the application of section 67 to holders of interests in REMICs. Temporary §1.67-2T(p) reserves on the rules regarding publicly offered regulated investment companies. The rules for the application of section 67 to REMICs, estates, and nongrantor trusts are the subject of separate regulations projects. The application of section 67 to estates and trusts and their beneficiaries is the subject of pending technical corrections legislation. Guidance on this issue will be published separately.

The application of section 67 to affected investors that are shareholders in a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company is described in temporary §1.67-2T(e). In general, an affected investor shall be treated both as having received or accrued a dividend and as having paid or incurred an expense described in section 212. The amount of the dividend and the amount of the expense are each equal to the affected investor's allocable share of the affected RIC expenses of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company. The affected investor shall take into account such amounts in the affected investor's taxable year with which (or within which) the calendar year with respect to which the expenses are allocated ends. A shareholder of a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company that is not an affected investor does not take into account in computing its taxable income any amount of its allocable share of affected RIC expenses.

DEFINITIONS OF CERTAIN TERMS

The term "affected investor" generally means a partner, shareholder, beneficiary, participant (or other interest holder in a pass-through entity), that is (a) an individual (other than certain nonresident aliens), (b) a person that computes its taxable income in the same manner as in the case of an individual, or (c) a pass-through entity, interests in which are owned by affected investors.

In general, the term "affected expenses" means expenses that, if paid or incurred by an individual, would be deductible, if at all, as miscellaneous itemized deductions. In the case of a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company, the term "affected expenses" means only affected RIC expenses. Temporary §1.67-2T(j)(1) generally defines the term "affected RIC expenses" as the excess of (a) the aggregate amount of the expenses paid or incurred in the calendar year that are allowable as a deduction in determining the investment company taxable income (without regard to section 852(b)(2)(D)) of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company for a taxable year that begins or ends with or within the calendar year, over (b) certain expenses, such as registration fees, directors' or trustees' fees, transfer agent fees, and certain legal and accounting fees. For this purpose deductions described in section 62(a)(3) and §1.67-1T(b) (e.g., losses from the sale or exchange of property, taxes, and interest) are excluded. A nonpublicly offered regulated investment company must determine the amount of affected RIC expenses on a calendar year basis regardless of whether its taxable year is the calendar year.

Section 1.67-2T(j)(2) of the temporary regulations provides an elective safe harbor under which a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company may treat 40 percent of certain deductions for the calendar year as its affected RIC expenses for that year. The election once made remains in effect for each succeeding calendar year unless revoked with the consent of the Commissioner.

ALLOCATION OF EXPENSES BY NONPUBLICLY OFFERED REGULATED INVESTMENT COMPANIES

A nonpublicly offered regulated investment company is required to allocate to each of its affected investors that is a shareholder at any time during the calendar year the affected investor's allocable share of the affected RIC expenses of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company for that calendar year. (This allocable share is the amount that the affected shareholder is treated as having received or accrued as a dividend and paid or incurred as an expense described in section 212.) A nonpublicly offered regulated investment company may use any reasonable method to make the allocation. Temporary §1.67-2T(k)(1) provides that an allocation method shall not be reasonable if, for example, it can be expected to have the effect (a) of allocating to the shareholders an amount of affected RIC expenses that is less than the affected RIC expenses of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company for the calendar year or (b) of allocating a disproportionately high share of the affected RIC expenses of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company to either (1) shareholders that are not affected investors, or (2) affected investors, the amount of whose miscellaneous itemized deductions exceed the 2-percent floor described in section 67.

Section 1.67-2T(k)(2) of the temporary regulations describes a reasonable allocation method. In general, under this method an affected investor's allocable share of the affected RIC expenses of a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company is the amount that bears the same ratio to the amount of affected RIC expenses of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company for the calendar year as the amount of dividends paid to the affected investor during the calendar year bears to the sum of (a) the aggregate amount of dividends paid by the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company during the calendar year to all shareholders and (b) any amount on which tax is imposed under section 852(b)(1) for any taxable year of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company ending within or with the calendar year. If a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company does not make a reasonable allocation of affected RIC expenses to its affected investors, a reasonable allocation shall be made by an appropriate District Director.

SPECIAL RULES

The amount of dividend income that an affected investor is treated as receiving as a result of an allocation of affected RIC expenses is not subject to backup withholding under section 3406.

Temporary §1.67-2T(m) describes persons who may, for certain purposes, treat an affected investor's allocable share of the affected RIC expenses of a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company as being an amount determined on the basis of a reasonable estimate published by the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company in a widely available financial publication (e.g., Wall Street Journal or Standard and Poor's Weekly Dividend Record). For example, a nominee who is required to report dividends paid by a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company to the Internal Revenue Service and to the person to whom the payment is made may rely on the estimate for purposes of such reporting. In addition, the affected investor to which the nominee reports may rely on the estimate for purposes of calculating its taxable income and the amount of its affected expenses.

REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

If a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company is required to make an information return to the Internal Revenue Service pursuant to section 6042 (or would be required to make such a return but for the $10 threshold described in section 6042(a)(1)(A) and (B)) with respect to an affected investor to which an allocation of affected RIC expenses is required to be made, the nonpublicly offered regulated investment shall report to the Internal Revenue Service the amount of affected RIC expenses required to be allocated to the affected investor for the calendar year, as well as certain other information. Temporary §1.67-2T(n)(1)(ii) requires a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company to provide to each affected investor for each calendar year (whether or not the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company is required to make an information return with respect to the affected investor pursuant to section 6042), a written statement that includes the amount of affected RIC expenses required to be allocated to the affected investor for the calendar year and certain other information. If an affected investor's shares in a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company are held in the name of a nominee, the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company may make the information return with respect to the nominee and provide the written statement to the nominee. Section 1.67-2T(n)(2) of the temporary regulations provides reporting requirements for nominees to which a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company provides a written statement. These requirements are similar to the ones with which regulated investment companies must comply.

Pursuant to temporary §1.67-2T(n)(5), a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company or a nominee fulfills its reporting obligations with respect to an affected investor (a) by the timely filing with the Internal Revenue Service of an information return pursuant to section 6042 (i.e., Form 1099-DIV) that contains the required information and (b) by furnishing the affected investor with a copy of such information return. Thus, a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company or a nominee is not required to file more than one Form 1099-DIV with respect to an affected investor.

With respect to each affected investor, temporary §1.67-2T(o) requires a common trust fund to state on the return it is required to make pursuant to section 6032 the amount of the affected investor's proportionate share of the affected expenses for the taxable year as well as certain other information.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

No general notice of proposed rulemaking is required by 5 U.S.C. 553(b) for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the Regulatory Flexibility Act does not apply and no Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is required for this rule. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required. The reporting requirements added by this document have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. The reporting requirements have been approved by OMB.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations.

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805. Section 1.67-2T and 1.67-3T also issued under 26 U.S.C. 67(c).

Par. 2. Section 1.62-1 is removed and a new §1.62-1T is added in its place to read as follows:

§1.62-1T Adjusted gross income (temporary).

(a) Basis for determining the amount of certain deductions. The term "adjusted gross income" means the gross income computed under section 61 minus such of the deductions allowed by chapter 1 of the Code as are specified in section 62(a). Adjusted gross income is used as the basis for determining the following:

(1) The limitation on the amount of miscellaneous itemized deductions (under section 67).

(2) The limitation on the amount of the deduction for casualty losses (under section 165(h)(2)),

(3) The limitation on the amount of the deduction for charitable contributions (under section 170(b)(1)),

(4) The limitation on the amount of the deduction for medical and dental expenses (under section 213),

(5) The limitation on the amount of the deduction for qualified retirement contributions for active participants in certain pension plans (under section 219(g), and

(6) The phase-out of the exemption from the disallowance of passive activity losses and credits (under section 469(i)(3)).

(b) Double decution not permitted. Section 62(a) merely specifies which of the deductions provided in chapter 1 of the Code shall be allowed in computing adjusted gross income. It does not create any new deductions. The fact that a particular item may be described in more than one of the paragraphs under section 62(a) does not permit the item to be deducted twice in computing adjusted gross income or taxable income.

(c) Deductions allowable in computing adjusted gross income. The deductions specified in section 62(a) for purposes of computing adjusted gross income are:

(1) Deductions allowable under chapter 1 of the Code (other than by part VII (section 211 and following), subchapter B of such chapter) that are attributable to a trade or business carried on by the taxpayer not consisting of services performed as an employee;

(2) Deductions allowable under part VI (section 161 and following), subchapter B, chapter 1 of the Code, that consist of expenses paid or incurred by the taxpayer in connection with the performance of services by him or her as an employee under an express reimbursement or other expense allowance arrangement (as defined in paragraph (f) of this section) with his or her employer;

(3) For taxable years beginning after December 31,1986, deductions allowable under section 162 that consist of expenses paid or incurred by a qualified performing artist (as defined in section 62(b)) in connection with the performance by him or her of services in the performing arts as an employee;

(4) Deductions allowable under part VI as losses from the sale or exchange of property;

(5) Deductions allowable under part VI, section 212, or section 611 that are attributable to property held for the production of rents or royalties;

(6) Deductions for depreciation or depletion allowable under sections 167 or 611 to a life tenant of property or to an income beneficiary of property held in trust or to an heir, legatee, or devisee of an estate;

(7) Deductions allowed by section 404 for contributions on behalf of a self-employed individual;

(8) Deductions allowed by section 219 for contributions to an individual retirement account described in section 408(a), or for an individual retirement annuity described in section 408(b);

(9) Deductions allowed by section 402(e)(3) with respect to a lump-sum distribution;

(10) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1972, deductions allowed by section 165 for losses incurred in any transaction entered into for profit though not connected with a trade or business, to the extent that such losses include amounts forfeited to a bank, mutual savings bank, savings and loan association, building and loan association, cooperative bank or homestead association as a penalty for premature withdrawal of funds from a time savings account, certificate of deposit, or similar class of deposit;

(11) For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976, deductions for alimony and separate maintenance payments allowed by section 215;

(12) Deductions allowed by section 194 for the amortization of reforestation expenditures; and

(13) Deductions allowed by section 165 for the repayment (made in a taxable year beginning after December 28, 1980) to a trust described in paragraph (9) or (17) of section 501(c) of supplemental unemployment compensation benefits received from such trust if such repayment is required because of the receipt of trade readjustment allowances under section 231 or 232 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2291 and 2292).

(d) Expenses directly related to a trade or business. For the purpose of the deductions specified in section 62, the performance of personal services as an employee does not constitute the carrying on of a trade or business, except as otherwise expressly provided. The practice of a profession, not as an employee, is considered the conduct of a trade or business within the meaning of such section. To be deductible for the purposes of determining adjusted gross income, expenses must be those directly, and not those merely remotely, connected with the conduct of a trade or business. For example, taxes are deductible in arriving at adjusted gross income only if they constitute expenditures directly attributable to a trade or business or to property from which rents or royalties are derived. Thus, property taxes paid or incurred on real property used in a trade or business are deductible, but state taxes on net income are not deductible even though the taxpayer's income is derived from the conduct of a trade or business.

(e) Reimbursed and unreimbursed employee expenses—(1) In general. Expenses paid or incurred by an employee that are deductible from gross income under part VI in computing taxable income (determined without regard to section 67) and for which the employee is reimbursed by the employer, its agent, or third party (for whom the employee performs a benefit as an employee of the employer) under an express agreement for reimbursement or pursuant to an express expense allowance arrangement may be deducted from gross income in computing adjusted gross income. Except as provided in paragraph (e)(2) and (e)(4) of this section, for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, if the amount of a reimbursement (as defined in paragraph (f) of this section) made by an employer, its agent, or third party to an employee is less than the total amount of the business expenses paid or incurred by the employee, the determination of to which of the employee's business expenses the reimbursement applies and the amount of each expense that is covered by the reimbursement is made on the basis of all of the facts and circumstances of the particular case.

(2) Facts and circumstances unclear on business expenses for meals and entertainment. If—

(i) The facts and circumstances do not make clear—

(A) That a reimbursement does not apply to business expenses for meals or entertainment, or

(B) The amount of business expenses for meals or entertainment that is covered by the reimbursement, and

(ii) The employee pays or incurs business expenses for meals or entertainment, the amount of the reimbursement that applies to such expenses (or portion thereof with respect to which the facts and circumstances are unclear) shall be determined by multiplying the amount of the employee's business expenses for meals and entertainment (or portion thereof with respect to which the facts and circumstances are unclear) by a fraction, the numerator of which is the total amount of the reimbursement (or portion thereof with respect to which the facts and circumstances are unclear) and the denominator of which is the aggregate amount of all the business expenses of the employee (or portion thereof with respect to which the facts and circumstances are unclear).

(3) Deductibility of unreimbursed expenses. The amount of expenses that is determined not to be reimbursed pursuant to paragraph (e)(1) or (2) of this section is deductible from adjusted gross income in determining the employee's taxable income subject to the limitations applicable to such expenses (e.g., the 2-percent floor of section 67 and the 80-percent limitation on meal and entertainment expenses provided for in section 274(n)).

(4) Unreimbursed expenses of State legislators. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, any portion of the amount allowed as a deduction to State legislators pursuant to section 162(h)(1)(B) that is not reimbursed by the State or a third party shall be allocated between lodging and meals in the same ratio as the amounts allowable for lodging and meals under the Federal per diem applicable to the legislator's State capital at the end of the legislator's taxable year (see Appendix 1-A of the Federal Travel Regulations (FTR), which as of March 28, 1988 are contained in GSA Bulletin FPMR A-40, Supplement 20). For purposes of this paragraph (e)(4), the amount allowable for meals under the Federal per diem shall be the amount of the Federal per diem allowable for meals and incidental expenses reduced by $2 per legislative day (or other amount allocated to incidental expenses in 1-7.5(a)(2) of the FTR). The unreimbursed portion of each type of expense is deductible from adjusted gross income in determining the State legislator's taxable income subject to the limitations applicable to such expenses. For example, the unreimbursed portion allocable to meals shall be reduced by 20 percent pursuant to section 274(n) before being subjected to the 2-percent floor of section 67 for purposes of computing the taxable income of a State legislator. See §1.67-1T(a)(2).

(5) Expenses paid directly by an employer, its agent, or third party. In the case of an employer, its agent, or a third party who provides property or services to an employee or who pays an employee's expenses directly instead of reimbursing the employee, see section 132 and the regulations thereunder for the income tax treatment of such expenses.

(6) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph (e) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). During 1987, A, an employee, while on business trips away from home pays $300 for travel fares, $200 for lodging and $100 for meals. In addition, A pays $50 for business meals in the area of his place of employment ("local meals"), $250 for continuing education courses, and $100 for business-related entertainment (other than meals). The total amount of the reimbursements received by A for his employee expenses from his employer is $750, and it is assumed that A's expenses meet the deductibility requirements of sections 162 and 274. A includes the amount of the reimbursement in his gross income. A's employer designates the reimbursement to cover in full A's expenses for travel fares, lodging, and meals while away from home, local meals, and entertainment, and no facts or circumstances indicate a contrary intention of the employer. Because the facts and circumstances make clear the amount of A's business expenses for meals and entertainment that is covered by the reimbursement, the reimbursement will be allocated to these expenses. In determining his adjusted gross income under section 62, A may deduct the full amount of the reimbursement for travel fares, lodging, and meals while away from home, local meals, and entertainment. In determining his taxable income under section 63, A may deduct his expenses for continuing education courses to the extent allowable by sections 67 and 162.

Example (2). Assume the facts are the same as in example (1) except that the facts and circumstances make clear that the reimbursement covers all types of deductible expenses but they do not make clear the amount of each type of expense that is covered by the reimbursement. The amount of the reimbursement that is allocated to A's business expenses for meals and entertainment is $187.50. This amount is determined by multiplying the total amount of A's business expenses for meals and entertainment ($250) by the ratio of A's total reimbursement to A's total business expenses ($750/$1000). The remaining amount of the reimbursement, $562.50 ($750 − $187.50), is allocated to A's business expenses other than meal and entertainment expenses. Therefore, in determining his adjusted gross income under section 62, A may deduct $750 for reimbursed business expenses (including meals and entertainment). In determining his taxable income under section 63, A may deduct (subject to the limitations and conditions of sections 67, 162, and 274) the unreimbursed portion of his expenses for meals and entertainment ($62.50 ($250 − $187.50)), and other employee business expenses ($187.50 ($750 − $562.50)).

Example (3). Assume the facts are the same as in example (1) except that the amount of the reimbursement is $500. Assume further that the facts and circumstances make clear that the reimbursement covers $100 of expenses for meals and that the remaining $400 of the reimbursement covers all types of deductible expenses (including any expenses for meals in excess of the $100 already designated) other than expenses for entertainment. The amount of the reimbursement that is allocated to A's business expenses for meals and entertainment is $125. This amount is equal to the sum of the amount of the reimbursement that clearly applies to meals ($100) and the amount of the reimbursement with respect to which the facts are unclear that is allocated to meals ($25). The latter amount is determined by multiplying the total amount of A's business expenses for meals and entertainment with respect to which the facts are unclear ($50) by the ratio of A's total reimbursement with respect to which the facts are unclear to A's total business expenses with respect to which the facts are unclear ($400/$800). The remaining amount of the reimbursement, $375 ($500 − 125) is allocated to A's business expenses other than meals and entertainment. Therefore, in determining his adjusted gross income under section 62, A may deduct $500 for reimbursed business expenses (including meals). In determining his taxable income under section 63, A may deduct (subject to the limitations and conditions of sections 67, 162, and 274) the unreimbursed portion of his expenses for meals ($25 ($150 − $125)), entertainment ($100), and other employee business expenses ($375 ($750 − $375)).

Example (4). During 1987 B, a research scientist, is employed by Corporation X. B gives a speech before members of Association Y, a professional organization of scientists, describing her most recent research findings. Pursuant to a reimbursement arrangement, Y reimburses B for the full amount of her travel fares to the site of the speech and for the full amount of her expenses for lodging and meals while there. B includes the amount of the reimbursement in her gross income. B may deduct the full amount of her travel expenses pursuant to section 62(a)(2)(A) in computing her adjusted gross income.

(f) Reimbursement or other expense allowance arrangement. For purposes of this section, the phrase "reimbursement or other expense allowance arrangement" means advances, allowances (including per diem allowances and mileage allowances), or reimbursements received by a taxpayer for business expenses that are allowable as deductions by part VI and paid or incurred by the taxpayer in connection with the performance of services by him or her as an employee under a reimbursement or other expense allowance arrangement with the employer (whether the reimbursement is actually received from the employer, its agent, or a third party, for whom the employee performs a benefit as an employee of the employer), as well as amounts charged directly or indirectly to the employer through credit card systems or otherwise. In addition, the reimbursement or other expense allowance arrangement must be identified either (1) by making a separate payment or (2) by specifically indicating the separate amount if both wages and the reimbursement or expense allowance are combined in a single payment. It shall be presumed that any amounts treated as compensation to an employee by an employer on the employer's return of tax under chapter 1 of the Code and as wages to such employee for purposes of chapter 24 of the Code (relating to withholding of income tax at source on wages) do not constitute reimbursements or other expense allowances for purposes of section 62 and this section. This presumption may be rebutted by clear and convincing evidence to the contrary that includes evidence of an obligation by the employee to make an adequate accounting (as defined in §1.274-5(e)(4)) to the employer for the employee's business expenses.

(g) Moving expenses. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, a taxpayer described in section 217(a) shall not take into account the deduction described in section 217 relating to moving expenses in computing adjusted gross income under section 62 even if the taxpayer is reimbursed for his or her moving expenses. Such a taxpayer shall include the amount of any reimbursement for moving expenses in income pursuant to section 82. The deduction described in section 217 shall be taken into account in computing the taxable income of the taxpayer under section 63. Pursuant to section 67(b)(6), the 2-percent floor described in section 67(a) does not apply to moving expenses.

(h) Cross-reference. See 26 CFR 1.62-1 (Rev. as of April 1, 1986) with respect to pre-1987 deductions for travel, meal, lodging, transportation, and other trade or business expenses of an employee, reimbursed expenses of an employee, expenses of an outside salesperson, long-term capital gains, contributions described in section 405(c) to a bond purchase plan on behalf of a self-employed individual, moving expenses, amounts not received as benefits pursuant to section 1379(b)(3), and retirement bonds described in section 409 (allowed by section 219).

Par. 3. Immediately after §1.63-2, new §§1.67-1T and 1.67-2T are added, and §1.67-4T is reserved. The added provisions read as follows:

§1.67-1T 2-percent floor on miscellaneous itemized deductions (temporary).

(a) Type of expenses subject to the floor—(1) In general. With respect to individuals, section 67 disallows deductions for miscellaneous itemized deductions (as defined in paragraph (b) of this section) in computing taxable income (i.e., so-called "below-the-line" deductions) to the extent that such otherwise allowable deductions do not exceed 2 percent of the individual's adjusted gross income (as defined in section 62 and the regulations thereunder). Examples of expenses that, if otherwise deductible, are subject to the 2-percent floor include but are not limited to—

(i) Unreimbursed employee expenses, such as expenses for transportation, travel fares and lodging while away from home, business meals and entertainment, continuing education courses, subscriptions to professional journals, union or professional dues, professional uniforms, job hunting, and the business use of the employee's home,

(ii) Expenses for the production or collection of income for which a deduction is otherwise allowable under section 212(1) and (2), such as investment advisory fees, subscriptions to investment advisory publications, certain attorneys' fees, and the cost of safe deposit boxes,

(iii) Expenses for the determination of any tax for which a deduction is otherwise allowable under section 212(3), such as tax counsel fees and appraisal fees, and

(iv) Expenses for an activity for which a deduction is otherwise allowable under section 183.

See section 62 with respect to deductions that are allowable in computing adjusted gross income (i.e., so-called "above-the-line" deductions).

(2) Other limitations. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (d) of this section, to the extent that any limitation or restriction is placed on the amount of a miscellaneous itemized deduction, that limitation shall apply prior to the application of the 2-percent floor.

For example, in the case of an expense for food or beverages, only 80 percent of which is allowable as a deduction because of the limitations provided in section 274(n), the otherwise deductible 80 percent of the expense is treated as a miscellaneous itemized deduction and is subject to the 2-percent limitation on section 67.

(b) Definition of miscellaneous itemized deductions. For purposes of this section, the term "miscellaneous itemized deductions" means the deductions allowable from adjusted gross income in determining taxable income, as defined in section 63, other than—

(1) The standard deduction as defined in section 63(c),

(2) Any deduction allowable for impairment-related work expenses as defined in section 67(d),

(3) The deduction under section 72(b)(3) (relating to deductions if annuity payments cease before the investment is recovered),

(4) The deductions allowable under section 151 for personal exemptions,

(5) The deduction under section 163 (relating to interest),

(6) The deduction under section 164 (relating to taxes),

(7) The deduction under section 165(a) for losses described in subsection (c)(3) or (d) of section 165,

(8) The deduction under section 170 (relating to charitable contributions and gifts),

(9) The deduction under section 171 (relating to deductions for amortizable bond premiums),

(10) The deduction under section 213 (relating to medical and dental expenses),

(11) The deduction under section 216 (relating to deductions in connection with cooperative housing corporations),

(12) The deduction under section 217 (relating to moving expenses),

(13) The deduction under section 691(c) (relating to the deduction for estate taxes in the case of income in respect of the decedent),

(14) The deduction under 1341 (relating to the computation of tax if a taxpayer restores a substantial amount held under claim of right), and

(15) Any deduction allowance in connection with personal property used in a short sale.

(c) Allocation of expenses. If a taxpayer incurs expenses that relate to both a trade or business activity (within the meaning of section 162) and a production of income or tax preparation activity (within the meaning of section 212), the taxpayer shall allocate such expenses between the activities on a reasonable basis.

(d) Members of Congress—(1) In general. With respect to the deduction for living expenses of Members of Congress referred to in section 162(a), the 2-percent floor described in section 67 and paragraph (a) of this section shall be applied to the deduction before the application of the $3,000 limitation on deductions for living expenses referred to in section 162(a). (For purposes of this paragraph (d), the term "Member(s) of Congress" includes any Delegate or Resident Commissioner.) The amount of miscellaneous itemized deductions of a Member of Congress that is disallowed pursuant to section 67 and paragraph (a) of this section shall be allocated between deductions for living expenses (within the meaning of section 162(a)) and other miscellaneous itemized deductions. The amount of deductions for living expenses of a Member of Congress that is disallowed pursuant to section 67 and paragraph (a) of this section is determined by multiplying the aggregate amount of such living expenses (determined without regard to the $3,000 limitation of section 162(a) but with regard to any other limitations) by a fraction, the numerator of which is the aggregate amount disallowed pursuant to section 67 and paragraph (a) of this section with respect to miscellaneous itemized deductions of the Member of Congress and the denominator of which is the amount of miscellaneous itemized deductions (including deductions for living expenses) of the Member of Congress (determined without regard to the $3,000 limitation of section 162(a) but with regard to any other limitations). The amount of deductions for miscellaneous itemized deductions (other than deductions for living expenses) of a Member of Congress that are disallowed pursuant to section 67 and paragraph (a) of this section is determined by multiplying the amount of miscellaneous itemized deductions (other than deductions for living expenses) of the Member of Congress (determined with regard to any limitations) by the fraction described in the preceding sentence.

(2) Example. The provision of this paragraph (d) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. For 1987 A, a Member of Congress, has adjusted gross income of $100,000, and miscellaneous itemized deductions of $10,750 of which $3,750 is for meals, $3,000 is for other living expenses, and $4,000 is for other miscellaneous itemized deductions (none of which is subject to any percentage limitations other than the 2-percent floor of section 67). The amount of A's business meal expenses that are disallowed under section 274(n) is $750 ($3,750 × 20%). The amount of A's miscellaneous itemized deductions that are disallowed under section 67 is $2,000 ($100,000 × 2%). The portion of the amount disallowed under section 67 that is allocated to A's living expenses is $1,200. This portion is equal to the amount of A's deductions for living expenses allowable after the application of section 274(n) and before the application of section 67 ($6,000) multiplied by the ratio of A's total miscellaneous itemized deductions disallowed under section 67 to A's total miscellaneous itemized deductions, determined without regard to the $3,000 limitation of section 162(a) ($2,000/$10,000). Thus, after application of section 274(n) and section 67, A's deduction for living expenses is $4,800 ($6,750 − $750 − $1,200). However, pursuant to section 162(a), A may deduct only $3,000 of such expenses. The amount of A's other miscellaneous itemized deductions that are disallowed under section 67 is $800 ($4,000 × $2,000/$10,000). Thus, $3,200 ($4,000 − $800) of A's miscellaneous itemized deductions (other than deductions for living expenses) are allowable after application of section 67. A's total allowable miscellaneous itemized deductions are $6,200 ($3,000 + $3,200).

(e) State legislators. See §1.62–1T(e)(4) with respect to rules regarding state legislator's expenses.

§1.67–2T Treatment of Pass-Through Entities (temporary)

(a) Application of section 67. This section provides rules for the application of section 67 to partners, shareholders, beneficiaries, participants, and others with respect to their interests in pass-through entities (as defined in paragraph (g) of this section). In general, an affected investor (as defined in paragraph (h) of this section) in a pass-through entity shall separately take into account as an item of income and as an item of expense an amount equal to his or her allocable share of the affected expenses (as defined in paragraph (i) of this section) of the pass-through entity for purposes of determining his or her taxable income. Except as provided in paragraph (e)(1)(ii)(B) of this section, the expenses so taken into account shall be treated as paid or incurred by the affected investor in the same manner as paid or incurred by the pass-through entity. For rules regarding the application of section 67 to affected investors in—

(1) Partnerships, S corporations, and grantor trusts, see paragraph (b) of this section,

(2) Real estate mortgage investment conduits, see paragraph (c) of this section,

(3) Common trust funds, see paragraph (d) of this section,

(4) Nonpublicly offered regulated investment companies, see paragraph (e) of this section, and

(5) Publicly offered regulated investment companies, see paragraph (p) of this section.

(b) Partnerships, S corporations, and grantor trusts—(1) In general. Pursuant to sections 702(a) and 1366(a) of the Code and the regulations thereunder, each partner of a partnership or shareholder of an S corporation shall taken into account separately his or her distributive or pro rata share of any items of deduction of such partnership or corporation that are defined as miscellaneous itemized deductions pursuant to section 67(b). The 2-percent limitation described in section 67 does not apply to the partnership or corporation with respect to such deductions, but such deductions shall be included in the deductions of the partner or shareholder to which that limitation applies. Similarly, the limitation applies to the grantor or other person treated as the owner of a grantor trust with respect to items that are paid or incurred by a grantor trust and are treated as miscellaneous itemized deductions of the grantor or other person pursuant to subpart E, part 1, subchapter J, chapter 1 of the Code, but not to the trust itself. The 2-percent limitation applies to amounts otherwise deductible in taxable years of partners, shareholders, or grantors beginning after December 31, 1986, regardless of the taxable years of the partnership, corporation, or trust.

(2) Example. The provisions of this paragraph (b) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. P, a partnership, incurs $1,000 in expenses to which section 212 applies during its taxable year. A, an individual, is a partner in P. A's distributive share of the expenses to which section 212 applies is $20, determined without regard to the 2-percent limitation of section 67. Pursuant to section 702(a), A must take $20 of expenses to which section 212 applies into account in determining his income tax. Pursuant to section 67, in determining his taxable income A may deduct his miscellaneous itemized deductions (including his $20 distributive share of deductions from P) to the extent the total amount exceeds 2 percent of his adjusted gross income.

(c) Real estate mortgage investment conduit. See §1.67-3T for rules regarding the application of section 67 to holders of interests in REMICs.

(d) Common trust funds—(1) In general. For purposes of determining the taxable income of an affected investor that is a participant in a common trust fund—

(i) The ordinary taxable income and ordinary net loss of the common trust shall be computed under section 584(d)(2) without taking into account any affected expenses, and

(ii) Each affected investor shall be treated as having paid or incurred an expense described in section 212 in an amount equal to the affected investor's proportionate share of the affected expenses.

The 2-percent limitation described in section 67 applies to amounts otherwise deductible in taxable years of participants beginning after December 31, 1986, regardless of the taxable year of the common trust fund.

(2) Example. The provision of this paragraph (d) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. During 1987, the gross income and deductions of common trust fund C, a calendar year taxpayer, consist of the following items: (i) $50,000 of short-term capital gains; (ii) $150,000 of long-term capital gains; (iii) $1,000,000 of divided income; (iv) $10,000 of deductions that are affected expenses; and (v) $60,000 of deductions that are affected expenses. The proportionate share of Trust T in the income and losses of C is one percent. In computing its taxable income for 1987, T, a calendar year taxpayer, shall take into account the following items: (A) $500 of short-term capital gains (one percent of $50,000, C's short-term capital gains); (B) $1,500 of long-term capital gains (one percent of $150,000, C's long-term capital gains); (C) $9,900 of ordinary taxable income (one percent of $990,000, the excess of $100,000, C's gross income after excluding capital gains and losses, over $10,000, C's deductions that are not affected expenses); (D) $600 of expenses described in section 212 (one percent of $60,000, C's affected expenses).

(e) Nonpublicly offered regulated investment companies—(1) In general. For purposes of determining the taxable income of an affected investor that is a shareholder of a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company (as defined in paragraph (g)(3) of this section) during a calendar year—

(i) The current earnings and profits of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company shall be computed without taking into account any affected RIC expenses that are allocated among affected investors, and

(ii) The affected investor shall be treated—

(A) As having received or accrued a dividend in an amount equal to the affected investor's allocable share of the affected RIC expenses of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company for the calendar year, and

(B) As having paid or incurred an expense described in section 212 (or section 162 in the case of an affected investor that is a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company) in an amount equal to the affected investor's allocable share of the affected RIC expenses of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company for the calendar year in the affected investor's taxable year with which (or within which) the calendar year with respect to which the expenses are allocated ends. An affected investor's allocable share of the affected RIC expense is the amount allocated to that affected investor pursuant to paragraph (k) of this section.

(2) Shareholders that are not affected investors. A shareholder of a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company that is not an affected investor shall not take into account in computing its taxable income any amount of income or expense with respect to its allocable share of affected RIC expenses.

(3) Example. The provisions of this paragraph (e) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. During calendar year 1987, nonpublicly offered regulated investment company M distributes to individual shareholder A, a calendar year taxpayer, capital gain dividends of $1,000 and other dividends of $5,000. A's allocable share of the affected RIC expenses of M is $200. In computing A's taxable income for 1987, A shall take into account the following items: (i) $1,000 of long-term capital gains (the capital gain dividends received by A); (ii) $5,200 of dividend income (the sum of the other dividends received by A and A's allocable share of the affected RIC expenses of M); and (iii) $200 of expenses described in section 212 (A's allocable share of the affected RIC expenses of M). A is allowed a deduction for miscellaneous itemized deductions (including A's $200 allocable share of the affected RIC expenses of M, which is treated as an expense described in section 212) for 1987 only to the extent the aggregate of such deductions exceeds 2 percent of A's adjusted gross income for 1987.

(f) Cross-reference. See §1.67-1T with respect to limitations on deductions for expenses described in section 212 (including amounts treated as such expenses under this section).

(g) Pass-through-entity—(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (g)(2) of this section, for purposes of section 67(c) and this section, a pass-through entity is—

(i) A trust (or any portion thereof) to which subpart E, part 1, subchapter J, chapter 1 of the Code applies,

(ii) A partnership,

(iii) An S corporation,

(iv) A common trust fund described in section 584,

(v) A nonpublicly offered regulated investment company,

(vi) A real estate mortgage investment conduit, and

(vii) Any other person—

(A) Which is not subject to the income tax imposed by subtitle A, chapter 1, or which is allowed a deduction in computing such tax for distributions to owners or beneficiaries, and

(B) The character of the income of which may affect the character of the income recognized with respect to that person by its owners or beneficiaries. Entities that do not meet the requirements of paragraph (g)(1)(vii) (A) and (B), such as qualified pension plans, individual retirement accounts, and insurance companies holding assets in separate asset accounts to fund variable contracts defined in section 817(d), are not described in this paragraph (g)(1).

(2) Exception. For purposes of section 67(c) and this section, a pass-through entity does not include:

(i) An estate;

(ii) A trust (or any portion thereof) not described in paragraph (g)(1)(i) of this section,

(iii) A cooperative described in section 1381(a)(2), determined without regard to subparagraphs (A) and (C) thereof, or

(iv) A real estate investment trust.

(3) Nonpublicly offered regulated investment company—(i) In general. For purposes of this section, the term "nonpublicly offered regulated investment company" means a regulated investment company to which part I of subchapter M of the Code applies that is not a publicly offered regulated investment company.

(ii) Publicly offered regulated investment company. For purposes of this section, the term "publicly offered regulated investment company" means a regulated investment company to which part I of subchapter M of the Code applies the share of which are—

(A) Continuously offered pursuant to a public offering (within a meaning of section 4 of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended (15 U.S.C. 77a to 77aa)),

(B) Regularly traded on an established securities market, or

(C) Held by or for no fewer than 500 persons at all times during the taxable year.

(h) Affected investor—(1) In general. For purposes of this section, the term "affected investor" means a partner, shareholder, beneficiary, participant, or other interest holder in a pass-through entity's taxable year that is—

(i) An individual (other than a nonresident alien whose income with respect to his or her interest in the pass-through entity is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United Sates),

(ii) A person, including a trust or estate, that computes its taxable income in the same manner as in the case of an individual; or

(iii) A pass-through entity if one or more of its partners, shareholders, beneficiaries, participants, or other interest holders is (A) a pass-through entity or (B) a person described in paragraph (h)(1)(i) or (ii) of this section.

(2) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph (h) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Corporation X holds shares of nonpublicly offered regulated investment company R in its capacity as a nominee or custodian for individual A, the beneficial owner of the shares. Because the owner of the shares for Federal income tax purposes is an individual, the shares are owned by an affected investor.

Example (2). Individual retirement account I owns shares of a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company. Because an individual retirement account is not a person described in paragraph (h)(1) of this section, the shares are not owned by an affected investor.

(i) Affected expenses—(1) In general. In general, for purposes of this section, the term "affected expenses" means expenses that, if paid or incurred by an individual, would be deductible, if at all, as miscellaneous itemized deductions as defined in section 67(b).

(2) Special rule for nonpublicly offered regulated investment companies. In the case of a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company, the term "affected expenses" means only affected RIC expenses.

(j) Affected RIC expenses—(i) In general. In general, for purposes of this section, the term "affected RIC expenses" means the excess of—

(ii) The aggregate amount of the expenses (other than expenses described in sections 62(a)(3) and 67(b) and § 1.67-1T(b)) paid or incurred in the calendar year that are allowable as a deduction in determining the investment company taxable income (without regard to section 852(b)(2)(D)) of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company for a taxable year that begins or ends with or within the calendar year, over

(ii) The amount of expenses taken into account under paragraph (j)(1)(i) of this section that are allocable to the following items (whether paid separately or included as part of a fee paid to an investment advisor or other person for a variety of services):

(A) Registration fees;

(B) Directors' or trustees' fees;

(C) Periodic meetings of directors, trustees, or shareholders;

(D) Transfer agent fees;

(E) Legal and accounting fees (other than fees for income tax return preparation or income tax advice); and

(F) shareholder communications required by law (e.g., the preparation and mailing of prospectuses and proxy statements).

Expenses described in paragraph (j)(1)(ii)(A) through (F) of this section do not include, for example, expenses allocable to investment advice, marketing activities, shareholder communications and other services not specifically described in paragraph (j)(1)(ii)(A) through (F) of this section, and custodian fees.

(2) Safe harbor. If a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company makes an election under this paragraph (j)(2), the affected RIC expenses for a calendar year shall be treated as equal to 40 percent of the amount determined under paragraph (j)(1)(i) of this section for that calendar year. The nonpublicly offered regulated investment company shall make the election by attaching to its income tax return for the taxable year that includes the last day of the first calendar year for which the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company makes the election a statement that it is making an election under paragraph (j)(2) of this section. An election made pursuant to this paragraph (j)(2) shall remain in effect for all subsequent calendar years unless revoked with the consent of the Commissioner.

(3) Reduction for unused RIC expenses. The amount determined under paragraph (j)(1)(i) of this section shall be reduced by the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company's net operating loss, if any, for the taxable year ending with or within the calendar year. In computing the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company's net operating loss for purposes of this section, the deduction for dividends paid shall not be allowed and any net capital gain for the taxable year shall be excluded.

(4) Exception. The affected RIC expenses of a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company will be treated as zero if the amount of its gross income for the calendar year (determined without regard to capital gain net income) is not greater than 1 percent of the sum of (i) such gross income and (ii) the amount of its interest income for the calendar year that is not includible in gross income pursuant to section 103.

(k) Allocation of expenses among nonpublicly offered regulated investment company shareholders—(1) General rule. A nonpublicly offered regulated investment company shall allocate to each of its affected investors that is a shareholder at any time during the calendar year, the affected investor's allocable share of the affected RIC expenses of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company for that calendar year. (See paragraph (m) of this section for rules regarding estimates with respect to the amount of an affected investor's share of affected RIC expenses upon which certain persons can rely for certain purposes.) A nonpublicly offered regulated investment company may use any reasonable method to make the allocation. A method of allocation shall not be reasonable if—

(i) The method can be expected to have the effect, if applied to all affected RIC expenses and all shareholders (whether or not affected investors), of allocating to the shareholders an amount of affected RIC expenses that is less than the affected RIC expenses of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company for the calendar year.

(ii) The method can be expected to have the effect of allocating a disproportionately high share of the affected RIC expenses of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company to (A) shareholders that are not affected investors or (B) affected investors, the amount of whose miscellaneous itemized deductions (including their allocable share of affected RIC expenses) exceeds the 2-percent floor described in section 67, or

(iii) A principal purpose of the method of allocation is to avoid allocating affected RIC expenses to persons described in paragraph (h)(1)(i) or (ii) of this section whose miscellaneous itemized deductions (inclusive of their allocable share of affected RIC expenses) may not exceed the 2-percent floor described in section 67.

(2) Reasonable allocation method described—(i) In general. The allocation method described in this paragraph (k)(2) shall be treated as a reasonable allocation method. Under the method described in this paragraph, an affected investor's allocable share of the affected RIC expenses of a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company is the amount that bears the same ratio to the amount of affected RIC expenses of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company for the calendar year as—

(a) The amount of dividends paid to the affected investor during the calendar year, bears to

(B) The sum of—

(1) The aggregate amount of dividends paid by the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company during the calendar year to all shareholders, and

(2) Any amount on which tax is imposed under section 852(b)(1) for any taxable year of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company ending within or with the calendar year.

(ii) Exception. Paragraph (k)(2)(i) of this section does not apply if the amount of the deduction for dividends paid during the calendar year is zero.

(iii) Dividends paid. For purposes of this paragraph (k)(2)—

(B) The term "dividends paid" does not include capital gain dividends (as defined in section 852(b)(3)(C)), exempt-interest dividends (as defined in section 852(b)(5)(A)), or any amount to which section 302(a) applies.

(C) The dividends paid during a calendar year is determined without regard to section 855(a).

(3) Reasonable allocation made by District Director. If a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company does not make a reasonable allocation of affected RIC expenses to its affected investor as required by paragraph (k)(1) of this section, a reasonable allocation shall be made by the District Director of the internal revenue district in which the principal place of business or principal office or agency of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company is located.

(4) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph (k) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Nonpublicly offered regulated investment company M, in calculating its investment company taxable income, claims a dividends paid deduction for a portion of redemption distributions (to which section 302(a) applies) to shareholders, as well as for nonredemption distributions. M allocates affected expenses among shareholders who have received nonredemption distributions by multiplying the amount of nonredemption distributions distributed to each shareholder by a fraction, the numerator of which is the affected RIC expenses of M and the denominator of which is M's investment company taxable income, determined on a calendar year basis and without regard to deductions described in section 852(b)(2)(D). No affected RIC expenses are allocated with respect to the redemption distributions. This allocation method can be expected to have the effect of allocating among the shareholders an amount of expenses that is less than the total amount of affected RIC expenses of M. Accordingly, the allocation method is not reasonable.

Example (2). Nonpublicly offered regulated investment company N has two classes of stock, a "capital" class and an "income" class. Owners of the capital class receive the benefit of all capital appreciation on the stocks owned by N, and bear the burden of certain capital expenditures of N; owners of the income class receive the benefit of all other income of N, and bear the burden of all expenses of N that are deductible under section 162. M allocates all affected RIC expenses among shareholders of the income class shares under a method that would be reasonable if the income class were the only class of N stock. Corporations and other shareholders that are not affected investors own a higher proportion of income class shares than of capital class shares. The affected RIC expenses of N are properly allocated among the shareholders who bear the burden of those expenses. Accordingly, the allocation method does not have the effect of allocating a disproportionately high share of the affected RIC expenses of N to shareholders that are not affected investors merely because a disproportionate share of income class shares are owned by shareholders that are not affected investors. The allocation method is reasonable.

Example (3). Nonpublicly offered regulated investment company O has two classes of stock, Class A and Class B. Shares of Class A, which may be purchased without payment of a sales or brokerage commission, are charged with the expenses of a Rule 12b–1 distribution plan of O. Shares of Class B, which may be purchased only upon payment of a sales or brokerage commission, are not charged with the expenses of the Rule 12b–1 distribution plan of O. O allocates all affected RIC expenses among shareholders of Class A and Class B shares under a method that would be reasonable if Class A or Class B shares, respectively, were the only class of O stock. The affected RIC expenses attributable to the Rule 12b–1 plan are allocated to the shareholders of Class A shares. Shareholders that are not affected investors own a higher proportion of Class A shares than of Class B shares. The affected RIC expenses of O are properly allocated among the shareholders who bear the burden of those expenses. Accordingly, the allocation method does not have the effect of allocating a disproportionately high share of the affected RIC expenses of O to shareholders that are not affected investors merely because a disproportionately high share of Class A shares are owned by persons that are not affected investors. The allocation method is reasonable.

Example (4). Assume the facts are the same as in example (3) except that a portion of the affected RIC expenses attributable to the Rule 12b–1 plan are allocated to the shareholders of Class B shares, and shareholders that are not affected investors own a higher proportion of Class B shares than of Class A shares. Thus, the affected RIC expenses are not allocated among the class of shareholders that bear the burden of the expenses. Accordingly, the allocation method has the effect of allocating a disproportionate share of the affected RIC expenses of O to the shareholders of Class B shares. Because shareholders that are not affected investors own a higher proportion of Class B shares than Class A shares, the method can be expected to allocate a disproportionately high share of the affected RIC expenses of O to shareholders that are not affected investors. Accordingly, the allocation method is not reasonable.

(l) Affected RIC expenses not subject to backup withholding. The amount of dividend income that an affected investor in a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company is treated as having received or accrued under paragraph (e)(1)(ii) of this section is not subject to backup withholding under section 3406.

(m) Reliance by nominees and pass-through investors on notices—(1) General Rule. Persons described in paragraph (m)(3) of this section may, for the purposes described in that paragraph (m)(3), treat an affected investor's allocable share of the affected RIC expenses of a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company as being equal to an amount determined by the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company on the basis of a reasonable estimate (e.g., of allocable expenses as a percentage of dividend distributions or allocable expenses per share) that is (i) reported in writing by the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company to the person or (ii) reported in a newspaper or financial publication having a nationwide circulation (e.g., the Wall Street Journal or Standard and Poor's Weekly Dividend Record).

(2) Estimates must be reasonable. In general, for purposes of paragraph (m)(1) of this section, estimates of affected RIC expenses of a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company will be treated as reasonable only if the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company makes a reasonable effort to offset material understatements (or overstatements) of affected RIC expenses for a period of increasing (or decreasing) estimates of affected RIC expenses for a subsequent period. Understatements or overstatements of affected RIC expenses that are not material may be corrected by making offsetting adjustments in future periods, provided that understatements and overstatements are treated consistently.

(3) Application. Paragraph (m)(1) of this section shall apply to the following persons for the following purposes:

(i) A nominee who, pursuant to section 6042(a)(1)(B) and paragraph (n)(2) of this section, is required to report dividends paid by a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company to the Internal Revenue Service and to the person to whom the payment is made, for purposes of reporting to the Internal Revenue Service and the person to whom the payment is made the amount of affected RIC expenses allocated to such person.

(ii) An affected investor to whom a nominee (to which paragraph (m)(3)(i) of this section applies) reports, for purposes of calculating the affected investor's taxable income and the amount of its affected expenses.

(iii) A shareholder that is a pass-through entity, for purposes of calculating its taxable income and the amount of its affected expenses.

(n) Return of information and reporting to affected investors by a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company—(1) In general—(i) Return of information. A nonpublicly offered regulated investment company shall make an information return (e.g., Form 1099-DIV, Dividends and Distributions, for 1987) with respect to each affected investor to which an allocation of affected RIC expenses is required to be made pursuant to paragraph (k) of this section and for which the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company is required to make an information return to the Internal Revenue Service pursuant to section 6042 (or would be required to make such information return but for the $10 threshold described in section 6042(a)(1)(A) and (B)). The nonpublicly offered regulated investment company shall make the information return for each calendar year and shall state separately on such return—

(A) The amount of affected RIC expenses required to be allocated to the affected investor for the calendar year pursuant to paragraph (k) of this section,

(B) The sum of—

(1) The aggregate amount of the dividends paid to the affected investor during the calendar year, and

(2) The amount of the affected RIC expenses required to be allocated to the affected investor for the calendar year pursuant to paragraph (k) of this section, and

(C) Such other information as may be specified by the forms or its instructions.

(ii) Statement to be furnished to affected investors. A nonpublicly offered regulated investment company shall provide to each affected investor for each calendar year (whether or not the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company is required to make an information return with respect to the affected investor pursuant to section 6042), a written statement showing the following information:

(A) The information described in paragraph (n)(1)(i) of this section with respect to the affected investor;

(B) The name and address of the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company;

(C) The name and address of the affected investor; and

(D) If the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company is required to report the amount of the affected investor's allocation of affected RIC expenses to the Internal Revenue Service pursuant to paragraph (n)(1)(i) of this section, a statement to that effect.

(iii) Affected investor's shares held by a nominee. If an affected investor's shares in a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company are held in the name of a nominee, the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company may make the information return described in paragraph (n)(1)(i) of this section with respect to the nominee in lieu of the affected investor and may provide the written statement described in paragraph (n)(1)(ii) of this section to such nominee in lieu of the affected investor.

(2) By a nominee—(i) In general. Except as otherwise provided for in paragraph (n)(2)(iii) of this section, in any case in which a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company provides, pursuant to paragraph (n)(1)(iii) of this section, a written statement to the nominee of an affected investor for a calendar year, the nominee shall—

(A) If the nominee is required to make an information return pursuant to section 6042 (or would be required to make an information return but for the $10 threshold described in section 6042(a)(1)(A) and (B)), make an information return (e.g., Form 1099-DIV, Dividends and Distributions, for 1987) for the calendar year with respect to each affected investor and state separately on such information return the information described in paragraph (n)(1)(i) of this section, and

(B) Furnish each affected investor with a written statement for the calendar year showing the information required by paragraph (n)(2)(ii) of this section (whether or not the nominee is required to make an information return with respect to the affected investor pursuant to section 6042).

(ii) Form of statement. The written statement required to be furnished for a calendar year pursuant to paragraph (n)(2)(i)(B) of this section shall show the following information:

(A) The affected investor's proportionate share of the items described in paragraph (n)(1)(i) of this section for the calendar year,

(B) The name and address of the nominee,

(C) The name and address of the affected investor, and

(D) If the nominee is required to report the affected investor's share of the allocable investment expenses to the Internal Revenue Service pursuant to paragraph (n)(2)(i)(A) of this section, a statement to that effect.

(iii) Return not required. A nominee is not required to make an information return with respect to an affected investor pursuant to paragraph (n)(2)(i)(A) of this section if the nominee is excluded from the requirements of section 6042 pursuant to §1.6042-2(a)(1)(ii) or (iii).

(iv) Statement not required. A nominee is not required to furnish a written statement to an affected investor pursuant to paragraph (n)(2)(i)(B) of this section if the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company furnishes the written statement to the affected investor pursuant to an agreement with the nominee described in §1.6042-2(a)(1)(iii).

(v) Special rule. Paragraph (n)(1)(i) and (ii) of this section applies to a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company that agrees with the nominee to satisfy the requirements of section 6042 as described in § 1.6042-2(a)(1)(iii) with respect to the affected investor.

(3) Time and place for furnishing returns. The returns required by paragraph (n)(1)(i) and (2)(i)(A) of this section for any calendar year shall be filed at the time and place that a return required under section 6042 is required to be filed. See §1.6042-2(c).

(4) Time for furnishing statements. The statements required by paragraph (n)(1)(ii) and (2)(i)(B) of this section to be furnished by a nonpublicly offered regulated investment company and a nominee, respectively, to an affected investor for a calendar year shall be furnished to such affected investor on or before January 31 of the following year.

(5) Duplicative returns and statements not required—(i) Information return. The requirements of paragraph (n)(1)(i) and (2)(i)(A) of this section for the making of an information return shall be met by the timely filing of an information return pursuant to section 6042 that contains the information required by paragraph (n)(1)(i).

(ii) Written statements. The requirements of paragraph (n)(1)(ii) and (2)(i)(B) of this section for the furnishing of a written statement (including the statement required by paragraph (n)(1)(ii)(D) and (2)(ii)(D) of this section) shall be met by furnishing the affected investor a copy of the information return to which section 6042 applies (whether or not the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company or nominee is required to file an information return with respect to the affected investor pursuant to section 6042) that contains the information required by paragraph (n)(1)(ii) or (2)(ii), whichever is applicable, of this section. Nonpublicly offered regulated investment companies and nominees may use a substitute form that contains provisions substantially similar to those of the prescribed form if the nonpublicly offered regulated investment company or nominee complies with all revenue procedures relating to substitute forms in effect at the time. The statement shall be furnished either in person or in a statement mailed by first-class mail that includes adequate notice that the statement is enclosed. A statement shall be considered to be furnished to an affected investor within the meaning of this section if it is mailed to such affected investor at its last known address.

(o) Return of information by a common trust fund. With respect to each affected investor to which paragraph (d) of this section applies, the common trust fund shall state on the return it is required to make pursuant to section 6032 for its taxable year, the following information:

(1) The amount of the affected investor's proportionate share of the affected expenses for the taxable year as described in paragraph (d)(1)(ii) of this section,

(2) The amount of the affected investor's proportionate share of ordinary taxable income or ordinary net loss for the taxable year determined pursuant to paragraph (d)(1)(i) of this section, and

(3) Such other information as may be specified by the forms or its instructions.

(p) Publicly offered regulated investment companies. [Reserved]

PART 602 OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Par. 5. The authority for Part 602 continues to read as follows:

Par. 6. Paragraph (c) of §602.101 is amended by inserting in the appropriate place in the table "§1.67-2T . . . 1545-0110".

There is a need for immediate guidance with respect to the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason, it is found impracticable to issue it with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

26 CFR 1.67-3T: Allocation of expenses by real estate mortgage investment conduits (temporary).

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE—CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953; SUBCHAPTER H, PART 602—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Election to be Taxed as a Real Estate Mortgage Investment Conduit and Other Administrative Matters

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary income tax regulations relating to real estate mortgage investment conduits. The relevant provisions in the Internal Revenue Code were added or amended by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. These regulations prescribe the manner in which an entity elects status as a real estate mortgage investment conduit (REMIC) for Federal income tax purposes and the procedures to be followed when filing a Federal income tax return as a REMIC. The regulations also require a REMIC to file information returns with the Internal Revenue Service and to provide notice to holders of interests in the REMIC of income and certain allocable expenses attributable to their interests.

DATES: The temporary regulations are effective after December 31, 1986, and, with respect to certain reporting requirements contained in §§1.67-3T(f)(3)(ii), 1.67-3T(f)(5)(i)(B), 1.860F-4T(e)(1)(i)(D) and (E), 1.6049-7T(f)(2)(ii)(C), (D), and (G), and 1.6049-7T(f)(3), for calendar quarters and calendar years after 1987.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

This document adds new temporary regulations to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under sections 67, 860D, 860F, and 6049(d)(7) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (Code), relating to real estate mortgage investment conduits. Section 671 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (the 1986 Act) added to the Code new sections 860A through 860G to provide rules relating to real estate mortgage investment conduits, or REMICs, while section 674 of the 1986 Act amended section 6049 to impose certain information reporting requirements with respect to REMIC interests and certain other debt instruments. In general, a REMIC is a fixed pool of mortgages in which multiple classes of interests are held by investors and which elects to be taxed as a REMIC. The temporary regulations under section 860D prescribe the manner in which an entity elects status as a REMIC. The temporary regulations under section 860F govern the filing of a REMIC's income tax return and, together with the temporary regulations under section 6049, require that the REMIC provide notice of income and other information to its investors and the Internal Revenue Service.

Section 132 of the 1986 Act added to the Code new section 67 which disallows certain miscellaneous itemized deductions in computing the taxable income of an individual to the extent that the aggregate of those deductions does not exceed 2 percent of the individual's adjusted gross income. Section 67(c) directs that regulations be issued to prohibit the indirect deduction through pass-through entities of amounts which are not allowable as a deduction if paid or incurred directly by an individual. Section 67(c) also directs that regulations provide any necessary reporting requirements. The temporary regulations under section 67 that are contained in this document fulfill the requirements of section 67(c) as it applies to REMICs.

Under section 675(a) of the 1986 Act, new sections 860A through 860G of the Code and the conforming amendments made to other sections are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986. Section 106(v)(1) of the Technical Corrections Bill would amend section 675(a) of the 1986 Act so that all provisions relating to REMICs take effect as of January 1, 1987. Accordingly, the Service has announced that it will apply these provisions to any holder of an interest in a REMIC as of January 1, 1987, regardless of the holder's taxable year. See Notice 87-41, 1987-1 C.B. 500.

Treatment of a REMIC as a partnership

Section 860F(e) provides that, for purposes of subtitle F of the Code (Procedure and Administration), a REMIC is treated as a partnership and any holder of a residual interest is treated as a partner. Thus, the rules relating to the tax treatment of partnership items (subchapter C of chapter 63 of subtitle F) generally apply to a REMIC. For example, under §1.860F-4T(d), a REMIC may designate a tax matters person in the same manner in which a partnership may designate a tax matters partner under §301.6231(a)(7)-1T. If there is only one holder of the REMIC residual interest, however, §1.860F-4T(a) provides an exception to the application of those rules.

REMIC income tax return and election

Section 1.860F-4T(b) generally requires a REMIC to file an income tax return annually with the Internal Revenue Service. The Service has developed new Form 1066, U.S. Real Estate Mortgage Investment Conduit Income Tax Return, for this purpose. As required by section 860F(e), the return must include the amount of the daily accruals determined under section 860E(c). The due date and any extensions for filing the REMIC's annual return are determined as if the REMIC were a partnership that uses the calendar year. Form 1066 may be signed by any one of the holders of a residual interest during that taxable year or, as provided in section 6903, by a fiduciary as defined in section 7701(a)(6).

As provided in §1.860D-1T(a), an entity or a segregated pool of assets within an entity elects to be treated as a REMIC by furnishing certain information and by computing its taxable income (or net loss) as a REMIC in accordance with section 860C(b) and the regulations thereunder. This election is made on the Form 1066 for the first taxable year of the entity's existence. Once made, the election is irrevocable for that taxable year and all succeeding taxable years.

Section 1.860D-1T(b) requires that the REMIC provide certain information with its income tax return for the year of the election. That information includes the REMIC's employer identification number (a REMIC may apply for an EIN on Form SS-4, "Application for Employer Identification Number"), information concerning the terms of each class of regular interest and the designated residual interest, and any other information that is required by the form. The REMIC must also provide on its first return a description of the prepayment and reinvestment assumptions that are made pursuant to section 1272(a)(6). Finally, under §1.860D-1T(c), an entity or segregated pool of assets that elects to be a REMIC must keep sufficient records concerning investments and other assets to be able to show that it is in compliance with the provisions of sections 860A through 860G during each taxable year.

Notice to residual interest holders

At the close of each calendar quarter, a REMIC is required under §1.860F-4T(e)(1) to provide to each person who held a residual interest in the REMIC during the quarter notice on Schedule Q (Form 1066) of certain information. That information includes (a) the residual holder's share of REMIC taxable income or net loss for the calendar quarter, (b) the amount of the excess inclusion with respect to the holder's residual interest, (c) in the case of certain holders, the allocable investment expenses for the quarter, (d) for calendar years after 1987, certain information with respect to the percentage of the REMIC's assets that are qualifying real property loans under section 593, assets of a domestic building and loan association (as described in section 7701(a)(19)), and real estate assets under §1.860F-4T(e)(1)(ii)(C). The requirements concerning real estate assets under section 856 anticipate certain provisions of the Technical Corrections Bill amending the 1986 Act.

Generally, §1.860F-4T(e)(2) requires that Schedule Q be mailed (or otherwise delivered) to each holder of a residual interest during a calendar quarter no later than the last day of the month following the close of the calendar quarter. Under §1.860F-4T(e)(2)(ii), however, the notice for each of the four calendar quarters of 1987 must be mailed (or otherwise delivered) to each holder no later than March 28, 1988. Finally, §1.860F-4T(e)(4) provides that a copy of Schedule Q for each person who was a residual interest holder at any time during a REMIC's taxable year and for each quarter in which that person was a residual interest holder must be attached to the REMIC's income tax return for that taxable year. Quarterly notice to the Internal Revenue Service is not required.

Reporting to regular interest holders

Section 6049 of the Code requires that certain returns of information be made regarding payments of interest. Under section 6049(d)(7) and §1.6049-7T(a), the term "interest" includes amounts includible in the gross income of any holder of a REMIC regular interest or any other debt instrument to which section 1272(a)(6) applies. In accordance with Notice 87-41, this expanded definition of the term "interest" is effective, for purposes of section 6049(a), with respect to any REMIC regular interest or any other debt instrument to which section 1272(a)(6) applies that is issued after December 31, 1986.

As required by §1.6049-7T(b)(1), an information return must be made with respect to any amount aggregating $10 or more that is includible as interest under §1.6049-7T(a). This return must be made by any REMIC or other issuer of a debt instrument to which section 1272(a)(6) applies and by any broker or middleman who holds as a nominee any REMIC regular interest or any other debt instrument to which section 1272(a)(6) applies. Under §1.6049-7T(c), information returns are not required to be made with respect to amounts includible as interest by certain holders.

In the case of an amount includible as interest, other than original issue discount, §1.6049-7T(b)(3)(i) requires that the information return be made on Form 1099 for each calendar year showing the aggregate amount includible, the name, address, and taxpayer identification number of the person in whose income this amount is includible, and such other information as is required by the form. Section 1.6049-7T(b)(3)(ii) requires similar information with respect to amounts of original issue discount includible by any holder of a REMIC regular interest or any other debt instrument to which section 1272(a)(6) applies.

The information returns required under §1.6049-7T are to be filed annually in the manner prescribed in paragraph (e) of that section. Generally, §1.6049-7T(f) requires that the same information that is provided to the Service also be furnished to each person in whose income amounts are includible as interest. Under §1.6049-7T(f)(3), certain information regarding REMIC assets must also be provided to investors. The additional information specified in §§1.67-3T(f)(3)(ii), 1.6049-7T(f)(2)(ii)(C), (D) and (G), and 1.6049-7T(f)(3) shall be furnished to investors for calendar years after 1987.

The Service is interested in comments on possible alternatives that would simplify the reporting requirements to holders of REMIC regular interests by brokers and middlemen who hold as nominees. These comments should address the cost and administrability of any suggested alternative methods.

Information required on debt instrument

Under §1.6049-7T(g), the issuer of any REMIC regular interest or any other debt instrument to which section 1272(a)(6) applies is required to set forth certain information on the face of the regular interest or other debt instrument. This requirement is effective, however, only with respect to any regular interest or other debt instrument that is ussed after April 8, 1988.

Treatment of allocable investment expenses

Section 1.67-3T(a)(1) requires a REMIC to allocate to each of its pass-through interest holders the holder's proportionate share of the aggregate amount of allocable investment expenses of the REMIC for the calendar quarter. In general, a pass-through interest holder (as defined in §1.67-3T(a)(2)(i)(A)) is any holder of a residual interest that is either an individual (other than certain nonresident aliens), a person that computes its taxable income in the same manner as in the case of an individual, or a pass-through entity, interests in which are owned by either an individual or a person that computes its taxable income in the same manner as in the case of an individual.

The term "pass-through interest holder" includes, pursuant to §1.67-3T(a)(3)(i), a grantor trust, a partnership, an S corporation, a common trust fund, a regulated investment company, and a REMIC. It does not include an estate, a nongrantor trust, a cooperative, a real estate investment trust, or other entities such as a qualified pension plan, an individual retirement account, or an insurance company holding assets in a separate asset account to fund certain variable contracts. The term "allocable investment expenses" (as defined in §1.67-3T(a)(4)) means the aggregate amount of the expenses paid or accrued in the calendar quarter for which a deduction is allowable under section 212 in determining the taxable income of the REMIC for the calendar quarter.

Pursuant to §1.67-3T(b)(1) a pass-through interest holder is treated both as having received or accrued income and as having paid or incurred an expense described in section 212 (or section 162 in the case of a pass-through interest holder that is a regulated investment company) in an amount equal to the pass-through interest holder's proportionate share of the allocable investment expenses of the REMIC. Under §1.67-3T(b)(1)(i), a pass-through interest holder whose taxable year is the calendar year or ends with a calendar quarter takes into account such amounts in those calendar quarters that fall within the holder's taxable year. Separate inclusion rules apply under §1.67-3T(b)(1)(ii) to a holder whose taxable year does not end with a calendar quarter. An interest holder in a REMIC that is not a pass-through interest holder does not take into account in computing its taxable income any amount of its proportionate share of allocable investment expenses.

Under §1.67-3T(c)(1), a REMIC generally computes a pass-through interest holder's proportionate share of its allocable investment expenses by determining the daily amount of such expenses and allocating this daily amount to the pass-through interest holder in proportion to its respective holdings on that day. Generally, a pass-through interest holder's proportionate share of the daily amount of the allocable investment expenses is determined by taking into account all holders of a REMIC residual interest, whether or not pass-through interest holders.

A REMIC is required under §1.67-3T(f)(1) to provide written notice to each pass-through interest holder to whom an allocation of expenses is required to be made. Except in the case of notice to a regular interest holder in a single-class REMIC (as described in §1.67-3T(a)(2)(ii)(B)), notice is furnished quarterly on Schedule Q (Form 1066). The notice must list the aggregate amount of expenses paid or accrued during each calendar quarter for which the REMIC is allowed a deduction under section 212 and the interest holder's proportionate share of these expenses for the calendar quarter. This information must also be furnished annually by the REMIC to the Internal Revenue Service pursuant to §1.67-3T(f)(3)(i).

If a pass-through interest holder's interest in a REMIC is held in the name of a nominee, the REMIC may provide the written notice to the nominee and make the information return to the Internal Revenue Service with respect to the nominee. Section 1.67-3T(f)(5) provides reporting requirements for nominees to which a REMIC provides notice.

In the case of a single-class REMIC, the term "pass-through interest holder" is defined more broadly to include any regular or residual interest holder that is either an individual (other than certain nonresident aliens), a person that computes its taxable income in the same manner as in the case of an individual, or a pass-through entity, interests in which are owned by certain types of holders. Under §1.67-3T(c)(3), a single-class REMIC allocates its investment expenses for a calendar quarter to each holder in proportion to the amount of income that accrues to the holder for that quarter.

As required under §1.67-3T(f) for all other REMICs, a single-class REMIC must report to pass-through interest holders and the Internal Revenue Service the holder's proportionate share of allocable investment expenses. Such a REMIC is required to report this information quarterly to pass-through interest holders who hold residual interests on Schedule Q (Form 1066) and annually to the Internal Revenue Service as required in §1.860F-4T(e)(4). A single-class REMIC is required to report the information quarterly to pass-through interest holders who hold regular interests on a separate statement and annually to the Internal Revenue Service on information return Form 1099.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that these temporary regulations do not constitute a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and, therefore, a regulatory impact analysis is not required.

No general notice of proposed rulemaking is required by 5 U.S.C. 553(d) for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6) does not apply and no Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is required for this rule.

The collection of information requirements added by this document have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. These requirements have been approved by OMB

Adoption of amendments to the regulations.

Accordingly, 26 CFR Parts 1 and 602 are amended as follows:

PART 1

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 is amended by adding the following citations:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.  §1.67-3T also issued under 26 U.S.C. 67(c).  §1.860F-4T also issued under 26 U.S.C. 860G(c)(3).  §1.6049-7T also issued under 26 U.S.C. 1275(c) and 26 U.S.C. 6049(d)(7)(D). ***

Par. 2. New §1.67-3T is added in the appropriate place and reads as set forth below:

§1.67-3T Allocation of expenses by real estate mortgage investment conduits (temporary).

(a) Allocation of allocable investment expenses—(1) In general. A real estate mortgage investment conduit or REMIC (as defined in section 860D) shall allocate to each of its pass-through interest holders that holds an interest at any time during the calendar quarter the holder's proportionate share (as determined under paragraph (c) of this section) of the aggregate amount of allocable investment expenses of the REMIC for the calendar quarter.

(2) Pass-through interest holder—(i) In general—(A) Meaning of term. Except as provided in paragraph (a)(2)(ii) of this section, the term "pass-through interest holder" means any holder of a REMIC residual interest (as defined in section 860G(a)(2)) that is—

(1) An individual (other than a nonresident alien whose income with respect to his or her interest in the REMIC is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States),

(2) A person, including a trust or estate, that computes its taxable income in the same manner as in the case of an individual, or

(3) A pass-through entity (as defined in paragraph (a)(3) of this section) if one or more of its partners, shareholders, beneficiaries, participants, or other interest holders is (i) a pass-through entity or (ii) a person described in paragraph (a)(2)(i)(A)(1) or (2) of this section.

(B) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph (a)(2)(i) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Examples (1). Corporation X holds a residual interest in REMIC R in its capacity as a nominee or custodian for individual A, the beneficial owner of the interst. Because the owner of the interest for Federal income tax purposes is an individual, the interest is owned by a pass-through interest holder.

Example (2). Individual retirement account I holds a residual interest in a REMIC. Because an individual retirement account is not a person described in paragraph (a)(2)(i)(A) of this section, the interest is not held by a pass-through interest holder.

(ii) Single-class REMIC—(A) In general. In the case of a single-class REMIC, the term "pass-through interest holder" means any holder of either—

(1) A REMIC regular interest (as defined in section 860G(a)(1)), or

(2) A REMIC residual interest, that is described in paragraph (a)(2)(i)(A)(1), (2), or (3) of this section.

(B) Single-class REMIC. For purposes of paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(A) of this section, a single-class REMIC is either—

(1) A REMIC that would be classified as an investment trust under §301.7701-4(c)(1) but for its qualification as a REMIC under section 860D and §1.860D-1T, or

(2) A REMIC that—

(i) Is substantially similar to an investment trust under §301.7701-4(c)(1), and

(ii) Is structured with the principal purpose of avoiding the requirement of paragraph (a)(1) and (2)(ii)(A) of this section to allocate allocable investment expenses to pass-through interest holders that hold regular interests in the REMIC.

For purposes of this paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(B), in determining whether a REMIC would be classified as an investment trust or is substantially similar to an investment trust, all interests in the REMIC shall be treated as ownership interests in the REMIC, without regard to whether or not they would be classified as debt for Federal income tax purposes in the absence of a REMIC election.

(C) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (a)(2)(ii) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Corporation M transfers mortgages to a bank under a trust agreement as described in Example (2) of §301.7701-4(c)(2). There are two classes of certificates. Holders of class C certificates are entitled to receive 90 percent of the payments of principal and interest on the mortgages; holders of class D certificates are entitled to receive the remaining 10 percent. The two classes of certificates are identical except that, in the event of a default on the underlying mortgages, the payment rights of class D certificate holders are subordinated to the rights of class C certificate holders. M sells the class C certificates to investors and retains the class D certificates. The trust would be classified as an investment trust under §301.7701-4(c)(1) but for its qualification as a REMIC under section 860D. The class C certificates represent regular interests in the REMIC and the class D certificates represent residual interests in the REMIC. The REMIC is a single-class REMIC within the meaning of paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(B)(1) of this section and, accordingly, holders of both the class C and class D certificates who are described in paragraph (a)(2)(i)(A)(1), (2), or (3) of this section are treated as pass-through interest holders.

Example (2). Assume that the facts are the same as in Example (1) except that M structures the REMIC to include a second regular interest represented by class E certificates. The principle purpose of M in structuring the REMIC to include class E certificates is to avoid allocating allocable investment expenses to class C certificate holders. The class E certificate holders are entitled to receive the payments otherwise due the class D certificate holders until they have been paid a stated amount of principal plus interest. The fair market value of the class E certificate is ten percent of the fair market value of the class D certificate and, therefore, less than one percent of the fair market value of the REMIC. The REMIC would not be classified as an investment trust under §301.7701-4(c)(1) because the existence of the class E certificates is not incidental to the trust's purpose of facilitating direct investment in the assets of the trust. Nevertheless, because the fair market value of the class E certificates is de minimis, the REMIC is substantially similar to an investment trust under §301.7701-4(c)(1). In addition, avoidance of the requirement to allocate allocable investment expenses to regular interest holders is the principle purpose of M in structuring the REMIC to include class E certificates. Therefore, the REMIC is a single-class REMIC within the meaning of paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(B)(2) of this section, and, accordingly, holders of both residual and regular interests who are described in paragraph (a)(2)(i)(A)(1), (2), or (3) of this section are treated as pass-through interest holders.

(3) Pass-through entity—(i) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (a)(3)(ii) of this section, for purposes of this section, a pass-through entity is—

(A) A trust (or any portion thereof) to which subpart E, part 1, subchapter J, chapter 1 of the Code applies,

(B) A partnership,

(C) An S corporation,

(D) A common trust fund described in section 584,

(E) A nonpublicly offered regulated investment company (as defined in paragraph (a)(5)(i) of this section),

(F) A REMIC, and

(G) Any other person—

(1) Which is not subject to income tax imposed by subtitle A, chapter 1, or which is allowed a deduction in computing such tax for distributions to owners or beneficiaries, and

(2) The character of the income of which may affect the character of the income recognized with respect to that person by its owners or beneficiaries.

Entities that do not meet the requirements of paragraph (a)(3)(i)(G)(1) and (2), such as qualified pension plans, individual retirement accounts, and insurance companies holding assets in separate asset accounts to fund variable contracts defined in section 817(d), are not described in this paragraph (a)(3)(i).

(ii) Exception. For purposes of this section, a pass-through entity does not include—

(A) An estate,

(B) A trust (or any portion thereof) not described in paragraph (a)(3)(i)(A) of this section,

(C) A cooperative described in section 1381(a)(2), determined without regard to subparagraphs (A) and (C) thereof, or

(D) A real estate investment trust.

(4) Allocable investment expenses. The term "allocable investment expenses" means the aggregate amount of the expenses paid or accrued in the calendar quarter for which a deduction is allowable under section 212 in determining the taxable income of the REMIC for the calendar quarter.

(5) Nonpublicly offered regulated investment company—(i) In general. For purposes of this section, the term "nonpublicly offered regulated investment company" means a regulated investment company to which part I of subchapter M of the Code applies that is not a publicly offered regulated investment company.

(ii) Publicly offered regulated investment company. For purposes of this section, the term "publicly offered regulated investment company" means a regulated investment company to which part I of subchapter M of the Code applies, the shares of which are—

(A) Continuously offered pursuant to a public offering (within the meaning of section 4 of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended (15 U.S.C. 77a to 77aa)),

(B) Regularly traded on an established securities market, or

(C) Held by or for no fewer than 500 persons at all times during the taxable year.

(b) Treatment of allocable investment expenses—(1) By pass-through interest holders—(i) Taxable year ending with calendar quarter. A pass-through interest holder whose taxable year is the calendar year or ends with a calendar quarter shall be treated as having—

(A) Received or accrued income, and

(B) Paid or incurred an expense described in section 212 (or section 162 in the case of a pass-through interest holder that is a regulated investment company), in an amount equal to the pass-through interest holder's proportionate share of the allocable investment expenses of the REMIC for those calendar quarters that fall within the holder's taxable year.

(ii) Taxable year not ending with calendar quarter. A pass-through interest holder whose taxable year does not end with a calendar quarter shall be treated as having—

(A) Received or accrued income, and

(B) Paid or incurred an expense described in section 212 (or section 162 in the case of a pass-through interest holder that is a regulated investment company), in an amount equal to the sum of—

(C) The pass-through interest holder's proportionate share of the allocable investment expenses of the REMIC for those calendar quarters that fall within the holder's taxable year, and

(D) For each calendar quarter that overlaps the beginning or end of the taxable year, the sum of the daily amounts of the allocable investment expenses allocated to the holder pursuant to paragraph (c)(1)(ii) of this section for the days in the quarter that fall within the holder's taxable year.

(2) Proportionate share of allocable investment expenses. For purposes of paragraph (b) of this section, a pass-through interest holder's proportionate share of the allocable investment expenses is the amount allocated to the pass-through interest holder pursuant to paragraph (a)(1) of this section.

(3) Cross-reference See §1.67-1T with respect to limitations on deductions for expenses described in section 212 (including amounts treated as such expenses under this section).

(4) Interest income to holders of regular interests in certain REMICs. Any amount allocated under this section to the holder of a regular interest in a single-class REMIC (as described in paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(B) of this section) shall be treated as interest income.

(5) No adjustment to basis. The basis of any holder's interest in a REMIC shall not be increased or decreased by the amount of the holder's proportionate share of allocable investment expenses.

(6) Interest holders other than pass-through interest holders. An interest holder of a REMIC that is not a pass-through interest holder shall not take into account in computing its taxable income any amount of income or expense with respect to its proportionate share of allocable investment expenses.

(c) Computation of proportionate share—(1) In general. For purposes of paragraph (a)(1) of this section, a REMIC shall compute a pass-through interest holder's proportionate share of the REMIC's allocable investment expenses by—

(i) Determining the daily amount of the allocable investment expenses for the calendar quarter by dividing the total amount of such expenses by the number of days in that calendar quarter,

(ii) Allocating the daily amount of the allocable investment expenses to the pass-through interest holder in proportion to its respective holdings on that day, and

(iii) Totaling the interest holder's daily amounts of allocable investment expenses for the calendar quarter.

(2) Other holders taken into account. For purposes of paragraph (c)(1)(ii) of this section, a pass-through interest holder's proportionate share of the daily amount of the allocable investment expenses is determined by taking into account all holders of residual interests in the REMIC, whether or not pass-through interest holders.

(3) Single-class REMIC—(i) Daily allocation. In lieu of the allocation specified in paragraph (c)(1)(ii) of this section, a single-class REMIC (as described in paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(B) of this section) shall allocate the daily amount of the allocable investment expenses to each pass-through interest holder in proportion to the amount of income accruing to the holder with respect to its interest in the REMIC on that day.

(ii) Other holders taken into account. For purposes of paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section, the amount of the allocable investment expenses that is allocated on any day to each pass-through interest holder shall be determined by multiplying the daily amount of allocable investment expenses (determined pursuant to paragraph (c)(1)(i) of this section) by a fraction, the numerator of which is equal to the amount of income that accrues (but not less than zero) to the pass-through interest holder on that day and the denominator of which is the total amount of income (as determined under paragraph (c)(3)(iii) of this section) that accrues to all regular and residual interest holders, whether or not pass-through interest holders, on that day.

(iii) Total income accruing. The total amount of income that accrues to all regular and residual interest holders is the sum of—

(A) The amount includible under section 860B in the gross income (but not less than zero) of the regular interest holders, and

(B) The amount of REMIC taxable income (but not less than zero) taken into account under section 860C by the residual interest holders.

(4) Dates of purchase and disposition. For purposes of this section, a pass-through interest holder holds an interest on the date of its purchase but not on the date of its disposition.

(d) Example. The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. (i) During the calendar quarter ending March 31, 1989, REMIC X, which is not a single-class REMIC, incurs $900 of allocable investment expenses. At the beginning of the calendar quarter, X has 4 residual interest holders, who hold equal proportionate shares, and 10 regular interest holders. The residual interest holders, all of whom have calendar-year taxable years, are as follows:

A, an individual

C, a C corporation that is a nominee for individual I,

S, an S corporation, and

M, a C corporation that is not a nominee.

(ii) Except for A, all of the residual interest holders hold their interests in X for the entire calendar quarter. On January 31, 1989, A sells his interest to S. Thus, for the first month of the calendar quarter, each residual interest holder holds a 25 percent interest (100%/4 interest holders) in X. For the last two months, S's holding is increased to 50 percent and A's holding is decreased to zero. The daily amount of allocable investment expenses for the calendar quarter is $10 ($900/90 days).

(iii) The amount of allocable investment expenses apportioned to the residual interest holders is as follows:

(A) $75 ($10 × 25% × 30 days) is allocated to A for the 30 days that A holds an interest in X during the calendar quarter. A includes $75 in gross income in calendar year 1989. The amount of A's expenses described in section 212 is increased by $75 in calendar year 1989. A's deduction under section 212 (including the $75 amount of the allocation) is subject to the limitations contained in section 67.

(B) $225 ($10 × 25% × 90 days) is allocated to C. Because C is a nominee for I, C does not include $225 in gross income or increase its deductible expenses by $225. Instead, I includes $225 in gross income in calendar year 1989, her taxable year. The amount of I's expenses described in section 212 is increased by $225. I's deduction under section 212 (including the $225 amount of the allocation) is subject to the limitations contained in section 67.

(C) $375 (($10 × 25% × 30 days) + ($10 × 50% × 60 days)) is allocated to S. S includes in gross income $375 of allocable investment expenses in calendar year 1989. The amount of S's expenses described in section 212 for that taxable year is increased by $375. S allocates the $375 to its shareholders in accordance with the rules described in sections 1366 and 1377 in calendar year 1989. Thus, each shareholder of S includes its pro rata share of the $375 in gross income in its taxable year in which or with which calendar year 1989 ends. The amount of each shareholder's expenses described in section 212 is increased by the amount of the shareholder's allocation for the shareholder's taxable year in which or with which calendar year 1989 ends. The shareholder's deduction under section 212 (including the allocation under this section) is subject to the limitations contained in section 67.

(D) No amount is allocated to M. However, M's interest is taken into account for purposes of determining the proportionate share of those residual interest holders to whom an allocation is required to be made.

(iv) No allocation is made to the 10 regular interest holders pursuant to paragraph (a) of this section. In addition, the interests held by these interest holders are not taken into account for purposes of determining the proportionate share of the residual interest holders to whom an allocation is required to be made.

(e) Allocable investment expenses not subject to backup withholding. The amount of allocable investment expenses required to be allocated to a pass-through interest holder pursuant to paragraph (a)(1) of this section is not subject to backup withholding under section 3406.

(f) Notice to pass-through interest holders—(1) Information required. For each calendar quarter, a REMIC shall provide to each pass-through interest holder to which an allocation of allocable investment expenses is required to be made pursuant to paragraph (a)(1) of this section notice of—

(i) The aggregate amount of expenses paid or accrued during the calendar quarter for which the REMIC is allowed a deduction under section 212, and

(ii) The proportionate share of these expenses allocated to that pass-through interest holder for the calendar quarter, as determined under paragraph (c) of this section.

(2) Statement to be furnished—(i) To residual interest holder. For each calendar quarter, a REMIC shall provide to each pass-through interest holder who holds a residual interest during the calendar quarter the notice required under paragraph (f)(1) of this section on Schedule Q (Form 1066), as required in §1.860F-4T(e).

(ii) To regular interest holder—(A) In general. For each calendar quarter, a single-class REMIC (as described in paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(B) of this section) generally shall provide to each pass-through interest holder who holds a regular interest during the calendar quarter the notice required under paragraph (f)(1) of this section on a separate statement mailed (or otherwise delivered) in a separate mailing to the regular interest holder's last known address no later than the last day of the month following the close of the calendar quarter. No promotional or advertising information may be included on the statement. The information required to be included in the notice for the last calendar quarter of the calendar year may, however, be separately stated on the statement described in §1.6049-7T(f) instead of on a separate statement provided in a separate mailing. See §1.6049-7T(f)(4) and (6)(i)(A).

(B) Special rule for 1987. The statement required under paragraph (f)(2)(ii)(A) of this section for any calendar quarter of 1987 shall be mailed (or otherwise delivered) to each pass-through interest holder who holds a regular interest during that calendar quarter no later than March 28, 1988.

(3) Returns to the Internal Revenue Service—(i) With respect to residual interest holders. Any REMIC required under paragraph (f)(1) and (2)(i) of this section to furnish information to any pass-through interest holder who holds a residual interest shall also furnish such information to the Internal Revenue Service as required in §1.860F-4T(e)(4).

(ii) With respect to regular interest holders. A single-class REMIC (as described in paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(B) of this section) shall make an information return on Form 1099 for each calendar year beginning after December 31, 1987, with respect to each pass-through interest holder who holds a regular interest to which an allocation of allocable investment expenses is required to be made pursuant to paragraph (a)(1) and (2)(ii) of this section and for which the REMIC is required to make an information return to the Internal Revenue Service pursuant to section 6049 and §1.6049-7T(b)(2)(i) (or would be required to make such information return but for the $10 threshold described in section 6049(a)(1) and §1.6049-7T(b)(1)). The REMIC shall state on the information return—

(A) The sum of—

(1) The aggregate amounts includible in gross income as interest (as defined in §1.6049-7T(a)(2)(i) and (ii)), for the calendar year, and

(2) The sum of the amount of allocable investment expenses required to be allocated to the pass-through interest holder for each calendar quarter during the calendar year pursuant to paragraph (a) of this section, and

(B) Such other information as may be specified by the form or its instructions.

(4) Pass-through interest holder's interest held by a nominee. If a pass-through interest holder's interest in a REMIC is held in the name of a nominee, the REMIC may make the information return described in paragraph (f)(3)(i) and (ii) of this section with respect to the nominee in lieu of the pass-through interest holder and may provide the written statement decribed in paragraph (f)(2)(i) and (ii) of this section to such nominee in lieu of the pass-through interest holder.

(5) Nominee reporting—(i) In general. In any case in which a REMIC provides, pursuant to paragraph (f)(4) of this section, a written statement to the nominee of the pass-through interest holder for a calendar quarter—

(A) The nominee shall furnish each pass-through interest holder with a written statement described in either paragraph (f)(2)(i) or (ii) of this section, whichever is applicable, for the calendar quarter showing the information described in paragraph (f)(1) of this section, and

(B) If—

(1) The nominee is a nominee for a pass-through interest holder who holds a regular interest in a single-class REMIC (as described in paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(B) of this section), and

(2) The nominee is required to make an information return pursuant to section 6042 and §1.6049-7T(b)(1) and (2)(ii) (or would be required to make an information return but for the $10 threshold described in section 6049(a)(2) and §1.6049-7T(b)(1)) with respect to the pass-through interest holder, the nominee shall make an information return on Form 1099 for each calendar year beginning after December 31, 1987, with respect to the pass-through interest holder and state on this information return the information described in paragraph (f)(3)(ii)(A) and (B) of this section.

(ii) Time for furnishing statement. The statement required by paragraph (f)(5)(i)(A) of this section to be furnished by a nominee to a pass-through interest holder for a calendar quarter shall be furnished to this holder no later than 30 days after receiving the written statement described in paragraph (f)(2)(i) or (ii) of this section from the REMIC.

(6) Special rules—(i) Time and place for furnishing returns. The return required by paragraph (f)(3)(ii) and (5)(i)(B) of this section for any calendar year shall be filed at the time and place that a return required under section 6049 and §1.6049-7T(b) is required to be filed. See §1.6049-4(g) and §1.6049-7T(e).

(ii) Duplicative returns not required. The requirements of paragraph (f)(3)(ii) and (5)(i)(B) of this section for the making of an information return shall be met by the timely filing of an information return pursuant to section 6049 and §1.6049-7T(b) that contains the information required by paragraph (f)(2)(ii) of this section.

Par. 3. New §§1.860D-1T and 1.860F-4T are added in the appropriate place. These new sections are set forth below.

§1.860D-1T Election to be treated as a real estate mortgage investment conduit (temporary).

(a) In general. An entity, or a segregated pool of assets within an entity, shall elect to be treated as a REMIC by complying with the requirements of paragraph (b) of this section and computing taxable income as a REMIC on its return (as prescribed in §1.860F-4T(b)) for the first taxable year of its existence. Once made, this election is irrevocable for that taxable year and all succeeding taxable years.

(b) Required information. When electing to be treated as a REMIC, the entity, or segregated pool of assets within an entity, shall provide either on its return or in a separate statement attached to its return—

(1) The REMIC's employer identification number, which shall not be the same as the identification number of any other entity,

(2) Information concerning the terms and conditions of the regular interests and the designated residual interest of the REMIC, or a copy of the offering circular or prospectus containing such information,

(3) A description of the prepayment and reinvestment assumptions that are made pursuant to section 1272(a)(6) and the regulations thereunder, including a statement supporting the selection of the prepayment assumption,

(4) The form of the electing entity under State law or, if an election is being made with respect to a segregated pool of assets within an entity, the form of that latter entity under State law, and

(5) Such other information as the Commissioner may by form or revenue procedure require.

(c) Determination of status. An entity, or segregated pool of assets within an entity, that elects to be a REMIC shall keep sufficient records as to investments and other assets to be able to show that it has complied with the provisions of sections 860A through 860G and the regulations thereunder during each taxable year.

§1.860F-4T REMIC reporting requirements and other administrative rules (temporary).

(a) In general. For purposes of subtitle F of the Code, a REMIC shall be treated as a partnership and any holder of a residual interest in the REMIC shall be treated as a partner. A REMIC shall not be subject, however, to the rules of subchapter C of chapter 63 of subtitle F, relating to the treatment of partnership items, for a taxable year, if there is at no time during the taxable year more than one holder of a REMIC residual interest.

(b) REMIC tax return—(1) Return of income. To satisfy the requirement under section 6031 to make a return of income for each taxable year, a REMIC shall file the return required by paragraph (b)(2) of this section. The due date and any extensions for filing the REMIC's annual return shall be determined as if the REMIC were a partnership.

(2) Income tax return. Because a REMIC, unlike a partnership, may be liable for taxes imposed under subtitle A of the Code (for example, the tax imposed under section 860F(a) on net income from prohibited transactions), the REMIC shall make a return, as required by section 6011(a), for each taxable year on Form 1066, U.S. Real Estate Mortgage Investment Conduit Income Tax Return. The return shall include—

(i) The amount of principal outstanding on each class of regular interests as of the close of the taxable year,

(ii) The amount of the daily accruals determined under section 860E(c),

(iii) The REMIC's employer identification number, and

(iv) Such other information as the Commissioner may by form or revenue procedure require.

(c) Signing of REMIC return. For purposes of section 6063, a REMIC's income tax return for any taxable year may be signed by any one of the holders of a residual interest during that taxable year or, as provided in section 6903, by a fiduciary as defined in section 7701(a)(6) who is acting for the REMIC and who has furnished adequate notice in the manner prescribed in §301.6903-1(b)

(d) Designation of tax matters person. A REMIC may designate a tax matters person in the same manner in which a partnership may designate a tax matters partner under §301.6231(a)(7)-1T. For purposes of applying that section, all holders of a residual interest in the REMIC are treated as general partners.

(e) Notice to holders of residual interests—(1) Information required—(i) In general. At the close of each calendar quarter, a REMIC shall provide to each person who held a residual interest in the REMIC during that quarter notice on Schedule Q (Form 1066) of all the information required by the form and the information required by paragraph (e)(1)(i)(A) through (F) of this section.

(A) The REMIC shall provide to a residual interest holder that person's share of the taxable income or net loss of the REMIC for the calendar quarter.

(B) The REMIC shall provide to a residual interest holder the amount of the excess inclusion (as defined in section 860E and the regulations thereunder), if any, with respect to that person's residual interest for the calendar quarter.

(C) If the holder of a residual interest is also a pass-through interest holder (as defined in §1.67-3T(a)(2)), the REMIC shall provide to that holder the allocable investment expenses (as defined in §1.67-3T(a)(3)) for the calendar quarter.

(D) For calendar quarters after 1987, if the percentage of the REMIC's assets, computed on the basis of the average fair market value of the assets held during the calendar quarter (as described in paragraph (e)(1)(ii)(A) of this section), represented by each of the following categories:

(1) Qualifying real property loans under section 593,

(2) Assets of a domestic building and loan association (as described in section 7701(a)(19)), and is at least 95 percent, the REMIC shall provide a statement for each category for which the REMIC met this test, specifying that at least 95 percent of the REMIC's assets were represented by that category. If the REMIC fails to meet the 95 percent test for any category, the percentage of the REMIC's assets represented by that category shall be provided.

(E) For calendar quarters after 1987, if less than 95 percent of the assets of the REMIC are real estate assets (as defined in paragraph (e)(1)(ii)(C) of this section), the REMIC shall also provide to any real estate investment trust (REIT) that holds a residual interest the following information:

(2) The percentage of the REMIC's gross income (as defined in paragraph (e)(1)(ii)(B) of this section) described in section 856(c)(3)(A) through (F), computed as of the close of the calendar quarter. For purposes of this paragraph, the term "foreclosure property" contained in section 856(c)(3)(F) shall have the meaning specified in section 860G(a)(8).

In determining whether a REIT satisfies the limitations of section 856(c)(2), all gross income shall be deemed to be derived from a source specified in section 856(c)(2).

(F) For calendar quarters in 1987, the percentages of assets required in paragraph (e)(1)(i)(D) and (E) of this section may be computed on the basis of the fair market value of the assets of the REMIC as of the close of the calendar quarter, instead of on the basis of the average during the calendar quarter.

(ii) Special provisions. For purposes of this paragraph (e)(1)(ii) and paragraph (e)(1)(i)(D), (E), and (F) of this section:

(A) The average fair market value of the assets during each calendar quarter is determined by making the appropriate computation as of the close of each month, week, or day, and by using the quarterly average of the monthly, weekly or daily percentages. The monthly, weekly, or daily computation period shall be applied uniformly during the calendar quarter to all categories of assets and gross income, and may not be changed in succeeding calendar quarters without the consent of the Commissioner.

(C) Real estate assets shall mean real estate assets as defined in section 856(c)(6)(B) excluding any property (not otherwise a real estate asset) attributable to the temporary investment of new capital.

(2) Quarterly notice required—(i) In general. Schedule Q shall be mailed (or otherwise delivered) to each holder of a residual interest during a calendar quarter no later than the last day of the month following the close of the calendar quarter.

(ii) Special rule for 1987. Notice to any holder of a REMIC residual interest of the information required in paragraph (e)(1) of this section for any of the four calendar quarters of 1987 shall be mailed (or otherwise delivered) to each holder no later than March 28, 1988.

(3) Nominee reporting—(i) In general. If a REMIC is required under paragraph (e)(1) and (2) of this section to provide notice to an interest holder who is a nominee of another person with respect to an interest in the REMIC, the nominee shall furnish such notice to the actual owner or owners.

(ii) Time for furnishing statement. Under paragraph (e)(3)(i) of this section, the nominee shall furnish the required notice to the actual owner or owners of a REMIC interest no later than 30 days after receiving such information.

(4) Reports to the Internal Revenue Service. A copy of Schedule Q for each person who was a residual interest holder at any time during a REMIC's taxable year and for each quarter in which that person was a residual interest holder shall be attached to the REMIC's income tax return for that taxable year. Quarterly notice to the Internal Revenue Service is not required.

Par. 4. New §1.6049-7T is added immediately after §1.6049-6 and reads as set forth below.

§1.6049-7T Returns of information with respect to REMIC regular interests and certain other debt instruments (temporary).

(a) Definition of interest—(1) In general. For purposes of section 6049(a) in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, the term "interest" includes amounts includible in the gross income of any holder (other than a holder described in paragraph (c) of this section) of—

(i) A REMIC regular interest (as defined in section 860G(a)(1)), or

(ii) Any other debt instrument to which section 1272(a)(6) applies.

(2) Amounts includible. Amounts includible in gross income as interest under paragraph (a)(1) of this section) may consist of—

(i) Interest actually paid to the holder,

(ii) Interest accrued, but not paid, with respect to the REMIC regular interest or other debt instrument, or

(iii) Original issue discount accrued with respect to the REMIC regular interest or other debt instrument.

(b) Requirement of reporting—(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (c) of this section, an information return shall be made by any person described in paragraph (b)(2) of this section with respect to any amount aggregating $10 or more includible as interest under paragraph (a)(1) of this section by any other person during a calendar year.

(2) Person required to make reports. The persons required to make an information return under section 6049(a) and this section are—

(i) The REMIC or other issuer of a debt instrument to which section 1272(a)(6) applies, and

(ii) Any broker or middleman who holds as a nominee any REMIC regular interest or any other debt instrument to which section 1272(a)(6) applies.

(3) Information to be reported—(i) Amounts other than original issue discount. In the case of an amount includible as interest, other than original issue discount treated as interest, an information return on Form 1099 shall be made for the calendar year showing the aggregate amounts includible, the name, address, and taxpayer identification number of the person in whose income these amounts are includible, and such other information as is required by the forms.

(ii) Original issue discount. In the case of original issue discount, an information return on Form 1099 shall be made for each calendar year of any holder of a REMIC regular interest, or any other debt instrument to which section 1272(a)(6) applies, with respect to which there is original issue discount includible in gross income aggregating $10 or more (as determined under section 1272(a)(6) and the regulations thereunder). The information return shall show—

(A) The name, address, and taxpayer identification number of each record holder for whom an amount of original issue discount is includible in gross income,

(B) The account or serial number, or other identifying number of information, of each REMIC regular interest or other debt instrument with respect to which a return is being made,

(C) The aggregate amount of original issue discount includible in the gross income of each holder for the period during the calendar year for which the return is made,

(D) The name and address of the person filing the return, and

(E) Such other information as is required by the form.

(iii) Cross-reference. See §1.67-3T(f)(3)(ii) for additional information required to be included on an information return on Form 1099 with respect to certain holders of regular interest in REMICs described in §1.67-3T(a)(2)(ii).

(c) Information returns not required. An information return shall not be required under section 6049(a) and this section with respect to amounts includible as interest by the holder of a REMIC regular interest, or any other debt instrument to which section 1272(a)(6) applies, if the holder is—

(1) An organization exempt from taxation under section 501(a) or an individual retirement plan,

(2) The United States or a State, the District of Columbia, a possession of the United States, or a political subdivision or a wholly-owned agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing,

(3) A foreign government, a political subdivision thereof, or an international organization,

(4) A foreign central bank of issue (as defined in §1.895-1(b)(1) to be a bank which is by law or government sanction the principal authority, other than the government itself, issuing instruments intended to circulate as currency), or

(5) Any trust which is described in section 4947(a)(1) (relating to certain charitable trusts).

(d) Special rules—(1) Incorporation by reference. Except as provided in paragraph (d)(2) of this section, the special rules of §1.6049-4(d) are incorporated in this section, as applicable.

(2) Exception. Sections 1.6049-4(d)(2) and 1.6049-5(c) shall not apply to any REMIC regular interest or any other debt instrument to which section 1272(a)(6) applies until such time as the Commissioner determines that the broader reporting of amounts includible as interest required by this section is not sufficient for an accurate accounting for those amounts by the holder of any such interest. At that time, the Commissioner may by ruling or other announcement require the submission of Form 8281 (or similar form) to the Internal Revenue Service with respect to any such interest.

(e) Time and place for filing a return with respect to amounts includible as interest. The returns required under this section for any calendar year with respect to amounts includible as interest to which this section applies shall be filed after September 30 of that year, but not before the payor's final payment to the payee for the year, and on or before February 28 of the following year. These returns shall be filed with the appropriate Internal Revenue Service Center, the address of which is listed in the instructions for Form 1099. For extensions of time for filing returns under this section, see §1.6081-1. For magnetic media filing requirements, see §301.6011-2.

(f) Requirement of furnishing statement to recipient—(1) In general. Every person filing a Form 1099 under section 6049(a) and this section shall furnish to the person whose identifying number is required to be shown on the form a written statement showing the information required by paragraph (f)(2) of this section.

(2) Form of statement—(i) Amounts other than original issue discount. With respect to amounts includible as interest (other than original issue discount) in the gross income of any person during a calendar year, the written statement required to be furnished under paragraph (f)(1) of this section shall show—

(A) The aggregate amounts shown on Form 1099 to be included in income by that person,

(B) The name and address of the person filing the form, and

(C) A legend, including a statement that the amount is being reported to the Internal Revenue Service, that conforms to the legend on Form 1099, Copy B, For Recipient.

(ii) Original issue discount. With respect to original issue discount includible in the gross income of a holder, during the calendar year, of a REMIC regular interest or other debt instrument to which section 1272(a)(6) applies, the written statement required to be furnished under paragraph (f)(1) of this section shall show—

(A) The aggregate amount of original issue discount includible in gross income by (or on behalf of) the holder for the calendar year with respect to the regular interest or other debt instrument,

(B) The information required by the paragraph (b)(3)(ii)(B) of this section,

(C) For calendar years after 1987, the daily portion of original issue discount that is allocated to each day of an accrual period as determined under section 1272(a)(6) and the regulations thereunder,

(D) For calendar years after 1987, the length of the accrual period,

(F) A legend, including a statement that the information required under paragraph (f)(2)(ii)(A), (B), and (E) of this section is being reported to the Internal Revenue Service, that conforms to the legend on Form 1099, Copy B, For Recipient,

(G) For calendar years after 1987, the adjusted issue price (as defined in section 1275(a)(4)(B)(ii)) of the regular interest at the beginning of each accrual period with respect to which interest income is required to be reported on Form 1099-OID, and

(H) Information necessary to compute accrual of market discount. [Reserved].

(3) Information with respect to REMIC assets—(i) 95 percent asset test. For calendar years after 1987, the statement required by paragraph (f) of this section with respect to any REMIC regular interest shall also specify for each calendar quarter during which the percentage of the REMIC's assets, computed on the basis of the average fair market value of assets held during the calendar quarter (as described in §1.860F-4T(e)(1)(ii)(A)), represented by each of the following categories:

(A) Qualifying real property loans under section 593,

(B) Assets of a domestic building and loan association (as described in section 7701(a)(19)), and is at least 95 percent, that, for each category for which the REMIC meets this test, at least 95 percent of the REMIC's assets were represented by that category for that calendar quarter. If the REMIC fails to meet the 95 percent test for any category in any calendar quarter, the percentage of the REMIC's assets represented by that category for that calendar quarter shall be provided.

(ii) Additional information required if the 95 percent test not met. For calendar years after 1987, if for any calendar quarter less than 95 percent of the assets of the REMIC are real estate assets (as defined in §1.860F-4T(e)(1)(ii)(C)), the REMIC shall also report for each such calendar quarter to any real estate investment trust (REIT) that holds a regular interest the following information:

(A) The percentage of the REMIC's assets described in section 856(c)(5)(A), excluding from real estate assets any property (not otherwise a real estate asset) attributable to the temporary investment of new capital, computed on the bases of the average fair market value of the assets of the REMIC during the calendar quarter (as described in §1.860F-4T(e)(1)(ii)(A)), and

(B) The percentage of the REMIc's gross income (as defined in §1.860F-4T(e)(1)(ii)(B)) described in section 856(c)(3)(A) through (F), computed as of the close of the calendar quarter. For purposes of this paragraph, the term "foreclosure property" contained in section 856(c)(3)(F) shall have the meaning specified in section 860G(a)(8).

In determining whether a REIT satisfies the limitations of section 856(c)(2), all gross income shall be deemed to be derived from a source specified in section 856(c)(2).

(4) Cross-reference. See §1.67-3T(f)(2)(ii) for additional information that may be separately stated on the statement required by paragraph (f) of this section with respect to certain holders of regular interest in REMICs described in §1.67-3T(a)(2)(ii).

(5) Time for furnishing statements—(i) In general. Each statement required under paragraph (f) of this section to be furnished to any person for a calendar year with respect to amounts includible as interest shall be furnished to that person after April 30 of that year and on or before January 31 of the following year, but not before the final interest payment (if any) for the calendar year.

(ii) Nominee reporting. Each statement required under paragraph (f) of this section to be furnished by a nominee shall be furnished to the actual owner or owners of a REMIC interest no later than 30 days after the nominee receives such information.

(6) Special rules—(i) Copy of Form 1099 permissible. The requirements of paragraph (f) of this section for the furnishing of a statement to any person, including the legend requirement of paragraph (f)(2)(i)(C) and (ii)(F) of this section, may be met by furnishing to that person—

(A) A copy of the Form 1099 filed pursuant to paragraph (b) of this section in respect of that person, plus a separate statement that contains the information described in paragraphs (f)(2)(ii)(C), (D), and (G), (f)(3), and (f)(4), if applicable, of this section, or

(B) A substitute form that contains all the information required under paragraph (f) of this section and that complies with any current revenue procedure concerning the reproduction of paper substitutes of Forms 1099 and the furnishing of substitute statements to forms recipients.

(ii) Statement furnished by mail. A statement mailed to the last known address of any person shall be considered to be furnished to that person within the meaning of this section.

(g) Information required to be set forth on face of debt instrument. In the case of any REMIC regular interest, or any other debt instrument to which section 1272(a)(6) applies, that is issued after April 8, 1988, and that has original issue discount, the issuer shall set forth on the face of the regular interest or other debt instrument—

(1) The amount of the original issue discount,

(2) The issue date,

(3) The rate at which interest is payable (if any) as of the issue date, and

(4) The yield to maturity, including a statement as to the assumption made under section 1272(a)(6)(B)(iii), the method used to determine yield where there is a short accrual period, and the amount of the original issue discount allocable to the short accrual period.

In cases where it is not possible to set forth the information required by this paragraph (g) on the face of the regular interest or other debt instrument by the issue date, the issuer shall deliver to the holder a sticker containing this information within 10 days after the issue date. For rules relating to the penalty imposed for failure to show the information required by this paragraph (g) on the regular interest or other debt instrument, see section 6706(a) and the regulations thereunder.

OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

PART 602

Par. 5. The authority citation for Part 602 continues to read as follows:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.

Par. 6. Section 602.101(c) is amended by adding to the table in the appropriate place—

"§1.67-3T .... 1545-0118",
"§1.860D-1T.......... 1545-0118",
"§1.860F-4T ...... 1545-0118", and
"§1.6049-7T .... 1545-0118".

There is a need for immediate guidance with respect to the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason, it is found impracticable to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) or section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

Lawrence B. Gibbs,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Approved February 23, 1988.

O. Donaldson Chapoton,
Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Section 88.—Certain Amounts with Respect to Nuclear Decommissioning Costs

26 CFR 1.88-1: Nuclear decommissioning costs.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953; SUBCHAPTER H—INTERNAL REVENUE PRACTICE, PART 602.—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Special Rules Relating to Nuclear Decommissioning Costs

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to the Federal income tax treatment of nuclear decommissioning costs. Changes to the applicable law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1984 and the Tax Reform Act of 1986. The regulations affect all taxpayers that include nuclear decommissioning costs in cost of service for ratemaking purposes.

DATES: The regulations are effective on July 18, 1984, and apply with respect to taxable years ending on or after such date.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

BACKGROUND

Sections 88 and 468A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code) were added by subsections (f) and (c), respectively, of section 91 of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (Pub. L. 98-369, 98 Stat. 598). In addition, sections 88 and 468A were amended by section 1807(a)(4) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Pub. L. 99-514; 100 Stat. 2812). On July 10, 1986, the FEDERAL REGISTER published amendments (T.D. 8094; 51 FR 25033) to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) and the Table of OMB Control Numbers (26 CFR Part 602) to provide temporary regulations under sections 88 and 468A. The same issue of the FEDERAL REGISTER also published proposed amendments (51 FR 25070) to the Income Tax Regulations and the Table of OMB Control Numbers based on those temporary regulations. This document supersedes the temporary regulations under sections 88 and 468A and adopts final regulations based on the notice of proposed rulemaking published on July 10, 1986.

Before adopting the final regulations, the Internal Revenue Service solicited comments and held a public hearing on the proposed amendments. Fourteen written comments responding to the notice of proposed rulemaking were received. In addition, three persons provided oral comments at the public hearing held on October 22, 1986. After consideration of all comments received, the proposed amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury decision.

PUBLIC COMMENTS

I. Inclusion of Decommissioning Costs in Gross Income (§1.88-1).

One commentator requested guidance with respect to the treatment of amounts collected for decommissioning by municipalities that do not own or operate a nuclear power plant, but are contractually obligated to pay a percentage of the decommissioning costs incurred by the owner/operator (or lessee/operator). Several municipalities have been collecting decommissioning costs from their customers and have been contributing the amounts collected to a fund maintained by the municipality. The commentator contends that amounts collected for decommissioning by municipalities should not be included in the gross income of the owner/operator (or lessee/operator) because the municipality is liable for a fixed percentage of the decommissioning costs incurred by the owner/operator (or lessee/operator). In addition, the commentator contends that such amounts should not be currently taxed to the owner/operator (or lessee/operator) because section 88 applies only to traditional cost-of-service ratemaking proceedings and not to privately-negotiated life-of-unit contracts that are filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

The Internal Revenue Service believes that the amount of decommissioning costs included in the cost of service of a taxpayer that holds a qualifying interest in a nuclear power plant for any taxable year includes all decommissioning costs that consumers are liable to pay by reason of electric energy furnished by the taxpayer during such taxable year even if such costs are not payable to (or on behalf of) the taxpayer until decommissioning occurs.

The owner/operator (or lessee/operator) of a nuclear power plant should not be able to avoid the current inclusion of such amounts in income by entering into a contract which provides that another person is liable for a percentage of the decommissioning costs to be incurred by the owner/operator (or lessee/operator). Otherwise, the taxpayer could achieve the equivalent of a section 468A deduction without complying with the rules that prohibit self-dealing and restrict the investments of a nuclear decommissioning fund.

Therefore, the final regulations provide that decommissioning costs directly or indirectly charged to the customers of a taxpayer include all decommissioning costs that consumers are liable to pay by reason of electric energy furnished by the taxpayer during the taxable year, whether payable to the taxpayer, a trust, State government, or other entity (other than a holder of a leasehold interest in any portion of the nuclear power plant if such interest is a qualifying interest within the meaning of paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of §1.468A-1), and even though the taxpayer may not control the investment or current expenditure of the amount and the amount may not be paid to the taxpayer at the time decommissioning costs are incurred. In addition, the final regulations contain an example that illustrates the treatment of amounts collected for decommissioning by a municipality that does not possess a qualifying interest in a nuclear power plant but is contractually obligated to pay a percentage of the decommissioning costs incurred by the owner/operator (or lessee/operator).

II. Nuclear Decommissioning Costs; Definitions and General Rules (§1.468A-1).

Several commentators objected to the definition of the term "eligible taxpayer." Most of these commentators believe that the term should include the lessee of a nuclear power plant especially if the lessee is primarily liable for decommissioning the nuclear power plant. Another commentator believes that the owner of stock in a non-profit corporation which owns an experimental nuclear facility should be allowed to make deductible contributions to a nuclear decommissioning fund established with respect to such experimental facility. The temporary regulations do not allow the owner of the stock to establish a nuclear decommissioning fund because (1) the experimental facility is not used predominantly in the trade or business of the furnishing or sale of electric energy and (2) the facility is owned directly by the non-profit corporation and not by the owner of stock in the non-profit corporation.

The final regulations permit the lessee of a nuclear power plant to establish a nuclear decommissioning fund with respect to the leasehold interest if (1) the lessee is subject to the jurisdiction of a public utility commission with respect to the nuclear power plant, (2) the lessee is primarily liable under Federal or State law for decommissioning the portion of the nuclear power plant to which the leasehold interest relates and (3) not other person establishes a nuclear decommissioning fund with respect to the portion of the nuclear power plant to which the leasehold interest relates.

In addition, the final regulations provide that a person possessing a qualifying interest in an experimental nuclear facility may establish a nuclear decommissioning fund with respect to the facility if (1) such person is engaged in the trade or business of the furnishing or sale of electric energy, (2) the rates charged for electric energy furnished or sold by such person are established or approved by a public utility commission, and (3) the cost of decommissioning the facility is included in the cost of service of such person. In addition, a person that satisfies these conditions and owns stock in a corporation that owns an experimental nuclear facility may establish a nuclear decommissioning fund with respect to the facility if the corporation that directly owns the facility is not engaged in the trade or business of the furnishing or sale of electric energy.

Another commentator suggested that the members of an affiliated group of corporations that join in the filing of a consolidated return (a "consolidated group") should be treated as a single taxpayer for all purposes under the regulations. The commentator believes that (1) a single nuclear decommissioning fund should be allowed with respect to a nuclear power plant that is owned by several corporations that are members of a consolidated group and (2) the consolidated group should be allowed to file a single request for a schedule of ruling amounts.

Although the final regulations do not treat the members of a consolidated group as a single taxpayer for purposes of section 468A, changes have been made to reduce the administrative burden imposed on members of a consolidated group. First, the nuclear decommissioning fund qualification requirements have been modified to permit a single trust for two or more nuclear decommissioning funds. In addition, if certain conditions are satisfied (see Part VI below), the assets of two or more nuclear decommissioning funds can be commingled by the trustee for the purpose of making permissible investments. Finally, the regulations provide that the common parent of a consolidated group may request a schedule of ruling amounts for each member of the group that possesses a qualifying interest in the same nuclear power plant by filing a single submission with the Internal Revenue Service.

III. Treatment of Electing Taxpayer (§1.468A-2).

Two commentators believe that post-ratemaking proceedings of a public utility commission should be considered in determining the cost of service amount. A third commentator suggested that utilities should be permitted to establish the cost of service amount for periods prior to the issuance of the regulations based on their own books and records (rather than the records of a ratemaking proceeding). The Internal Revenue Service believes that it is inappropriate to adopt a rule of general application that considers post-ratemaking proceedings in determining the cost of service amount. The final regulations provide, however, that the cost of service amount for any taxable year that begins before January 1, 1987, shall include decommissioning costs that can be accurately determined from information contained in the regulated books of account or other written records of the taxpayer.

Several commentators believe that amounts remaining in the nuclear decommissioning fund upon substantial completion of decommissioning, should not be included in the gross income of the electing taxpayer if the electing taxpayer is not permitted to retain such amounts. The temporary regulations provide an exclusion for amounts that an electing taxpayer is required to refund to customers within one year after the substantial completion of decommissioning. The commentators suggest that no amount should be included in gross income even if the public utility commission requires the excess to be refunded over a longer period or requires the excess to be paid to an energy conservation program or other similar program.

The Internal Revenue Service has reconsidered the "refund" exception to the general rule that amounts distributed from a nuclear decommissioning fund must be included in gross income for the taxable year in which the distribution occurs and has determined that the exception is inappropriate. In order to properly reflect the time value of money, amounts remaining in a nuclear decommissioning fund upon substantial completion of decommissioning are includible in the gross income of the electing taxpayer for the taxable year that includes the date of substantial completion of decommissioning and amounts refunded to ratepayers are deductible for the taxable year in which section 461(h) is satisfied.

IV. Ruling Amount (§1.468A-3).

One commentator believes that the periods used to determine the qualifying percentage (i.e., the estimated period for which a nuclear decommissioning fund is to be in effect and the estimated useful life of a nuclear power plant) should be based on the length of the operating license granted by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. The commentator contends that the definition of qualifying percentage contained in the temporary regulations (which is generally based on the ratemaking assumptions used by the public utility commission during the first ratemaking proceeding in which the nuclear power plant was included in rate base) is inequitable and inconsistent with congressional intent.

The final regulations provide that in the case of a nuclear power plant that began commercial operations before July 18, 1984, a taxpayer may elect to compute the qualifying percentage by assuming that the estimated period for which the nuclear decommissioning fund is to be in effect and the estimated useful life of the nuclear power plant end on the last day of the taxable year that includes the expiration date of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission operating license as in effect on July 18, 1984, but without regard to extensions or amendments thereto.

Several commentators believe that the Service should provide a ruling amount for a taxable year even if the request for a schedule of ruling amounts that includes a proposed ruling amount for such taxable year is filed after the 180th day of the taxable year. The commentators contend that it is unfair for a taxpayer to be denied an initial or revised ruling amount for a taxable year if a rate order permitting recovery of decommissioning costs is received after the 180th day of the taxable year.

The final regulations provide that the Internal Revenue Service shall not provide or revise a ruling amount applicable to any taxable year in response to a request for a schedule of ruling amounts that is filed after the 15th day of the third calendar month following the close of the taxable year. In addition, the final regulations permit taxpayers that have filed a timely request for an initial or revised ruling amount for a taxable year to make deductible contributions to a nuclear decommissioning fund prior to the receipt of the initial or revised ruling amount for such taxable year. The amount of the contribution may not exceed the ruling amount proposed by the taxpayer for such taxable year. If the ruling amount provided by the Internal Revenue Service for such taxable year is less than amount proposed by the taxpayer and an excess contribution results, the amount of the excess contribution must be withdrawn by the taxpayer.

One commentator requested clarification on whether gain or loss is recognized by a nuclear decommissioning fund that exchanges a municipal bond for another municipal bond if there are no material differences in the terms of the bonds. Revenue Ruling 56-435, 1956-2 C.B. 506, and Revenue Ruling 81-169, 1981-1 C.B. 429, provide that the exchange of a municipal bond for another municipal bond is not a taxable transaction if there are no material differences in the terms of the bonds. Nothing in the final regulations limits the applicability of these revenue rulings. Accordingly, the rulings apply to municipal bonds exchanged by nuclear decommissioning funds.

VI. Nuclear Decommissioning Fund Qualification Requirements, Etc. (§1.468A-5).

Several commentators requested clarifications and changes with respect to the number of nuclear decommissioning funds that are required under the temporary regulations. Some of these commentators believe that a single nuclear decommissioning fund should be allowed for two or more nuclear power plants or for two or more electing taxpayers. Other commentators believe that two or more nuclear decommissioning funds should be allowed for a single nuclear power plant especially if two or more public utility commissions that establish or approve rates for electric energy generated by the nuclear power plant require separate funds. Finally, two commentators requested that the regulations permit the assets of two or more funds to be invested on a pooled or commingled basis.

The final regulations require a separate nuclear decommissioning fund for each electing taxpayer and for each nuclear power plant with respect to which the electing taxpayer possesses a qualifying interest. The final regulations provide, however, that two or more nuclear decommissioning funds can be established and maintained pursuant to a single trust agreement. In addition, the assets of two or more funds can be pooled by the trustee for the purpose of making permissible investments if (1) the trustee of each nuclear decommissioning fund separately accounts for the contributions, earnings, expenses and distributions of such fund, (2) the earnings and expenses are reasonably apportioned among the pooled funds, and (3) the books and records of such funds enable the Internal Revenue Service to verify that the requirements of section 468A and the regulations are satisfied.

The final regulations also provide that an electing taxpayer can maintain only one nuclear decommissioning fund for each nuclear power plant with respect to which the taxpayer elects the application of section 468A. If a nuclear power plant is subject to the ratemaking jurisdiction of two or more public utility commissions and any such public utility commission requires a separate fund to be maintained for the benefit of ratepayers whose rates are established or approved by the public utility commission, the separate funds maintained for the plant shall be considered a single nuclear decommissioning fund for purposes of section 468A and the regulations. Thus, for example, the Internal Revenue Service shall issue one schedule of ruling amounts with respect to the nuclear power plant, the nuclear decommissioning fund must file a single income tax return, and, if the Internal Revenue Service disqualifies the nuclear decommissioning fund, the assets of each separate fund are treated as distributed on the date of disqualification.

Several commentators believe that electing taxpayers should be allowed to contribute permissible investments to a nuclear decommissioning fund especially if such investments were made before the issuance of the regulations. In addition, two commentators believe that an electing taxpayer that purchased permissible investments before the issuance of the regulations should be allowed to contribute such investments to a nuclear decommissioning fund without the recognition of gain or loss upon the transfer.

Unlike section 192(c)(4) (relating to black lung benefit trusts) and section 468B(d)(1) (relating to designated settlement funds), section 468A does not authorize the contribution of permissible investments or other property to a nuclear decommissioning fund. Nevertheless, the final regulations provide that an electing taxpayer may contribute permissible investments to a nuclear decommissioning fund for a taxable year that ends on or after July 18, 1984, and begins before the date of publication of the final regulations if the investments were acquired by the taxpayer after July 18, 1984 and before the date of publication of the final regulations. Under the final regulations, the transfer of the investments to the nuclear decommissioning fund shall be considered a sale or exchange for purposes of section 1001. Except as provided in this transitional rule, a nuclear decommissioning fund is not allowed to accept any contributions other than cash contributions that are deductible under section 468A.

One commentator asked whether the assets of a nuclear decommissioning fund can be invested in an annuity contract or mutual fund if the assets of the annuity contract or mutual fund are invested solely in public debt securities of the United States, obligations of a State or local government, or time or demand deposits. The final regulations provide that the assets of a nuclear decommissioning fund must be invested directly in public debt securities of the United States, obligations of a State or local government, or time or demand deposits. Thus, annuity contracts and mutual funds are not permissible investments of a nuclear decommissioning fund.

Another commentator requested clarification with respect to the definition of public debt securities of the United States. The regulations provide that the term public debt securities of the United States means obligations that are taken into consideration for purposes of the public debt limit. The Bureau of Public Debt has informed the Internal Revenue Service that the only outstanding obligations that are taken into account for purposes of the public debt limit and that are generally available for purchase are Treasury bills, Treasury notes, Treasury bonds, and savings bonds.

A few commentators objected to the definition of substantial completion of decommissioning contained in the temporary regulations. Under that definition, substantial completion of decommissioning occurs at the time the maximum acceptable radioactivity levels mandated by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission with respect to a decommissioned nuclear power plant are satisfied. One commentator believes that the definition of substantial completion of decommissioning should be modified to accommodate special or individual circumstances. A second commentator recommends that substantial completion of decommissioning occur when (1) all decommissioning activities (including physical security and radiation monitoring) are completed or (2) the taxpayer or the public utility commission determines that decommissioning activities have been completed. A third commentator believes that a nuclear decommissioning fund should not be considered terminated, even upon substantial completion of decommissioning, if the applicable public utility commission reasonably requires a nuclear decommissioning fund to be maintained.

The final regulations adopt the definition of substantial completion of decommissioning that was contained in the temporary regulations with a minor modification. If a significant portion of the total estimated decommissioning costs with respect to a nuclear power plant are not incurred as of the date that the maximum acceptable radioactivity levels mandated by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission with respect to a decommissioned nuclear power plant are satisfied, the taxpayer may request, and the Internal Revenue Service shall issue, a ruling that designates the date on which substantial completion of decommissioning occurs. The date designated in the ruling shall not be later than the last day of the third taxable year after the taxable year in which the maximum acceptable radioactivity levels mandated by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission with respect to a decommissioned nuclear power plant are satisfied.

VII. Disposition of an Interest in a Nuclear Power Plant (§1.468A-6).

The temporary regulations treated a disposition of an interest in a nuclear power plant as a deemed distribution by the nuclear decommissioning fund that relates to the transferred interest. As a result of this treatment, the amount of the deemed distribution is included in gross income by the transferor of the interest and the nuclear decommissioning fund recognizes gain or loss on the assets involved in the deemed distribution.

The Internal Revenue Service received several comments criticizing this rule and is reconsidering the rule in light of these comments. Accordingly, the final regulations do not include rules relating to the disposition of an interest in a nuclear power plant. Proposed regulations on this subject will be published in the future.

VIII. Manner of and Time for Making Election (§1.468A-7).

Two commentators requested guidance on how the members of a consolidated group are to elect the application of section 468A. The final regulations require the common parent of the consolidated group to make a separate election on behalf of each member of the group that deducts payments under section 468A for a taxable year. The election is made on behalf of a member by providing the name, address and taxpayer identification number of the member, together with all other required information, on an election statement that is attached to the consolidated return for the taxable year.

IX. Effective Date and Transitional Rules (§1.468A-8).

A number of comments on the effective date and transitional rules are discussed in the context of the substantive rules to which the comments relate. In addition, one commentator believes that the addition to tax for the failure to pay estimated taxes for a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987, should not apply if a deduction under section 468A for such taxable year would have eliminated the estimated tax. The final regulations adopt this suggestion.

X. Miscellaneous comments.

The Internal Revenue Service received a number of comments in addition to those summarized above. Some of the suggestions contained in the comments have been adopted in the final regulations. Other suggested changes were rejected primarily because the suggested changes were inconsistent with section 468A as amended by section 1807(a)(4) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and therefore a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required. Although a notice of proposed rulemaking soliciting public comments was issued, the Internal Revenue Service concluded when the notice was issued that the regulations are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

The collection of information requirements contained in this regulation have been approved by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) under section 3507 of the Paperwork Reduction Act.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

For the reasons set out in the preamble, Subchapter A, Part 1, and Subchapter H, Part 602, of Title 26, Chapter I of the Code of Federal Regulations are amended as set forth below:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS
(26 CFR Part 1)

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 is amended by removing the following citation:

Section 1.468A-5T also issued under 26 U.S.C. 468A(e)(5).

Par. 2. 26 CFR Part 1 is amended by removing §1.88-1T and §1.468A-1T through §1.468-8T.

Par. 3. The authority for Part 1 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.  Section 1.468A-5 also issued under 26 U.S.C. 468A(e)(5).

Par. 4. The following new section is added immediately after §1.85-1 to read as follows:

§1.88-1 Nuclear decommissioning costs.

(a) In general. Section 88 provides that the amount of nuclear decommissioning costs directly or indirectly charged to the customers of a taxpayer that is engaged in the furnishing or sale of electric energy generated by a nuclear power plant must be included in the gross income of such taxpayer in the same manner as amounts charged for electric energy. For this purpose, decommissioning costs directly or indirectly charged to the customers of a taxpayer include all decommissioning costs that consumers are liable to pay by reason of electric energy furnished by the taxpayer during the taxable year, whether payable to the taxpayer, a trust, State government, or other entity, and even though the taxpayer may not control the investment or current expenditure of the amount and the amount may not be paid to the taxpayer at the time decommissioning costs are incurred. However, decommissioning costs payable to a taxpayer holding a qualified leasehold interest (as described in paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of §1.468A-1) are included in the gross income of such taxpayer, and not in the gross income of the lessor.

(b) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of the principles of paragraph (a) of this section:

Example (1). X corporation, an accrual method taxpayer engaged in the sale of electric energy generated by a nuclear power plant owned by X, is authorized by the public utility commission of State A to collect nuclear decommissioning costs from ratepayers residing in State A. With respect to the sale of electric energy, X includes in income amounts that have been billed to customers as well as estimated unbilled amounts that relate to energy provided by X after the previous billing but before the end of the taxable year ("accrued unbilled amounts"). The decommissioning costs are included in the monthly bills provided by X to its ratepayers and the entire amount billed is remitted directly to X. Under paragraph (a) of this section, the decommissioning costs must be included in the gross income of X in the same manner as amounts charged for electric energy (i.e., by including in income decommissioning costs that relate to amounts billed as well as decommissioning costs that relate to accrued unbilled amounts). The same rule would apply if the decommissioning costs charged to ratepayers were separately billed and the amounts billed were remitted to State A to be held in trust for the purpose of decommissioning the nuclear power plant owned by X. In that case, X must include in gross income decommissioning costs that relate to amounts billed as well as decommissioning costs that relate to accrued unbilled amounts.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in Example (1), except that X and M, a municipality located in State A, have entered into a life-of-unit contract pursuant to which (i) M is entitled to 20 percent of the electric energy generated by the nuclear power plant owned by X, and (ii) M is obligated to pay 20 percent of the plant operating costs, including decommissioning costs, incurred by X. Under paragraph (a) of this section, the decommissioning costs that relate to electric energy consumed or distributed by M during any taxable year must be included in the gross income of X for such taxable year. The result contained in this example would be the same if M was a State or an agency or instrumentality of a State or a political subdivision thereof.

(c) Cross reference. For special rules relating to the deduction for amounts paid to a nuclear decommissioning fund, see §1.468A-1 through §1.468A-8.

(d) Effective date. (1) Section 88 and this section apply to nuclear decommissioning costs directly or indirectly charged to the customers of a taxpayer on or after July 18, 1984, and with respect to taxable years ending on or after such date.

(2) If the amount of nuclear decommissioning costs directly or indirectly charged to the customers of a taxpayer before July 18, 1984, was includible in gross income in a different manner than amounts charged for electric energy, such amount must be included in gross income for the taxable year in which includible in gross income under the method of accounting of the taxpayer that was in effect when such amount was charged to customers.

Par. 5. The following new sections are added in the appropriate places:

§1.468A-0 Nuclear decommissioning costs; table of contents.

(9) Denial of interest on overpayment.
(10) Determination of addition to tax for failure to pay estimated tax.

§1.468A-1 Nuclear decommissioning costs; general rules.

(a) Introduction. Section 468A provides an elective method for taking into account nuclear decommissioning costs for Federal income tax purposes. In general, an eligible taxpayer that elects the application of section 468A pursuant to the rules contained in §1.468A-7 is allowed a deduction (as determined under §1.468A-2) for the taxable year in which the taxpayer makes a cash payment to a nuclear decommissioning fund. Taxpayers using an accrual method of accounting that do not elect the application of section 468A are not allowed a deduction for nuclear decommissioning costs prior to the taxable year in which economic performance occurs with respect to such costs (see section 461(h)).

(b) Definitions. The following terms are defined for purposes of §§1.468A-1 through 1.468A-8:

(1) The term "eligible taxpayer" means any taxpayer that possesses a qualifying interest in a nuclear power plant (including a nuclear power plant that is under construction).

(2) The term "qualifying interest" means—

(i) A direct ownership interest; and

(ii) A leasehold interest in any portion of a nuclear power plant if—

(A) The holder of the leasehold interest is subject to the jurisdiction of a public utility commission with respect to such portion of the nuclear power plant;

(B) The holder of the leasehold interest is primarily liable under Federal or State law for decommissioning such portion of the nuclear power plant; and

(C) No other person establishes a nuclear decommissioning fund with respect to such portion of the nuclear power plant.

A direct ownership interest includes an interest held as a tenant in common or joint tenant, but does not include stock in a corporation that owns a nuclear power plant or an interest in a partnership that owns a nuclear power plant. Thus, in the case of a partnership that owns a nuclear power plant, the election under section 468A must be made by the partnership and not by the partners. In the case of an unincorporated organization described in §1.761-2(a)(3) that elects under section 761(a) to be excluded from the application of subchapter K, each taxpayer that is a co-owner of the nuclear power plant is eligible to make a separate election under section 468A.

(3) The term "nuclear decommissioning fund" means a fund that satisfies the requirements of §1.468A-5.

(4) The term "nuclear power plant" means any nuclear power reactor that is used predominantly in the trade or business of the furnishing or sale of electric energy, if the rates for such furnishing or sale, as the case may be, have been established or approved by a public utility commission. Each unit (i.e., nuclear reactor) located on a multi-unit site is a separate nuclear power plant.

(5) The term "nuclear decommissioning costs" or "decommissioning costs" means all otherwise deductible expenses to be incurred in connection with the entombment, decontamination, dismantlement, removal and disposal of the structures, systems and components of a nuclear power plant that has permanently ceased the production of electric energy. Such term includes all otherwise deductible expenses to be incurred in connection with the preparation for decommissioning, such as engineering and other planning expenses, and all otherwise deductible expenses to be incurred with respect to the plant after the actual decommissioning occurs, such as physical security and radiation mointoring expenses. Such term does not include otherwise deductible expenses to be incurred in connection with the disposal of spent nuclear fuel under the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982 (Pub. L. 97-425). An expense is otherwise deductible for purposes of this paragraph (b)(5) if it would be deductible under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code without regard to section 280B.

(6) The term "public utility commission" means any State or political subdivision thereof, any agency, instrumentality or judicial body of the United States, or any judicial body, commission or other similar body of the District of Columbia or of any State or any political subdivision thereof that establishes or approves rates for the furnishing or sale of electric energy.

(7) The term "ratemaking proceeding" means any proceeding before a public utility commission in which rates for the furnishing or sale of electric energy are established or approved. Such term includes a generic proceeding that applies to two or more taxpayers that are subject to the jurisdiction of a single public utility commission.

(c) Special rules applicable to certain experimental nuclear facilities. (1) The owner of a qualifying interest in an experimental nuclear facility possesses a qualifying interest in a nuclear power plant for purposes of paragraph (b) of this section if—

(i) Such person is engaged in the trade or business of the furnishing or sale of electric energy;

(ii) The rates charged for electric energy furnished or sold by such person are established or approved by a public utility commission; and

(iii) The cost of decommissioning the facility is included in the cost of service of such person.

(2) An owner of stock in a corporation that owns an experimental nuclear facility possesses a qualifying interest in a nuclear power plant for purposes of paragraph (b)(1) of this section if—

(i) Such stockholder satisfies the conditions of paragraph (c)(1)(i) through (iii) of this section; and

(ii) The corporation that directly owns the facility is not engaged in the trade or business of the furnishing or sale of electric energy.

(3) For purposes of this paragraph (c), an experimental nuclear facility is a nuclear power reactor that is used predominantly for the purpose of conducting experimentation and research.

§1.468A-2 Treatment of electing taxpayer.

(a) In general. An eligible taxpayer that elects the application of section 468A pursuant to the rules contained in §1.468A-7 (an "electing taxpayer") is allowed a deduction for the taxable year in which the taxpayer makes a cash payment (or is deemed to make a cash payment as provided in paragraph (c) of this section) to a nuclear decommissioning fund. The amount of the deduction for any taxable year equals the total amount of cash payments made (or deemed made) by the electing taxpayer to a nuclear decommissioning fund (or nuclear decommissioning funds) during such taxable year. A payment may not be made (or deemed made) to a nuclear decommissioning fund before the first taxable year in which all of the following conditions are satisfied:

(1) The construction of the nuclear power plant to which the nuclear decommissioning fund relates has commenced.

(2) Nuclear decommissioning costs of the nuclear power plant to which the nuclear decommissioning fund relates are included in the taxpayer's cost of service for ratemaking purposes (see paragraph (b) of this section).

(3) A ruling amount is applicable to the nuclear decommissioning fund (see §1.468A-3).

(b) Limitation on payments to a nuclear decommissioning fund—(1) In general. For purposes of paragraph (a) of this section, the maximum amount of cash payments made (or deemed made) to a nuclear decommissioning fund during any taxable year shall not exceed the lesser of—

(i) The cost of service amount applicable to the nuclear decommissioning fund for such taxable year (as defined in paragraph (b)(2) of this section); or

(ii) The ruling amount applicable to the nuclear decommissioning fund for such taxable year (as determined under §1.468A-3).

If the amount of cash payments made (or deemed made) to a nuclear decommissioning fund during any taxable year exceeds the limitation of this paragraph (b)(1), the excess is not deductible by the electing taxpayer. In addition, see paragraph (c) of §1.468A-5 for rules which provide that the Internal Revenue Service may disqualify a nuclear decommissioning fund if the amount of cash payments made (or deemed made) to a nuclear decommissioning fund during any taxable year exceeds the limitation of this paragraph (b)(1).

(2) Cost of service amount. (i) For purposes of section 468A and the regulations thereunder, the "cost of service amount applicable to a nuclear decommissioning fund for a taxable year" is the amount of decommissioning costs included in the electing taxpayer's cost of service for ratemaking purposes for such taxable year. Decommissioning costs are included in cost of service for a taxable year only to the extent such costs are directly or indirectly charged to customers of the taxpayer by reason of electric energy consumed during such taxable year or are otherwise required to be included in the taxpayer's income under section 88 and the regulations thereunder.

(ii) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b)(4)(i) of §1.468A-8 (relating to a special transitional rule), decommissioning costs shall generally not be considered included in cost of service for purposes of this section unless—

(A) The order or opinion of the applicable public utility commission identifies the amount of decommissioning costs that is included in cost of service for ratemaking purposes; or

(B) The written records of the ratemaking proceeding clearly and unambiguously indicate the amount of decommissioning costs that is included in cost of service for ratemaking purposes.

(iii) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (f)(2) of this section (relating to a special rule that applies to certain retroactive adjustments to interim rate orders), orders or opinions of a public utility commission that are issued after the close of any taxable year shall not be considered in determining the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for such taxable year.

(iv) If a taxpayer possesses a qualifying interest in two or more nuclear power plants that are the subject of a single ratemaking proceeding, the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service pursuant to such ratemaking proceeding must be allocated among such nuclear power plants. Such allocation must be reasonable and consistent, and must take into account the assumptions and determinations, if any, used by the public utility commission in establishing or approving the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service.

(c) Deemed payment rules. (1) The amount of any cash payment made by an electing taxpayer to a nuclear decommissioning fund on or before the 15th day of the third calendar month after the close of any taxable year (the "deemed payment deadline date") shall be deemed made during such taxable year if the electing taxpayer irrevocably designates the amount as relating to such taxable year on its timely filed Federal income tax return for such taxable year (see paragraph (b)(4)(iv) of §1.468A-7 for rules relating to such designation).

(2) The amount of any cash payment made by a customer of an electing taxpayer to a nuclear decommissioning fund of such electing taxpayer shall be deemed made by the electing taxpayer if the amount is included in the gross income of the electing taxpayer in the manner prescribed by section 88 and §1.88-1.

(d) Treatment of distributions—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (d)(2) of this section, the amount of any actual or deemed distribution from a nuclear decommissioning fund shall be included in the gross income of the electing taxpayer for the taxable year in which the distribution occurs. The amount of any distribution of property equals the fair market value of the property on the date of the distribution. A distribution from a nuclear decommissioning fund shall include an expenditure from the fund or the use of the fund's assets—

(i) To satisfy, in whole or in part, the liability of the electing taxpayer for decommissioning costs of the nuclear power plant to which the fund relates; and

(ii) To pay administrative costs and other incidental expenses of the fund.

See paragraphs (c) and (d) of §1.468A-5 for rules relating to the deemed distribution of the assets of a nuclear decommissioning fund in the case of a disqualification or termination of the fund.

(2) Exceptions to inclusion in gross income—(i) Payment of administrative costs and incidental expenses. The amount of any payment by a nuclear decommissioning fund for administrative costs or other incidental expenses of such fund (as defined in paragraph (a)(3)(ii)(A) of §1.468A-5) shall not be included in the gross income of the electing taxpayer unless such amount is paid to the electing taxpayer (in which case the amount of the payment is included in the gross income of the electing taxpayer under section 61).

(ii) Withdrawals of excess contributions. The amount of a withdrawal of an excess contribution (as defined in paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of §1.468A-5) by an electing taxpayer pursuant to the rules of paragraph (c)(2) of §1.468A-5 shall not be included in the gross income of the electing taxpayer. See paragraph (b)(1) of this section, which provides that the payment of such amount to the nuclear decommissioning fund is not deductible by the electing taxpayer.

(iii) Actual distributions of amounts included in gross income as deemed distributions. If the amount of a deemed distribution is included in the gross income of the electing taxpayer for the taxable year in which the deemed distribution occurs, no further amount is required to be included in gross income when the amount of the deemed distribution is actually distributed by the nuclear decommissioning fund. The amount of a deemed distribution is actually distributed by a nuclear decommissioning fund as the first actual distributions are made by the nuclear decommissioning fund on or after the date of the deemed distribution.

(e) Deduction when economic performance occurs. An electing taxpayer using an accrual method of accounting is allowed a deduction for nuclear decommissioning costs no earlier than the taxable year in which economic performance occurs with respect to such costs (see section 461(h)(2)). The amount of nuclear decommissioning costs that is deductible under this paragraph (e) is determined without regard to section 280B (see paragraph (b)(5) of §1.468A-1). A deduction is allowed under this paragraph (e) whether or not a deduction was allowed with respect to such costs under section 468A(a) and paragraph (a) of this section for an earlier taxable year (see paragraph (a)(2) of §1.468A-8, however, for the effective date applicable to this paragraph (e)).

(f) Effect of interim rate orders and retroactive adjustments to such orders—(1) In general. (i) The amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for any taxable year that ends before the date of a retroactive adjustment to an interim rate order or interim determination of a public utility commission shall include amounts authorized pursuant to such interim rate order or interim determination unless a taxpayer elects the application of paragraph (f)(2) of this section for such taxable year. For purposes of this paragraph (f), a retroactive adjustment occurs on the effective date of the revised rate schedule that implements the retroactive adjustment.

(ii) If a retroactive adjustment to an interim rate order or interim determination reduces the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for one or more taxable years ending before the date of the adjustment, the amount of such reduction must be subtracted from the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service (as determined under paragraph (b)(2) of this section) for one or more taxable years ending on or after the date of the adjustment. For this purpose, the amount of such reduction must be taken into account in the following manner:

(A) If the retroactive adjustment reduces the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for one taxable year ending before the date of the adjustment, the total amount of the reduction must be taken into account for the taxable year that includes the date of the adjustment.

(B) If the retroactive adjustment reduces the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for two taxable years ending before the date of the adjustment, at least one-half of the total amount of the reduction must be taken into account for the first taxable year ending on or after the date of the adjustment and the total amount of the reduction must be taken into account over the first two taxable years ending on or after the date of the adjustment.

(C) If the retroactive adjustment reduces the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for three or more taxable years ending before the date of the adjustment, at least one-third of the total amount of the reduction must be taken into account for the first taxable year ending on or after the date of the adjustment, at least two-thirds of the total amount of the reduction must be taken into account over the first two taxable years ending on or after the date of the adjustment, and the total amount of the reduction must be taken into account over the first three taxable years ending on or after the date of the adjustment.

(2) Special rule permitting withdrawal of excess contribution that results from retroactive adjustment to interim rate order. (i) If a retroactive adjustment that reduces the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for a taxable year occurs on or before the date prescribed by law (including extensions) for filing the return of the nuclear decommissioning fund for such taxable year, a taxpayer may elect the application of this paragraph (f)(2) for such taxable year by—

(A) Including in the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for such taxable year only the amount of decommissioning costs authorized for such taxable year under the retroactive adjustment; and

(B) Withdrawing any excess contribution that results from such treatment in accordance with the rules of paragraph (c)(2) of §1.468A-5.

(ii) If a taxpayer elects the application of this paragraph (f)(2) for any taxable year, the retroactive adjustment shall not be treated for purposes of paragraph (f)(1)(ii) of this section as a reduction in the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for such taxable year.

(3) Revised schedule of ruling amounts. If the rules provided in this paragraph (f) result in a cost of service amount applicable to a nuclear decommissioning fund for any taxable year that is less than the cost of service amount applicable to the nuclear decommissioning fund for the immediately preceding taxable year, the taxpayer must request a revised schedule of ruling amounts on or before the deemed payment deadline date for the taxable year in which the retroactive adjustment occurs. The first taxable year to which the revised schedule of ruling amounts applies shall be the taxable year in which the retroactive adjustment occurs.

(4) Example. The following example illustrates the application of the principles of this paragraph (f):

Examples. (i) X corporation is a calendar year, accrual method taxpayer engaged in the sale of electric energy generated by a nuclear power plant owned by X. During 1989, X is authorized pursuant to an interim rate order issued by the public utility commission of State A to collect nuclear decommissioning costs of $500,000 per year beginning on January 1, 1990. On May 1, 1992, the public utility commission of State A issues a final rate order that is effective on July 1, 1992. The final rate order authorizes X to collect decommissioning costs of $400,000 per year and requires X to refund to the ratepayers of State A excess decommissioning costs of $250,000 collected between January 1, 1990, and July 1, 1992.

(ii) If X elects the application of paragraph (f)(2) of this section for the 1991 taxable year, the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for such taxable year is $400,000. If X made a contribution of $500,000 to a nuclear decommissioning fund for the 1991 taxable year, X must withdraw $100,000 from the nuclear decommissioning fund on or before the date prescribed by law (including extensions) for filing the return of the nuclear decommissioning fund for the 1991 taxable year (see paragraph (c)(2) of §1.468A-5).

(iii) In addition, under paragraph (f)(1)(i) of this section, the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for the 1990 taxable year is $500,000, and, under paragraph (f)(1)(ii) of this section, the amount for the 1992 taxable year is $300,000. Because the cost of service amount for the 1991 taxable year ($400,000) is less than the cost of service amount for the 1990 taxable year ($500,000), paragraph (f)(3) of this section applies and X must file a request for a revised schedule of ruling amounts for the period beginning with the 1992 taxable year on or before March 15, 1993.

(iv) Alternatively, if X does not elect the application of paragraph (f)(2) of this section for the 1991 taxable year, under paragraph (f)(1)(i) of this section, the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for the 1990 and 1991 taxable years is $500,000, and, under paragraph (f)(1)(ii) of this section, the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for the 1992 taxable year may not exceed $300,000. Because the cost of service amount for the 1992 taxable year is less than the cost of service amount for the 1991 taxable year, paragraph (f)(3) of this section applies and X must file a request for a revised schedule of ruling amounts for the period beginning with the 1992 taxable year on or before March 15, 1993.

§1.468A-3 Ruling amount.

(a) In general. (1) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (j) of this section, an electing taxpayer is allowed a deduction under section 468A(a) for the taxable year in which the taxpayer makes a cash payment (or is deemed to make a cash payment) to a nuclear decommissioning fund only if the taxpayer has received a schedule of ruling amounts for the nuclear decommissioning fund that includes a ruling amount for such taxable year. Except as provided in paragraph (a)(4) or (5) of this section, a schedule of ruling amounts for a nuclear decommissioning fund ("schedule of ruling amounts") is a ruling (within the meaning of paragraph (a)(2) of §601.201) specifying the annual payments ("ruling amounts") that, over the taxable years remaining in the "funding period" as of the date the schedule first applies, will result in a projected balance of the nuclear decommissioning fund as of the last day of the funding period equal to (and in no event greater than) the "amount of decommissioning costs allocable to the fund." The projected balance of a nuclear decommissioning fund as of the last day of the funding period shall be calculated by taking into account the fair market value of the assets of the fund as of the first day of the first taxable year to which the schedule of ruling amounts applies and the estimated rate of return to be earned by the assets of the fund after payment of the estimated administrative costs and incidental expenses to be incurred by the fund (as defined in paragraph (a)(3)(ii)(A) of §1.468A-5), including all Federal, State and local income taxes to be incurred by the fund (the "after-tax rate of return"). See paragraph (c) of this section for a definition of funding period and paragraph (d) of this section for guidance with respect to the amount of decommissioning costs allocable to a fund.

(2) To the extent consistent with the principles and provisions of this section, each schedule of ruling amounts shall be based on the reasonable assumptions and determinations used by the applicable public utility commission(s) in establishing or approving the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in cost of service for ratemaking purposes, taking into account amounts that are otherwise required to be included in the taxpayer's income under section 88 and the regulations thereunder. Thus, for example, each schedule of ruling amounts shall be based on the public utility commission's reasonable assumptions concerning—

(i) The after-tax rate of return to be earned by the amounts collected for decommissioning;

(ii) The total estimated cost of decommissioning the nuclear power plant (see paragraph (d)(2) of this section); and

(iii) The frequency of contributions to a nuclear decommissioning fund for a taxable year (e.g., monthly, quarterly, semi-annual or annual contributions).

(3) The Internal Revenue Service shall provide a schedule of ruling amounts that is identical to the schedule of ruling amounts proposed by the taxpayer in connection with the taxpayer's request for a schedule of ruling amounts (see paragraph (h)(2)(viii) of this section), but no schedule of ruling amounts shall be provided unless the taxpayer's proposed schedule of ruling amounts is consistent with the principles and provisions of this section. If a proposed schedule of ruling amounts is not consistent with the principles and provisions of this section, the taxpayer may propose an amended schedule of ruling amounts that is consistent with such principles and provisions.

(4) If, in establishing or approving the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in cost of service for ratemaking purposes, the applicable public utility commission uses an estimated cost of decommissioning that is based on price levels in effect at the time of the ratemaking proceeding (i.e., the public utility commission does not estimate the cost of decommissioning in future dollars), the Internal Revenue Service may, in its discretion, provide a formula or method for determining a schedule of ruling amounts (rather than a schedule specifying a dollar amount for each taxable year) that is consistent with the principles and provisions of this section. See paragraph (i)(1)(ii) of this section for a special rule relating to the mandatory review of ruling amounts that are determined pursuant to a formula or method.

(5) The Internal Revenue Service may, in its discretion, provide a schedule of ruling amounts that is determined on a basis other than the rules of paragraphs (a) through (g) of this section if—

(i) In connection with its request for a schedule of ruling amounts, the taxpayer explains the need for special treatment and sets forth an alternative basis for determining the schedule of ruling amounts; and

(ii) The Internal Revenue Service determines that special treatment is consistent with the purpose of section 468A.

(b) Level funding limitation. (1) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b)(4) of this section and paragraph (b)(6) of §1.468A-8 (relating to a special transitional rule), the ruling amount specified in a schedule of ruling amounts for any taxable year in the level funding limitation period shall not be less than the ruling amount specified in such schedule for any earlier taxable year.

(2) For purposes of this section, the level funding limitation period for a nuclear decommissioning fund is the period that—

(i) Begins on the first day of the first taxable year for which a deductible payment is made (or deemed made) to such nuclear decommissioning fund (see paragraph (a) of §1.468A-2 for rules relating to the first taxable year for which a payment may be made (or deemed made) to a nuclear decommissioning fund); and

(ii) Ends on the last day of the taxable year that includes the estimated date on which the nuclear power plant to which the nuclear decommissioning fund relates will no longer be included in the taxpayer's rate base for ratemaking purposes (see paragraph (e)(2) and (4) of this section).

(3) The ruling amount specified in a schedule of ruling amounts for a taxable year after the end of the level funding limitation period may be less than the ruling amount specified in such schedule for an earlier taxable year.

(4) The ruling amount specified in a schedule of ruling amounts for the last taxable year in the level funding limitation period may be less than the ruling amount specified in such schedule for any earlier taxable year if the applicable public utility commission assumes for cost of service purposes that decommissioning costs will be included in cost of service for only a portion of the last taxable year in the level funding limitation period. The ruling amount for the last taxable year in the level funding limitation period, however, may not be less than the amount that bears the same relationship to the ruling amount for the preceding taxable year as the period for which decommissioning costs will be included in cost of service for such last taxable year bears to one year.

(c) Funding period—(1) General rule. For purposes of this section, the funding period for a nuclear decommissioning fund is the period that—

(i) Begins on the first day of the first taxable year for which a deductible payment is made (or deemed made) to such nuclear decommissioning fund (see paragraph (a)(1) of §1.468A-2 for rules relating to the first taxable year for which a payment may be made (or deemed made) to a nuclear decommissioning fund); and

(ii) Ends on the later of—

(A) The last day of the taxable year that includes the estimated date on which decommissioning costs of the nuclear power plant to which the nuclear decommissioning fund relates will no longer be included in the taxpayer's cost of service for ratemaking purposes (see paragraph (e)(1) of this section); or

(B) The last day of the taxable year that includes the estimated date on which the nuclear power plant to which the nuclear decommissioning fund relates will no longer be included in the taxpayer's rate base for ratemaking purposes (see paragraph (e)(2) of this section).

(2) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of the principles of paragraphs (a), (b), and (c) of this section:

Example (1). (i) X corporation is a calendar year, accrual method taxpayer engaged in the sale of electric energy generated by power plants owned by X. On March 15, 1995, X commences the construction of a nuclear power plant in State A. On May 15, 1995, the public utility commission of State A issues a final rate order for the four-year period beginning on January 1, 1995, that authorizes X to collect decommissioning costs from ratepayers residing in State A. For the 1995 taxable year, X is authorized to collect decommissioning costs of $500,000, and, for each taxable year during the remainder of the period to which the rate order applies, X is authorized to collect decommissioning costs in an amount equal to 105 percent of the amount authorized to be collected for the preceding taxable year.

(ii) In determining the amount of decommissioning costs to be collected from ratepayers residing in State A, the public utility commission assumes that (A) decommissioning costs will be included in cost of service for each taxable year in the period that begins with 1995 and ends with 2025 and (B) decommissioning costs collected pursuant to subsequent rate orders will increase in the same manner as amounts collected pursuant to the rate order issued on May 15, 1995. In addition, in determining the rate of return to be earned by X with respect to the nuclear power plant, the public utility commission assumes that the nuclear power plant will be included in rate base for each year in the period that begins with 2000 and ends with 2025.

(iii) X requests a schedule of ruling amounts in accordance with the rules of paragraph (h) of this section for the period beginning with the 1995 taxable year. In determining the level funding limitation period and the funding period, the Internal Revenue Service shall assume that a deductible payment will be made to a nuclear decommissioning fund for the 1995 taxable year. Thus, under paragraph (b) of this section, the level funding limitation period begins on January 1, 1995, and ends on December 31, 2025. Under paragraph (c)(10 of this section, the funding period begins on January 1, 1995, and ends on December 31, 2025.

(iv) In its request for a schedule of ruling amounts, X proposes a ruling amount for each taxable year in the funding period that corresponds to the projected cost of service amount for such taxable year. If (A) the assumptions and determinations used by the public utility commission in establishing the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in cost of service are reasonable and (B) the amounts collected pursuant to the proposed schedule, combined with the after-tax earnings on such amounts, will result in a projected balance of the nuclear decommissioning fund as of December 31, 2025, equal to the amount of decommissioning costs allocable to the fund, then, under paragraph (a)(3) of this section, each ruling amount in the initial schedule of ruling amounts shall equal the ruling amount proposed by X in connection with its request for a schedule of ruling amounts. Thus, the ruling amount for the 1995 taxable year would be $500,000, and the ruling amount for each subsequent taxable year would be 105 percent of the ruling amount for the preceding taxable year.

Example (2). (i) Assume the same facts as in Example (1), except that on May 15, 1995, the public utility commission of State A issues a final rate order for the four-year period beginning on January 1, 1995, that authorizes X to collect decommissioning costs of $600,000 per year from ratepayers residing in State A. In determining the amount of decommissioning costs to be collected from ratepayers residing in State A, the public utility commission assumes that decommissioning costs of $600,000 will be collected for each taxable year in the period that begins with 1995 and ends with 2004 and that decommissioning costs of $200,000 will be collected for each taxable year in the period that begins with 2005 and ends with 2025.

(ii) X requests a schedule of ruling amounts in accordance with the rules of paragraph (h) of this section for the period beginning with the 1995 taxable year. In determining the level funding limitation period and the funding period, the Internal Revenue Service shall assume that a deductible payment will be made to a nuclear decommissioning fund for the 1995 taxable year. Thus, under paragraph (b) of this section, the level funding limitation period begins on January 1, 1995, and ends on December 31, 2025. Under paragraph (c)(1) of this section, the funding period begins on January 1, 1995, and ends on December 31, 2025.

(iii) In its request for a schedule of ruling amounts, X proposes a ruling amount for each taxable year in the funding period that corresponds to the projected cost of service amount for such taxable year. A schedule of ruling amounts based on the projected cost of service amount would be inconsistent with the level funding limitation of paragraph (b) of this section because the projected cost of service amount for 2005 is less than the projected cost of service amount for 2004. Consequently, under paragraph (a)(3) of this section, no schedule of ruling amounts shall be provided to X unless X proposes an amended schedule of ruling amounts that is consistent with the level funding limitation and the other principles and provisions of this section.

(iv) Assume that X proposes an amended schedule of ruling amounts that provides for ruling amounts of $400,000 for each taxable year in the funding period. If (A) the schedule of ruling amounts proposed by X is based on the reasonable assumptions and determinations used by the public utility commission in establishing the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in cost of service and (B) the amounts collected pursuant to the proposed schedule, combined with the after-tax earnings on such amounts, will result in a projected balance of the nuclear decommissioning fund as of December 31, 2025, equal to the amount of decommissioning costs allocable to the fund, then, under paragraph (a)(3) of this section, each ruling amount in the initial schedule of ruling amounts shall equal the ruling amount proposed by X in connection with its request for a schedule of ruling amounts. Thus, the ruling amount for the 1995 taxable year and for each subsequent taxable year through 2025 would be $400,000.

(v) Under section 468A(b) and paragraph (b)(1) of §1.468A-2, the maximum amount of cash payments that X can make to a nuclear decommissioning fund for any taxable year shall not exceed the lesser of (A) the cost of service amount for such taxable year or (B) the ruling amount for such taxable year. If the projected cost of service amount that was assume in determining rates under the rate order that was issued on May 15, 1995, is the actual cost of service amount for each taxable year in the funding period and the ruling amounts provided in the initial schedule of ruling amounts are not changed by a subsequent schedule of ruling amounts, then X would be allowed to make a deductible contribution of $400,000 to a nuclear decommissioning fund for each taxable year in the period that begins with 1995 and ends with 2004 and to make a deductible contribution of $200,000 to such nuclear decommissioning fund for each taxable year in the period that begins with 2005 and ends with 2025.

Example (3). (i) Y corporation is a calendar year, accrual method taxpayer engaged in the sale of electric energy generated by power plants owned by Y. On June 1, 1990, a nuclear power plant owned by Y began commercial operations in State B. In the first ratemaking proceeding in which the nuclear power plant was included in rate base, the public utility commission of State B assumed that the nuclear power plant would be included in rate base for each year in the period that began with 1990 and ended with 2020. In addition, for each taxable year in the period that began with 1990 and ended with 2017, Y made a deductible contribution of $750,000 to a nuclear decommissioning fund established by Y. The $750,000 contribution equalled the cost of service amount and the ruling amount for each taxable year in the 28-year period.

(ii) On August 30, 2017, the public utility commission of State B issues a final rate order for the six-year period beginning on January 1, 2018, that authorizes Y to collect decommissioning costs of: (A) $500,000 for 2018, 2019 and 2020; (B) $1,500,000 for 2021; (C) $1,000,000 for 2022; and (D) $750,000 for 2023. In determining the amount of decommissioning costs to be collected from ratepayers residing in State B, the public utility commission assumes that decommissioning costs will no longer be included in cost of service after 2023. In addition, in determining the rate of return to be earned by Y with respect to the nuclear power plant, the public utility commission assumes that the nuclear power plant will no longer be included in rate base after 2020.

(iii) Under paragraph (i)(1)(iii) of this section, Y is required to request a revised schedule of ruling amounts on or before March 15, 2019. Assume that Y makes a timely request for a revised schedule of ruling amounts in accordance with the rules of paragraph (h) of this section. In its request, Y proposes a ruling amount for each taxable year in the period that begins with 2018 and ends with 2023 that corresponds to the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in cost of service under the rate order of August 30, 2017.

(iv) Under paragraph (b) of this section, the level funding limitation period begins on January 1, 1990, and ends on December 31, 2020. Under paragraph (c)(1) of this section, the funding period begins on January 1, 1990, and ends on December 31, 2023.

(v) If (A) the assumptions and determinations used by the public utility commission in establishing the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in cost of service are reasonable and (B) the projected balance of the nuclear decommissioning fund as of December 31, 2023 (taking into account the fair market value of the assets of the fund as of January 1, 2018, and the estimated after-tax rate of return to be earned by the assets of the fund) will equal the amount of decommissioning costs allocable to the fund, then, under paragraph (a)(3) of this section, each ruling amount in the revised schedule of ruling amounts shall equal the ruling amount proposed by Y in connection with its request for a schedule of ruling amounts. Thus, the ruling amount for 2018, 2019 and 2020 would be $500,000, the ruling amount for 2021 would be $1,500,000, the ruling amount for 2022 would be $1,000,000 and the ruling amount for 2023 would be $750,000.

(vi) Although the ruling amount specified in the revised schedule of ruling amounts for 2018, 2019 and 2020 is less than a ruling amount specified in a prior schedule of ruling amounts for years prior to 2018, the revised schedule of ruling amounts is consistent with the level funding limitation. Under paragraph (i)(3) of this section, a ruling amount specified in a revised schedule of ruling amounts for any taxable year in the level funding limitation period may be less than one or more ruling amounts specified in a prior schedule of ruling amounts for a prior taxable year. In addition, although the ruling amount specified in the revised schedule of ruling amounts for 2022 and 2023 is less than a ruling amount specified in such schedule for a prior taxable year, the revised schedule of ruling amounts is consistent with the level funding limitation because the level funding limitation period ends on December 31, 2020.

(d) Decommissioning costs allocable to a fund. The amount of decommissioning costs allocable to a nuclear decommissioning fund is determined for purposes of this section by applying the following rules and definitions:

(1) General rule. The amount of decommissioning costs allocable to a nuclear decommissioning fund is the taxpayer's share of the total estimated cost of decommissioning the nuclear power plant to which the fund relates, multiplied by the qualifying percentage.

(2) Total estimated cost of decommissioning. (i) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (d)(2)(ii) of this section, the total estimated cost of decommissioning a nuclear power plant is the reasonably estimated cost of decommissioning used by the applicable public utility commission in establishing or approving the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in cost of service for ratemaking purposes. If, in establishing or approving the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in cost of service, the public utility commission uses an estimated cost of decommissioning that is equal to a generic estimate of the cost of decommissioning as determined by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (or an estimated cost that is based on the generic estimate adjusted for inflation), the Internal Revenue Service may, at its discretion, accept such amount as a reasonable estimate of the cost of decommissioning. In addition, if the estimated costs used by the applicable public utility commission are expected to be paid in any taxable year other than the taxable year that includes the last day of the funding period or the immediately succeeding taxable year, such costs may be adjusted (increased or decreased, as the case may be) by discounting or compounding such costs at the after-tax rate of return from the date such costs are expected to be paid to the last day of the funding period.

(ii) If, in establishing or approving the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in cost of service, the applicable public utility commission assumes a projected balance of amounts set aside for decommissioning (whether or not such amounts are provided by a nuclear decommissioning fund) that is less than the total estimated cost of decommissioning assumed by the public utility commission, the total estimated cost of decommissioning for purposes of determining the schedule of ruling amounts shall equal the projected balance of amounts set aside for decommissioning that was assumed by the public utility commission.

(3) Taxpayer's share. The taxpayer's share of the total estimated cost of decommissioning a nuclear power plant equals the total estimated cost of decommissioning such nuclear power plant multiplied by the percentage of such nuclear power plant that the qualifying interest of the taxpayer represents (see paragraph (b)(2) of §1.468A-1 for circumstances in which a taxpayer possesses a qualifying interest in a nuclear power plant).

(4) Qualifying percentage. (i) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b)(7)(iii) of §1.468A-8 (relating to a special transitional rule), the qualifying percentage for any nuclear decommissioning fund is equal to the fraction, the numerator of which is the number of taxable years in the estimated period for which the nuclear decommissioning fund is to be in effect and the denominator of which is the number of taxable years in the estimated useful life of the applicable nuclear power plant.

(ii) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b)(7)(i) or (ii) of §1.468A-8 (relating to special transitional rules), the estimated period for which a nuclear decommissioning fund is to be in effect—

(A) Begins on the later of—

(1) The first day of the first taxable year for which a deductible payment is made (or deemed made) to such nuclear decommissioning fund; or

(2) The first day of the taxable year that includes the date that the nuclear power plant to which such nuclear decommissioning fund relates begins commercial operations; and

(B) Ends on the last day of the taxable year that includes the estimated date on which the nuclear power plant to which such nuclear decommissioning fund relates will no longer be included in the taxpayer's rate base for ratemaking purposes (see paragraph (e)(3) and (4) of this section).

(iii) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b)(7)(ii) of §1.468A-8 (relating to a special transitional rule), the estimated useful life of a nuclear power plant—

(A) Begins on the first day of the taxable year that includes the date that the nuclear power plant begins commercial operations; and

(B) Ends on the last day of the taxable year that includes the estimated date on which the nuclear power plant will no longer be included in the taxpayer's rate base for ratemaking purposes (see paragraph (e)(3) and (4) of this section).

(e) Determination of estimated dates. (1) For purposes of paragraph (c)(1)(ii)(A) of this section (relating to the funding period), the estimated date on which decommissioning costs of the nuclear power plant to which the nuclear decommissioning fund relates will no longer be included in the taxpayer's cost of service for ratemaking purposes is determined under the ratemaking assumptions that were used to determine the last rates (whether interim or final) that were established or approved by the applicable public utility commission prior to the filing of the current request for a schedule of ruling amounts.

(2) For purposes of paragraphs (b)(2)(ii) and (c)(1)(ii)(B) of this section (relating to the level funding limitation period and the funding period), the estimated date on which the nuclear power plant to which the nuclear decommissioning fund relates will no longer be included in the taxpayer's rate base for ratemaking purposes is determined under the ratemaking assumptions that were used to determine the last rates (whether interim or final) that were established or approved by the applicable public utility commission prior to the filing of the current request for a schedule of ruling amounts.

(3) For purposes of paragraph (d)(4)(ii)(B) and (iii)(B) of this section (relating to the qualifying percentage), the estimated date on which the nuclear power plant to which the nuclear decommissioning fund relates will no longer be included in the taxpayer's rate base for ratemaking purposes is determined under the ratemaking assumptions used by the applicable public utility commission in establishing or approving rates during the first ratemaking proceeding in which the nuclear power plant was included in the taxpayer's rate base.

(4) For purposes of this section, in the case of a taxpayer whose interest in the nuclear power plant is described in paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of §1.468A-1, the date corresponding to "the estimated date on which the nuclear power plant to which the nuclear decommissioning fund relates will no longer be included in the taxpayer's rate base" will be determined upon the basis of all the facts and circumstances in a manner consistent with the provisions of this section and section 468A of the Code.

(f) Special rules in the case of rates established or approved by two or more public utility commissions. If two or more public utility commissions establish or approve rates for electric energy generated by a single nuclear power plant, the following rules shall apply in determining the schedule of ruling amounts for the nuclear decommissioning fund that relates to such nuclear power plant:

(1) A schedule of ruling amounts shall be separately determined pursuant to the rules of paragraphs (a) through (e) of this section for each public utility commission that has determined the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in cost of service for ratemaking purposes with respect to such nuclear power plant (see paragraph (g) of this section).

(2) The separate determination with respect to a public utility commission shall be based on the reasonable assumptions and determinations used by such public utility commission and shall take into account only that portion of the total estimated cost of decommissioning the nuclear power plant that is properly allocable to the ratepayers whose rates are established or approved by such public utility commission.

(3) The ruling amount applicable to the nuclear decommissioning fund for any taxable year is the sum of the ruling amounts for such taxable year determined under the separate schedules of ruling amounts.

(4) The schedule of ruling amounts for the nuclear decommissioning fund is the schedule of the ruling amounts determined under paragraph (f)(3) of this section.

(g) Requirement of determination by public utility commission of decommissioning costs to be included in cost of service. The Internal Revenue Service shall not provide a taxpayer with a schedule of ruling amounts for any nuclear decommissioning fund unless a public utility commission that establishes or approves rates for electric energy generated by the nuclear power plant to which the nuclear decommissioning fund relates has—

(1) Determined the amount of decommissioning costs of such nuclear power plant to be included in the taxpayer's cost of service for ratemaking purposes; and

(2) Disclosed the after-tax return and any other assumptions and determinations used in establishing or approving such amount for any taxable year beginning on or after January 1, 1987.

(h) Manner of requesting schedule of ruling amounts—(1) In general. (i) In order to receive a ruling amount for any taxable year, a taxpayer must file a request for a schedule of ruling amounts that complies with the requirements of this paragraph (h), the applicable procedural rules set forth in paragraph (e) of §601.201 (Statement of Procedural Rules) and the requirements of any applicable revenue procedure that is in effect on the date the request is filed.

(ii) A separate request for a schedule of ruling amounts is required for each nuclear decommissioning fund established by a taxpayer (see paragraph (a) of §1.468A-5 for rules relating to the number of nuclear decommissioning funds that a taxpayer can establish).

(iii) A request for a schedule of ruling amounts must not contain a request for a ruling on any other issue, whether the issue involves section 468A or another section of the Internal Revenue Code.

(iv) In the case of an affiliated group of corporations that join in the filing of a consolidated return, the common parent of the group may request a schedule of ruling amounts for each member of the group that possesses a qualifying interest in the same nuclear power plant by filing a single submission with the Internal Revenue Service.

(v) A request for a schedule of ruling amounts must be mailed or delivered to the Internal Revenue Service, Associate Chief Counsel (Technical), Attention CC:C:2:6, 1111 Constitution Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20224.

(vi) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b)(1) of §1.468A-8, the Internal Revenue Service shall not provide or revise a ruling amount applicable to a taxable year in response to a request for a schedule of ruling amounts that is filed after the deemed payment deadline date (as defined in paragraph (c)(1) of §1.468A-2) for such taxable year. In determining the date when a request is filed, the principles of sections 7502 and 7503 shall apply.

(vii) Except as provided in paragraph (h)(1)(viii) of this section, a request for a schedule of ruling amounts shall be considered filed only if such request complies substantially with the requirements of this paragraph (h).

(viii) If a request does not comply substantially with the requirements of this paragraph (h), the Internal Revenue Service shall notify the taxpayer of this fact. If the information or materials necessary to comply substantially with the requirements of this paragraph (h) are provided to the Internal Revenue Service within 60 days after such notification, the request shall be considered filed on the date of original submission. If the information or materials necessary to comply substantially with the requirements of this paragraph (h) are not provided within 60 days after such notification, the request shall be considered filed on the date that all information or materials necessary to comply substantially with the requirements of this paragraph (h) are provided.

(2) Information required. A request for a schedule of ruling amounts must contain the following information:

(i) The taxpayer's name, address and taxpayer identification number.

(ii) Whether the request is for an initial schedule of ruling amounts, a mandatory review of the schedule of ruling amounts (see paragraph (i)(1) of this section) or an elective review of the schedule of ruling amounts (see paragraph (i)(2) of this section).

(iii) The name and location of the nuclear power plant with respect to which a schedule of ruling amounts is requested.

(iv) A description of the taxpayer's qualifying interest in the nuclear power plant and the percentage of such nuclear power plant that the qualifying interest of the taxpayer represents.

(v) An identification of each public utility commission that establishes or approves rates for the furnishing or sale by the taxpayer of electric energy generated by the nuclear power plant, and, for each public utility commission identified—

(A) Whether the public utility commission has determined the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in the taxpayer's cost of service for ratemaking purposes; and

(B) Whether a proceeding is pending before the public utility commission that may result in an increase or decrease in the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in cost of service.

(vi) For each public utility commission that has determined the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in the taxpayer's cost of service for ratemaking purposes—

(A) The amount of decommissioning costs that are to be included in the taxpayer's cost of service for each taxable year under the current determination and amounts that otherwise are required to be included in the taxpayer's income under section 88 and the regulations thereunder;

(B) A description of the assumptions, estimates and other factors that were used in determining the amounts described in paragraph (h)(2)(vi)(A) of this section, including each of the following if applicable—

(1) A description of the proposed method of decommissioning the nuclear power plant (for example, prompt removal/dismantlement, safe storage entombment with delayed dismantlement, or safe storage mothballing with delayed dismantlement);

(2) The estimated year in which substantial decommissioning costs will first be incurred;

(3) The estimated year in which the decommissioning of the nuclear power plant will be substantially complete (see paragraph (d)(2) of §1.468A-5 for a definition of substantial completion of decommissioning);

(4) The total estimated cost of decommissioning expressed in current dollars (i.e., based on price levels in effect at the time of the current determination);

(5) The total estimated cost of decommissioning expressed in future dollars (i.e., based on anticipated price levels when expenses are expected to be paid);

(6) For each taxable year in the period that begins with the year specified in paragraph (h)(2)(vi)(B)(2) of this section ("the estimated year in which substantial decommissioning costs will first be incurred") and ends with the year specified in paragraph (h)(2)(vi)(B)(3) of this section ("the estimated year in which the decommissioning of the nuclear ower plant will be substantially complete"), the estimated cost of decommissioning expressed in future dollars;

(7) A description of the methodology used in converting the estimated cost of decommissioning expressed in current dollars to the estimated cost of decommissioning expressed in future dollars;

(8) The assumed after-tax rate of return to be earned by the amounts collected for decommissioning (if two or more after-tax rates of return are assumed by the public utility commission, each assumed after-tax rate of return and the amounts collected for decommissioning to which each assumed after-tax rate of return applies);

(9) The proposed period over which decommissioning costs will be included in the cost of service of the taxpayer and the projected amount that will be included in cost of service for each taxable year in the proposed period;

(10) The estimated date on which the nuclear power plant will no longer be included in the taxpayer's rate base for ratemaking purposes as determined under the ratemaking assumptions that were used to determine the last rates (whether interim or final) that were established or approved by the applicable public utility commission prior to the filing of the current request for a schedule of ruling amounts (or a corresponding date in the case of a taxpayer whose interest in the nuclear power plant is described in paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of §1.468A-1; see paragraph (e)(4) of this section); and

(11) The estimated date on which the nuclear power plant will no longer be included in the taxpayer's rate base for ratemaking purposes as determined under the ratemaking assumptions that were used by the applicable public utility commission in establishing or approving rates during the first ratemaking proceeding in which the nuclear power plant was included in the taxpayer's rate base (or a corresponding date in the case of a taxpayer whose interest in the nuclear power plant is described in paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of §1.468A-1; see paragraph (e)(4) of this section);

(C) A copy of such portions of any order or opinion of the public utility commission as pertain to the commission's most recent determination of the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in cost of service; and

(D) A copy of each engineering or cost study that was relied on or used by the taxpayer or the public utility commission in determining the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in the taxpayer's cost of service under the current determination.

(vii) For each proceeding pending before a public utility commission that may result in an increase or decrease in the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in the taxpayer's cost of service—

(A) A description of the stage of the proceeding;

(B) The amount of decommissioning costs that are proposed to be included in the taxpayer's cost of service for each taxable year;

(C) A description of the assumptions, estimates and other factors that were used in determining the amount of decommissioning costs that are proposed to be included in the taxpayer's cost of service for each taxable year, including each of the items described in paragraph (h)(2)(vi)(B) of this section if applicable; and

(D) A copy of each engineering or cost study that was relied on or used by the taxpayer or the public utility commission in determining the amount of decommissioning costs that are proposed to be included in the taxpayer's cost of service.

(viii) A proposed schedule of ruling amounts for each taxable year remaining in the funding period as of the date the schedule of ruling amounts will first apply.

(ix) A description of the assumptions, estimates and other factors that were used in determining the proposed schedule of ruling amounts, including each of the following if applicable—

(A) The level funding limitation period (as such term is defined in paragraph (b)(2) of this section);

(B) The funding period (as such term is defined in paragraph (c) of this section);

(C) The assumed after-tax rate of return to be earned by the assets of the nuclear decommissioning fund;

(D) The fair market value of the assets (if any) of the nuclear decommissioning fund as of the first day of the first taxable year to which the schedule of ruling amounts will apply;

(E) The amount expected to be earned by the assets of the nuclear decommissioning fund (based on the after-tax rate of return applicable to the fund) over the period that begins on the first day of the first taxable year to which the schedule of ruling amounts will apply and ends on the last day of the funding period;

(F) The amount of decommissioning costs allocable to the nuclear decommissioning fund (as determined under paragraph (d) of this section);

(G) The total estimated cost of decommissioning (as such term is defined in paragraph (d)(2) of this section);

(H) The taxpayer's share of the total estimated cost of decommissioning (as such term is defined in paragraph (d)(3) of this section);

(I) The qualifying percentage (as such term is defined in paragraph (d)(4)(i) of this section);

(J) The estimated period for which the nuclear decommissioning fund is to be in effect (as such term is defined in paragraph (d)(4)(ii) of this section); and

(K) The estimated useful life of the nuclear power plant (as such term is defined in paragraph (d)(4)(iii) of this section).

(x) If the request is for a revised schedule of ruling amounts, the after-tax rate of return earned by the assets of the nuclear decommissioning fund for each taxable year in the period that begins with the date of the initial contribution to the fund and ends with the first day of the first taxable year to which the revised schedule of ruling amounts applies.

(xi) If applicable, an explanation of the need for a schedule of ruling amounts determined on a basis other than the rules of paragraphs (a) through (g) of this section and a description of an alternative basis for determining a schedule of ruling amounts (see paragraph (a)(5) of this section).

(xii) Any other information required by the Internal Revenue Service that may be necessary or useful in determining the schedule of ruling amounts.

(3) Administrative procedures. The Internal Revenue Service may prescribe administrative procedures that supplement the provisions of paragraph (h)(1) and (2) of this section. In addition, the Internal Revenue Service may, in its discretion, waive the requirements of paragraph (h)(1) and (2) of this section under appropriate circumstances.

(i) Review and revision of schedule of ruling amounts—(1) Mandatory review. (i) Any taxpayer that has obtained a schedule of ruling amounts pursuant to paragraph (h) of this section must file a request for a revised schedule of ruling amounts on or before the deemed payment deadline date for the 10th taxable year that begins after the taxable year in which the most recent schedule of ruling amounts was received. The first taxable year to which the revised schedule of ruling amounts applies shall be the 10th taxable year that begins after the taxable year in which the most recent schedule of ruling amounts was received.

(ii) Any taxpayer that has obtained a formula or method for determining a schedule of ruling amounts (see paragraph (a)(4) of this section) must file a request for a revised schedule of ruling amounts on or before the deemed payment deadline date for the 5th taxable year that begins after the taxable year in which the most recent formula or method was received. The first taxable year to which the revised schedule of ruling amounts applies (whether or not the ruling amounts continue to be determined pursuant to a formula or method) shall be the 5th taxable year that begins after the taxable year in which the most recent formula or method was received.

(iii) A taxpayer is required to request a revised schedule of ruling amounts for a nuclear decommissioning fund if—

(A) Any public utility commission that establishes or approves rates for the furnishing or sale of electric energy generated by a nuclear power plant to which the nuclear decommissioning fund relates—

(1) Increases the proposed period over which decommissioning costs of such nuclear power plant will be included in cost of service for ratemaking purposes;

(2) Adjusts the estimated date on which such nuclear power plant will no longer be included in the taxpayer's rate base for ratemaking purposes; or

(3) Reduces the amount of decommissioning costs to be included in cost of service for any taxable year; and

(B) The taxpayer's most recent request for a schedule of ruling amounts did not provide notice to the Internal Revenue Service of such action by the public utility commission.

(iv) If a taxpayer is required to request a revised schedule of ruling amounts by reason of an action described in paragraph (i)(1)(iii) of this section, the taxpayer must file the request for a revised schedule of ruling amounts on or before the deemed payment deadline date for the first taxable year in which rates that reflect such action become effective. The first taxable year to which the revised schedule of ruling amounts applies shall be the first taxable year in which such rates become effective.

(v) A request for a schedule of ruling amounts required by this paragraph (i)(1) must be made in accordance with the rules of paragraph (h) of this section. If a taxpayer does not properly file a request for a revised schedule of ruling amounts by the date provided in paragraph (i)(1)(i), (ii) or (iv) of this section (whichever is applicable), the taxpayer's ruling amount for the first taxable year to which the revised schedule of ruling amounts would have applied and for all succeeding taxable years until a new schedule is obtained shall be zero, unless, in its discretion, the Internal Revenue Service provides otherwise in such new schedule of ruling amounts.

(vi) See paragraph (f)(3) of §1.468A-2 for the application of the rules in paragraph (i)(1)(iii), (iv), and (v) of this section in the case of certain retroactive adjustments to interim rate orders.

(2) Elective review. Any taxpayer that has obtained a schedule of ruling amounts pursuant to paragraph (h) of this section can request a revised schedule of ruling amounts. Such a request must be made in accordance with the rules of paragraph (h) of this section; thus, the Internal Revenue Service shall not provide a revised ruling amount applicable to a taxable year in response to a request for a schedule of ruling amounts that is filed after the deemed payment deadline date for such taxable year (see paragraph (h)(1)(vi) of this section).

(3) Determination of revised schedule of ruling amounts. A revised schedule of ruling amounts for a nuclear decommissioning fund shall be determined under this section without regard to any schedule of ruling amounts for such nuclear decommissioning fund that was issued prior to such revised schedule. Thus, a ruling amount specified in a revised schedule of ruling amounts for any taxable year in the level funding limitation period can be less than one or more ruling amounts specified in a prior schedule of ruling amounts for a prior taxable year.

(j) Special rule permitting payments to a nuclear decommissioning fund before receipt of an initial or revised ruling amount applicable to a taxable year. (1) If an electing taxpayer has filed a timely request for an initial or revised ruling amount for a taxable year beginning on or after January 1, 1987, and does not receive the ruling amount on or before the deemed payment deadline date for such taxable year, the taxpayer may make a payment to a nuclear decommissioning fund on the basis of the ruling amount proposed in the taxpayer's request. Thus, under the preceding sentence, an electing taxpayer may make a payment to a nuclear decommissioning fund for such taxable year that does not exceed the lesser of—

(i) The cost of service amount applicable to the nuclear decommissioning fund for such taxable year; or

(ii) The ruling amount proposed by the taxpayer for such taxable year in a timely filed request for a schedule of ruling amounts.

(2) If an electing taxpayer makes a payment to a nuclear decommissioning fund for any taxable year pursuant to paragraph (j)(1) of this section and the ruling amount that is provided by the Internal Revenue Service is greater than the ruling amount proposed by the taxpayer for such taxable year, the taxpayer is not allowed to make an additional payment to the fund for such taxable year after the deemed payment deadline date for such taxable year.

(3) If—

(i) An electing taxpayer makes a payment to a nuclear decommissioning fund for any taxable year pursuant to paragraph (j)(1) of this section,

(ii) The ruling amount that is provided by the Internal Revenue Service is less than the ruling amount proposed by the taxpayer for such taxable year, and

(iii) As a result, there is an excess contribution (as defined in paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of §1.468A-5) for such taxable year, then the amount of the excess contribution is not deductible (see paragraph (b)(1) of §1.468A-2) and must be withdrawn by the taxpayer pursuant to the rules of paragraph (c)(2)(i) of §1.468A-5. Thus, an electing taxpayer that files a return based on a payment made pursuant to paragraph (j)(1) of this section should file an amended return if an excess contribution results when the ruling amount is issued for such taxable year.

§1.468A-4 Treatment of nuclear decommissioning fund.

(a) In general. A nuclear decommissioning fund is subject to tax on all of its modified gross income (as defined in paragraph (b) of this section) for any taxable year at a single rate equal to the maximum rate in effect under section 11(b) (determined without regard to any rate that is added to the otherwise applicable rate in order to offset the effect of the graduated rate schedule). Such tax is in lieu of any other tax that may be imposed under subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code on the income earned by the assets of the nuclear decommissioning fund.

(b) Modified gross income. For purposes of this section, the term "modified gross income" means gross income as defined under section 61 computed with the following modifications:

(1) The amount of any payment to the nuclear decommissioning fund with respect to which a deduction is allowed under section 468A(a) is excluded from gross income.

(2) A deduction is allowed for the amount of administrative costs and other incidental expenses of the nuclear decommissioning fund (including taxes, legal expenses, accounting expenses, actuarial expenses and trustee expenses, but not including decommissioning costs) that are otherwise deductible and that are paid by the nuclear decommissioning fund to any person other than the electing taxpayer. An expense is otherwise deductible for purposes of this paragraph (b)(2) if it would be deductible under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code in determining the taxable income of a corporation. For example, because Federal income taxes are not deductible under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code in determining the taxable income of a corporation, the tax imposed by section 468A(e)(2) and paragraph (a) of this section is not deductible in determining the modified gross income of a nuclear decommissioning fund. Similarly, because certain expenses allocable to tax-exempt interest income are not deductible under section 265 of the Internal Revenue Code in determining the taxable income of a corporation, such expenses are not deductible in determining the modified gross income of a nuclear decommissioning fund.

(3) A deduction is allowed for the amount of otherwise deductible losses that are sustained by the nuclear decommissioning fund in connection with the sale, exchange or worthlessness of an investment described in paragraph (a)(3)(i)(C) of §1.468A-5. A loss is otherwise deductible for purposes of this paragraph (b)(3) if such a loss would be deductible by a corporation under section 165(f) or (g) and sections 1211(a) and 1212(a).

(4) A deduction is allowed for the amount of an otherwise deductible net operating loss of the nuclear decommissioning fund. For purposes of this paragraph (b), the net operating loss of a nuclear decommissioning fund for a taxable year is the amount by which the deductions allowable under paragraph (b)(2) and (3) of this section exceed the gross income of the nuclear decommissioning fund computed with the modification described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section. A net operating loss is otherwise deductible for purposes of this paragraph (b)(4) if such a net operating loss would be deductible by a corporation under section 172(a).

(c) Special rules—(1) Period for computation of modified gross income. The modified gross income of a nuclear decommissioning fund must be computed on the basis of the taxable year of the electing taxpayer. If an electing taxpayer changes its taxable year, each nuclear decommissioning fund of the electing taxpayer must change to the new taxable year. See section 442 and §1.442-1 for rules relating to the change to a new taxable year.

(2) Gain or loss upon distribution of property by a fund. A distribution of property by a nuclear decommissioning fund (whether an actual distribution or a deemed distribution) shall be considered a disposition of property by the nuclear decommissioning fund for purposes of section 1001. In determining the amount of gain or loss from such disposition, the amount realized by the nuclear decommissioning fund shall be the fair market value of the property on the date of disposition.

(3) Denial of credits against tax. The tax imposed on the modified gross income of a nuclear decommissioning fund under paragraph (a) of this section is not to be reduced or offset by any credits against tax provided by part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code other than the credit provided by section 31(c) for amounts withheld under section 3406 (back-up withholding).

(4) Other corporate taxes inapplicable. Although the modified gross income of a nuclear decommissioning fund is subject to tax at a rate equal to the maximum rate in effect under section 11(b) (determined without regard to any rate that is added to the otherwise applicable rate in order to offset the effect of the graduated rate schedule), a nuclear decommissioning fund is not subject to the other taxes imposed on corporations under subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. For example, a nuclear decommissioning fund is not subject to the alternative minimum tax imposed by section 55, the accumulated earnings tax imposed by section 531, the personal holding company tax imposed by section 541, and the alternative tax imposed on a corporation under section 1201(a).

(d) Treatment as corporation for purposes of subtitle F. For purposes of subtitle F of the Internal Revenue Code and the regulations thereunder, a nuclear decommissioning fund is to be treated as if it were a corporation and the tax imposed by section 468A(e)(2) and paragraph (a) of this section is to be treated as tax imposed by section 11. Thus, for example, the following rules apply:

(1) A nuclear decommissioning fund must file a return with respect to the tax imposed by section 468A(e)(2) and paragraph (a) of this section of each taxable year (or portion thereof) that the fund is in existence even though no amount is included in the gross income of the fund for such taxable year. The return is to be made on Form 1120-ND in accordance with the instructions relating to such form. For purposes of this paragraph (d)(1), a nuclear decommissioning fund is in existence for the period that—

(i) Begins on the date that the first deductible payment is actually made to such nuclear decommissioning fund; and

(ii) Ends on the date of termination (see paragraph (d) of §1.468A-5), the date that the entire fund is disqualified (see paragraph (c) of §1.468A-5), or the date that the electing taxpayer disposes of its entire qualifying interest in the nuclear power plant to which the nuclear decommissioning fund relates (see §1.468A-6), whichever is applicable.

(2) For each taxable year of the nuclear decommissioning fund, the return described in paragraph (d)(1) of this section must be filed on or before the 15th day of the third month following the close of such taxable year unless the nuclear decommissioning fund is granted an extension of time for filing under section 6081. If such an extension is granted for any taxable year, the return for such taxable year must be filed on or before the extended due date for such taxable year. In no event will the filing of the initial return of a nuclear decommissioning fund be required before January 6, 1987.

(3) A nuclear decommissioning fund must provide its employer identification number on returns, statements and other documents as required by the forms and instructions relating thereto. The employer identification number is obtained by filing a Form SS-4 in accordance with the instructions relating thereto.

(4) A nuclear decommissioning fund must make payments of estimated tax during its taxable year as provided in section 6154(b) if its estimated tax for such taxable year can reasonably be expected to be $40 or more. For purposes of section 6154 and this section, the estimated tax of a nuclear decommissioning fund for any taxable year is the amount that the nuclear decommissioning fund estimates as the amount of tax imposed by section 468A(e)(2) and paragraph (a) of this section for such taxable year.

(5) A nuclear decommissioning fund must deposit all payments of tax imposed by section 468A(e)(2) and paragraph (a) of this section (including any payments of estimated tax) with an authorized government depositary in accordance with §1.6302-1.

(6) A nuclear decommissioning fund is subject to the addition to tax imposed by section 6655 in case of a failure to pay estimated income tax. For purposes of section 6655 and this section—

(i) The tax with respect to which the amount of the underpayment is computed in the case of a nuclear decommissioning fund is the tax imposed by section 468A(e)(2) and paragraph (a) of this section; and

(ii) A nuclear decommissioning fund is to be considered a large corporation under section 6655(i) if such nuclear decommissioning fund had modified gross income (as defined in paragraph (b) of this section) of $1,000,000 or more for any taxable year during the testing period.

§1.468A-5 Nuclear decommissioning fund qualification requirements; prohibitions against self-dealing; disqualification of nuclear decommissioning fund; termination of fund upon substantial completion of decommissioning.

(a) Qualification requirements—(1) In general. (i) A nuclear decommissioning fund must be established and maintained at all times in the United States pursuant to an arrangement that qualifies as a trust under State law. Such trust must be established for the exclusive purpose of providing funds for the decommissioning of one or more nuclear power plants, but a single trust agreement may establish multiple funds for such purpose, Thus—

(A) Two or more nuclear decommissioning funds can be established and maintained pursuant to a single trust agreement; and

(B) One of more funds that are to be used for the decommissioning of a nuclear power plant and that do not qualify as nuclear decommissioning funds under this paragraph (a) (nonqualified decommissioning funds) can be established and maintained pursuant to a trust agreement that governs one or more nuclear decommissioning funds.

(ii) A separate nuclear decommissioning fund is required for each electing taxpayer and for each nuclear power plant with respect to which an electing taxpayer possesses a qualifying interest. The Internal Revenue Service shall issue a separate schedule of ruling amounts with respect to each nuclear decommissioning fund and each nuclear decommissioning fund must file a separate income tax return even if other nuclear decommissioning funds or nonqualified decommissioning funds are established and maintained pursuant to the trust agreement governing such fund or the assets of other nuclear decommissioning funds or nonqualified decommissioning funds are pooled with the assets of such fund.

(iii) The assets of two or more nuclear decommissioning funds (whether or not established pursuant to a single trust agreement) can be pooled for the purpose of investing the assets in property described in paragraph (a)(3)(i)(C) of this section if and only if—

(A) The trustee of each nuclear decommissioning fund separately accounts for the contributions, earnings, expenses, and distributions of such fund;

(B) The earnings and expenses are reasonably apportioned among such nuclear decommissioning funds; and

(C) The books and records of such funds enable the Internal Revenue Service to verify that the requirements of section 468A and §§1.468A-1 through 1.468A-8 are satisfied with respect to each nuclear decommissioning fund.

(iv) The assets of nonqualified decommissioning funds can be pooled with the assets of one or more nuclear decommissioning funds for the purpose of investing the assets in property described in paragraph (a)(3)(i)(C) of this section if and only if the requirements of paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(A) and (C) of this section are satisfied and earnings and expenses are reasonably apportioned among the pooled funds.

(v) An electing taxpayer can maintain only one nuclear decommissioning fund for each nuclear power plant with respect to which the taxpayer elects the application of section 468A. If a nuclear power plant is subject to the ratemaking jurisdiction of two or more public utility commissions and any such public utility commission requires a separate fund to be maintained for the benefit of ratepayers whose rates are established or approved by the public utility commission, the separate funds maintained for such plant (whether or not established and maintained pursuant to a single trust agreement) shall be considered a single nuclear decommissioning fund for purposes of section 468A and §§1.468A-1 through 1.468A-8. Thus, for example, the Internal Revenue Service shall issue one schedule of ruling amounts with respect to such nuclear power plant (see paragraph (f) of §1.468A-3), the nuclear decommissioning fund must file a single income tax return (see paragraph (d)(1) of §1.468A-4), and, if the Internal Revenue Service disqualifies the nuclear decommissioning fund, the assets of each separate fund are treated as distributed on the date of disqualification (see paragraph (c)(3) of this section).

(2) Limitation on contributions. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of §1.468A-8 (relating to a special transitional rule), a nuclear decommissioning fund is not permitted to accept any contributions in cash or property other than cash payments with respect to which a deduction is allowed under section 468A(a) and paragraph (a) of §1.468A-2. Thus, for example, unless the exception contained in paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of §1.468A-8 applies, securities may not be contributed to a nuclear decommissioning fund even if the taxpayer or a fund established by the taxpayer previously held such securities for the purpose of providing funds for the decommissioning of a nuclear power plant.

(3) Limitation on use of fund—(i) In general. The assets of a nuclear decommissioning fund are to be used exclusively—

(A) To satisfy, in whole or in part, the liability of the electing taxpayer for decommissioning costs of the nuclear power plant to which the nuclear decommissioning fund relates;

(B) To pay administrative costs and other incidental expenses of the nuclear decommissioning fund; and

(C) To the extent that the assets of the nuclear decommissioning fund are not currently required for the purposes described in paragraph (a)(3)(i)(A) or (B) of this section, to invest directly in—

(1) Public debt securities of the United States;

(2) Obligations of a State or local government that are not in default as to principal or interest; or

(3) Time or demand deposits in a bank (as defined in section 581) or an insured credit union (within the meaning of section 101(6) of the Federal Credit Union Act, 12 U.S.C. 1752 (7) (1982), located in the United States.

(ii) Terms defined. The following terms are defined for purposes of paragraph (a)(3)(i) of this section:

(A) The term "administrative costs and other incidental expenses of a nuclear decommissioning fund" means all ordinary and necessary expenses incurred in connection with the operation of the nuclear decommissioning fund. Such term includes the tax imposed by section 468A(e)(2) and paragraph (a) of §1.468A-4, any State or local tax imposed on the income or the assets of the fund, legal expenses, accounting expenses, acturial expenses and trustee expenses. Such term does not include decommissioning costs. Such term also does not include the excise tax imposed on the trustee or other disqualified person under section 4951 or the reimbursement of any expenses incurred in connection with the assertion of such tax unless such expenses are considered reasonable and necessary under section 4951(d)(2)(C) and it is determined that the trustee or other disqualified person is not liable for the excise tax.

(B) The term "public debt securities of the United States" means obligations that are taken into consideration for purposes of the public debt limit.

(C) The term "obligations of a State or local government" means obligations of a State or local governmental unit the interest on which is exempt from tax under section 103(a).

(D) The term "time or demand deposits" includes checking accounts, savings accounts, certificates of deposit or other time or demand deposits. The term does not include common or collective trust funds, such as a common trust fund as defined in section 584.

(b) Prohibitions against self-dealing—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph (b), the excise taxes imposed by section 4951 shall apply to each act of self-dealing between a disqualified person and a nuclear decommissioning fund.

(2) Self-dealing defined. For purposes of this paragraph (b), the term "self-dealing" means any act described in section 4951(d), except—

(i) A payment by a nuclear decommissioning fund for the purpose of satisfying, in whole or in part, the liability of the electing taxpayer for decommissioning costs of the nuclear power plant to which the nuclear decommissioning fund relates;

(ii) A withdrawal of an excess contribution by the electing taxpayer pursuant to the rules of paragraph (c)(2) of this section;

(iii) A withdrawal by the electing taxpayer of amounts that have been treated as distributed under paragraph (c)(3) of this section;

(iv) A payment of amounts remaining in a nuclear decommissioning fund to the electing taxpayer after the termination of such fund (as determined under paragraph (d) of this section);

(v) Any act described in section 4951(d)(2)(B) or (C); or

(vi) A payment by a nuclear decommissioning fund for the performance of trust functions and certain general banking services by a bank or trust company which is a disqualified person, where the banking services are reasonable and necessary to carry out the purposes of the fund, if the compensation paid to the bank or trust company, taking into account the fair interest rate for the use of the funds by the bank or trust company, for such services is not excessive. The general banking services allowed by this paragraph (b)(2)(vi) are—

(A) Checking accounts, as long as the bank does not charge interest on any overwithdrawals,

(B) Savings accounts, as long as the fund may withdraw its funds on no more than 30 days notice without subjecting itself to a loss of interest on its money for the time during which the money was on deposit, and

(C) Safekeeping activities. (See example 3 of §53.4941(d)-3(c)(2)).

(3) Disqualified person defined. For purposes of this paragraph (b), the term "disqualified person" includes each person described in section 4951(e)(4) and paragraph (d) of §53.4951-1.

(c) Disqualification of nuclear decommissioning fund—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (c)(2) of this section, if at any time during a taxable year of a nuclear decommissioning fund—

(i) The nuclear decommissioning fund does not satisfy the requirements of paragraph (a) of this section, or

(ii) The nuclear decommissioning fund and a disqualified person engage in an act of self-dealing (as defined in paragraph (b)(2) of this section), the Internal Revenue Service may, in its discretion, disqualify all or any portion of the fund as of the date that the fund does not satisfy the requirements of paragraph (a) of this section or the date on which the act of self-dealing occurs.

whichever is applicable, or as of any subsequent date ("date of disqualification"). The Internal Revenue Service shall notify the electing taxpayer of the disqualification of a nuclear decommissioning fund and the date of disqualification by registered or certified mail to the last known address of the electing taxpayer (the "notice of disqualification").

(2) Exception to disqualification—(i) In general. A nuclear decommissioning fund will not be disqualified under paragraph (c)(1) of this section by reason of an excess contribution or the withdrawal of such excess contribution by an electing taxpayer if the amount of the excess contribution is withdrawn by the electing taxpayer on or before the date prescribed by law (including extensions) for filing the return of the nuclear decommissioning fund for the taxable year to which the excess contribution relates. In the case of an excess contribution that is the result of a payment made pursuant to paragraph (j)(1) of §1.468A-3, a nuclear decommissioning fund will not be disqualified under paragraph (c)(1) of this section if the amount of the excess contribution is withdrawn by the electing taxpayer on or before the later of—

(A) The date prescribed by law (including extensions) for filing the return of the nuclear decommissioning fund for the taxable year to which the excess contribution relates; or

(B) The date that is 30 days after the date that the taxpayer receives the ruling amount for such taxable year.

(ii) Excess contribution defined. For purposes of this section, an excess contribution is the amount by which cash payments made (or deemed made) to a nuclear decommissioning fund during any taxable year exceed the payment limitation contained in section 468A(b) and paragraph (b) of §1.468A-2.

(iii) Taxation of income attributable to an excess contribution. The income of a nuclear decommissioning fund attributable to an excess contribution is required to be included in the gross income of the nuclear decommissioning fund under paragraph (b) of §1.468A-4.

(3) Effect of disqualification. If all or any portion of a nuclear decommissioning fund is disqualified under paragraph (c)(1) of this section, the portion of the nuclear decommissioning fund that is disqualified is treated as distributed to the electing taxpayer on the date of disqualification. Such a distribution shall be treated for purposes of section 1001 as a disposition of property held by the nuclear decommissioning fund (see paragraph (c)(2) of §1.468A-4). In addition, the electing taxpayer must include in gross income for the taxable year that includes the date of disqualification an amount equal to the product of—

(i) The fair market value of the assets of the fund determined as of the date of disqualification, reduced by—

(A) The amount of any excess contribution that was not withdrawn before the date of disqualification if no deduction was allowed with respect to such excess contribution;

(B) The amount of any deemed distribution that was not actually distributed before the date of disqualification (as determined under paragraph (d)(2)(iii) of §1.468A-2) if the amount of the deemed distribution was included in the gross income of the electing taxpayer for the taxable year in which the deemed distribution occurred; and

(C) The amount of any tax that—

(1) Is imposed on the income of the fund;

(2) Is attributable to income taken into account before the date of disqualification or as a result of the disqualification; and

(3) Has not been paid as of the date of disqualification; and

(ii) The fraction of the nuclear decommissioning fund that was disqualified under paragraph (c)(1) of this section.

Contributions made to a disqualified fund after the date of disqualification are not deductible under section 468A(a) and paragraph (a) of §1.468A-2, or, if the fund is disqualified only in part, are deductible only to the extent provided in the notice of disqualification. In addition, if any assets of the fund that are deemed distributed under this paragraph (c)(3) are held by the fund after the date of disqualification (or if additional assets are acquired with nondeductible contributions made to the fund after the date of disqualification), the income earned by such assets after the date of disqualification must be included in the gross income of the electing taxpayer (see section 671) to the extent that such income is otherwise includible under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code. An electing taxpayer can establish a nuclear decommissioning fund to replace a fund that has been disqualified in its entirety only if the Internal Revenue Service specifically consents to the establishment of a replacement fund in connection with the issuance of an initial schedule of ruling amounts for such replacement fund.

(d) Termination of nuclear decommissioning fund upon substantial completion of decommissioning—(1) In general. Upon substantial completion of the decommissioning of a nuclear power plant to which a nuclear decommissioning fund relates, such nuclear decommissioning fund shall be considered terminated and treated as having distributed all of its assets on the date the termination occurs. Such a distribution shall be treated for purposes of section 1001 as a disposition of property held by the nuclear decommissioning fund (see paragraph (c)(2) of §1.468A-4). In addition, the electing taxpayer shall include in gross income for the taxable year in which the termination occurs an amount equal to the fair market value of the assets of the fund determined as of the date of termination, reduced by—

(i) The amount of any deemed distribution that was not actually distributed before the date of termination if the amount of the deemed distribution was included in the gross income of the electing taxpayer for the taxable year in which the deemed distribution occurred; and

(ii) The amount of any tax that—

(A) Is imposed on the income of the fund;

(B) Is attributable to income taken into account before the date the termination occurs or as a result of the termination; and

(C) Has not been paid as of the date the termination occurs.

Contributions made to a nuclear decommissioning fund after the termination date are not deductible under section 468A(a) and paragraph (a) of §1.468A-2. In addition, if any assets are held by the fund after the termination date, the income earned by such assets after the termination date must be included in the gross income of the electing taxpayer (see section 671) to the extent that such income is otherwise includible under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code. Finally, an electing taxpayer using an accrual method of accounting is allowed a deduction for nuclear decommissioning costs that are incurred during any taxable year (see paragraph (e) of §1.468A-2) even if such costs are incurred after substantial completion of decommissioning (e.g., expenses incurred to monitor or safeguard the plant site).

(2) Substantial completion of decommissioning defined. (i) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (d)(2)(ii) of this section, the substantial completion of the decommissioning of a nuclear power plant occurs on the date that the maximum acceptable radioactivity levels mandated by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission with respect to a decommissioned nuclear power plant are satisfied (the "substantial completion date").

(ii) If a significant portion of the total estimated decommissioning costs with respect to a nuclear power plant are not incurred on or before the substantial completion date, an electing taxpayer may request, and the Internal Revenue Service shall issue, a ruling that designates the date on which substantial completion of decommissioning occurs. The date designated in the ruling shall not be later than the last day of the third taxable year after the taxable year that includes the substantial completion date. The request for a ruling under this paragraph (d)(2)(ii) must be filed during the taxable year that includes the substantial completion date and must comply with the procedural rules in effect at the time of the request.

§1.468A-7 Manner of and time for making election.

(a) In general. An eligible taxpayer is allowed a deduction for the taxable year in which the taxpayer makes a cash payment (or is deemed to make a cash payment) to a nuclear decommissioning fund only if the taxpayer elects the application of section 468A. A separate election is required for each nuclear decommissioning fund and for each taxable year with respect to which payments are to be deducted under section 468A. In the case of an affiliated group of corporations that join in the filing of a consolidated return for a taxable year, the common parent must make a separate election on behalf of each member whose payments to a nuclear decommissioning fund during such taxable year are to be deducted under section 468A. The election under section 468A for any taxable year is irrevocable and must be made by attaching a statement ("Election Statement") and a copy of the schedule of ruling amounts provided pursuant to the rules of §1.468A-3 to the taxpayer's Federal income tax return (or, in the case of an affiliated group of corporations that join in the filing of a consolidated return, the consolidated return) for such taxable year. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b)(3) of §1.468A-8, the return to which the Election Statement and a copy of the schedule of ruling amounts is attached must be filed on or before the time prescribed by law (including extensions) for filing the return for the taxable year with respect to which payments are to be deducted under section 468A.

(b) Required information. The Election Statement must include the following information:

(1) The legend "Election Under Section 468A" typed or legibly printed at the top of the first page.

(2) The electing taxpayer's name, address and taxpayer identification number (or, in the case of an affiliated group of corporations that join in the filing of a consolidated return, the name, address and taxpayer identification number of each electing taxpayer).

(3) The taxable year for which the election is made.

(4) For each nuclear decommissioning fund for which an election is made—

(i) The name and location of the nuclear power plant to which the fund relates;

(ii) The name and employer identification number of the nuclear decommissioning fund;

(iii) The total amount of actual cash payments made to the nuclear decommissioning fund during the taxable year that were not treated as deemed cash payments under paragraph (c)(1) of §1.468A-2 for a prior taxable year;

(iv) The total amount of cash payments deemed made to the nuclear decommissioning fund under paragraph (c)(1) of §1.468A-2 for the taxable year; and

(v) The cost of service amount for the taxable year (see paragraph (b)(2) of §1.468A-2).

§1.468A-8 Effective date and transitional rules.

(a) Effective date—(1) In general. Section 468A and §§1.468A-1 through 1.468A-8 are effective on July 18, 1984, and apply with respect to taxable years ending on or after such date.

(2) Cut-off method applicable to electing taxpayers. Any amount of nuclear decommissioning costs taken into account before July 18, 1984, for a taxable year beginning before such date, is not allowable as a deduction after July 17, 1984, under section 468A(c)(2) and paragraph (e) of §1.468A-2.

(b) Transitional rules—(1) Time for filing request for schedule of ruling amounts. The Internal Revenue Service shall provide a ruling amount for any taxable year that ends on or after July 18, 1984, and begins before January 1, 1987, if—

(i) Paragraph (g) of §1.468A-3 is satisfied for the taxable year; and

(ii) The taxpayer files a request for a schedule of ruling amounts that includes a proposed ruling amount for the taxable year on or before June 1, 1988.

(2) Manner of and time for making contributions to a nuclear decommissioning fund. (i) The amount of any contribution (including a contribution of property allowed under paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of this section) to a nuclear decommissioning fund that relates to a taxable year that ends on or after July 18, 1984, and begins before January 1, 1987, shall be deemed made during such taxable year if—

(A) The taxpayer makes such contribution on or before the 30th day after the date the taxpayer receives a ruling amount applicable to such taxable year; and

(B) The taxpayer irrevocably designates the amount of such contribution as relating to such taxable year on the Election Statement attached to its Federal income tax return (or amended return) for such taxable year.

(ii) (A) An electing taxpayer may contribute property to a nuclear decommissioning fund if the property—

(1) Is described in paragraph (a)(3)(i)(C) of §1.468-5;

(2) Was acquired after July 18, 1984, and before March 3, 1988;

(3) Is contributed for any taxable year ending after July 18, 1984, and beginning before March 3, 1988.

(B) If a taxpayer contributes property to a nuclear decommissioning fund under this paragraph (b)(2)(ii)

(1) The amount of the contribution (and the basis of the property to the nuclear decommissioning fund) shall equal the fair market value of the property on the date the property is contributed to the nuclear decommissioning fund;

(2) The contribution of the property to the nuclear decommissioning fund shall be considered a sale or exchange of the property by the taxpayer for purposes of section 1001; and

(3) For purposes of section 1001, the amount realized by the taxpayer shall be the fair market value of the property on the date the property was contributed to the nuclear decommissioning fund.

(iii) A fund established by a taxpayer for the purpose of paying the decommissioning costs of a nuclear power plant is not treated as a nuclear decommissioning fund before the earlier of—

(A) The date the taxpayer receives an initial schedule of ruling amounts with respect to the fund, or

(B) The first day of the first taxable year of the taxpayer that begins on or after January 1, 1987, even if the taxpayer elects the application of section 468A for a taxable year that begins before such date. Any income earned before such date by the assets of a fund that satisfies the requirements of §1.468A-5 must be included in the gross income of the taxpayer treated under section 671 as the owner of such assets.

(iv) If a fund is first treated as a nuclear decommissioning fund on the date described in paragraph (b)(2)(iii) of this section—

(A) The assets held in the fund on such date shall be treated for purposes of this paragraph (b)(2) as assets contributed to the nuclear decommissioning fund on such date; and

(B) The withdrawal of any such assets on or before the date prescribed by law (including extensions) for filing the return of the nuclear decommissioning fund for the taxable year that includes such date shall be treated in the same manner as the withdrawal of an excess contribution (see paragraph (c)(2) of §1.468A-5).

(3) Manner of and time for making election. A taxpayer may elect the application of section 468A for a taxable year that ends on or after July 18, 1984, and begins before January 1, 1987, by attaching the Election Statement and a copy of the schedule of ruling amounts to—

(i) A return that is filed on or before the time prescribed by law (including extensions) for filing to return for such taxable year; or

(ii) An amended return for such taxable year that is filed on or before the 90th day after the date that the taxpayer receives a ruling amount for such taxable year.

(4) Determination of cost of service limitation. (i) For purposes of section 468A(b)(1) and paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of §1.468A-2, decommissioning costs included in cost of service for any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987, shall include decommissioning costs that can be accurately determined from information contained in the regulated books of account or other written records of the taxpayer.

(ii) For purposes of section 468A(b)(1) and paragraph (b)(2) of §1.468A-2, the cost of service amount applicable to a nuclear decommissioning fund for the taxable year that includes July 18, 1984, is the amount determined under paragraph (b)(2) of §1.468A-2 multiplied by a fraction, the numerator of which is the amount of nuclear decommissioning costs that is directly or indirectly charged to customers in such taxable year and that is included in the taxable income of the taxpayer for such taxable year and the denominator of which is the amount of nuclear decommissioning costs that is directly or indirectly charged to customers in such taxable year and that would have been included in the gross income of the taxpayer if such costs were taken into account by the taxpayer in the same manner as amounts charged for electric energy (see §1.88-1). Under the preceding sentence, an amount of decommissioning costs is included in the taxable income of a taxpayer for the taxable year that includes July 18, 1984, if the amount is included in gross income for such taxable year and no deduction (other than a deduction allowed under section 468A (a) and paragraph (a) of §1.468A-2) is claimed with respect to such amount for such taxable year.

(5) Assumptions and determinations to be used in determining ruling amounts. (i) To the extent consistent with the principles and provisions of §1.468A-3, a ruling amount for any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987, shall be based on the reasonable assumptions and determinations used by the applicable public utility commission(s) in establishing or approving the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for ratemaking purposes for such taxable year.

(ii) If the applicable public utility commission(s) did not disclose the after-tax rate of return used in establishing or approving the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for any period during a taxable year that ends on or after July 18, 1984, and begins before January 1, 1987, the after-tax rate of return during such period is equal to 54 percent of the overpayment rate in effect under section 6621 during such period.

(iii) If the applicable public utility commission(s) did not disclose the other assumptions and determinations used in establishing or approving the amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for any taxable year that ends on or after July 18, 1984, and begins before January 1, 1987, a ruling amount for each such taxable year shall be determined by taking into account—

(A) The amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for such taxable year;

(B) The qualifying percentage (as determined under paragraph (d)(4) of §1.468A-3 and paragraph (b)(7) of this section); and

(C) The amount of decommissioning costs included in cost of service for any earlier taxable year.

(6) Exception to level funding limitation. Notwithstanding paragraph (b) of §1.468A-3, the Internal Revenue Service may, in its discretion, provide a schedule of ruling amounts for a taxable year that ends on or after July 18, 1984, and begins before January 1, 1987, that is greater than the ruling amount specified in such schedule for a later taxable year.

(7) Determination of qualifying percentage. (i) (A) The qualifying percentage shall be determined under this paragraph (b)(7)(i) if a nuclear power plant began commercial operations on or before July 10, 1986, and a taxpayer—

(1) Files a request for a schedule of ruling amounts for the nuclear decommissioning fund maintained with respect to such nuclear power plant on or before June 1, 1988; and

(2) Elects the application of this paragraph (b)(7)(i) in its request for a schedule of ruling amounts.

(B) If the qualifying percentage is determined under this paragraph (b)(7)(i), the estimated period for which the nuclear decommissioning fund is to be in effect for purposes of paragraph (d)(4)(ii) of §1.468A-3 begins on the later of—

(1) The first day of the taxable year that includes the date that the nuclear power plant began commercial operations; or

(2) The first day of the taxable year that includes July 18, 1984.

(ii) (A) The qualifying percentage shall be determined under this paragraph (b)(7)(ii) if a nuclear power plant began commercial operations before July 18, 1984, and a taxpayer—

(1) Files a request for a schedule of ruling amounts for the nuclear decommissioning fund maintained with respect to such nuclear power plant on or before June 1, 1988; and

(2) Elects the application of this paragraph (b)(7)(ii) in its request for a schedule of ruling amounts.

(B) If the qualifying percentage is determined under this paragraph (b)(7)(ii), the estimated period for which the nuclear decommissioning fund is to be in effect for purposes of paragraph (d)(4)(ii) of §1.468A-3 and the estimated useful life of the nuclear power plant for purposes of paragraph (d)(4)(iii) of §1.468A-3 shall end on the earlier of—

(1) the last day of the taxable year in which it is estimated that decommissioning will begin; or

(2) the last day of the taxable year that includes the expiration date of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission operating license as in effect on July 18, 1984, without regard to any extensions or amendments thereto.

(iii) In the case of a nuclear power plant that began commercial operations before July 18, 1984, and whose estimated useful life for ratemaking purposes was adjusted by a public utility commission before July 18, 1984, a taxpayer may elect in its request for a schedule of ruling amounts to compute the qualifying percentage in accordance with the following rules:

(A) If the taxpayer files a request for a schedule of ruling amounts for the nuclear decommissioning fund maintained with respect to such nuclear power plant on or before June 1, 1988, the qualifying percentage equals the percentage of original depreciation costs (determined without regard to capitalized decommissioning costs) with respect to the nuclear power plant that remains to be recovered for ratemaking purposes as of the first day of the taxable year that includes July 18, 1984.

(B) If a taxpayer does not file a request for a schedule of ruling amounts for the nuclear decommissioning fund maintained with respect to such nuclear power plant on or before June 1, 1988, the qualifying percentage equals the percentage of original depreciation costs (determined without regard to capitalized decommissioning costs) with respect to the nuclear power plant that remains to be recovered for ratemaking purposes as of the first day of the first taxable year for which a deductible payment is made to the nuclear decommissioning fund that relates to such nuclear power plant.

(C) For purposes of this paragraph (b)(7)(iii), original depreciation costs with respect to a nuclear power plant include only those costs that were taken into account in determining the amount of depreciation with respect to such plant in the first ratemaking proceeding in which such depreciation was treated as a cost of service.

(8) Limitation on payments to a nuclear decommissioning fund—(i) The limitation on payments to a nuclear decommissioning fund (see section 468A(b) and paragraph (b) of §1.468A-2) for a taxable year that ends on or after July 18, 1984, and begins before January 1, 1987, shall be determined under paragraph (b)(8)(ii) of this section if—

(A) The electing taxpayer receives a ruling amount applicable to such taxable year after the deemed payment deadline date for such taxable year; and

(B) The requirements of paragraph (b)(8)(iii) of this section are satisfied.

(ii) If the limitation on payments to a nuclear decommissioning fund for a taxable year is determined under this paragraph (b)(8)(ii), the maximum amount of payments made (or deemed made) to the nuclear decommissioning fund during such taxable year shall not exceed the sum of—

(A) The amount determined under section 468A(b) and paragraph (b) of §1.468A-2 (i.e., the lesser of the cost of service amount or the ruling amount) after application of the transitional rules contained in paragraph (b)(4), (5), (6) and (7) of this section; and

(B) The amount of after-tax earnings that would have accumulated to the date of actual payment to the nuclear decommissioning fund if the amount described in paragraph (b)(8)(ii)(A) of this section had been contributed to the nuclear decommissioning fund on the deemed payment deadline date for such taxable year.

In determining the after-tax earnings that would have accumulated to the date of payment, an electing taxpayer must use the after-tax rate of return of the nuclear decommissioning fund that was used in determining the initial schedule of ruling amounts.

(iii) In order to compute the payment limitation under paragraph (b)(8)(ii) of this section for any taxable year, an electing taxpayer must—

(A) Indicate on the Election Statement for the taxable year that the amount of the deductible payment is greater than the amount determined under section 468A(b) and paragraph (b) of §1.468A-2 because paragraph (b)(8) of §1.468A-8 applies;

(B) Not have claimed a deduction for the taxable year under section 468A(a) or paragraph (a) of §1.468A-2 on any return that is filed before the date that a ruling amount is received for the taxable year;

(C) Not have taken a deduction under section 468A(a) or paragraph (a) of §1.468A-2 into account in determining the amount properly estimated as tax for the taxable year under section 6081(b) (relating to the automatic extension for filing corporate income tax returns); and

(D) Not take the deduction allowed with respect to such payment into account in determining the amount of any overpayment of tax (within the meaning of section 6611) or underpayment of tax (within the meaning of section 6601) for the period ending on the date of such payment (see paragraph (b)(9) of this section.

(iv) The following example illustrates the application of the principles of paragraph (b)(8) of this section:

Example. X corporation is a calendar year, accrual method taxpayer engaged in the sale of electric energy generated by a nuclear power plant owned by X. On September 15, 1987, X receives a schedule of ruling amounts from the Internal Revenue Service that includes a ruling amount of $1,000,000 for the 1986 taxable year. For purposes of this example, assume that the cost of service amount applicable to the nuclear decommissioning fund for the 1986 taxable year is also $1,000,000 and that the after-tax rate of return of the nuclear decommissioning fund that was used in determining the schedule of ruling amounts is 10 percent compounded semi-annually. On September 15, 1987, X makes a contribution of $1,050,000 to a nuclear decommissioning fund established by X. Under paragraph (b)(8)(ii) of this section, this contribution does not exceed the limitation on payments for the 1986 taxable year and the entire amount of the contribution is deductible for such year. The additional $50,000 deductible payment that is allowed under this paragraph (b)(8) reflects the foregone earnings of the fund for the six-month period beginning on the deemed payment deadline date for the 1986 taxable year (March 15, 1987) and ending on the date of the contribution (September 15, 1987).

(9) Denial of interest on overpayment. If a deduction is allowed by reason of paragraph (b)(2) of this section for the amount of any payment made after the 15th day of the third calendar month after the close of the taxable year to which such payment relates, such deduction shall not be taken into account in determining the amount of any overpayment of tax (within the meaning of section 6611) or underpayment of tax (within the meaning of section 6601) for the period ending on the date of such payment.

(10) Determination of addition to tax for failure to pay estimated tax. In the case of any taxable year that ends on or after July 18, 1984, and begins before January 1, 1987, the tax shown on the return for such taxable year for purposes of section 6655(b) shall equal the tax that would be shown on the return if a deduction were allowed for the lesser of—

(i) The amount of the payment made to the nuclear decommissioning fund for such taxable year; or

(ii) The amount determined under section 468A(b) and paragraph (b) of §1.468A-2 (i.e., the lesser of the cost of service amount or the ruling amount) after application of the transitional rules contained in paragraph (b)(4), (5), (6) and (7) of this section but without regard to the transitional rule contained in paragraph (b)(8) of this section.

Rev. Rul. 88-51

ISSUE

Are mass commuting vehicles included in the term "mass commuting facilities" for purposes of former section 103(b)(4)(D) or current section 142(a)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code?

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1301 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (1986 Act), 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 519-75, reorganized and amended the Code provisions governing the tax exemption of interest on obligations of a state or its political subdivisions.

Prior to the 1986 Act, former section 103(a)(1) of the Code provided generally that gross income did not include interest on the obligations of a state or its political subdivisions.

Former section 103(b)(1) of the Code provided, in part, that, except as otherwise provided in section 103(b), any industrial development bond was to be treated as an obligation not described in section 103(a)(1).

Former section 103(b)(4)(D) of the Code provided, in part, that section 103(b)(1) would not apply to industrial development bonds issued as part of an issue substantially all the proceeds of which were to be used to provide "mass commuting facilities."

Rev. Rul. 76-11, 1976-1 C.B. 30, considers whether interest on bonds issued to finance the acquisition and construction of a rapid transit system (monorail) is tax-exempt. In describing the system, the ruling mentions the system vehicles. The ruling concludes that, in determining whether the interest on the bonds is exempt, "the proposed rapid transit system will constitute 'mass commuting facilities' to the extent defined in section 1.103-8(e)(2)(iii) [currently section 1.103-8(e)(2)(iv)] of the Income Tax Regulations."

Section 1.103-8(e)(2)(iv) of the Income Tax Regulations, issued under former section 103(b)(4)(D) of the Code, provides that a "mass commuting facility" includes real property together with improvements and personal property used therein, such as machinery, equipment and furniture, serving the general public commuting on a day-to-day basis by bus, subway, rail, ferry, or other conveyance that moves over prescribed routes. Under this regulation, such term also includes terminals and facilities that are functionally related and subordinate to the mass commuting facility, such as parking garages, car barns, and repair shops. Use of mass commuting facilities by noncommuters in common with commuters is immaterial. Thus, a terminal leased to a common carrier bus line that serves both commuters and long distance travelers would qualify as an exempt facility.

Former section 103(b)(4)(I) of the Code provided that section 103(b)(1) would not apply to industrial development bonds issued as part of an issue substantially all the proceeds of which were to be used to provide "qualified mass commuting vehicles."

Former section 103(b)(9)(A) of the Code provided that, for purposes of section 103(b)(4)(I), the term "qualified mass commuting vehicle" meant any bus, subway car, rail car, ferry, or similar equipment (i) that was leased to a mass transit system wholly owned by one or more governmental units (or agencies or instrumentalities thereof), and (ii) that was used by such system in providing mass commuting services (or, in the case of a ferry, mass transportation services).

Former section 103(b)(9)(B) of the Code provided that section 103(b)(4)(I) would not apply to any obligation issued after December 31, 1984.

Former section 103(b)(4)(I) of the Code was added by section 811 of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, 1981-2 C.B. 256, 349, because Congress wanted, for a limited time period (1981-1984), to exempt from federal income tax interest on industrial development bonds used to finance mass commuting vehicles. H.R. Rep. No. 97-201, 97th Cong., 1st Sess. 269-70 (1981), 1981-2 C.B. 352, 404. See H.R. Rep. No. 97-215 (Conference Report), 97th Cong., 1st Sess. 269-70 (1981), 1981-2 C.B. 481, 518-19.

Under the 1986 Act, section 103(a) of the Code provides generally that gross income does not include interest on any state or local bond.

Section 103(b)(1) of the Code provides that section 103(a) shall not apply to any private activity bond that is not a qualified bond (within the meaning of section 141).

Section 141(e)(1)(A) of the Code provides that the term "qualified bond" means any private activity bond (as defined in section 141(a)) if such bond is an "exempt facility bond."

Section 142(a)(3) of the Code provides that, for purposes of section 141(e)(1)(A), the term "exempt facility bond" includes any bond issued as part of an issue 95 percent or more of the net proceeds of which are to be used to provide "mass commuting facilities."

The Conference Committee Report accompanying the 1986 Act states that under prior law the term mass commuting facilities did not include mass commuting vehicles, and that such term generally would continue to be defined in the same manner as under prior law for purposes of new section 142(a)(3) of the Code. H.R. Rep. No. 99-841 (Conference Report), 99th Cong., 2d Sess. II-702 (1986), 1986-3 (Vol. 4) C.B. 702.

HOLDING

Mass commuting vehicles are not included within the term "mass commuting facilities" for purposes of former section 103(b)(4)(D) or current section 142(a)(3) of the Code.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 76-11 is clarified to remove any inference that the vehicles mentioned in Rev. Rul. 76-11 are included in the term "mass commuting facilities."

Section 121.—One-time Exclusion of Gain from Sale of Principal Residence by Individual who has Attained Age 55

26 CFR 1.121-3: Definitions.

Exclusion of gain from sale of principal residence. A gain realized from the relinquishment of rights in a rent-controlled apartment cannot be excluded from gross income under section 121 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 88-29

ISSUE

Under section 121 of the Internal Revenue Code, may an individual elect to exclude from gross income the gain realized from the relinquishment of rights with respect to a rent-controlled apartment subject to the New York City Rent and Rehabilitation Law?

FACTS

A, age 60, has resided for 25 years in an apartment unit the lease of which is governed by the provisions of the New York City Rent and Rehabilitation Law, sections 26-401 through 26-415, N.Y. Unconsol. Laws (McKinney Supp. 1986). Provided the tenant continues to pay rent, this law prohibits the eviction of a rent-controlled tenant, except on limited grounds. During 1987, A realized a gain upon receiving a payment from the owner of the apartment building to relinquish all rights A had under this law with respect to the unit.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 121(a) of the Code allows a taxpayer to elect to exclude gain from the sale or exchange of property from gross income if (1) the taxpayer has attained age 55 before the date of the sale or exchange, and (2) during the 5-year period ending on the date of the sale or exchange, the property has been owned and used by the taxpayer as the taxpayer's principal residence for periods aggregating 3 years or more. Under section 121(b), the amount of gain excluded from gross income may not exceed $125,000.

Section 1.121-3(a) of the Income Tax Regulations states that the term "principal residence" has the same meaning as in section 1034 of the Code (relating to sale or exchange of residence).

In Rev. Rul. 84-43, 1984-1 C.B. 27, B owned a life estate in a residence that B had used as a principal residence for 10 years. The life estate was B's entire interest in the residence. Rev. Rul. 84-43 concludes that B may elect under section 121 of the Code to exclude from gross income up to $125,000 of the gain from the sale of the life estate. Rev. Rul. 84-43 states that the section 121 is to apply if an elderly taxpayer disposes of the taxpayer's entire interest (legal and equitable) in a principal residence. It is not necessary that the taxpayer own the entire fee interest in such residence.

Rev. Rul. 72-266, 1972-1 C.B. 227, concludes that the present value of future lease payments of 50 years' duration cannot be included in the purchase price of a new principal residence, as the lease payments were to be directed at property in which the taxpayer would not acquire any equity. Therefore, the nonrecognition provisions of section 1034 of the Code did not apply.

Rev. Rul. 72-266 was cited with approval in Boesel v. Commissioner, 65 T.C. 378 (1975), a case involving taxpayers who sold their old residence in Connecticut and one week later purchased a new residence in California that was constructed on land originally leased to the seller for 75 years. The taxpayers assumed the ground lease for its remaining 73-year term and attempted to capitalize the value of the future payments under the lease for purposes of calculating the gain to be currently recognized under section 1034 of the Code. The court rejected the taxpayers' interpretation of the law and stated that nonrecognition of gain under section 1034 may be permitted only to the extent that a taxpayer holds fee simple title (or equivalent forms of ownership) to property that is occupied as a principal residence.

Although the New York City Rent and Rehabilitation Law gives tenants substantial possessory rights by restricting the ability of a landlord to evict a rent-controlled tenant, a tenant may be evicted on a variety of grounds, largely concerning the tenant's wrongful conduct within the apartment unit. See section 26-408(a), NY Unconsolidated Laws. In addition, the landlord may obtain a certificate of eviction from the New York City rent agency if the landlord requires the apartment for personal use, if the tenant does not actually live in the unit, or if the landlord intends to substantially alter, remodel, or demolish the unit. Moreover, the statute does not give rent-controlled tenants all the rights and privileges of ownership, such as the right to freely sublet the property and the right to transfer the property by gift or sale. The statutory restrictions on A's ability to use, occupy, and transfer the rent-controlled apartment confirm that A's interest is that of a lessee and not an owner.

As Boesel Rev. Rul. 72-266 indicate, a lease interest cannot qualify as an ownership interest in a principal residence for purposes of section 1034 of the Code, and an ownership interest is required to qualify for nonrecognition of gain under section 1034. Similarly, a lease interest does not qualify for the section 121 exclusion. Rev. Rul. 84-43 is distinguishable because a life estate is an ownership interest.

HOLDING

A may not elect under section 121 of the Code to exclude from gross income any gain realized from the relinquishment of A's statutory rights in the rent-controlled apartment.

Business expenses; fines and penalties. A nonconformance penalty assessed by the Environmental Protection Agency is not a "fine or similar penalty" under section 162(f) of the Code and is, therefore, deductible as a business expense under section 162(a).

Rev. Rul. 88-46

ISSUE

If a taxpayer pays a nonconformance penalty (NCP) assessed by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) under section 206(g)(1) of the Clean Air Act (Act), 42 U.S.C. section 7525(g)(1), is that NCP a nondeductible "fine or similar penalty" for purposes of section 162(f) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

The taxpayer, a manufacturer of heavy-duty trucks and truck engines, has vehicles and engines that fail to conform to certain emission standards imposed under the Act. Section 206(g)(1) of the Act requires the EPA to issue a certificate of conformity for any class or category of heavy-duty vehicles or engines that exceeds a set emission standard but does not exceed an upper limit associated with that standard, if the manufacturer pays an NCP. Manufacturers that sell or introduce into commerce heavy-duty vehicles or engines not covered by certificates of conformity are subject to a civil penalty of not more than $10,000 for each violation of the Act. Because the taxpayer's heavy-duty vehicles and engines did not conform to the established emission standards, the taxpayer paid NCPs so that it could obtain the necessary certificates of conformity for its vehicles and engines.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 162(a) of the Code provides that there shall be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business.

Section 162(f) of the Code and the regulations thereunder provide that no deduction shall be allowed under section 162(a) for any fine or similar penalty paid to a government for the violation of any law.

Section 1.162-21(b) of the regulations provides, in part, that the term "fine or similar penalty" includes an amount paid as a civil penalty imposed by federal, state, or local law.

Section 206(g)(1) of the Act states that, in the case of any class or category of heavy-duty vehicles or engines to which an emission of air pollutants standard applies, a certificate of conformity shall be issued and shall not be suspended or revoked for such vehicles or engines manufactured by a manufacturer notwithstanding the failure of such vehicles or engines to meet such standard if such manufacturer pays an NCP as provided under regulations promulgated by the EPA Administrator.

Under section 205 of the Act, 42 U.S.C. section 7524, any person who violates the Act by selling or offering for sale any vehicle or vehicle engine that is not covered by a certificate of conformity shall be subject to a civil penalty of not more than $10,000 per truck or engine illegally sold.

Pursuant to the authority under section 206(g)(3) of the Act (See also 40 C.F.R. §86.1113-87 (1986)), the EPA Administrator has promulgated a formula, $NCP = PR \times EE \times AAF$, for calculating each NCP where:

NCP = penalty per vehicle or engine;

PR = penalty rate, which is based on the amount that a conforming manufacturer would likely spend to meet the emission standard, per unit of pollutant;

EE = units of pollutant by which a vehicle or engine exceeds emission standards;

AAF = annual adjustment factor, which increases the penalty based on the inflation rate and the extent of the industry usage of NCPs, to provide an incentive for compliance.

The House Report regarding section 206(g)(3) of the Act states that in order to assure the achievement of the maximum emission reduction that is reasonably projected to be technologically available, while at the same time not ruling the nonconforming manufacturer out of the market, the Committee permitted certain nonconforming vehicles or engines to be certified conditionally upon payment of a nonconforming technology penalty. H.R. Rep. No. 294, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 275 (1977). Footnote 17 of H.R. Rep. No. 294, at 275, states that this is a performance penalty, irrespective of fault. The report further states that, in connection with adopting these technology-forcing emission standards, the EPA Administrator is required to prescribe an allowable range of nonconformity that will allow any engine or vehicle that fails to meet the revised emission standards, but that nonetheless falls within this range, to be certified and sold provided the NCP is paid. The Conference Report states that the NCPs are to be set at a level that will eliminate the competititve advantage, if any, for the manufacturer of a nonconforming vehicle or engine. H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 564, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 163 (1977).

The Act and the legislative history indicate that the NCP formula is primarily designed as a permissive and equalizing formula to eliminate the competitive economic advantage that a nonconforming producer might otherwise have over a conforming producer. Congress envisaged an alternative allowable range of nonconformity that would allow a vehicle or engine to be covered by a certificate of conformity upon payment of an NCP. The NCP mechanism grants the EPA permission to conditionally certify nonconformity. This permissive characterization of the NCP mechanism in the legislative history, and the flexibility that mechanism was to provide with respect to Congress' setting of high technological emission standards, are inconsistent with a conclusion that, under section 162(f) of the Code, an NCP is a penalty paid "for the violation of any law." The legislative history of the NCP shows that it is not punitive in nature. Rather, the paying of an NCP provides one of two lawful alternative methods for receiving a certificate of conformity. The other is to simply conform to the established emission standard. Mere nonconformity within the allowable range of nonconformity is not a violation of the Act if there is a payment of the NCP. A taxpayer that pays the NCP and thus receives a certificate of conformity does not fall within section 205 of the Act, which imposes a penalty of not more than $10,000, per vehicle or engine, on manufacturers selling, or introducing into commerce, vehicles or engines not covered by certificates of conformity.

HOLDING

The NCP that was assessed by the EPA is not a "fine or similar penalty" for purposes of section 162(f) of the Code, and, therefore, section 162(f) does not preclude deduction of the NCP as a business expense under section 162(a).

TITLE 26—CHAPTER 1,
SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING
AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Registration Requirements with Respect to Certain Debt Obligations; Sanctions on Issuers of Registration-Required Obligations Not in Registered Form

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to registration requirements with respect to certain debt obligations and sanctions on issuers of registration required obligations not in registered form. These regulations affect issuers of obligations held by foreign persons and issuers of certain other obligations. These final regulations provide the public with guidance necessary to comply with the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982.

DATE: The regulations under §1.163-5(c)(2)(i) generally apply to obligations issued after December 31, 1982. The regulations under §1.163-5(c)(2)(i)(B) (foreign targeting rules) generally apply to obligations issued after June 20, 1988. The change in §1.163-5(c)(3) to the effective date of §1.163-5T(c)(3) applies with respect to an obligation issued after December 31, 1982 and on or before January 20, 1987.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Section 1.163-5 was issued as T.D. 8110 [1987-1 C.B. 81] and was published in the Federal Register at 51 FR 45453 on December 19, 1986. Section 1.163-5(c)(2)(i) provides, among other things, that an exchange of one obligation for another is considered an original issuance if and only if the exchange constitutes a disposition of property for purposes of section 1001 of the Code. Generally, the assumption of an outstanding obligation by a new obligor constitutes a disposition of property for purposes of section 1001 of the Code, because a change in obligor is a change in a material term of the obligation. Thus, the assumption of an obligation would be considered an original issuance under §1.163-5(c)(2)(i) of the regulations. It has been suggested that compliance with the requirements of §1.163-5(c)(2)(i) imposes a difficult burden upon the assumption of an obligation which was previously in compliance with those requirements if the assumption involves a change in obligor alone with no other changes in the terms of the obligation.

In the preamble to the final regulations under §1.163-5(c), the Treasury Department stated that it does not have the authority to permit the offer, sale, or delivery of bearer obligations inside the United States in connection with their original issuance. Accordingly, the regulations should have required that a bearer obligation be delivered outside the United States in order for the issuer of the obligation to meet the test of arrangements reasonably designed to ensure sale only to persons who are not United States persons. The requirement of delivery outside the United States was not, however, included in the text of §1.163-5(c)(2)(i)(B).

Section 1.163-5(c)(3) requires a certification under §5f.163-1(c)(2)(i)(B)(4) if the taxpayer chooses to apply the rules of §1.163-5(c) with respect to an obligation issued after January 31, 1982 and on or before January 20, 1987. The reference to §5f.163-1(c)(2)(i)(B)(4) is incorrect. The correct citation is §1.163-5T(c)(2)(i)(B)(4).

Section 1.163-5(c)(2)(i) of these regulations provides an exception from the general rule that an exchange of one obligation for another is considered an original issuance if and only if the exchange constitutes a disposition of property for purposes of section 1001 of the Code. Under this exception, a change in obligor alone, provided that there are no other changes in the terms of the obligation, will not be considered a new issuance. Accordingly, in such a case an obligation which previously met the requirements of §1.163-5(c)(2)(i) before such a change in obligor, would not have to requalify under §1.163-5(c)(2)(i) after such a change in obligor.

Section 1.163-5(c)(2)(i)(B) provides that a bearer obligation can be delivered only outside the United States under the second test of arrangements reasonably designed to ensure sale (or resale in connection with the original issue) only to a person who is not a United States person. The second test of arrangements reasonably designed applies to an obligation that is registered under the Securities Act of 1933, that is exempt from registration under section 3 or 4 of such Act, or that is not a security.

Section 1.163-5(c)(3) of these regulations requires a certification under §1.163-5T(c)(2)(i)(B)(4) rather than §5f.163-5(c)(2)(i)(B)(4), an incorrect citation.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT AND EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis therefore is not required. The Internal Revenue Service has concluded that these regulations are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. §553 do not apply. Accordingly, these regulations are not regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

The following amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are hereby adopted:

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 continues to read in part:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805. ***

Par. 2. Section 1.163-5(c)(2)(i) introductory text is amended by adding a new sentence immediately following the second sentence thereof, to read as follows:

* * * * *

However, an exchange of one obligation for another will not be considered a new issuance if the obligation received is identical in all respects to the obligation surrendered in exchange therefor, except that the obligor of the obligation received need not be the same obligor as the obligor of the obligation surrendered.

* * * * *

Par. 3. Section 1.163-5(c)(2)(i)(B)(4) is amended by revising the first sentence thereof to read as follows:

> In connection with the original issuance of the obligation in bearer form it is delivered in definitive form (or issued, if the obligation is not in definitive form) to the person entitled to physical delivery thereof only outside the United States and its possessions and only upon presentation of a certificate signed by such person to the issuer, underwriter, or member of the selling group, which certificate states that the obligation is not being acquired by or on behalf of a United States person, or for offer to resell or for resale to a United States person or any person inside the United States, or, if a beneficial interest in the obligation is being acquired by a United States person, that such person is a financial institution as defined in §1.165-12(c)(1)(v) or is acquiring through a financial institution and that the obligation is held by a financial institution that has agreed to comply with the requirements of section 165(j)(3)(A), (B), or (C) and the regulations thereunder and that is not purchasing for offer to resell or for resale inside the United States.

Par. 4. Section 1.163-5(c)(3) is amended by deleting "5f.163-1(c)(2)(i)(B)(4) and inserting in lieu thereof "1.163-5T(c)(2)(i)(B)(4)".

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE.—SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953; PART 35A—TEMPORARY EMPLOYMENT TAX REGULATIONS UNDER THE INTEREST AND DIVIDEND TAX COMPLIANCE ACT OF 1983

Registration Requirements with Respect to Certain Debt Obligations; Sanctions on Issuers of Registration-Required Obligations Not in Registered Form

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations and amended temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations and amendments to temporary regulations relating to registration requirements with respect to certain debt obligations, and sanctions on issuers of registration-required obligations not in registered form. These regulations affect issuers of obligations held by foreign persons and issuers of certain other obligations. These temporary regulations provide the public with guidance necessary to comply with the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 and the Tax Reform Act of 1984. The text of these regulations also serves as the text for a notice of proposed rulemaking published in  [INTL-990-86, page 916, this Bulletin].

DATE: The temporary regulations under §1.163-5T(d) (pass-through certificates) generally apply to obligations issued after December 31, 1982. The temporary regulations under section 35a.9999-5(f) are deleted effective January 21, 1987.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Section 1.163-5T(d) provides temporary regulations addressing the application of the term "registration-required obligations" to pass-through certificates, such as mortgage pass-through certificates, and the application of the sanctions on issuers of "registration-required obligations" not in registered form to the issuers of such certificates. These temporary regulations were originally published in the Federal Register as T.D. 8046 [1985-2 C.B. 61] at 50 FR 33522 on August 20, 1985 and were the subject of a notice of proposed rulemaking [LR-151-83 and LR-179-84, 1985-2 C.B. 808] published in the Federal Register at 50 FR 33552. Section 1.163-5T in its entirety was removed by T.D. 8110 [1987-1 C.B. 81], which was published in the Federal Register at 51 FR 45433 on December 19, 1986. However, it was not intended that §1.163-5T(d) should be removed.

Paragraph (f) of §35a.9999-5 consisting of Q & A 23 through 27 provides rules concerning the exclusion from portfolio interest of interest received by related parties. These temporary regulations were published in the Federal Register as T.D. 8111 [1987-1 C.B. 69], on December 19, 1986 at 51 FR 45484. In Notice 87-24, 1987-1 C.B. 470, the Internal Revenue Service stated that paragraph (f) of §35a.9999-5 of the temporary income tax regulations would be suspended retroactive to January 21, 1987, the date that the paragraph became effective.

Section 1.163-5T(d) of these temporary regulations republishes the text of former §1.163-5T(d)(1) through (6) unchanged from the text as it was originally published (except for cross-references) in the Federal Register at 50 FR 33522 on August 20, 1985. These temporary regulations provide that a pass-through or participation certificate evidencing an interest in a pool of mortgage loans which under Subpart E of Subchapter J of the Code is treated as a trust of which the grantor is the owner (or similar evidence of interest in a similar pooled fund or pool trust treated as a grantor trust) ("pass-through certificate") is considered to be a "registration-required obligation" if the pass-through certificate is described in section 163(f)(2)(A), without regard to whether any obligation held by the fund or trust to which it relates is described in section 163(f)(2)(A). Also, a pass-through certificate is considered to satisfy the requirements of section 163(f)(2)(B) if it satisfies the requirements of section 163(f)(2)(B) without regard to the status of the underlying obligations. Mortgage pass-through certificates are therefore obligations to which section 163(f)(2)(A) or (B) may apply.

These temporary regulations do not affect the determination of whether bearer obligations that are issued or guaranteed by the United States Government or backed by United States Government securities comply with the requirements of section 163(f)(2)(B) and the regulations thereunder.

Section 35a.9999-5(f) applied generally to interest paid on obligations issued after January 20, 1987. Section 35a.9999-5(f) is deleted from the temporary regulations effective January 21, 1987 and, accordingly, section 35a.9999-5(f) does not apply to interest paid on obligations issued after January 20, 1987.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT AND EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis therefore is not required. The Internal Revenue Service has concluded that the regulations adopted hereby are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. §553 do not apply. Accordingly, these regulations are not regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

The following amendments to 26 CFR Part 1 are hereby adopted:

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 continues to read in part:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805. ***

Par. 2. Section 1.163-5T is added after §1.163-5. The added section reads as follows:

§1.163-5T. Denial of Interest deduction on certain obligations issued after December 31, 1982, unless issued in registered form (temporary).

(a) [Reserved]

(b) [Reserved]

(c) [Reserved]

(1) A pass-through or participation certificate evidencing an interest in a pool of mortgage loans which under Subpart E of Subchapter J of the Code is treated as a trust of which the grantor is the owner (or similar evidence of interest in a similar pooled fund or pooled trust treated as a grantor trust) ("pass-through certificate") is considered to be a "registration-required obligation" under section 163(f)(2)(A) and §1.163-5(c) if the pass-through certficate is described in section 163(f)(2)(A) and §1.163-5(c) without regard to whether any obligation held by the fund or trust to which the pass-through certificate relates is described in section 163(f)(2)(A) and §1.163-5(c). A pass-through certificate is considered to be described in section 163(f)(2)(B) and §1.163-5(c) if the pass-through certificate is described in section 163(f)(2)(B) and §1.163-5(c) without regard to whether any obligation held by the fund or trust to which the pass-through certificate relates is described in section 163(f)(2)(B) and §1.163-5(c).

(2) An obligation held by a fund or trust in which ownership interests are represented by pass-through certificates is considered to be in registered form under section 149(a) and the regulations thereunder or to be described in section 163(f)(2)(A) or (B), if the obligation held by the fund or trust is in registered form under section 149(a) and the regulations thereunder or is described in section 163(f)(2)(A) or (B), respectively, without regard to whether the pass-through certificate are so considered.

(4) In order to implement the purpose of section 163 §1.163-5(c) and this section, the Commissioner may characterize a certificate or other evidence of interest in a fund or trust which under Subpart E of Subchapter J of the Code is treated as a trust of which the grantor is the owner and any obligation held by such fund or trust in accordance with the substance of the arrangement they represent and may impose the penalties provided under section 163(f)(1) and 4701 in the appropriate amounts and on the appropriate persons. This provision may be applied, for example, where a corporation issues obligations purportedly in registered form, contributes them to a grantor trust as its only assets, and arranges for the sale to investors of bearer certificates of interest in the trust which do not meet the requirements of section 163(f)(2)(B). If this provision is applied, the obligations held by the fund or trust will not be considered to be issued in registered form or to meet the requirements of section 163(f)(2)(B). The corporation will not be allowed a deduction for the payment of interest on the obligations held by the trust, and the excise tax under section 4701, calculated with reference to the principal amount of the obligations held by the trust will be imposed on the corporation may be collected from the corporation and its agents. This paragraph (d)(4) will not be applied so as to alter the tax consequences of transactions as to which rulings have been issued by the Internal Revenue Service prior to September 19, 1985.

(5) The rules set forth in this paragraph (d) apply solely for purposes of sections 4701, 163(f)(2)(A), 163(f)(2)(B), §1.163-5(c), and any other section that refers to this section for the definition of the term "registration-required obligation" (such as the regulations under sections 871(h) and 881(c)). The treatment of obligations described in this paragraph (d) for purposes of section 163(f)(2)(A) and (B) does not affect the determination of whether bearer obligations that are issued or guaranteed by the United States Government, a United States Government-owned agency, a United States Government sponsored enterprise (within the meaning of §1.163-5(c)(1)) or that are backed (as described in the Treasury Department News Release R-2835 of September 10, 1984 and Treasury Department News Release R-2847 of September 14, 1984) by obligations issued by the United States Government, a United States Government-owned agency, or a United States Government sponsored enterprise comply with the requirements of section 163(f)(2)(B) and the regulations thereunder.

(6) The provisions of this paragraph (d)(1) through (5) may be illustrated by the following example:

Commercial Bank K forms a pool of 1000 residential mortgage loans, each made to a different individual homeowner, by assigning them to Commercial Bank L, an unrelated entity serving as trustee of the pool. Commercial Bank L immediately sells in a public offering certificates of interest in the trust of a maturity of 10 years in registered form. Commercial Bank L transfers the cash proceeds of the offering to Commercial Bank K. The certificates of interest in the trust are of a type offered to the public and are not described in section 163(f)(2)(B). Pursuant to paragraph (d)(1), the certificates of interest in the pool are registration-required obligations without regard to the fact that the obligations held by the trust are not registration-required obligations.

Par. 3. The authority for part 35a continues to read as follows:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805. ***

Par. 4. In 35a.9999-5, paragraph (f) is removed.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953, PART 602—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Limitation on Deduction for Nonbusiness Interest; Personal Interest

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations relating to the treatment of personal interest and the treatment and determination of qualified residence interest. The text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text of the proposed regulations for the notice of proposed rulemaking on this subject  [page 926, this Bulletin]. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. The regulations affect taxpayers other than corporations who have paid or accrued personal interest during a taxable year, and taxpayers who have paid or accrued interest on debt secured by a principal or second residence.

DATES: The regulations are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document amends the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) and the Table of OMB Control Numbers (26 CFR Part 602) to provide rules under section 163(h) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. Section 163(h) was added to the Code by section 511(b) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Pub. L. 99-514, 100 Stat. 2246) [1986-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 163].

EXPLANATION OF STATUTORY PROVISIONS

Section 163(h)(1) provides that in the case of a taxpayer other than a corporation, no deduction shall be allowed under Chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code for personal interest paid or accrued during the taxable year. Section 163(h)(2) defines personal interest as any interest otherwise allowable as a deduction under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code other than (a) interest paid or accrued on indebtedness properly allocable to the conduct of a trade or business (other than the trade or business of performing services as an employee), (b) investment interest, (c) interest taken into account under section 469 in computing income or loss from a passive activity, (d) qualified residence interest, or (e) interest payable under section 6601 on any unpaid portion of the tax imposed by section 2001 for the period during which an extension of time for payment of such tax is in effect under section 6163, 6166 or 6166A (as in effect before its repeal by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981) [1981-2 C.B. 256].

Section 163(h)(3) defines qualified residence interest as interest paid or accrued on debt that is secured by a qualified residence at the time such interest is paid or accrued. Under section 163(h)(3)(B), however, interest expense constitutes qualified residence interest only to the extent that the underlying debt, when added to the principal balance of all other debt previously secured by the qualified residence, does not exceed the lesser of (a) the fair market value of the qualified residence, or (b) the sum of the taxpayer's basis in the qualified residence (adjusted only by the cost of any improvements) plus the amount of qualified indebtedness (secured medical and educational debt). Section 163(h)(3)(C) provides that for purposes of this limitation the taxpayer's basis in the qualified residence shall not be less than the principal balance of debt incurred prior to August 16, 1986, and secured by the qualified residence on August 16, 1986. Section 163(h)(3)(D) provides that, except as provided in regulations, any determination with respect to the limitation on the amount of qualified residence interest shall be made at the time the debt is incurred.

Qualified indebtedness is defined in section 163(h)(4) as debt secured by a qualified residence which is incurred after August 16, 1986, to pay for certain medical and educational expenses, which are paid or incurred within a reasonable period of time before or after such debt is incurred.

Section 163(h)(5) defines qualified residence as the principal residence of the taxpayer and one other residence designated by the taxpayer.

EXPLANATION OF REGULATORY PROVISIONS

The regulations adopt an annual test to determine whether a taxpayer's debt secured by a qualified residence ("secured debt") exceeds the section 163(h)(3)(B) limitation on qualified residence interest. An annual approach was chosen rather than a test applied only at the time a debt is incurred because an annual approach takes account of reductions in the principal balance of secured debt and, therefore, removes the incentive to refinance a secured debt in order to redetermine the limitation. Moreover, an annual test accounts more appropriately for lines of credit, the balance of which may fluctuate from year to year.

The regulations apply the annual test by comparing the section 163(h)(3)(B) limitation with the average principal balance of the debt during the taxable year. The average balance was selected over the principal balance of the debt on a particular day during the year (such as the first day of the year or the day on which the principal balance is the highest) because the average balance more accurately reflects the amount of debt outstanding over the course of the year and is more closely associated with the amount of interest paid.

Under the regulations, a taxpayer's basis in a residence (the "adjusted purchase price") is determined as of the end of each year, instead of at the time a debt is incurred. By providing for determination of the adjusted purchase price at the end of each year, the regulations permit a taxpayer to apply a single overall limitation to all secured debts, rather than a separate limitation for each debt. In addition, the use of an end-of-year adjusted purchase price permits taxpayers to take advantage of increases in the adjusted purchase price due to home improvements without the need to refinance debt.

In contrast, however, the regulations generally require the fair market value of the residence to be determined as of the time a debt is incurred. Limiting the fair market value determination to the date a debt is incurred will minimize controversy between taxpayers and the Service because the residence's fair market value with respect to any particular debt will be determined only once and because an independent appraisal ordinarily is conducted in connection with arm's length lending transactions.

In the case of a qualified residence that is real property, the regulations provide an irrebutable presumption that the fair market value is no less than the adjusted purchase price of the residence as of the end of the current taxable year. This presumption further reduces controversy between taxpayers and the Service over fair market value. It is believed that, in a broad range of circumstances, fair market value will in fact be at least as great as the adjusted purchase price.

These simplifications permit a taxpayer to determine whether all interest expense on secured debt is qualified residence interest by comparing the sum of the average balances for the taxable year of all secured debt to the adjusted purchase price determined as of the end of the year. If this sum is less than the adjusted purchase price, all of the interest paid or accrued on the secured debt is qualified residence interest. If the combined average balance exceeds the adjusted purchase price, the taxpayer must determine the amount of qualified residence interest using either the "simplified method" or the "exact method." (A taxpayer may use a different method for each qualified residence in each taxable year.)

Under the simplified method, the amount of qualified residence interest is determined by multiplying the total interest paid or accrued on all of the debt secured by a qualified residence by a fraction, the numerator of which is the adjusted purchase price and the denominator of which is the combined average balance. Any disallowed interest is treated as personal interest, the deduction for which is phased out over the period 1987 through 1990.

If a taxpayer wishes to take advantage of qualified indebtedness (secured medical and educational debt) or wishes to trace interest expense on secured debt to expenditures other than personal expenditures, the taxpayer must use the exact method. Under the exact method, the amount of qualified residence interest is determined on a debt-by-debt basis by comparing each debt to the applicable debt limit determined for that debt. If the average balance for any debt is less than its applicable debt limit, all of the interest paid or accrued on that debt is qualified residence interest. If the average balance exceeds its applicable debt limit, only a portion of the interest on the debt is qualified residence interest. The treatment of the remaining interest on the debt is determined by the use of the proceeds of the debt. If, for example, the proceeds of the debt were used to purchase investment assets, the remaining interest is investment interest subject to section 163(d).

The applicable debt limit for any debt is determined in two steps. First, the taxpayer determines the lesser of (a) the fair market value of the residence at the time the debt was secured, and (b) the sum of the adjusted purchase price (determined as of the end of the taxable year) plus the amount of qualified indebtedness for that debt and for all previously secured debt. Second, the taxpayer subtracts the average balance (or, if less, the applicable debt limit) of all previously secured debts from the amount so determined.

The regulations provide guidance on the determination of the amount of qualified indebtedness (i.e., the amount of debt used to pay for qualified medical and educational expenses). If at least 90 percent of the proceeds of a secured debt are used to pay for qualified medical and educational expenses, the amount of qualified indebtedness is the average balance of the debt. If less than 90 percent of the proceeds of a secured debt are used to pay for such expenses, the amount of qualified indebtedness is the lesser of the average balance of the debt or the amount used to pay such expenses, reduced by principal payments on the debt in prior taxable years. The regulations provide rules for determining whether proceeds of a debt are used to pay for qualified medical or educational expenses. In general, a taxpayer may treat proceeds as being so used if medical or educational expenditures are made within 90 days before or after the date a debt is incurred. A taxpayer may also treat proceeds as being used to pay for such expenditures if the debt is traceable to such expenditures under the tracing rules provided in §1.163-8T.

The regulations also provide guidance regarding the determination of the aggregate outstanding principal amount of debt which was incurred on or before August 16, 1986, and secured by the qualified residence before August 16, 1986, (i.e., the amount of grandfathered debt). In general, in any year, the grandfathered amount of such debt is the average balance of the debt during the taxable year. The regulations also permit a debt incurred to refinance a grandfathered debt to itself be treated as grandfathered debt. In cases where the taxpayer has borrowed new amounts after August 16, 1986, on a grandfathered debt or refinanced a grandfathered debt with a larger debt, the regulations provide appropriate limits on the grandfathered amount.

The regulations require that in order to be considered secured by a qualified residence, a debt must be secured by an instrument that makes the interest of the debtor in the qualified residence specific security for the payment of the debt and that is recorded in accordance with applicable State law. The regulations provide that a debt will be considered to be secured notwithstanding the fact that under an applicable State or local homestead law or other debtor protection law in effect on August 16, 1986, the security interest is ineffective or the enforceability of the security interest is restricted. This provision, which is consistent with provisions contained in pending technical corrections legislation, is intended to allow the benefit of the mortgage interest deduction despite state law impediments to securing mortgage debt. A taxpayer may elect to treat a debt that is secured by a qualified residence as if it were not secured by the residence.

The regulations provide guidance regarding the definition of a residence for purposes of section 163(h). They provide generally that a residence includes a house, condominium, cooperative, mobile home, boat or similar property which provides basic living accommodations, including sleeping space and toilet and cooking facilities. Additionally, if a portion of a residence is not used for residential purposes (e.g., a room used as a home office), that portion does not qualify as a residence. In such cases, the taxpayer must allocate the fair market value and basis in the property (but not the average balance or interest on the debt) between the portion of the property used as a residence and the portion not so used.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis therefore is not required. A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the temporary regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

The collection of information requirements contained in this regulation have been approved by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) under section 3507 of the Paperwork Reduction Act.

Amendments to the regulations

For the reasons set out in the preamble, Title 26, Chapter 1, Subchapter A, Part 1 and Part 602 of the Code of Federal Regulations is amended as set forth below.

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS

(26 CFR Part 1)

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.  Section 1.163-9T also issued under 26 U.S.C. 163(h)(3)(D). ***

Par. 2. The following new §§1.163-9T and 1.163-10T are added immediately after §1.163-8T.

§1.163-9T Personal interest (temporary).

(a) In general. No deduction under any provision of Chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code shall be allowed for personal interest paid or accrued during the taxable year by a taxpayer other than a corporation.

(b) Personal interest—(1) Definition. For purposes of this section, personal interest is any interest expense other than—

(i) Interest paid or accrued on indebtedness properly allocable (within the meaning of §1.163-8T) to the conduct of a trade or business (other than the trade or business of performing services as an employee),

(ii) Any investment interest (within the meaning of section 163(d)(3)),

(iii) Any interest that is taken into account under section 469 in computing income or loss from a passive activity of the taxpayer,

(iv) Any qualified residence interest (within the meaning of section 163(h)(3) and §1.163-10T), and

(v) Any interest payable under section 6601 with respect to the unpaid portion of the tax imposed by section 2001 for the period during which an extension of time for payment of such tax is in effect under section 6163, 6166, or 6166A (as in effect before its repeal by the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981).

(2) Interest relating to taxes—(i) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (b)(2)(iii) of this section, personal interest includes interest—

(A) Paid on underpayments of individual Federal, State or local income taxes and on indebtedness used to pay such taxes (within the meaning of §1.168-8T), regardless of the source of the income generating the tax liability;

(B) Paid under section 453C(e)(4)(B) (interest on deferred tax resulting from certain installment sales) and section 1291(c) (interest on deferred tax attributable to passive foreign investment companies); or

(C) Paid by a trust, S corporation, or other pass-through entity on underpayments of State or local income taxes and on indebtedness used to pay such taxes.

(ii) Example. A, an individual, owns stock of an S corporation. On its return for 1987, the corporation underreports its taxable income. Consequently, A underreports A's share of that income on A's tax return. In 1989, A pays the resulting deficiency plus interest to the Internal Revenue Service. The interest paid by A in 1989 on the tax deficiency is personal interest, notwithstanding the fact that the additional tax liability may have arisen out of income from a trade or business. The result would be the same if A's business had been operated as a sole proprietorship.

(iii) Certain other taxes. Personal interest does not include interest—

(A) Paid with respect to sales, excise and similar taxes that are incurred in connection with a trade or business or an investment activity;

(B) Paid by an S corporation with respect to an underpayment of income tax from a year in which the S corporation was a C corporation or with respect to an underpayment of the taxes imposed by sections 1374 or 1375, or similar provision of State law; or

(C) Paid by a transferee under section 6901 (tax liability resulting from transferred assets), or a similar provision of State law, with respect to a C corporation's underpayment of income tax.

(3) Cross references. See §1.163-8T for rules for determining the allocation of interest expense to various activities. See §1.163-10T for rules concerning qualified residence interest.

(c) Effective date—(1) In general. The provisions of this section are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986. In the case of any taxable year beginning in calendar years 1987 through 1990, the amount of personal interest that is nondeductible under this section is limited to the applicable percentage of such amount.

(2) Applicable percentage. The applicable percentages for taxable years beginning in 1987 through 1990 are as follows:

1987: 35 percent
1988: 60 percent
1990: 90 percent

(b) Treatment of qualified residence interest. Except as provided below, qualified residence interest is deductible under section 163(a). Qualified residence interest is not subject to limitation or otherwise taken into account under section 163(d) (limitation on investment interest), section 163(h)(1) (disallowance of deduction for personal interest), section 263A (capitalization and inclusion in inventory costs of certain expenses) or section 469 (limitation on losses from passive activities). Qualified residence interest is subject to the limitations imposed by section 263(g) (certain interest in the case of straddles), section 264(a)(2) and (4) (interest paid in connection with certain insurance), section 265(a)(2) (interest relating to tax-exempt income), section 266 (carrying charges), section 267(a)(2) (interest with respect to transactions between related taxpayers), section 465 (deductions limited to amount at risk), section 1277 (deferral of interest deduction allocable to accrued market discount), and section 1282 (deferral of interest deduction allocable to accrued discount).

(c) Determination of qualified residence interest when secured debt does not exceed adjusted purchase price—(1) In general. If the sum of the average balances for the taxable year of all secured debts on a qualified residence does not exceed the adjusted purchase price (determined as of the end of the taxable year) of the qualified residence, all of the interest paid or accrued during the taxable year with respect to the secured debts is qualified residence interest. If the sum of the average balances for the taxable year of all secured debts exceeds the adjusted purchase price of the qualified residences (determined as of the end of the taxable year), the taxpayer must use either the simplified method (see paragraph (d) of this section) or the exact method (see paragraph (e) of this section) to determine the amount of interest that is qualified residence interest.

Examples (1). T purchases a qualified residence in 1987 for $65,000. T pays $6,500 in cash and finances the remainder of the purchase with a mortgage of $58,500. In 1988, the average balance of the mortgage is $58,000. Because the average balance of the mortgage is less than the adjusted purchase price of the residence ($65,000), all of the interest paid or accrued during 1988 on the mortgage is qualified residence interest.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that T incurs a second mortgage on January 1, 1988, with an initial principal balance of $2,000. The average balance of the second mortgage in 1988 is $1,900. Because the sum of the average balance of the first and second mortgages ($59,900) is less than the adjusted purchase price of the residence ($65,000), all of the interest paid or accrued during 1988 on both the first and second mortgages is qualified residence interest.

Example (3). P borrows $50,000 on January 1, 1988 and secures the debt by a qualified residence. P pays the interest on the debt monthly, but makes no principal payments in 1988. There are no other debts secured by the residence during 1988. On December 31, 1988, the adjusted purchase price of the residence is $40,000. The average balance of the debt in 1988 is $50,000. Because the average balance of the debt exceeds the adjusted purchase price ($10,000), some of the interest on the debt is not qualified residence interest. The portion of the total interest that is qualified residence interest must be determined in accordance with the rules of paragraph (d) or paragraph (e) of this section.

(d) Determination of qualified residence interest when secured debt exceeds adjusted purchase price—Simplified method—(1) In general. Under the simplified method, the amount of qualified residence interest for the taxable year is equal to the total interest paid or accrued during the taxable year with respect to all secured debts multiplied by a fraction (not in excess of one), the numerator of which is the adjusted purchase price (determined as of the end of the taxable year) of the qualified residence and the denominator of which is the sum of the average balances of all secured debts.

(2) Treatment of interest paid or accrued on secured debt that is not qualified residence interest. Under the simplified method, the excess of the total interest paid or accrued during the taxable year with respect to all secured debts over the amount of qualified residence interest is personal interest.

(3) Example. R's principal residence has an adjusted purchase price on December 31, 1988, of $105,000. R has two debts secured by the residence, with the following average balances and interest payments:

Debt	Date Secured	Average Balance	Interest
Debt 1	June 1983	$80,000	$8,000
Debt 2	May 1987	$40,000	$4,800
Total		$120,000	$12,800

The amount of qualified residence interest is determined under the simplified method by multiplying the total interest $12,800) by a fraction (expressed as a decimal amount) equal to the adjusted purchase price ($105,000) of the residence divided by the combined average balances $120,000). For 1988, this fraction is equal to 0.875 ($105,000/$120,000). Therefore, $11,200 ($12,800 x 0.875) of the total interest is qualified residence interest. The remaining $1,600 in interest ($12,800-$11,200) is personal interest, even if (under the rules of §1.163-8T) such remaining interest would be allocated to some other category of interest.

(e) Determination of qualified residence interest when secured debt exceeds adjusted purchase price—Exact method—(1) In general. Under the exact method, the amount of qualified residence interest for the taxable year is determined on a debt-by-debt basis by computing the applicable debt limit for each secured debt and comparing each such applicable debt limit to the average balance of the corresponding debt. If, for the taxable year, the average balance of a secured debt does not exceed the applicable debt limit for that debt, all of the interest paid or accrued during the taxable year with respect to the debt is qualified residence interest. If the average balance of the secured debt exceeds the applicable debt limit for that debt, the amount of qualified residence interest with respect to the debt is determined by multiplying the interest paid or accrued with respect to the debt by a fraction, the numerator of which is the applicable debt limit for that debt and the denominator of which is the average balance of the debt.

(2) Determination of applicable debt limit. For each secured debt, the applicable debt limit for the taxable year is equal to

(i) The lesser of—

(A) The fair market value of the qualified residence as of the date the debt is first secured, and

(B) The adjusted purchase price of the qualified residence as of the end of the taxable year,

(ii) Reduced by the average balance of each debt previously secured by the qualified residence.

For purposes of paragraph (e)(2)(ii) of this section, the average balance of a debt shall be treated as not exceeding the applicable debt limit of such debt. See paragraph (n)(1)(i) of this section for the rule that increases the adjusted purchase price in paragraph (e)(2)(i)(B) of this section by the amount of any qualified indebtedness (certain medical and educational debt). See paragraph (f) of this section for special rules relating to the determination of the fair market value of the qualified residence.

(3) Example. (i) R's principal residence has an adjusted purchase price on December 31, 1988, of $105,000. R has two debts secured by the residence. The average balances and interest payments on each debt during 1988 and fair market value of the residence on the date each debt was secured are as follows:

Debt	Date Secured	Fair Market Value	Average Balance	Interest
Debt 1	June 1983	$100,000	$80,000	$8,000
Debt	May 1987	$140,000	$40,000	$4,800
Total			$120,000	$12,800

(ii) The amount of qualified residence interest for 1988 under the exact method is determined as follows. Because there are no debts previously secured by the residence, the applicable debt limit for Debt 1 is $100,000 (the lesser of the adjusted purchase price as of the end of the taxable year and the fair market value of the residence at the time the debt was secured). Because the average balance of Debt 1 ($80,000) does not exceed its applicable debt limit ($100,000), all of the interest paid on the debt during 1988 ($8,000) is qualified residence interest.

(iii). The applicable debt limit for Debt 2 is $25,000 ($105,000 (the lesser of $140,000 fair market value and $105,000 adjusted purchase price) reduced by $80,000 (the average balance of Debt 1)). Because the average balance of Debt 2 ($40,000) exceeds its applicable debt limit, the amount of qualified residence interest on Debt 2 is determined by multiplying the amount of interest paid on the debt during the year ($4,800) by a fraction equal to its applicable debt limit divided by its average balance ($25,000/$40,000 = 0.625). Accordingly, $3,000 ($4,800 x 0.625) of the interest paid in 1988 on Debt 2 is qualified residence interest. The character of the remaining $1,800 of interest paid on Debt 2 is determined under the rules of paragraph (e)(4) of this section.

(4) Treatment of interest paid or accrued with respect to secured debt that is not qualified residence interest—(i) In general. Under the exact method, the excess of the interest paid or accrued during the taxable year with respect to a secured debt over the amount of qualified residence interest with respect to the debt is allocated under the rules of §1.163-8T.

(ii) Example. T borrows $20,000 and the entire proceeds of the debt are disbursed by the lender to T's broker to purchase securities held for investment. T secures the debt with T's principal residence. In 1990, T pays $2,000 of interest on the debt. Assume that under the rules of paragraph (e) of this section, $1,500 of the interest is qualified residence interest. The remaining $500 in interest expense would be allocated under the rules of §1.163-8T. Section 1.163-T generally allocates debt and the associated interest expense) by tracing disbursements of the debt proceeds to specific expenditures. Accordingly, the $500 interest expense on the debt that is not qualified residence interest is investment interest subject to section 163(d).

(iii) Special rule if debt is allocated to more than one expenditure. If—

(A) The average balance of a secured debt exceeds the applicable debt limit for that debt, and

(B) Under the rules of §1.163-8T, interest paid or accrued with respect to such debt is allocated to more than one expenditure, the interest expense that is not qualified residence interest may be allocated among such expenditures, to the extent of such expenditures, in any manner selected by the taxpayer.

(iv) Example. (i) C borrows $60,000 secured by a qualified residence. C uses (within the meaning of §1.163-8T) $20,000 of the proceeds in C's trade or business, $20,000 to purchase stock held for investment and $20,000 for personal purposes. In 1990, C pays $6,000 in interest on the debt and, under the rules of §1.163-8T, $2,000 in interest is allocable to trade or business expenses, $2,000 to investment expenses and $2,000 to personal expenses. Assume that under paragraph (e) of this section, $2,500 of the interest is qualified residence interest and $3,500 of the interest is not qualified residence interest.

(ii) Under paragraph (e)(4)(iii) of this section, C may allocate up to $2,000 of the interest that is not qualified residence interest to any of the three categories of expenditures up to a total of $3,500 for all three categories. Therefore, for example, C may allocate $2,000 of such interest to C's trade or business and $1,500 of such interest to the purchase of stock.

(f) Special rules—(1) Special rules for personal property—(i) In general. If a qualified residence is personal property under State law (e.g., a boat or motorized vehicle)—

(A) For purposes of paragraphs (c)(1) and (d)(1) of this section, if the fair market value of the residence as of the date that any secured debt (outstanding during the taxable year) is first secured by the residence is less than the adjusted purchase price as of the end of the taxable year, the lowest such fair market value shall be substituted for the adjusted purchase price.

(B) For purposes of paragraphs (e)(2)(i)(A) and (f)(1)(i)(A) of this section, the fair market value of the residence as of the date the debt is first secured by the residence shall not exceed the fair market value as of any date on which the taxpayer borrows any additional amount with respect to the debt.

(ii) Example. D owns a recreational vehicle that is a qualified residence under paragraph (p)(4) of this section. The adjusted purchase price and fair market value of the recreational vehicle is $20,000 in 1989. In 1989, D establishes a line of credit secured by the recreational vehicle. As of June 1, 1992, the fair market value of the vehicle has decreased to $10,000. On that day, D borrows an additional amount on the debt by using the line of credit. Although under paragraphs (e)(2)(i) and (f)(1)(i)(A) of this section, fair market value is determined at the time the debt is first secured, under paragraph (f)(1)(i)(B) of this section, the fair market value is the lesser of that amount or the fair market value on the most recent date that D borrows any additional amount with respect to the line of credit. Therefore, the fair market value with respect to the debt is $10,000.

(2) Special rule for real property—(i) In general. For purposes of paragraph (e)(2)(i)(A) of this section, the fair market value of a qualified residence that is real property under State law is presumed irrebuttably to be not less than the adjusted purchase price of the residence as of the last day of the taxable year.

(ii) Example. (i) C purchases a residence on August 11, 1987, for $50,000, incurring a first mortgage. The residence is real property under State law. During 1987, C makes $10,000 in home improvements. Accordingly, the adjusted purchase price of the residence as of December 31, 1988, is $60,000. C incurs a second mortgage on May 19, 1988, as of which time the fair market value of the value of the residence is $55,000.

(ii) For purposes of determining the applicable debt limit for each debt, the fair market value of the residence is generally determined as of the time the debt is first secured. Accordingly, the fair market value would be $50,000 and $55,000 with respect to the first and second mortgage, respectively. Under the special rule of paragraph (f)(2)(i) of this section, however, the fair market value with respect to both debts in 1988 is $60,000, the adjusted purchase price on December 31, 1988.

(g) Selection of method. For any taxable year, a taxpayer may use the simplified method (described in paragraph (d) of this section) or the exact method (described in paragraph (e) of this section) by completing the appropriate portion of Form 8598. A taxpayer with two qualified residences may use the simplified method for one residence and the exact method for the other residence.

(h) Average balance—(1) Average balance defined. For purposes of this section, the term "average balance" means the amount determined under this paragraph (h). A taxpayer is not required to use the same method to determine the average balance of all secured debts during a taxable year or of any particular secured debt from one year to the next.

(2) Average balance reported by lender. If a lender that is subject to section 6050H (returns relating to mortgage interest received in trade or business from individuals) reports the average balance of a secured debt on Form 1098, the taxpayer may use the average balance so reported.

(3) Average balance computed on a daily basis—(i) In general. The average balance may be determined by—

(A) Adding the outstanding balance of a debt on each day during the taxable year that the debt is secured by a qualified residence, and

best copy available

(B) Dividing the sum by the number of days during the taxable year that the residence is a qualified residence.

(ii) Example. Taxpayer A incurs a debt of $10,000 on September 1, 1989, securing the debt with A's principal residence. The residence is A's principal residence during the entire taxable year. A pays current interest on the debt monthly, but makes no principal payments. The debt is, therefore, outstanding for 122 days with a balance each day of $10,000. The residence is a qualified residence for 365 days. The average balance of the debt for 1989 is $3,342 (122 × $10,000/365).

(4) Average balance computed using the interest rate—(i) In general. If all accrued interest on a secured debt is paid at least monthly, the average balance of the secured debt may be determined by dividing the interest paid or accrued during the taxable year while the debt is secured by a qualified residence by the annual interest rate on the debt. If the interest rate on a debt varies during the taxable year, the lowest annual interest rate that applies to the debt during the taxable year must be used for purposes of this paragraph (h)(4). If the residence securing the debt is a qualified residence for less than the entire taxable year, the average balance of any secured debt may be determined by dividing the average balance determined under the preceding sentence by the percentage of the taxable year that the debt is secured by a qualified residence.

(ii) Points and prepaid interest. For purposes of paragraph (h)(4)(i) of this section, the amount of interest paid during the taxable year does not include any amount paid as points and includes prepaid interest only in the year accrued.

(iii) Examples—Example (1). B has a line of credit secured by a qualified residence for the entire taxable year. The interest rate on the debt is 10 percent throughout the taxable year. The principal balance on the debt changes throughout the year. B pays the accrued interest on the debt monthly. B pays $2,500 in interest on the debt during the taxable year. The average balance of the debt ($25,000) may be computed by dividing the total interest paid by the interest rate ($25,000 = $2,500/0.10).

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example 1, except that the residence is a qualified residence, and the debt is outstanding, for only one-half of the taxable year and B pays only $1,250 in interest on the debt during the taxable year. The average balance of the debt may be computed by first dividing the total interest paid by the interest rate ($12,500 = $1,250/0.10). Second, because the residence is not a qualified residence for the entire taxable year, the average balance must be determined by dividing this amount ($12,500) by the portion of the year that the residence is qualified (0.50). The average balance is therefore $25,000 ($12,500/0.50).

(5) Average balance computed using average of beginning and ending balances—(i) In general. If—

(A) A debt requires level payments at fixed equal intervals (e.g., monthly, quarterly) no less often than semi-annually during the taxable year,

(B) The taxpayer prepays no more than one month's principal on the debt during the taxable year, and the average balance of the debt may be determined by adding the principal balance as of the first day of the taxable year that the debt is secured by the qualified residence and the principal balance as of the last day of the taxable year that the debt is secured by the qualified residence and dividing the sum by 2. If the debt is secured by a qualified residence for less than the entire period during the taxable year that the residence is a qualified residence, the average balance may be determined by multiplying the average balance determined under the preceding sentence by a fraction, the numerator of which is the number of days during the taxable year that the debt is secured by the qualified residence and the denominator of which is the number of days during the taxable year that the residence is a qualified residence. For purposes of this paragraph (h)(5)(i), the determination of whether payments are level shall disregard the fact that the amount of the payments may be adjusted from time to time to take into account changes in the applicable interest rate.

(ii) Example. C borrows $10,000 in 1988, securing the debt with a second mortgage on a principal residence. The terms of the loan require C to make equal monthly payments of principal and interest so as to amortize the entire loan balance over 20 years. The balance of the debt is $9,652 on January 1, 1990, and is $9,450 on December 31, 1990. The average balance of the debt during 1990 may be computed as follows:

Balance on first day of the year:	$9,652
Balance on last day of the year:	$9,450
Average balance: $9,652 + $9,450 =	$9,551

(6) Highest principal balance. The average balance of a debt may be determined by taking the highest principal balance of the debt during the taxable year.

(7) Other methods provided by the Commissioner. The average balance may be determined using any other method provided by the Commissioner by form, publication, revenue ruling, or revenue procedure. Such methods may include methods similar to (but with restrictions different from) those provided in paragraph (h) of this section.

(8) Anti-abuse rule. If, as a result of the determination of the average balance of a debt using any of the methods specified in paragraphs (h)(4), (5), or (6) of this section, there is a significant overstatement of the amount of qualified residence interest and a principal purpose of the pattern of payments and borrowing on the debt is to cause the amount of such qualified residence interest to be overstated, the district director may redetermine the average balance using the method specified under paragraph (h)(3) of this section.

(j) Determination of interest paid or accrued during the taxable year—(1) In general. For purposes of determining the amount of qualified residence interest with respect to a secured debt, the amount of interst paid or accrued during the taxable year includes only interest paid or accrued while the debt is secured by a qualified residence.

(2) Special rules for cash-basis taxpayers—(i) Points deductible in year paid under section 461(g)(2). If points described in section 461(g)(2) (certain points paid in respect of debt incurred in connection with the purchase or improvement of a principal residence) are paid with respect to a debt, the amount of such points is qualified residence interest.

(ii) Points and other prepaid interest described in section 461(g)(1). The amount of points or other prepaid interest charged to capital account under section 461(g)(1) (prepaid interest) that is qualified residence interest shall be determined under the rules of paragraphs (c) through (e) of this section in the same manner as any other interest paid with respect to the debt in the taxable year to which such payments are allocable under section 461(g)(1).

Example (1). T designates a vacation home as a qualified residence as of October 1, 1987. The home is encumbered by a mortgage during the entire taxable year. For purposes of determining the amount of qualified residence interst for 1987, T may take into account the interest paid or accrued on the secured debt from October 1, 1987, through December 31, 1987.

Example (2). R purchases a principal residence on June 17, 1987. As part of the purchase price, R obtains a conventional 30-year mortgage, secured by the residence. At closing, R pays 2 1/2 points on the mortgage and interest on the mortgage for the period June 17, 1987 through June 30, 1987. The points are actually paid by R and are not merely withheld from the loan proceeds. R incurs no additional secured debt during 1987. Assuming that the points satisfy the requirements of section 461(g)(2), the entire amount of points and the interest paid at closing are qualified residence interest.

Example (3). (i) On July 1, 1987, W borrows $120,000 to purchase a residence to use as a vacation home. W secures the debt with the residence. W pays 2 points, or $2,400. The debt has a term of 10 years and requires monthly payments of principal and interest. W is permitted to amortize the points at the rate of $20 per month over 120 months. W elects to treat the residence as a second residence. W has no other debt secured by the residence. The average balance of the debt in each taxable year is less than the adjusted purchase price of the residence. W sells the residence on June 30, 1990, and pays off the remaining balance of the debt.

1987:	$120	= $20 × 6 months;
1988:	$240	= $20 × 12 months;
1989:	$120	= $20 × 6 months.

All of the interest paid on the debt, including the allocable points, is qualified residence interest. Upon repaying the debt, the remaining $1,920 ($2,400 − $480) in unamortized points is treated as interest paid in 1990 and, because the average balance of the secured debt in 1990 is less than the adjusted purchase price, is also qualified residence interest.

(k) Determination of adjusted purchase price and fair market value—(i) Adjusted purchase price—(i) In general. For purposes of this section, the adjusted purchase price of a qualified residence is equal to the taxpayer's basis in the residence as initially determined under section 1012 or other applicable sections of the Internal Revenue Code, increased by the cost of any improvements to the residence that have been added to the taxpayer's basis in the residence under section 1016(a)(1). Any other adjustments to basis, including those required under section 1033(b) (involuntary conversions), and 1034(e) (rollover of gain on sale of principal residence) are disregarded in determining the taxpayer's adjusted purchase price. If, for example, a taxpayer's second residence is rented for a portion of the year and its basis is reduced by depreciation allowed in connection with the rental use of the property, the amount of the taxpayer's adjusted purchase price in the residence is not reduced. See paragraph (m) of this section for a rule that treats the sum of the grandfathered amounts of all secured debts as the adjusted purchase price of the residence.

(ii) Adjusted purchase price of a qualified residence acquired incident to divorce. [Reserved.]

(iii) Examples—Example (1). X purchases a residence for $120,000. X's basis, as determined under section 1012, is the cost of the property, or $120,000. Accordingly, the adjusted purchase price of the residence is initially $120,000.

Example (2). Y owns a principal residence that has a basis of $30,000. Y sells the residence for $100,000 and purchases a new principal residence for a $120,000. Under section 1034, Y does not recognize gain on the sale of the former residence. Under section 1034(e), Y's basis in the new residence is reduced by the amount of gain not recognized. Therefore, under section 1034(e), Y's basis in the new residence is $50,000 ($120,000 − $70,000). For purposes of section 163(h), however, the adjusted purchase price of the residence is not adjusted under section 1034(e). Therefore, the adjusted purchase price of the residence is initially $120,000.

Example (3). Z acquires a residence by gift. The donor's basis in the residence was $30,000. Z's basis in the residence, determined under section 1015, is $30,000. Accordingly, the adjusted purchase price of the residence is initially $30,000.

(2) Fair market value—(i) In general. For purposes of this section, the fair market value of a qualified residence on any date is the fair market value of the taxpayer's interest in the residence on such date. In addition, the fair market value determined under this paragraph (k)(2)(i) shall be determined by taking into account the cost of improvements to the residence reasonably expected to be made with the proceeds of the debt.

(ii) Example. In 1988, the adjusted purchase price of P's second residence is $65,000 and the fair market value of the residence is $70,000. At that time, P incurs an additional debt of $10,000, the proceeds of which P reasonably expects to use to add two bedrooms to the residence. Because the fair market value is determined by taking into account the cost of improvements to the residence that are reasonably expected to be made with the proceeds of the debt, the fair market value of the residence with respect to the debt incurred in 1988 is $80,000 ($70,000 + $10,000).

(3) Allocation of adjusted purchase price and fair market value. If a property includes both a qualified residence and other property, the adjusted purchase price and the fair market value of such property must be allocated between the qualified residence and the other property. See paragraph (p)(4) of this section for rules governing such an allocation.

(m) Grandfathered amount—(1) Substitution for adjusted purchase price. If, for the taxable year, the sum of the grandfathered amounts, if any, of all secured debts exceeds the adjusted purchase price of the qualified residence, such sum may be treated as the adjusted purchase price of the residence underparagraphs (c), (d) and (e) of this section.

(2) Determination of grandfathered amount—(i) In general. For any taxable year, the grandfathered amount of any secured debt that was incurred on or before August 16, 1986, and was secured by the residence continuously from August 16, 1986, through the end of the taxable year, is the average balance of the debt for the taxable year. A secured debt that was not incurred and secured on or before August 16, 1986, has no grandfathered amount.

(ii) Special rule for lines of credit and certain other debt. If, with respect to a debt described in paragraph (m)(2)(i), a taxpayer has borrowed any additional amounts after August 16, 1986, the grandfathered amount of such debt is equal to the lesser of—

(A) The average balance of the debt for the taxable year, or

(B) The principal balance of the debt as of August 16, 1986, reduced (but not below zero) by all principal payments after August 16, 1986, and before the first day of the current taxable year.

For purposes of this paragraph (m)(2)(ii), a taxpayer shall not be considered to have borrowed any additional amount with respect to a debt merely because accrued interest is added to the principal balance of the debt, so long as such accrued interest is paid by the taxpayer no less often than quarterly.

(iii) Fair market value limitation. The grandfathered amount of any debt for any taxable year may not exceed the fair market value of the residence on August 16, 1986, reduced by the principal balance on that day of all previously secured debt.

(iv) Examples—Example (1). As of August 16, 1986, T has one debt secured by T's principal residence. The debt is a conventional self-amortizing mortgage and, on August 16, 1986, it has an outstanding principal balance of $75,000. In 1987, the average balance of the mortgage is $73,000. The adjusted purchase price of the residence as of the end of 1987 is $50,000. Because the mortgage was incurred and secured on or before August 16, 1986 and T has not borrowed any additional amounts with respect to the mortgage, the grandfathered amount is the average balance, $73,000. Because the grandfathered amount exceeds the adjusted purchase price ($50,000), T may treat the grandfathered amount as the adjusted purchase price in determining the amount of qualified residence interest.

Example (2). (i) The facts are the same as in example (1), except that in May 1986, T also obtains a home equity line of credit that, on August 16, 1986, has a principal balance of $40,000. In November 1986, T borrows an additional $10,000 on the home equity line, increasing the balance to $50,000. In December 1986, T repays $5,000 of principal on the home equity line. The average balance of the home equity line in 1987 is $45,000.

(ii) Because T has borrowed additional amounts on the line of credit after August 16, 1986, the grandfathered amount for that debt must be determined under the rules of paragraph (m)(2)(ii) of this section. Accordingly, the grandfathered amount for the line of credit is equal to the lesser of $45,000, the average balance of the debt in 1987, and $35,000, the principal balance on August 16, 1986, reduced by all principal payments between August 17, 1986, and December 31, 1986 ($40,000 − $5,000). The sum of the grandfathered amounts with respect to the residence is $108,000 ($73,000 + $35,000). Because the sum of the grandfathered amounts exceeds the adjusted purchase price ($50,000), T may treat the sum as the adjusted purchase price in determining the qualified residence interest for 1987.

(3) Refinancing of grandfathered debt—(i) In general. A debt incurred and secured on or before August 16, 1986, is refinanced if some or all of the outstanding balance of such a debt (the "original debt") is repaid out of the proceeds of a second debt secured by the same qualified residence (the "replacement debt"). In the case of a refinancing, the replacement debt is treated as a debt incurred and secured on or before August 16, 1986, and the grandfathered amount of such debt is the amount (but not less than zero) determined pursuant to paragraph (m)(3)(ii) of this section.

(ii) Determination of grandfathered amount—(a) Exact refinancing. If—

(1) The entire proceeds of a replacement debt are used to refinance one or more original debts, and

(2) The taxpayer has not borrowed any additional amounts after August 16, 1986, with respect to the original debt or debts, the grandfathered amount of the replacement debt is the average balance of the replacement debt. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the fact that proceeds of a replacement debt are used to pay costs of obtaining the replacement debt (including points or other closing costs) shall be disregarded in determining whether the entire proceeds of the replacement debt have been used to refinance one or more original debts.

(B) Refinancing other than exact refinancings—(1) Year of refinancing. In the taxable year in which an original debt is refinanced, the grandfathered amount of the original and replacement debts is equal to the lesser of—

(i) The sum of the average balances of the original debt and the replacement debt, and

(ii) The principal balance of the original debt as of August 16, 1986, reduced by all principal payments on the original debt after August 16, 1986, and before the first day of the current taxable year.

(2) In subsequent years. In any taxable year after the taxable year in which an original debt is refinanced, the grandfathered amount of the replacement debt is equal to the least of—

(i) The average balance of the replacement debt for the taxable year,

(ii) The amount of the replacement debt used to repay the principal balance of the original debt, reduced by all principal payments on the replacement debt after the date of the refinancing and before the first day of the current taxable year, or

(iii) The principal balance of the original debt on August 16, 1986, reduced by all principal payments on the original debt after August 16, 1986, and before the date of the refinancing, and further reduced by all principal payments on the replacement debt after the date of the refinancing and before the first day of the current taxable year.

(C) Example—(i) Facts. On August 16, 1986, T has a single debt secured by a principal residence with a balance of $150,000. On July 1, 1988, T refinances the debt, which still has a principal balance of $150,000, with a new secured debt. The principal balance of the replacement debt throughout 1988 and 1989 is $150,000. The adjusted purchase price of the residence is $100,000 through 1987, 1988 and 1989. The average balance of the original debt was $150,000 in 1987 and $75,000 in 1988. The average balance of the replacement debt is $75,000 in 1988 and $150,000 in 1989.

(ii) Grandfathered amount in 1987. The original debt was incurred and secured on or before August 16, 1986 and T has not borrowed any additional amounts with respect to the debt. Therefore, its grandfathered amount in 1987 is its average balance ($150,000). This amount is treated as the adjusted purchase price for 1987 and all of the interest paid on the debt is qualified residence interest.

(iii) Grandfathered amount in 1988. Because the replacement debt was used to refinance a debt incurred and secured on or before August 16, 1986, the replacement debt is treated as a grandfathered debt. Because all of the proceeds of the replacement debt were used in the refinancing and because no amounts have been borrowed after August 16, 1986, on the original debt, the grandfathered amount for the original debt is its average balance ($75,000) and the grandfathered amount for the replacement debt is its average balance ($75,000). Since the sum of the grandfathered amounts ($150,000) exceeds the adjusted purchase price of the residence, the sum of the grandfathered amounts may be substituted for the adjusted purchase price for 1988 and all of the interest paid on the debt is qualified residence interest.

(iv) Grandfathered amount in 1989. The grandfathered amount for the replacement debt is its average balance ($150,000). This amount is treated as the adjusted purchase price for 1989 and all of the interest paid on the mortgage is qualified residence interest.

(4) Limitation on term of grandfathered debt—(i) In general. An original debt or replacement debt shall not have any grandfathered amount in any taxable year that begins after the date, as determined on August 16, 1986, that the original debt was required to be repaid in full (the "maturity date"). If a replacement debt is used to refinance more than one original debt, the maturity date is determined by reference to the original debt that, as of August 16, 1986, had the latest maturity date.

(ii) Special rule for nonamortizing debt. If an original debt was actually incurred and secured on or before August 16, 1986, and if as of such date the terms of such debt did not require the amortization of its principal over its original term, the maturity date of the replacement debt is the earlier of the maturity date of the replacement debt or the date 30 years after the date the original debt is first refinanced.

(iii) Example. C incurs a debt on May 10, 1986, the final payment of which is due May 1, 2006. C incurs a second debt on August 11, 1990, with a term of 20 years and uses the proceeds of the second debt to refinance the first debt. Because, under paragraph (m)(4)(i) of this section, a replacement debt will not have any grandfathered amount in any taxable year that begins after the maturity date of the original debt (May 1, 2006), the second debt has no grandfathered amount in any taxable year after 2006.

(n) Qualified indebtedness (secured debt used for medical and educational purposes—(1) In general—(i) Treatment of qualified indebtedness. The amount of any qualified indebtedness resulting from a secured debt may be added to the adjusted purchase price under paragraph (e)(2)(i)(B) of this section to determine the applicable debt limit for that secured debt and any other debt subsequently secured by the qualified residence.

(ii) Determination of amount of qualified indebtedness. If, as of the end of the taxable year (or the last day in the taxable year that the debt is secured), at least 90 percent of the proceeds of a secured debt are used (within the meaning of paragraph (n)(2) of this section) to pay for qualified medical and educational expenses (within the meaning of paragraphs (n)(3) and (n)(4) of this section), the amount of qualified indebtedness resulting from that debt for the taxable year is equal to the average balance of such debt for the taxable year.

(iii) Determination of amount of qualified indebtedness for mixed-use debt. If, as of the end of the taxable year (or the last day in the taxable year that the debt is secured), more than ten percent of the proceeds of a secured debt are used to pay for expenses other than qualified medical and educational expenses, the amount of qualified indebtedness resulting from that debt for the taxable year shall equal the lesser of—

(A) The average balance of the debt, or

(B) The amount of the proceeds of the debt used to pay for qualified medical and educational expenses through the end of the taxable year, reduced by any principal payments on the debt before the first day of the current taxable year.

(iv) Example. (i) C incurs a $10,000 debt on April 20, 1987, which is secured on that date by C's principal residence. C immediately uses (within the meaning of paragraph (n)(2) of this section) $4,000 of the proceeds of the debt to pay for a qualified medical expense. C makes no principal payments on the debt during 1987. During 1988 and 1989, C makes principal payments of $1,000 per year. The average balance of the debt during 1988 is $9,500 and the average balance during 1989 is $8,500.

(ii) Under paragraph (n)(1)(iii) of this section, C determines the amount of qualified indebtedness for 1988 as follows:

Average balance—		$9,500
Amount of debt used to pay for qualified medical expenses—	$4,000
Less payments of principal before 1988—	$0
Net qualified expenses—		$4,000

The amount of qualified indebtedness for 1988 is, therefore, $4,000 (lesser of $9,500 average balance or $4,000 net qualified expenses). This amount may be added to the adjusted purchase price of C's principal residence under paragraph (e)(2)(i)(B) of this section for purposes of computing the applicable debt limit for this debt and any other debt subsequently secured by the principal residence.

(iii) C determines the amount of qualified indebtedness for 1989 as follows:

Average balance—		$8,500
Amount of debt used to pay qualified medical expenses—	$4,000
Less payments of principal before 1989—	$1,000
Net qualified expenses—		$3,000

The amount of qualified indebtedness for 1989 is, therefore, $3,000 (lesser of $8,500 average balance or $3,000 net qualified expense).

(v) Prevention of double counting in year of refinancing—(A) In general. A debt used to pay for qualified medical or educational expenses is refinanced if some or all of the outstanding balance of the debt (the "original debt") is repaid out of the proceeds of a second debt (the "replacement debt"). If, in the year of a refinancing, the combined qualified indebtedness of the originial debt and the replacement debt exceeds the combined qualified expenses of such debts, the amount of qualified indebtedness for each such debt shall be determined by multiplying the amount of qualified indebtedness for each such debt by a fraction, the numerator of which is the combined qualified expenses and the denominator of which is the combined qualified indebtedness.

(B) Definitions. For purposes of paragraph (n)(1)(v)(A) of this section—

(1) The term "combined qualified indebtedness" means the sum of the qualified indebtedness (determined without regard to paragraph (n)(1)(v) of this section) for the original debt and the replacement debt.

(2) The term "combined qualified expenses" means the amount of the proceeds of the original debt used to pay for qualified medical and educational expenses through the end of the current taxable year, reduced by any principal payments on the debt before the first day of the current taxable year, and increased by the amount, if any, of the proceeds of the replacement debt used to pay such expenses through the end of the current taxable year other than as part of the refinancing.

(C) Example. (i) On August 11, 1987, C incurs a $8,000 debt secured by a principal residence. C uses (within the meaning of paragraph (n)(2)(i) of this section) $5,000 of the proceeds of the debt to pay for qualified educational expenses. C makes no principal payments on the debt. On July 1, 1988, C incurs a new debt in the amount of $8,000 secured by C's principal residence and uses all of the proceeds of the new debt to repay the original debt. Under paragraph (n)(2)(ii) of this section $5,000 of the new debt is treated as being used to pay for qualified educational expenses. C makes no principal payments (other than the refinancing) during 1987 or 1988 on either debt and pays all accrued interest monthly. The average balance of each debt in 1988 is $4,000.

(ii) Under paragraph (n)(1)(iii) of this section, the amount of qualified indebtedness for 1988 with respect to the original debt is $4,000 (the lesser of its average balance ($4,000) and the amount of the debt used to pay for qualified medical and educational expenses ($5,000)). Similarly, the amount of qualified indebtedness for 1988 with respect to the replacement debt is also $4,000. Both debts, however, are subject in 1988 to the limitation in paragraph (n)(1)(v)(A) of this section. The combined qualified indebtedness, determined without regard to the limitation, is $8,000 ($4,000 of qualified indebtedness from each debt). The combined qualified expenses are $5,000 ($5,000 from the original debt and $0 from the replacement debt). The amount of qualified indebtedness from each debt must, therefore, be reduced by a fraction, the numerator of which is $5,000 (the combined qualified expenses) and the denominator of which is $8,000 (the combined qualified indebtedness). After application of the limitation, the amount of qualified indebtedness for the original debt is $2,500 ($4,000 x 5/8). Similarly, the amount of qualified indebtedness for the replacement debt is $2,500. Note that the total qualified indebtedness for both the original and the replacement debt is $5,000 ($2,500 + $2,500). Therefore, C is entitled to the same amount of qualified indebtedness as C would have been entitled to if C had not refinanced the debt.

(vi) Special rule for principal payments in excess of qualified expenses. For purposes of paragraph (n)(1)(iii)(B), (n)(1)(v)(B)(2) and (n)(2)(ii) of this section, a principal payment is taken into account only to the extent that the payment, when added to all prior payments, does not exceed the amount used on or before the date of the payment to pay for qualified medical and educational expenses.

(2) Debt used to pay for qualified medical or educational expenses—(i) In general. For purposes of this section, the proceeds of a debt are used to pay for qualified medical or educational expenses to the extent that—

(A) The taxpayer pays qualified medical or educational expenses within 90 days before or after the date that amounts are actually borrowed with respect to the debt, the proceeds of the debt are not directly allocable to another expense under §1.163-8T(c)(3) (allocation of debt; proceeds not disbursed to borrower) and the proceeds of any other debt are not allocable to the medical or educational expenses under §1.163-8T(c)(3), or

(B) The proceeds of the debt are otherwise allocated to such expenditures under §1.163-8T.

(ii) Special rule for refinancings. For purposes of this section, the proceeds of a debt are used to pay for qualified medical and educational expenses to the extent that the proceeds of the debt are allocated under §1.163-8T to the repayment of another debt (the "original debt"), but only to the extent of the amount of the original debt used to pay for qualified medical and educational expenses, reduced by any principal payments on such debt up to the time of the refinancing.

(iii) Other special rules. The following special rules apply for purposes of this section.

(A) Proceeds of a debt are used to pay for qualified medical or educational expenses as of the later of the taxable year in which such proceeds are borrowed or the taxable year in which such expenses are paid.

(B) The amount of debt which may be treated as being used to pay for qualified medical or educational expenses may not exceed the amount of such expenses.

(C) Proceeds of a debt may not be treated as being used to pay for qualified medical or educational expenses to the extent that:

(1) The proceeds have been repaid as of the time the expense is paid;

(2) The proceeds are actually borrowed before August 17, 1986; or

(3) The medical or educational expenses are paid before August 17, 1986.

(iv) Examples—Example (1). A pays a $5,000 qualified educational expense from a checking account that A maintains at Bank 1 on November 9, 1987. On January 1, 1988, A incurs a $20,000 debt that is secured by A's residence and places the proceeds of the debt in a savings account that A also maintains at Bank 1. A pays another $5,000 qualified educational expense on March 15 from a checking account that A maintains at Bank 2. Under paragraph (n)(2) of this section, the debt proceeds are used to pay for both educational expenses, regardless of other deposits to, or expenditures from, the accounts, because both expenditures are made within 90 days before or after the debt was incurred.

Example (2). B pays a $5,000 qualified educational expense from a checking account on November 1, 1987. On November 30, 1987, B incurs a debt secured by B's residence, and the lender disburses the debt proceeds directly to a person who sells B a new car. Although the educational expense is paid within 90 days of the date the debt is incurred, the proceeds of the debt are not used to pay for the educational expense because the proceeds are directly allocable to the purchase of the new car under §1.163-8T(c)(3).

Example (3). On November 1, 1987, C borrows $5,000 from C's college. The proceeds of this debt are not disbursed to C, but rather are used to pay tuition fees for C's attendance at the college. On November 30, 1987, C incurs a second debt and secures the debt by C's residence. Although the $5,000 educational expense is paid within 90 days before the second debt is incurred, the proceeds of the second debt are not used to pay for the educational expense, because the proceeds of the first debt are directly allocable to the educational expense under §1.163-8T(c)(3).

Example (4). On January 1, 1988, D incurs a $20,000 debt secured by a qualified residence. D places the proceeds of the debt in a separate account (i.e., the proceeds of the debt are the only deposit in the account). D makes payments of $5,000 each for qualified educational expenses on September 1, 1988, September 1, 1989, September 1, 1990, and September 1, 1991. Because the debt proceeds are allocated to educational expenses as of the date the expenses are paid, under the rules of §1.163-8T(c)(4), the following amounts of the debt proceeds are used to pay for qualified educational expenses as of the end of each year:

1991: $20,000

Example (5). During 1987 E incurs a $10,000 debt secured by a principal residence. E uses (within the meaning of paragraph (n)(2)(i) of this section) all of the proceeds of the debt to pay for qualified educational expenses. On August 20, 1988, at which time the balance of the debt is $9,500, E incurs a new debt in the amount of $9,500 secured by E's principal residence and uses all of the proceeds of the new debt to repay the original debt. Under paragraph (n)(2)(ii) of this section, all of the proceeds of the new debt are used to pay for qualified educational expenses.

(3) Qualified medical expenses. Qualified medical expenses are amounts that are paid for medical care (within the meaning of section 213(d)(1)(A) and (B)) for the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse, or a dependent of the taxpayer (within the meaning of section 152), and that are not compensated for by insurance or otherwise.

(4) Qualified educational expenses. Qualified educational expenses are amounts that are paid for tuition, fees, books, supplies and equipment required for enrollment, attendance or courses of instruction at an educational organization described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) and for any reasonable living expenses while away from home while in attendance at such an institution, for the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse or a dependent of the taxpayer (within the meaning of section 152) and that are not reimbursed by scholarship or otherwise.

(o) Secured debt—(1) In general. For purposes of this section, the term "secured debt" means a debt that is on the security of any instrument (such as a mortgage, deed of trust, or land contract)—

(i) That makes the interest of the debtor in the qualified residence specific security for the payment of the debt,

(ii) Under which, in the event of default, the residence could be subjected to the satisfaction of the debt with the same priority as a mortgage or deed of trust in the jurisdiction in which the property is situated, and

(iii) That is recorded, where permitted, or is otherwise perfected in accordance with applicable State law.

A debt will not be considered to be secured by a qualified residence if it is secured solely by virtue of a lien upon the general assets of the taxpayer or by a security interest, such as a mechanic's lien or judgment lien, that attaches to the property without the consent of the debtor.

(2) Special rule for debt in certain States. Debt will not fail to be treated as secured solely because, under an applicable State or local homestead law or other debtor protection law in effect on August 16, 1986, the security interest is ineffective or the enforceability of the security interest is restricted.

(3) Time at which debt is treated as secured. For purposes of this section, a debt is treated as secured as of the date on which each of the requirements of paragraph (o)(1) of this section are satisfied, regardless of when amounts are actually borrowed with respect to the debt. For purposes of this paragraph (o)(3), if the instrument is recorded within a commercially reasonable time after the security interest is granted, the instrument will be treated as recorded on the date that the security interest was granted.

(4) Partially secured debt (i) In general. If the security interest is limited to a prescribed maximum amount or portion of the residence, and the average balance of the debt exceeds such amount or the value of such portion, such excess shall not be treated as secured debt for purposes of this section.

(ii) Example. T borrows $80,000 on January 1, 1991. T secures the debt with a principal residence. The security in the residence for the debt, however, is limited to $20,000. T pays $8,000 in interest on the debt in 1991 and the average balance of the debt in that year is $80,000. Because the average balance of the debt exceeds the maximum amount of the security interest, such excess is not treated as secured debt. Therefore, for purposes of applying the limitation on qualified residence interest, the average balance of the secured debt is $20,000 (the maximum amount of the security interest) and the interest paid or accrued on the secured debt is $2,000 (the total interest paid on the debt multiplied by the ratio of the average balance of the secured debt ($20,000) and the average balance of the total debt ($80,000)).

(5) Election to treat debt as not secured by a qualified residence—(i) In general. For purposes of this section, a taxpayer may elect to treat any debt that is secured by a qualified residence as not secured by the qualified residence. An election made under this paragraph shall be effective for the taxable year for which the election is made and for all subsequent taxable years unless revoked with the consent of the Commissioner.

(ii) Example. T owns a principal residence with a fair market value of $75,000 and an adjusted purchase price of $40,000. In 1988, debt A, the proceeds of which were used to purchase the residence, has an average balance of $15,000. The proceeds of debt B, which is secured by a second mortgage on the property, are allocable to T's trade or business under §1.163-8T and has an average balance of $25,000. In 1988, T incurs debt C, which is also secured by T's principal residence and which has an average balance in 1988 of $5,000. In the absence of an election to treat debt B as unsecured, the applicable debt limit for debt C in 1988 under paragraph (e) of this section would be zero dollars ($40,000 − $15,000 − $25,000) and none of the interest paid on debt C would be qualified residence interest. If, however, T makes or has previously made an election pursuant to paragraph (o)(5)(i) of this section to treat debt B as not secured by the residence, the applicable debt limit for debt C would be $25,000 ($40,000 − $15,000), and all of the interest paid on debt C during the taxable year would be qualified residence interest. Since the proceeds of Debt B are allocable to T's trade or business under §1.163-8T, interest on Debt B may be deductible under other sections of the Internal Revenue Code.

(iii) Allocation of debt secured by two qualified residences. [Reserved.]

(p) Definition of qualified residence—(1) In general. The term "qualified residence" means the taxpayer's principal residence (as defined in paragraph (p)(2) of this section), or the taxpayer's second residence (as defined in paragraph (p)(3) of this section).

(2) Principal residence. The term "principal residence" means the taxpayer's principal residence within the meaning of section 1034. For purposes of this section, a taxpayer cannot have more than one principal residence at any one time.

(3) Second residence—(i) In general. The term "second residence" means—

(A) A residence within the meaning of paragraph (p)(3)(ii) of this section,

(B) That the taxpayer uses as a residence within the meaning of paragraph (p)(3)(iii) of this section, and

(C) That the taxpayer elects to treat as a second residence pursuant to paragraph (p)(3)(iv) of this section.

A taxpayer cannot have more than one second residence at any time.

(ii) Definition of residence. Whether property is a residence shall be determined based on all the facts and circumstances, including the good faith of the taxpayer. A residence generally includes a house, condominium, mobile home, boat, or house trailer, that contains sleeping space and toilet and cooking facilities. A residence does not include personal property, such as furniture or a television, that, in accordance with the applicable local law, is not a fixture.

(iii) Use as a residence—If a residence is rented at any time during the taxable year, it is considered to be used as a residence only if the taxpayer uses it during the taxable year as a residence within the meaning of section 280A(d). If a residence is not rented at any time during the taxable year, it shall be considered to be used as a residence. For purposes of the preceding sentence, a residence will be deemed to be rented during any period that the taxpayer holds the residence out for rental or resale or repairs or renovates the residence with the intention of holding it out for rental or resale.

(iv) Election of second residence. A taxpayer may elect a different residence (other than the taxpayer's principal residence) to be the taxpayer's second residence for each taxable year. A taxpayer may not elect different residences as second residences at different times of the same taxable year except as provided below—

(A) If the taxpayer acquires a new residence during the taxable year, the taxpayer may elect the new residence as the taxpayer's second residence as of the date acquired;

(B) If property that was the taxpayer's principal residence during the taxable year ceases to qualify as the taxpayer's principal residence, the taxpayer may elect that property as the taxpayer's second residence as of the date that the property ceases to be the taxpayer's principal residence; or

(C) If property that was the taxpayer's second residence is sold during the taxable year or becomes the taxpayer's principal residence, the taxpayer may elect a new second residence as of such day.

(4) Allocations between residence and other property—(i) In general. For purposes of this section, the adjusted purchase price and fair market value of property must be allocated between the portion of the property that is a qualified residence and the portion that is not a qualified residence. Neither the average balance of the secured debt nor the interest paid or accrued on secured debt is so allocated. Property that is not used for residential purposes does not qualify as a residence. For example, if a portion of the property is used as an office in the taxpayer's trade or business, that portion of the property does not qualify as a residence.

(ii) Special rule for rental of residence. If a taxpayer rents a portion of his or her principal or second residence to another person (a "tenant"), such portion may be treated as used by the taxpayer for residential purposes if, but only if—

(A) Such rented portion is used by the tenant primarily for residential purposes,

(B) The rented portion is not a self-contained residential unit containing separate sleeping space and toilet and cooking facilities, and

(C) The total number of tenants renting (directly or by sublease) the same or different portions of the residence at any time during the taxable year does not exceed two. For this purpose, if two persons (and the dependents, as defined by section 152, of either of them) share the same sleeping quarters, they shall be treated as a single tenant.

(iii) Examples—Example (1). D, a dentist, uses a room in D's principal residence as an office which qualifies under section 280A(c)(1)(B) as a portion of the dwelling unit used exclusively on a regular basis as a place of business for meeting with patients in the normal course of D's trade or business. D's adjusted purchase price of the property is $65,000; $10,000 of which is allocable under paragraph (o)(4)(i) of this section to the room used as an office. For purposes of this section, D's residence does not include the room used as an office. The adjusted purchase price of the residence is, accordingly, $55,000. Similarly, the fair market value of D's residence must be allocated between the office and the remainder of the property.

Example (2). J rents out the basement of property that is otherwise used as J's principal residence. The basement is a self-contained residential unit, with sleeping space and toilet and cooking facilities. The adjusted purchase price of the property is $100,000; $15,000 of which is allocable under paragraph (o)(4)(i) of this section to the basement. For purposes of this section, J's residence does not include the basement and the adjusted purchase price of the residence is $85,000. Similarly, the fair market value of the residence must be allocated between the basement unit and the remainder of the property.

(5) Residence under construction—(i) In general. A taxpayer may treat a residence under construction as a qualified residence for a period of up to 24 months, but only if the residence becomes a qualified residence, without regard to this paragraph (p)(5)(i), as of the time that the residence is ready for occupancy.

(ii) Example. X owns a residential lot suitable for the construction of a vacation home. On April 20, 1987, X obtains a mortgage secured by the lot and any property to be constructed on the lot. On August 9, 1987, X begins construction of a residence on the lot. The residence is ready for occupancy on November 9, 1989. The residence is used as a residence within the meaning of paragraph (p)(3)(iii) of this section during 1989 and X elects to treat the residence as his second residence for the period November 9, 1989, through December 31, 1989. Since the residence under construction is a qualified residence as of the first day that the residence is ready for occupancy (November 9, 1987), X may treat the residence as his second residence under paragraph (p)(5)(i) of this section for up to 24 months of the period during which the residence is under construction, commencing on or after the date that construction is begun (August 9, 1987). If X treats the residence under construction as X's second residence beginning on August 9, 1987, the residence under construction would cease to qualify as a qualified residence under paragraph (p)(5)(i) on August 8, 1989. The residence's status as a qualified residence for future periods would be determined without regard to paragraph (p)(5)(i) of this section.

(6) Special rule for time-sharing arrangements. Property that is otherwise a qualified residence will not fail to qualify as such solely because the taxpayer's interest in or right to use the property is restricted by an arrangement whereby two or more persons with interests in the property agree to exercise control over the property for different periods during the taxable year. For purposes of determining the use of a residence under paragraph (p)(3)(iii) of this section, a taxpayer will not be considered to have used or rented a residence during any period that the taxpayer does not have the right to use the property or to receive any benefits from the rental of the property.

(q) Special rules for tenant-stockholders in cooperative housing corporations—(1) In general. For purposes of this section, a residence includes stock in a cooperative housing corporation owned by a tenant-stockholder if the house or apartment which the tenant-stockholder is entitled to occupy by virtue of owning such stock is a residence within the meaning of paragraph (p)(3)(ii) of this section.

(2) Special rule where stock may not be used to secure debt. For purposes of this section, if stock described in paragraph (q)(1) of this section may not be used to secure debt because of restrictions under local or State law or because of restrictions in the cooperative agreement (other than restrictions the principal purpose of which is to permit the tenant-stockholder to treat unsecured debt as secured debt under this paragraph (q)(2)), debt may be treated as secured by such stock to the extent that the proceeds of the debt are allocated to the purchase of the stock under the rules of §1.163-8T. For purposes of this paragraph (q)(2), proceeds of debt incurred prior to January 1, 1987, may be treated as allocated to the purchase of such stock to the extent that the tenant-stockholder has properly and consistently deducted interest expense on such debt as home mortgage interest attributable to such stock on Schedule A of Form 1040 in determining his taxable income for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1987. For purposes of this paragraph (q)(2), amended returns file after December 22, 1987, are disregarded.

(3) Treatment of interest expense of the cooperative described in section 216(a)(2). For purposes of section 163(h) and §1.163-9T (disallowance of deduction for personal interest) and section 163(d) (limitation on investment interest), any amount allowable as a deduction to a tenant-stockholder under section 216(a)(2) shall be treated as interest paid or accrued by the tenant-stockholder. If a tenant-stockholder's stock in a cooperative housing corporation is a qualified residence of the tenant-stockholder, any amount allowable as a deduction to the tenant-stockholder under section 216(a)(2) is qualified residence interest.

(4) Special rule to prevent tax avoidance. If the amount treated as qualified residence interest under this section exceeds the amount which would be so treated if the tenant-stockholder were treated as directly owning his proportionate share of the assets and liabilities of the cooperative and one of the principal purposes of the cooperative arrangement is to permit the tenant-stockholder to increase the amount of qualified residence interest, the district director may determine that such excess is not qualified residence interest.

(5) Other definitions. For purpose of this section, the terms "tenant-stockholder," "cooperative housing corporation" and "proportionate share" shall have the meaning given by section 216 and the regulations thereunder.

(r) Effective date. The provisions of this section are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

Treatment of Certain Charitable Contributions Relating to Bargain Sales

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations that amend the method by which certain charitable contributions are to be reduced in calculating the allowable deduction in the case of bargain sales. These amendments conform the regulations to case law and are necessary to provide guidance to taxpayers relating to charitable contributions in the case of bargain sales.

DATES: The regulations are effective with respect to contributions paid and sales and exchanges made after December 31, 1969.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

In Estate of Bullard v. Commissioner, 87 T.C. 261 (July 31, 1986), the Tax Court invalidated §§1.170A-4 and 1.1011-2 of the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) to the extent they serve to disallow a charitable contribution deduction in the case of a bargain sale if the amount of the contribution was less than the section 170(e) reduction for the entire property (as opposed to just the contributed portion of the property). Section 170(e) provides, in part, that the amount of any charitable contribution otherwise taken into account under section 170 shall be reduced by the amount of gain that would have been recognized if the property contributed had been sold by the taxpayer at its fair market value (determined at the time of such contribution).

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

The amendments to the regulations provide that a charitable contribution deduction will be disallowed in the case of a bargain sale if the amount of the contribution is less than the section 170(e) reduction for the contributed portion of the property. In addition, examples in the regulations have been amended to conform to these amendments. This document does not conform the regulations to statutory changes to the Code subsequent to the adoption of the regulations by T.D. 7207.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for final regulations subject to 5 U.S.C. 553(b)(B). Accordingly, the final regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6).

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this final rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis therefore is not required.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. The authority of Part 1 continues to read in part:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.

Par. 2. Section 1.170A-4 is amended by revising paragraph (c)(2) and Examples (5) through (10) of paragraph (d) to read as set forth below:

§1.170-4 Reduction in amount of charitable contributions of appreciated property.

(2) Bargain sale. (i) Section 1011(b) and §1.1011-2 apply to bargain sales of property to charitable organizations. For purposes of applying the reduction rules of section 170(e)(1) and this section to the contributed portion of the property in the case of a bargain sale, there shall be allocated under section 1011(b) to the contributed portion of the property that portion of the adjusted basis of the entire property that bears the same ratio to the total adjusted basis as the fair market value of the contributed portion of the property bears to the fair market value of the entire property. For purposes of applying section 170(e)(1) and paragraph (a) of this section to the contributed portion of the property in such a case, there shall be allocated to the contributed portion the amount of gain that is not recognized on the bargain sale but that would have been recognized if such contributed portion had been sold by the donor at its fair market value at the time of its contribution to the charitable organization.

(ii) The term "bargain sale", as used in this subparagraph, means a transfer of property which is in part a sale or exchange of the property and in part a charitable contribution, as defined in section 170(c), of the property.

Example (5). In 1970, F, an individual calendar-year taxpayer, sells to a church for $4,000 ordinary income property with a fair market value of $10,000 and an adjusted basis of $4,000. F's contribution base for 1970 is $20,000, and F makes no other charitable contributions in 1970. Thus, F makes a charitable contribution to the church of $6,000 ($10,000 − $4,000 amount realized), which is 60% of the value of the property. The amount realized on the bargain sale is 40% ($4,000 / $10,000) of the value of the property. In applying section 1011(b) to the bargain sale, adjusted basis in the amount of $1,600 ($4,000 adjusted basis × 40%) is allocated under §1.1011-2(b) to the noncontributed portion of the property, and F recognizes $2,400 ($4,000 amount realized less $1,600 adjusted basis) of ordinary income. Under paragraphs (a)(1) and (c)(2)(i) of this section, F's contribution of $6,000 is reduced by $3,600 ($6,000 − [$4,000 adjusted basis × 60%]) (i.e., the amount of ordinary income that would have been recognized on the contributed portion had the property been sold). The reduced contribution of $2,400 consists of the portion ($4,000 × 60%) of the adjusted basis not allocated to the noncontributed portion of the property. That is, the reduced contribution consists of the portion of the adjusted basis allocated to the contributed portion. Under sections 1012 and 1015(a) the basis of the property to the church is $6,400 ($4,000 + $2,400).

Example (6). In 1970, G, an individual calendar-year taxpayer, sells to a church for $6,000 ordinary income property with a fair market value of $10,000 and an adjusted basis of $4,000. G's contribution base for 1970 is $20,000, and G makes no other charitable contributions in 1970. Thus, G makes a charitable contribution to the church of $4,000 ($10,000 − $6,000 amount realized), which is 40% of the value of the property. The amount realized on the bargain sale is 60% ($6,000 / $10,000) of the value of the property. In applying section 1011(b) to the bargain sale, adjusted basis in the amount of $2,400 ($4,000 adjusted basis × 60%) is allocated under §1.1011-2(b) to the noncontributed portion of the property, and G recognizes $3,600 ($6,000 amount realized less $2,400 adjusted basis) of ordinary income. Under paragraphs (a)(1) and (c)(2)(i) of this section, G's contribution of $4,000 is reduced by $2,400 ($4,000 − [$4,000 adjusted basis × 40%]) (i.e., the amount of ordinary income that would have been recognized on the contributed portion had the property been sold). The reduced contribution of $1,600 consists of the portion ($4,000 × 40%) of the adjusted basis not allocated to the noncontributed portion of the property. That is, the reduced contribution consists of the portion of the adjusted basis allocated to the contributed portion. Under sections 1012 and 1015(a) the basis of the property to the church is $7,600 ($6,000 + $1,600).

Example (7) In 1970, H, an individual calendar-year taxpayer, sells to a church for $2,000 stock held for not more than 6 months which has an adjusted basis of $4,000 and a fair market value of $10,000. H's contribution base for 1970 is $20,000, and H makes no other charitable contributions in 1970. Thus, H makes a charitable contribution to the church of $8,000 ($10,000 − $2,000 amount realized), which is 80% of the value of the property. The amount realized on the bargain sale is 20% ($2,000 / $10,000) of the value of the property. In applying section 1011(b) to the bargain sale, adjusted basis in the amount of $800 ($4,000 adjusted basis × 20%) is allocated under §1.1011-2(b) to the noncontributed portion of the property, and H recognizes $1,200 ($2,000 amount realized less $800 adjusted basis) of ordinary income. Under paragraphs (a)(1) and (c)(2)(i) of this section, H's contribution of $8,000 is reduced by $4,800 ($8,000 − [$4,000 adjusted basis × 80%]) (i.e., the amount of ordinary income that would have been recognized on the contributed portion had the property been sold). The reduced contribution of $3,200 consists of the portion ($4,000 × 80%) of the adjusted basis not allocated to the noncontributed portion of the property. That is, the reduced contribution consists of the portion of the adjusted basis allocated to the contributed portion. Under sections 1012 and 1015(a) the basis of the property to the church is $5,200 ($2,000 + $3,200).

Example (8). In 1970, F, an individual calendar-year taxpayer, sells for $4,000 to a private foundation not described in section 170(b)(1)(E) property to which section 1245 applies which has a fair market value of $10,000 and an adjusted basis of $4,000. F's contribution base for 1970 is $20,000 and F makes no other charitable contributions in 1970. At the time of the bargain sale, F has used the property in his business for more than 6 months. Thus F makes a charitable contribution of $6,000 ($10,000 − $4,000 amount realized), which is 60% of the value of the property. The amount realized on the bargain sale is 40% ($4,000 / $10,000) of the value of the property. If the property had been sold by F at its fair market value at the time of its contribution, it is assumed that under section 1245 $4,000 of the gain of $6,000 ($10,000 − $4,000 adjusted basis) would have been treated as ordinary income and $2,000 would have been long-term capital gain. In applying section 1011(b) to the bargain sale, adjusted basis in the amount of $1,600 ($4,000 adjusted basis × 40%) is allocated under §1.1011-2(b) to the noncontributed portion of the property, and F's recognized gain of $2,400 ($4,000 amount realized less $1,600 adjusted basis) consists of $1,600 ($4,000 × 40%) of ordinary income and $800 ($2,000 × 40%) of long-term capital gain. Under paragraphs (a) and (c)(2)(i) of this section, F's contribution of $6,000 is reduced by $3,000 (the sum of $2,400 ($4,000 × 60%) of ordinary income and $600 ([$2,000 × 60%] × 50%) of long-term capital gain) (i.e., the amount of gain that would have been recognized on the contributed portion had the property been sold). The reduced contribution of $3,000 consists of $2,400 ($4,000 × 60%) of adjusted basis and $600 ([$2,000 × 60%] × 50%) of long-term capital gain not used as a reduction under paragraph (a)(2) of this section. Under sections 1012 and 1015(a) the basis of the property to the private foundation is $6,400 ($4,000 + $2,400).

Example (10). (a) On July 1, 1970, B, a calendar-year individual taxpayer, sells to a church for $75,000 intangible property to which section 1245 applies which has a fair market value of $250,000 and an adjusted basis of $75,000. Thus, B makes a charitable contribution to the church of $175,000 ($250,000 − $75,000 amount realized), which is 70% ($175,000/$250,000) of the value of the property, the amount realized on the bargain sale is 30% ($75,000/$250,000) of the value of the property. At the time of the bargain sale, B has used the property in his business for more than 6 months. B's contribution base for 1970 is $500,000, and B makes no other charitable contributions in 1970. If the property had been sold by B at its fair market value at the time of its contribution, it is assumed that under section 1245 $105,000 of the gain of $175,000 ($250,000 − $75,000 adjusted basis) would have been treated as ordinary income and $70,000 would have been long-term capital gain. In applying section 1011(b) to the bargain sale, adjusted basis in the amount of $22,500 ($75,000 adjusted basis × 30%) is allocated under §1.1011-2(b) to the noncontributed portion of the property, and B's recognized gain of $52,500 ($75,000 amount realized less $22,500 adjusted basis) consists of $31,500 ($105,000 × 30%) of ordinary income and $21,000 ($70,000 × 30%) of long-term capital gain.

(b) Under paragraphs (a)(1) and (c)(2)(i) of this section B's contribution of $175,000 is reduced by $73,500 ($105,000 × 70%) (i.e., the amount of ordinary income that would have been recognized on the contributed portion had the property been sold). The reduced contribution of $101,500 consists of $52,500 [$75,000 × 70%] of adjusted basis allocated to the contributed portion of the property and $49,000 [$70,000 × 70%] of long-term capital gain allocated to the contributed portion. Under sections 1012 and 1015(a) the basis of the property to the church is $127,500 ($75,000 + $52,500).

Par. 3. Section 1.1011-2 is amended by revising paragraph (a), Examples (3) through (7) of paragraph (c), and subparagraphs (a) and (b) of Example (8) of paragraph (c) to read as set forth below:

§1.1011-2 Bargain sale to a charitable organization.

(a) In general. (1) If for the taxable year a charitable contributions deduction is allowable under section 170 by reason of a sale or exchange of property, the taxpayer's adjusted basis of such property for purposes of determining gain from such sale or exchange must be computed as provided in section 1011(b) and paragraph (b) of this section. If after applying the provisions of section 170 for the taxable year, including the percentage limitations of section 170(b), no deduction is allowable under that section by reason of the sale or exchange of the property, section 1011(b) does not apply and the adjusted basis of the property is not required to be apportioned pursuant to paragraph (b) of this section. In such case the entire adjusted basis of the property is to be taken into account in determining gain from the sale or exchange, as provided in §1.1011-1(e). In ascertaining whether or not a charitable contributions deduction is allowable under section 170 for the taxable year for such purposes, that section is to be applied without regard to this section and the amount by which the contributed portion of the property must be reduced under section 170(e)(1) is the amount determined by taking into account the amount of gain which would have been ordinary income or long-term capital gain if the contributed portion of the property had been sold by the donor at its fair market value at the time of the sale or exchange.

Example (3). In 1970, C, a calendar-year individual taxpayer, makes a charitable contribution of $50,000 cash to a church. In addition, he sells for $4,000 to a private foundation not described in section 170(b)(1)(E) stock held for more than 6 months which has an adjusted basis of $4,000 and a fair market value of $10,000. Thus, C makes a charitable contribution of $6,000 of such property to the private foundation ($10,000 value − $4,000 amount realized). C's contribution base for 1970, as defined in section 170(b)(1)(F), is $100,000, and during that year he makes no other charitable contributions. By reason of section 170(b)(1)(A), the deduction allowed under section 170 for 1970 is $50,000 for the amount of cash contributed to the church. Under section 170(e)(1)(B)(ii) and paragraphs (a)(1) and (c)(2)(i) of §1.170A-4, the $6,000 contribution of stock is reduced to $4,800 ($6,000 − [50% × ($6,000 value of contributed portion of stock − $3,600 adjusted basis)]). However, by reason of section 170(b)(1)(B)(ii), applied without regard to section 1011(b), no deduction is allowed under section 170 for 1970 or any other year for the reduced contribution of $4,800 to the private foundation. Accordingly, paragraph (b) of this section does not apply for purposes of apportioning the adjusted basis of the stock sold to the private foundation, and under section 1.1011-1(e) the recognized gain on the bargain sale is $0 ($4,000 amount realized − $4,000 adjusted basis).

Example (4). In 1970, B, a calendar-year individual taxpayer, sells to a church for $2,000 stock held for not more than 6 months which has an adjusted basis of $4,000 and a fair market value of $10,000. B's contribution base for 1970, as defined in section 170(b)(1)(F), is $20,000 and during such year B makes no other charitable contributions. Thus, he makes a charitable contribution to the church of $8,000 ($10,000 value − $2,000 amount realized). Under paragraph (b) of this section the adjusted basis for determining gain on the bargain sale is $800 ($4,000 adjusted basis × $2,000 amount realized/$10,000 value of stock). Accordingly, B, has a recognized short-term capital gain of $1,200 ($2,000 amount realized − $800 adjusted basis) on the bargain sale. After applying section 1011(b) and paragraphs (a)(1) and (c)(2)(i) of §1.170A-4, B is allowed a charitable contributions deduction for 1970 of $3,200 ($8,000 value of gift − [$8,000 − ($4,000 adjusted basis of property × $8,000 value of gift/$10,000 value of property)]).

Example (5). The facts are the same as in Example (4) except that B sells the property to the church for $4,000. Thus, B makes a charitable contribution to the church of $6,000 ($10,000 value − $4,000 amount realized). Under paragraph (b) of this section the adjusted basis for determining gain on the bargain sale is $1,600 ($4,000 adjusted basis × $4,000 amount realized/$10,000 value of stock). Accordingly, B has a recognized short-term capital gain of $2,400 ($4,000 amount realized − $1,600 adjusted basis) on the bargain sale. After applying section 1011(b) and paragraphs (a)(1) and (c)(2)(i) of §1.170A-4, B is allowed a charitable contributions deduction for 1970 of $2,400 ($6,000 value of gift − [$6,000 − ($4,000 adjusted basis of property × $6,000 value of gift/$10,000 value of property]).

Example (6). The facts are the same as in Example (4) except that B sells the property to the church for $6,000. Thus, B makes a charitable contribution to the church of $4,000 ($10,000 value − $6,000 amount realized). Under paragraph (b) of this section the adjusted basis for determining gain on the bargain sale is $2,400 ($4,000 adjusted basis × $6,000 amount realized/$10,000 value of stock). Accordingly, B has a recognized short-term capital gain of $3,600 ($6,000 amount realized − $2,400 adjusted basis) on the bargain sale. After applying section 1011(b) and paragraphs (a)(1) and (c)(2)(i) of §1.170A-4, B is allowed a charitable contributions deduction for 1970 of $1,600 ($4,000 value of gift − [$4,000 − ($4,000 adjusted basis of property × $4,000 value of gift/$10,000 value of property]).

Example (7). In 1970, C, a calendar-year individual taxpayer, sells to a church for $4,000 tangible personal property used in his business for more than 6 months which has an adjusted basis of $4,000 and a fair market value of $10,000. Thus, C makes a charitable contribution to the church of $6,000 ($10,000 value − $4,000 adjusted basis). C's contribution base for 1970, as defined in section 170(b)(1)(F) is $100,000 and during such year he makes no other charitable contributions. If C had sold the property at its fair market value at the time of its contribution, it is assumed that under section 1245 $4,000 of the gain of $6,000 ($10,000 value − $4,000 adjusted basis) would have been treated as ordinary income. Thus, there would have been long-term capital gain of $2,000. It is also assumed that the church does not put the property to an unrelated use, as defined in paragraph (b)(3) of §1.170A-4. Under paragraph (b) of this section the adjusted basis for determining gain on the bargain sale is $1,600 ($4,000 adjusted basis × $4,000 amount realized/$10,000 value of property). Accordingly, C has a recognized gain of $2,400 ($4,000 amount realized − $1,600 adjusted basis) on the bargain sale, consisting of ordinary income of $1,600 ($4,000 ordinary income × $4,000 amount realized/$10,000 value of property) and of long-term capital gain of $800 ($2,000 long-term gain × $4,000 amount realized/$10,000 value of property). After applying section 1011(b) and paragraphs (a) and (c)(2)(i) of §1.170A-4, C is allowed a charitable contributions deduction for 1970 of $3,600 ($6,000 gift − [$4,000 ordinary income × $6,000 value of gift/$10,000 value of property]).

Example (8). (a) On January 1, 1970, A, a male of age 65, transfers capital assets consisting of securities held for more than 6 months to a church in exchange for a promise by the church to pay A a nonassignable annuity of $5,000 per year for life. The annuity is payable monthly with the first payment to be made on February 1, 1970. A's contribution base for 1970, as defined in section 170(b)(1)(F), is $200,000, and during that year he makes no other charitable contributions. On the date of transfer the securities have a fair market value of $100,000 and an adjusted basis to A of $20,000.

(b) The present value of the right of a male age 65 to receive a life annuity of $5,000 per annum, payable in equal installments at the end of each monthly period, is $59,755 ($5,000 × [11.469 − 0.482]), determined in accordance with section 101(b) of the Code, paragraph (e)(1)(iii)(b)(2) of §1.101-2, and section 3 of Rev. Rul. 62-216, C.B. 1962-2, 30. Thus, A makes a charitable contribution to the church of $40,245 ($100,000 − $59,755).

26 CFR 1.170A-7: Contributions not in trust of partial interests in property.

Charitable contributions; oil and gas lease overriding royalty or net profits interest. The owner of a working interest under an oil and gas lease is not entitled to a charitable contribution deduction under section 170(a) of the Code for the contribution of an overriding royalty interest or a net profits interest.

Rev. Rul. 88-37

ISSUE

If the owner of the working interest under an oil and gas lease gives an overriding royalty interest or a net profits interest to a charitable organization, is the gift deductible as a charitable contribution under section 170(a) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

Situation 1. A, an individual, is the owner of the entire working interest under an oil and gas lease. During the taxable year, A donates to a charitable organization described in section 170(c) of the Code an overriding royalty interest equal to 10 percent of the gross production from A's working interest under the lease.

Situation 2. The facts are the same except that the interest contributed is a net profits interest equal to 10 percent of the net profits from the donor's working interest.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 170(a) of the Code provides, subject to certain limitations, a deduction for any charitable contribution (as defined in subsection (c)), payment of which is made within the taxable year.

Section 1.170A-1(c)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that if a charitable contribution is made in property other than money, the amount of the contribution is the fair market value of the property, reduced as provided in section 170(e) of the Code.

Section 170(f)(3) of the Code denies a charitable contribution deduction for certain contributions of partial interests in property. Section 170(f)(3)(A) provides that no charitable deduction is allowed for a contribution of less than the taxpayer's entire interest in property unless the value of the interest contributed would have been allowed as a deduction under section 170(f)(2) had it been transferred in trust.

Section 170(f)(2) of the Code provides, in the case of property transferred in trust, that a charitable deduction is allowed if the trust is a charitable remainder annuity trust, a charitable remainder unitrust, or a pooled income fund. Further, a deduction is allowed for the value of an interest in property (other than a remainder interest) transferred in trust if the interest is in the form of a guaranteed annuity or the trust instrument specifies that the interest is a fixed percentage distributed yearly of the fair market value of the trust property and the grantor is treated as the owner of such interest for purposes of applying section 671.

By its terms, section 170(f)(3)(A) does not apply to a contribution of an interest that, even though partial, is the taxpayer's entire interest in the property. If, however, the property in which such partial interest exists was divided in order to create such interest and thus avoid section 170(f)(3)(A), and deduction is not allowed. Section 1.170A-7(a)(2)(i) of the regulations.

Section 170(f)(3)(B)(ii) of the Code and section 1.170A-7(b) of the regulations provide that a deduction is allowed under section 170 of the Code for a contribution not in trust of a partial interest that is less than the donor's entire interest in property if the partial interest is an undivided portion of the donor's entire interest. An undivided portion of a donor's entire interest in property must consist of a fraction or percentage of each and every substantial interest or right owned by the donor in such property. A charitable contribution in perpetuity of an interest in property not in trust will not be considered a contribution of an undivided portion if the donor transfers some specific rights and retains other substantial rights.

In enacting section 170(f)(3), Congress was concerned with situations in which taxpayers might obtain a double benefit by taking a deduction for the present value of a contributed interest while also excluding from income subsequent receipts from the donated interest. In addition, Congress was concerned with situations in which, because the charity does not obtain all or an undivided portion of the significant rights in the property, the amount of a charitable contribution deduction might not correspond to the value of the benefit ultimately received by charity. The legislative solution was to guard against the possibility that such problems might arise by denying a deduction in situations involving partial interests unless the donation is cast in certain prescribed forms. See H.R. Rep. No. 91-413, 91st Cong., 1st Sess., 57-58 (1969), 1969-3 C.B. 200, 237; S. Rep. No. 91-552, 91st Cong., 1st Sess. 87 (1969), 1969-3 C.B. 423, 479. The scope of section 170(f)(3) thus extends beyond situations in which there is actual or probable manipulation of the non-charitable interest to the detriment of the charitable interest, or situations in which the donor has merely assigned the right to future income. Compare Estate of Brock v. Commissioner, 71 T.C. 901 (1979), eff'd per curiam, 630 F.2d 368 (5th Cir. 1980).

A working interest is the operating interest under an oil and gas lease. It is typically created by a transaction in which the owner of a tract of land, or the owner of the mineral rights to a tract of land, grants the right to exploit the oil and gas under the land, while at the same time retaining a royalty interest in production. Alternatively, the owner of a tract of land, or the owner of mineral rights to a tract of land, may, as in the instant case, retain the working interest and grant a royalty interest to another person. The owner of the working interest has the exclusive right to exploit the oil and gas resources. For federal tax purposes, a working interest is defined as an interest in oil and gas in place that is burdened with the cost of development and operation of the property. Brooks v. Commissioner, 424 F.2d 116 (5th Cir. 1970).

An overriding royalty interest is an economic interest in oil and gas in place, created from the working interest. An overriding royalty entitles its owner to a specified fraction of gross production, free of operating and developing costs. The term of an overriding royalty interest is coextensive with the term of the working interest from which it was created. The transfer of an overriding royalty is an assignment of a property interest and is not an anticipatory assignment of income. See Rev. Rul. 67-118, 1967-1 C.B. 163.

A net profits interest is, for federal tax purposes, an interest in oil and gas in place that is defined as a share of gross production measured by net profits from operation of the property. It is created out of the working interest and has the same duration. Unlike the income accruing to an overriding royalty, the income accruing to the net profits interest is reduced by specified operating and development costs, but the interest bears these expenses only to the extent of its share of the income. Unlike the working interest, the net profits interest is not required to pay out, advance, or become liable for such costs. Burns v. Commissioner, 78 T.C. 185, 209 (1982). Like a transfer of an overriding royalty, the transfer of such a net profits interest conveys, for federal tax purposes, a depletable property interest in oil and gas in place. See Kirby Petroleum Co. v. Commissioner, 326 U.S. 599 (1946), 1946-1 C.B. 69; Burton-Sutton Oil Co., Inc. v. Commissioner, 328 U.S. 25 (1946), 1946-1 C.B. 237.

The right to exploit the oil and gas resources under the land is a right inherent in the ownership of a working interest. Even an owner of only a percentage of the working interest has the right to participate in decisions on the exploitation of the oil and gas resources. The owner of an overriding royalty interest or a net profits interest does not have this right.

In Rev. Rul. 81-282, 1981-2 C.B. 78, an individual donated stock in a corporation to a charitable organization but retained the right to vote the contributed shares. The ruling notes that the right to vote stock is inherent in the ownership of common stock and, as such, is a property right. This right gives the holder a voice in the management of the corporation and is crucial in protecting the stockholder's financial interest. Therefore, the ruling concludes that the right to vote the stock is a substantial right in that stock. The ruling points out that although the taxpayer's retention of the right to vote the stock would not defeat the donee's interest in the transferred property, nevertheless, the taxpayer did not transfer all substantial rights in the stock to Y. The ruling holds that a deduction under section 170 is not allowed because the taxpayer transferred only a partial interest in the property and the interest assigned was not an undivided portion. See also Rev. Rul. 76-143, 1976-1 C.B. 63.

In Rev. Rul. 76-331, 1976-2 C.B. 52, Situation 1, a corporation transferred a tract of land to a charitable organization but retained all mineral rights with respect to the land, including the sole right to exploit any minerals obtained from the property. The ruling holds that a deduction under section 170 is not allowed because the taxpayer retained a substantial interest or right in the property and cannot be considered as donating an undivided portion of the taxpayer's entire interest. In 1980, Congress provided for a deduction in such a situation by adding an exception to section 170(f)(3) of the Code in the case of a "qualified conservation contribution." See sections 170(f)(3)(B)(iii) and 170(h)(2)(A) of the Code. The holding of Rev. Rul. 76-331 remains valid, however, for contributions that do not satisfy the requirements of a qualified conservation contribution.

In both Situation 1 and Situation 2 of the present ruling, even though the working interest was itself only a partial interest in the land, it was the individual's entire interest prior to the transfer to charity. Assuming, therefore, that the property in which the working interest existed was not previously divided in order to avoid section 170(f)(e)(A), and assuming that the other requirements of section 170 were met, a deduction would be allowable for the contribution of all or an undivided portion of the working interest. See sections 1.170A-7(a)(2)(i) and 1.170A-7(b)(1)(i) of the regulations; Rev. Rul. 76-523, 1976-2 C.B. 54.

In both Situations 1 and 2, however, the donor did not contribute the donor's entire interest in the property but carved out and contributed only a portion of that interest. Further, the portion contributed was not an undivided portion of the donor's interest because it did not convey a fraction of each and every substantial interest or right owned by the donor in the property. By transferring an overriding royalty interest or a net profits interest, the donor has retained the right inherent in the ownership of a working interest to control, or, in the case of ownership of a part of the working interest, to participate in the control of, the development and operation of the lease. This right to control or to participate in control, similar to the retained voting rights in Rev. Rul. 81-282, is a substantial right, the retention of which prevents the donated interest from being considered an undivided portion.

After the transfer, in both Situations 1 and 2, the contributed interest is a separate property interest for federal tax purposes. However, if the charitable interest is created by dividing a greater interest held by the donor, the application of section 170(f)(3) to deny the charitable contribution deduction is not precluded merely because the contributed interest is a separate property in the hands of the donee and the incidence of taxation on income from the contributed interest is shifted from the donor to the donee. Rev. Rul. 70-477, 1970-2 C.B. 62, for example, holds that for years after the effective date of section 170(f)(3), a contribution of the rent-free use of property, even if recognized as a conveyance of property under local law, does not give rise to a deduction under section 170.

In both Situation 1 and Situation 2, therefore, the contributed interest is less than the taxpayer's entire interest within the meaning of section 170(f)(3) of the Code, and is not an undivided portion of the taxpayer's entire interest. In each case, the partial interest was not transferred in trust and was not in a form that would have resulted in an allowable deduction under section 170(f)(2) had it been transferred in trust.

HOLDING

In both Situation 1 and Situation 2 no deduction is allowed under section 170 of the Code.

Deductions in Excess of $5,000 Claimed For Certain Charitable Contributions of Property and Information Returns by Donees Who Make Certain Dispositions of Donated Property

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations and removal of temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document removes temporary regulations and provides final regulations relating to deductions in excess of $5,000 claimed for charitable contributions of property and to information returns by charitable donees that make certain dispositions of donated property. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by section 155 of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (the "1984 Act"). The final regulations provide substantiation requirements with which certain donors must comply in order to obtain deductions for charitable contributions of certain property. In addition, the final regulations provide guidance regarding the filing of information returns by donees when they make certain dispositions of donated property.

DATES: Except as otherwise provided in this document, the regulations apply to certain charitable contributions of property made after December 31, 1984.

BACKGROUND

On December 31, 1984, the FEDERAL REGISTER published proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under sections 170 and 6050L of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as well as temporary regulations (T.D. 8003)[1985-1 C.B. 64] containing the same rules. The amendments were proposed to conform the regulations to section 155 of the 1984 Act. A hearing was held on June 28, 1985. After consideration of all comments regarding the proposed amendments, those amendments are adopted as revised by this Treasury Decision. These regulations supersede the temporary regulations issued under §§1.170A-13T and 1.6050L-1T.

SUMMARY OF COMMENTS

SUBSTANTIATION WITH A RECEIPT

Several commentators stated that temporary §1.170A-13T(b)(1)(iii) might be interpreted to require a donee to estimate the fair market value of contributed property. Therefore, the provision has been amended to clarify that fair market value is one of the circumstances to be taken into account by a donee in determining the amount of detail to provide in the description of the property included on the receipt. The fair market value of the property does not have to be stated on the receipt.

SUBSTANTIATION REQUIREMENTS FOR THE DEDUCTIBILITY OF CERTAIN CHARITABLE CONTRIBUTIONS

The final regulations provide that, pursuant to section 170(a)(1) of the Code, a deduction for certain charitable contributions made after December 31, 1984, by an individual, closely held corporation, personal service corporation, partnership, or S corporation shall not be allowed unless the donor complies with certain substantiation requirements. These requirements apply to contributions of property (other than money and publicly traded securities to which §1.170A-13(c)(7)(xi)(B) does not apply) if the donor claims or reports charitable contribution deductions for such item of property and all similar items of property for the same taxable year (whether or not donated to the same donee) that exceed, in the aggregate, $5,000. For such a contribution the donor must obtain a qualified appraisal and attach an appraisal summary to the return on which the deduction is first claimed.

In the case of nonpublicly traded stock, if the amount claimed or reported as a deduction is greater than $5,000 but does not exceed $10,000, the donor does not have to obtain a qualified appraisal. However, in such a case the donor must attach a partially completed appraisal summary form to the tax or information return on which the deduction is first claimed or reported. The same requirements apply with respect to publicly traded securities to which paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(B) applies.

Several commentators stated that the qualified appraisal requirement should not apply to nonpublicly traded stock subject to a buy-sell or redemption agreement. Although in certain cases a buy-sell or redemption agreement can be highly indicative of the fair market value of the subject stock, this is by no means always the case. Because of questions as to the financial stability of the purchasing party, the time value of money (when the agreement only applies at some future date), and agreements that may indicate a maximum but not a minimum value of the subject stock, it was decided not to include a special rule with respect to such agreements. In those instances where the agreement is a good indication of value, the qualified appraisal should be relatively easy to obtain.

Several commentators questioned how the substantiation requirements apply to contributions of partial interests. In response to these inquiries, §1.170A-13(c)(2)(i)(A) of the final regulations has been amended to provide that, if the contributed property is a partial interest, the qualified appraisal is to be made of the partial interest.

One commentator suggested that the substantiation requirements not be applied to contributions of property to which section 170(e)(3) applies unless the amount claimed as a deduction with respect to the property during a taxable year exceeds the donor's cost basis in the property by $5,000. This suggestion is supported by the fact that, if the taxpayer sold the property instead of donating it, the taxpayer would be entitled to a cost of goods sold deduction with respect to the property pursuant to §1.61-3. Section 1.170A-13(c)(1)(ii) of the final regulations requires an appraisal of property described in section 170(e)(3) or (4) only if the amount of the charitable deduction claimed exceeds the deduction otherwise available by $5,000.

SUBSTANTIATION REQUIREMENTS FOR C CORPORATIONS

The final regulations require certain C corporations (as defined in section 1361(a)(2)) to file with the Internal Revenue Service a partially completed appraisal summary for contributions of property that exceed the $5,000 threshold made after June 6, 1988. This requirement is included in the final regulations, in part, to provide a means of informing the donee (who must sign the summary) of the donee's reporting requirement under section 6050L. In addition, a notice of proposed rulemaking that applies all the substantiation requirements contained in §1.170A-13(c) to all taxpayers (including C corporations, trusts, estates, and pooled income funds) is being published in  [LR-83-87, page 930, this Bulletin].

QUALIFIED APPRAISAL

The final regulations provide that a qualified appraisal is an appraisal document that (a) relates to an appraisal that is made not earlier than 60 days prior to the date of contribution of the appraised property, or later than the date specified in §1.170A-13(c)(3)(iv)(B), (b) is prepared, signed, and dated by a qualified appraiser, and (c) does not involve a prohibited type of appraisal fee. In response to confusion expressed by some commentators regarding the timing of an appraisal performed subsequent to the contribution, the final regulations clarify that an appraisal can be made up until the date on which it must be received by the donor. It must be received by the donor before the due date (including extensions) of the return on which the deduction for the contributed property is first claimed (or reported in the case of a donor that is a partnership or S corporation) or, in the case of a deduction first claimed (or reported) on an amended return, the date on which the return is filed.

Several commentators suggested that the 60-day period be extended. The suggestion has not been incorporated into the final regulations because the Internal Revenue Service is concerned that an appraisal prepared more than 60 days before the date of contribution may not reflect the proper fair market value of the property. Thus, if the appraisal is performed more than 60 days prior to the contribution, it must be updated within the period specified in §1.170A-13(c)(3)(iv)(B).

The temporary regulations set forth the information that must be included in the qualified appraisal. Several commentators pointed out that the appraiser may be a nonresident alien who is not required to obtain a taxpayer identification number. Therefore, the final regulations have been revised to provide that the appraiser's taxpayer identification number must be provided only if the appraiser is otherwise required to obtain such a number.

Several commentators requested that the appraiser not be held accountable for the accuracy of information about the donated property provided by the donor. This suggestion has not been incorporated into the final regulations because such information affects the value of the property, and, therefore, its validity must be verified by the appraiser.

A separate qualified appraisal is required for each item of property that is not included in a group of similar items of property. Only one qualified appraisal is required for a group of similar items of property contributed in the same taxable year, provided the appraisal includes all the required information for each item. However, the appraiser may select any items whose aggregate value is appraised at $100 or less for which a group description rather than a specific description of each item will suffice.

APPRAISAL SUMMARY

The appraisal summary must be made on the form prescribed by the Internal Revenue Service, signed and dated by the original donee and qualified appraiser, and attached to the donor's return on which a deduction with respect to the appraised property is first claimed or reported. The final regulations set forth the information that must be included on the appraisal summary.

One commentator suggested that the final regulations provide an exception to the donee signature requirement in appropriate situations when the donor is unable to obtain the donee's signature. In response to the comment, §1.170A-13(c)(4)(iv)(C) provides that, in rare and unusual cases where it is not possible to obtain the donee's signature, the taxpayer's deduction will not be disallowed for that reason. An appropriate explanation should be attached to the appraisal summary.

A separate appraisal summary for each item of contributed property must be attached to the donor's return. If, however, similar items of property are contributed to the same donee, a single appraisal summary may be attached with respect to all similar items of property contributed to the same donee provided that the appraisal summary provides all the required information with respect to each item. However, the appraiser may select any items whose aggregate value is appraised at $100 or less for which a group description will suffice. A donor who contributes similar items of property to more than one donee must attach a separate appraisal summary for each donee.

The final regulations provide that every donor who presents an appraisal summary to a donee for signature after June 6, 1988, must furnish a copy of the appraisal summary to the donee. If the donor is a partnership or S corporation, the donor must provide a copy of the appraisal summary to every partner or shareholder who receives an allocation of a deduction for a charitable contribution of property described in the appraisal summary. The partner or shareholder must attach the appraisal summary to the partner's or shareholder's return. If a donor (or partner or shareholder of a donor) fails to attach the appraisal summary to the return, a charitable deduction will not be disallowed if the donor (or partner or shareholder) submits an appraisal summary within 90 days of being requested to do so by the Internal Revenue Service, provided that the failure to attach the appraisal summary was a good faith omission and the requirements of §1.170A-13(c)(3) and (4) are met (including the timely completion of the appraisal).

QUALIFIED APPRAISER

The definition of the term "qualified appraiser" is important because a donor who fails to use such an appraiser will not be entitled to a deduction with respect to a charitable contribution of property valued in excess of $5,000. Section 155 of the 1984 Act left the definition of the term qualified appraiser largely to these regulations.

Various appraisers and appraisal groups have commented that the definition of the term qualified appraiser should ensure that only individuals with specific professional standards be permitted to prepare qualified appraisals. Several commentators, for example, recommended that a qualified appraiser be defined as someone who has completed a rigid program of education, testing, and certification through a recognized professional appraisal organization which self-regulates its members.

Other commentators recommended that a designation by one of several specified professional appraisal associations should establish conclusively that a person is a qualified appraiser. Several commentators suggested that the Internal Revenue Service establish a roll of qualified appraisers that would be filled through an examination or application process.

While the interest of appraisal groups (and the Internal Revenue Service) in ensuring that only truly qualified persons be permitted to prepare qualified appraisals is strong, other competing interests also exist. In particular, donors and donees have an interest in assuring that the definition of qualified appraiser provides reasonable certainty and objectivity to persons who contemplate a charitable contribution of property expected to be valued in excess of $5,000.

After careful consideration of the recommendations received and concerns expressed, the regulations define a qualified appraiser as an individual who includes on the appraisal summary a declaration that:

(A) The individual either holds himself or herself out to the public as an appraiser or performs appraisals on a regular basis;

(B) Because of the appraiser's qualifications as described in the appraisal, the appraiser is qualified to make appraisals of the type of property being valued;

(C) The appraiser is not one of the persons that the final regulations exclude from being a qualified appraiser; and

(D) The appraiser understands that an intentionally false or fraudulent overstatement of the value of the property described in the qualified appraisal or appraisal summary may subject the appraiser to a civil penalty under section 6701 for aiding and abetting an understatement of tax liability, and, moreover, the appraiser may have appraisals disregarded pursuant to 31 U.S.C. §330(c).

Even if the individual complies with the requirements described above, the individual is not a qualified appraiser if the donor had knowledge of facts that would cause a reasonable person to expect the appraiser falsely to overstate the value of the donated property. In no case is an appraiser a qualified appraiser if the appraiser is the donor, taxpayer, donee, employee of any of the foregoing or other person identified in §1.170A-13(c)(5)(iv) of the final regulations.

Several commentators suggested that a state employee who makes appraisals of contributions made to the state should not be disqualified. Section 155 of the 1984 Act explicitly provides, however, that an employee of the donee cannot be a qualified appraiser. Hence, the final regulations do not permit an employee of a state to act as a qualified appraiser of gifts to the state.

More than one appraiser may appraise the donated property provided that each appraiser complies with the requirements of this Treasury decision, including signing the qualified appraisal and appraisal summary. In response to a request for clarification, the final regulations provide that, if more than one appraiser appraises the property, the donor does not have to use each appraiser's appraisal for purposes of substantiating the deduction.

APPRAISAL FEE

Generally, no part of the fee arrangement for a qualified appraisal can be based on a percentage (or set of percentages) of the appraised value of the property. If a fee arrangement is based in whole or in part on the amount of the appraised value of the property, if any, that is allowed as a deduction under section 170, after Internal Revenue Service examination or otherwise, it shall be treated as a fee based on a percentage of the appraised value of the property. This provision does not apply in certain circumstances to appraisal fees paid to a generally recognized association that regulates appraisers. Although many commentators objected to this exception, its inclusion in the regulations is mandated by section 155(a) of the 1984 Act.

SIMILAR ITEMS OF PROPERTY

The final regulations define the phrase "similar items of property" to mean property of the same generic category or type, including stamp collections, coin collections, lithographs, paintings, photographs, books, nonpublicly traded stock, nonpublicly traded securities other than nonpublicly traded stock, land, buildings, clothing, jewelry, furniture, electronic equipment, household appliances, toys, everyday kitchenware, china, crystal, or silver.

DONEE

Several commentators questioned whether, in the case of property placed in trust for the benefit of a tax-exempt organization, the trust or the tax-exempt organization is considered to be the donee. In response to the comments, the final regulations prospectively define the term donee to mean the trust in such a case. See §1.170A-13(c)(7)(v)(C) for the rule in effect for past periods. In addition, see §1.170A-13(c)(7)(v), (vi), and (vii) for definitions of donee, original donee and successor donee, respectively.

PUBLICLY TRADED SECURITIES

The temporary regulations defined the term publicly traded securities to mean securities for which market quotations are readily available on an established securities market. The final regulations provide that market quotations are readily available on an established securities market for a security if (1) the security is listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange, or any city or regional exchange in which quotations are published on a daily basis, including foreign securities, listed on a recognized foreign, national, or regional exchange, (2) the security is regularly traded in the national or regional over-the-counter market for which published quotations are available, or (3) the security is a share of an open-end investment company (commonly known as a mutual fund) for which quotations are published on a daily basis in a newspaper of general circulation throughout the United States. One commentator was concerned that this definition does not include bonds for which quotations of interest, but not bid or asked quotations, are listed daily in the "Yellow Sheets." In response to the comment, the Service issued Announcement 86-4, 1986-4 I.R.B. 51, which states that final regulations will provide that market quotations for an issue of a security are considered to be readily available on an established securities market for a computational period if certain requirements are met. These rules are contained in §1.170A-13(c)(7)(xi)(B) of the final regulations.

Section 1.170A-13(c)(7)(xi)(C) clarifies that securities that are otherwise publicly traded are not considered to be publicly traded if the securities are subject to restrictions of the amount claimed as a deduction with respect to the contribution of such securities is different than the amount listed in market quotations that are readily available on an established securities market.

INFORMATION RETURN BY DONEES

The final regulations provide that a donee of any charitable deduction property who sells, exchanges, consumes or otherwise disposes of the property within 2 years after the date of the donor's contribution of such property must make an information return. This rule applies to property for which the donee signs an appraisal summary either before or after disposing of the property. It also applies prospectively to a disposition made by a successor donee of the property (see §1.6050L-1(c)).

Several commentators stated that tracking an item of charitable deduction property with a de minimis value from the time of contribution until the time of disposition would be very burdensome. In response to the comments, the Service issued News Release IR 85-121 with accompanying Announcement 86-1, 1986-1 I.R.B. 35, on December 20, 1985. The Announcement states that final regulation will provide that donee reporting is not required with respect to an item of charitable deduction property disposed of by sale if the appraisal summary signed by a donee with respect to the item contains, at the time of the donee's signature, a statement signed by the donor that the appraised value of the item does not exceed $500. The rule is contained in §1.6050L-1(a)(2)(i) of the final regulations. For purposes of this rule items that form a set (such as, for example, a collection of books written by the same author, components of a stereo system, or a group of place settings of a pattern of silverware) are considered one item. In addition, all nonpublicly traded stock is considered one item as are all nonpublicly traded securities other than nonpublicly traded stock. The final regulations also provide that donee reporting is not required with respect to an item of charitable deduction property consumed or distributed by a donee without consideration if the consumption or distribution is in furtherance of a purpose or function constituting a basis for such donee's exemption under section 501 of the Code.

CHARITABLE DEDUCTION PROPERTY

Charitable deduction property is defined as any property (other than money and certain publicly traded securities) contributed after December 31, 1984, with respect to which the donee signs an appraisal summary. If the donee signs an appraisal summary with respect to donated property after the date of contribution, the property is deemed to be charitable deduction property from the date of contribution.

TIME FOR FILING INFORMATION

In response to comments that the requirement to file the donee information return within 90 days of the disposition of the charitable deduction property is too burdensome, the 90-day requirement has been replaced with a 125-day requirement in the final regulations. A special rule is provided in the case of a donee who has no reason to believe that the substantiation requirements of §1.170A-13(c) apply with respect to the disposed of property.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this final rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required. Although a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicited public comment was issued, the Internal Revenue Service concluded when the notice was issued that the regulations are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, the final regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6). The reporting requirements added by this document have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. The reporting requirements have been approved by OMB (control number 1545-0908).

Adoption of amendments to the regulations.

Accordingly, 26 CFR Parts 1 and 602 are amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805. * * * Section 1.170A-13 also issued under 26 U.S.C. 170 and section 155 of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 (98 Stat. 691). Section 1.6050L-1 also issued under 26 U.S.C. 6050L.

Par. 2. Section 1.170A-13T is removed.

Par. 3. In §1.170A-13, paragraphs (b)(1) and (b)(3)(i)(B) are revised to read as follows, and the heading and text for paragraph (c) are added.

§1.170A-13 Recordkeeping and return requirements for deductions for charitable contributions.

* * * * *

(b) Charitable contributions of property other than money made in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982—(1) In general. Except in the case of certain charitable contributions of property made after December 31, 1984, to which paragraph (c) of this section applies, any taxpayer who makes a charitable contribution of property other than money in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1982, shall maintain for each contribution a receipt from the donee showing the following information:

(i) The name of the donee.

(ii) The date and location of the contribution.

(iii) A description of the property in detail reasonably sufficient under the circumstances. Although the fair market value of the property is one of the circumstances to be taken into account in determining the amount of detail to be included on the receipt, such value need not be stated on the receipt.

A letter or other written communication from the donee acknowledging receipt of the contribution, showing the date of the contribution, and containing the required description of the property contributed constitutes a receipt for purposes of this paragraph. A receipt is not required if the contribution is made in circumstances where it is impractical to obtain a receipt (e.g., by depositing property at a charity's unattended drop site). In such cases, however, the taxpayer shall maintain reliable written records with respect to each item of donated property that include the information required by paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of this section.

(3) Deductions in excess of $500 claimed for a charitable contribution of property other than money—(i) In general. ***

* * * * *

(B) The cost or other basis, adjusted as provided by section 1016, of property, other than publicly traded securities, held by the taxpayer for a period of less than 12 months (6 months for property contributed in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982, and on or before June 6, 1988) immediately preceding the date on which the contribution was made and, when the information is available, of property, other than publicly traded securities, held for a period of 12 months or more (6 months or more for property contributed in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982, and on or before June 6, 1988) preceding the date on which the contribution was made.

(c) Deductions in excess of $5,000 for certain charitable contributions of property made after December 31, 1984—(1) General Rule—(i) In general. This paragraph applies to any charitable contribution made after December 31, 1984, by an individual, closely held corporation, personal service corporation, partnership, or S corporation of an item of property (other than money and publicly traded securities to which §1.170A-13(c)(7)(xi)(B) does not apply) if the amount claimed or reported as a deduction under section 170 with respect to such item exceeds $5,000. This paragraph also applies to charitable contributions by C corporations (as defined in section 1361(a)(2) of the Code) to the extent described in paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section. No deduction under section 170 shall be allowed with respect to a charitable contribution to which this paragraph applies unless the substantiation requirements described in paragraph (c)(2) of this section are met. For purposes of this paragraph (c), the amount claimed or reported as a deduction for an item of property is the aggregate amount claimed or reported as a deduction for a charitable contribution under section 170 for such items of property and all similar items of property (as defined in paragraph (c)(7)(iii) of this section) by the same donor for the same taxable year (whether or not donated to the same donee).

(ii) Special rule for property to which section 170(e)(3) or (4) applies. For purposes of this paragraph (c), in computing the amount claimed or reported as a deduction for donated property to which section 170(e)(3) or (4) applies (pertaining to certain contributions of inventory and scientific equipment) there shall be taken into account only the amount claimed or reported as a deduction in excess of the amount which would have been taken into account for tax purposes by the donor as costs of goods sold if the donor had sold the contributed property to the donee. For example, assume that a donor makes a contribution from inventory of clothing for the care of the needy to which section 170(e)(3) applies. The cost of the property to the donor was $5,000, and, pursuant to section 170(e)(3)(B), the donor claims a charitable contribution deduction of $8,000 with respect to the property. Therefore, $3,000 ($8,000-$5,000) is the amount taken into account for purposes of determining whether the $5,000 threshold of this paragraph (c)(1) is met.

(2) Substantiation requirements—(i) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section, a donor who claims or reports a deduction with respect to a charitable contribution to which this paragraph (c) applies must comply with the following three requirements:

(A) Obtain a qualified appraisal (as defined in paragraph (c)(3) of this section) for such property contributed. If the contributed property is a partial interest, the appraisal shall be of the partial interest.

(B) Attach a fully completed appraisal summary (as defined in paragraph (c)(4) of this section) to the tax return (or, in the case of a donor that is a partnership or S corporation, the information return) on which the deduction for the contribution is first claimed (or reported) by the donor.

(C) Maintain records containing the information required by paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of this section.

(ii) Special rules for certain nonpublicly traded stock, certain publicly traded securities, and contributions by certain C corporations. (A) In cases described in paragraph (c)(2)(ii)(B) of this section, a qualified appraisal is not required, and only a partially completed appraisal summary form (as described in paragraph (c)(4)(iv)(A) of this section) is required to be attached to the tax or information return specified in paragraph (c)(2)(i)(B) of this section. However, in all cases donors must maintain records containing the information required by paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of this section.

(B) This paragraph (c)(2)(ii) applies in each of the following cases:

(1) The contribution of nonpublicly traded stock, if the amount claimed or reported as a deduction for the charitable contribution of such stock is greater than $5,000 but does not exceed $10,000;

(2) The contribution of a security to which paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(B) of this section applies; and

(3) The contribution of an item of property or of similar items of property described in paragraph (c)(1) of this section made after June 6, 1988, by a C corporation (as defined in section 1361(a)(2) of the Code), other than a closely held corporation or a personal service corporation.

(3) Qualified appraisal—(i) In general. For purposes of this paragraph (c), the term "qualified appraisal" means an appraisal document that—

(A) Relates to an appraisal that is made not earlier than 60 days prior to the date of contribution of the appraised property nor later than the date specified in paragraph (c)(3)(iv)(B) of this section;

(B) Is prepared, signed, and dated by a qualified appraiser (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(5) of this section);

(C) Includes the information required by paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section; and

(D) Does not involve an appraisal fee prohibited by paragraph (c)(6) of this section.

(ii) Information included in qualified appraisal. A qualified appraisal shall include the following information:

(A) A description of the property in sufficient detail for a person who is not generally familiar with the type of property to ascertain that the property that was appraised is the property that was (or will be) contributed;

(B) In the case of tangible property, the physical condition of the property;

(C) The date (or expected date) of contribution to the donee;

(D) The terms of any agreement or understanding entered into (or expected to be entered into) by or on behalf of the donor or donee that relates to the use, sale, or other disposition of the property contributed, including, for example, the terms of any agreement or understanding that—

(1) Restricts temporarily or permanently a donee's right to use or dispose of the donated property,

(2) Reserves to, or confers upon, anyone (other than a donee organization or an organization participating with a donee organization in cooperative fund-raising) any right to the income from the contributed property or to the possession of the property, including the right to vote donated securities, to acquire the property by purchase or otherwise, or to designate the person having such income, possession, or right to acquire, or

(3) Earmarks donated property for a particular use;

(E) The name, address, and (if a taxpayer identification number is otherwise required by section 6109 and the regulations thereunder) the identifying number of the qualified appraiser; and, if the qualified appraiser is acting in his or her capacity as a partner in a partnership, an employee of any person (whether an individual, corporation, or partnerships), or an independent contractor engaged by a person other than the donor, the name, address, and taxpayer identification number (if a number is otherwise required by section 6109 and the regulations thereunder) of the partnership or the person who employs or engages the qualified appraiser;

(F) The qualifications of the qualified appraiser who signs the appraisal, including the appraiser's background, experience, education, and membership, if any, in professional appraisal associations;

(G) A statement that the appraisal was prepared for income tax purposes;

(H) The date (or dates) on which the property was appraised;

(I) The appraised fair market value (within the meaning of §1.170A-1(c)(2)) of the property on the date (or expected date) of contribution;

(J) The method of valuation used to determine the fair market value, such as the income approach, the market-data approach, and the replacement-cost-less-depreciation approach; and

(K) The specific basis for the valuation, such as specific comparable sales transactions or statistical sampling, including a justification for using sampling and an explanation of the sampling procedure employed.

(iii) Effect of signature of the qualified appraiser. Any appraiser who falsely or fraudulently overstates the value of the contributed property referred to in a qualified appraisal or appraisal summary (as defined in paragraph (c)(3) and (4), respectively, of this section) that the appraiser has signed may be subject to a civil penalty under section 6701 for aiding and abetting an understatement of tax liability and, moreover, may have appraisals disregarded pursuant to 31 U.S.C. §330(c).

(iv) Special rules—(A) Number of qualified appraisals. For purposes of paragraph (c)(2)(i)(A) of this section, a separate qualified appraisal is required for each item of property that is not included in a group of similar items of property. See paragraph (c)(7)(iii) of this section for the definition of similar items of property. Only one qualified appraisal is required for a group of similar items of property contributed in the same taxable year of the donor, although a donor may obtain separate qualified appraisals for each item of property. A qualified appraisal prepared with respect to a group of similar items of property shall provide all the information required by paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section for each item of similar property, except that the appraiser may select any items whose aggregate value is appraised at $100 or less and provide a group description of such items.

(B) Time of receipt of qualified appraisal. The qualified appraisal must be received by the donor before the due date (including extensions) of the return on which a deduction is first claimed (or reported in the case of a donor that is a partnership or S corporation) under section 170 with respect to the donated property, or, in the case of a deduction first claimed (or reported) on an amended return, the date on which the return is filed.

(C) Retention of qualified appraisal. The donor must retain the qualified appraisal in the donor's records for so long as it may be relevant in the administration of any internal revenue law.

(D) Appraisal disregarded pursuant to 31 U.S.C. 330(c). If an appraisal is disregarded pursuant to 31 U.S.C. 330(c) it shall have no probative effect as to the value of the appraised property. Such appraisal will, however, otherwise constitute a "qualified appraisal" for purposes of this paragraph (c) if the appraisal summary includes the declaration described in paragraph (c)(4)(ii)(L)(2) and the taxpayer had no knowledge that such declaration was false as of the time described in paragraph (c)(4)(i)(B) of this section.

(4) Appraisal summary—(i) In general. For purposes of this paragraph (c), except as provided in paragraph (c)(4)(iv)(A) of this section, the term "appraisal summary" means a summary of a qualified appraisal that—

(A) Is made on the form prescribed by the Internal Revenue Service;

(B) Is signed and dated (as described in paragraph (c)(4)(iii) of this section) by the donee (or presented to the donee for signature in cases described in paragraph (c)(4)(iv)(C)(2) of this section);

(C) Is signed and dated by the qualified appraiser (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(5) of this section) who prepared the qualified appraisal (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(3) of this section); and

(D) Includes the information required by paragraph (c)(4)(ii) of this section.

(ii) Information included in an appraisal summary. An appraisal summary shall include the following information:

(A) The name and taxpayer identification number of the donor (social security number if the donor is an individual or employer identification number if the donor is a partnership or corporation);

(B) A description of the property in sufficient detail for a person who is not generally familiar with the type of property to ascertain that the property that was appraised is the property that was contributed;

(C) In the case of tangible property, a brief summary of the overall physical condition of the property at the time of the contribution;

(D) The manner of acquisition (e.g., purchase, exchange, gift, or bequest) and the date of acquisition of the property by the donor, or, if the property was created, produced, or manufactured by or for the donor, a statement to that effect and the approximate date the property was substantially completed;

(E) The cost or other basis of the property adjusted as provided by section 1016;

(F) The name, address, and taxpayer identification number of the donee;

(G) The date the donee received the property;

(H) For charitable contributions made after June 6, 1988, a statement explaining whether or not the charitable contribution was made by means of a bargain sale and the amount of any consideration received from the donee for the contribution;

(I) The name, address, and (if a taxpayer identification number is otherwise required by section 6109 and the regulations thereunder) the identifying number of the qualified appraiser who signs the appraisal summary and of other persons as required by paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(E) of this section;

(J) The appraised fair market value of the property on the date of contribution;

(K) The declaration by the appraiser described in paragraph (c)(5)(i) of this section;

(L) A declaration by the appraiser stating that—

(1) The fee charged for the appraisal is not of a type prohibited by paragraph (c)(6) of this section; and

(2) Appraisals prepared by the appraiser are not being disregarded pursuant to 31 U.S.C. §330(c) on the date the appraisal summary is signed by the appraiser; and

(M) Such other information as may be specified by the form.

(iii) Signature of the original donee. The person who signs the appraisal summary for the donee shall be an official authorized to sign the tax or information returns of the donee, or a person specifically authorized to sign appraisal summaries by an official authorized to sign the tax or information returns of such donee. In the case of a donee that is a governmental unit, the person who signs the appraisal summary for such donee shall be the official authorized by such donee to sign appraisal summaries. The signature of the donee on the appraisal summary does not represent concurrence in the appraised value of the contributed property. Rather, it represents acknowledgment of receipt of the property described in the appraisal summary on the date specified in the appraisal summary that the donee understands the information reporting requirements imposed by section 6050L and §1.6050L-1. In general, §1.6050L-1 requires the donee to file an information return with the Internal Revenue Service in the event the donee sells, exchanges, consumes, or otherwise disposes of the property (or any portion thereof) described in the appraisal summary within 2 years after the date of the donor's contribution of such property.

(iv) Special rules—(A) Content of appraisal summary required in certain cases. With respect to contributions of nonpublicly traded stock described in paragraph (c)(2)(ii)(B)(1) of this section, contributions of securities described in paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(B) of this section, and contributions by C corporations described in paragraph (c)(2)(ii)(B)(3) of this section, the term "appraisal summary" means a document that—

(1) Complies with the requirements of paragraph (c)(4)(i)(A) and (B) of this section,

(2) Includes the information required by paragraph (c)(4)(ii)(A) through (H) of this section,

(3) Includes the amount claimed or reported as a charitable contribution deduction, and

(4) In the case of securities described in paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(B) of this section, also includes the pertinent average trading price (as described in paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(B)(2)(iii) of this section).

(B) Number of appraisal summaries. A separate appraisal summary for each item of property described in paragraph (c)(1) of this section must be attached to the donor's return. If, during the donor's taxable year, the donor contributes similar items of property described in paragraph (c)(1) of this section to more than one donee, the donor shall attach to the donor's return a separate appraisal summary for each donee. See paragraph (c)(7)(iii) of this section for the definition of similar items of property. If, however, during the donor's taxable year, a donor contributes similar items of property described in paragraph (c)(1) of this section to the same donee, the donor may attach to the donor's return a single appraisal summary with respect to all similar items of property contributed to the same donee. Such an appraisal summary shall provide all the information required by paragraph (c)(4)(ii) of this section for each item of property, except that the appraiser may select any items whose aggregate value is appraised at $100 or less and provide a group description for such items.

(C) Manner of acquisition, cost basis and donee's signature. (1) If a taxpayer has reasonable cause for being unable to provide the information required by paragraph (c)(4)(ii)(D) and (E) of this section (relating to the manner of acquisition and basis of the contributed property), an appropriate explanation should be attached to the appraisal summary. The taxpayer's deduction will not be disallowed simply because of the inability (for reasonable cause) to provide these items of information.

(2) In rare and unusual circumstances in which it is impossible for the taxpayer to obtain the signature of the donee on the appraisal summary as required by paragraph (c)(4)(i)(B) of this section, the taxpayer's deduction will not be disallowed for that reason provided that the taxpayer attaches a statement to the appraisal summary explaining, in detail, why it was not possible to obtain the donee's signature. For example, if the donee ceases to exist as an entity subsequent to the date of the contribution and prior to the date when the appraisal summary must be signed, and the donor acted reasonably in not obtaining the donee's signature at the time of the contribution, relief under this paragraph (c)(4)(iv)(C)(2) would generally be appropriate.

(D) Information excluded from certain appraisal summaries. The information required by paragraph (c)(4)(i)(C), paragraph (c)(4)(ii)(D), (E), (H) through (M), and paragraph (c)(4)(iv)(A)(3), and the average trading price referred to in paragraph (c)(4)(iv)(A)(4) of this section do not have to be included in the appraisal summary at the time it is signed by the donee or a copy is provided to the donee pursuant to paragraph (c)(4)(iv)(E) of this section.

(E) Statement to be furnished by donors to donees. Every donor who presents an appraisal summary to a donee for signature after June 6, 1988, in order to comply with paragraph (c)(4)(i)(B) of this section shall furnish a copy of the appraisal summary to such donee.

(F) Appraisal summary required to be provided to partners and S corporation shareholders. If the donor is a partnership or S corporation, the donor shall provide a copy of the appraisal summary to every partner or shareholder, respectively, who receives an allocation of a charitable contribution deduction under section 170 with respect to the property described in the appraisal summary.

(G) Partners and S corporation shareholders. A partner of a partnership or shareholder of an S corporation who receives an allocation of a deduction under section 170 for a charitable contribution of property to which this paragraph (c) applies must attach a copy of the partnership's or S corporation's appraisal summary to the tax return on which the deduction for the contribution is first claimed. If such appraisal summary is not attached, the partner's or shareholder's deduction shall not be allowed except as provided for in paragraph (c)(4)(iv)(H) of this section.

(H) Failure to attach appraisal summary. In the event that a donor fails to attach to the donor's return an appraisal summary as required by paragraph (c)(2)(i)(B) of this section, the Internal Revenue Service may request that the donor submit the appraisal summary within 90 days of the request. If such a request is made and the donor complies with the request within the 90-day period, the deduction under section 170 shall not be disallowed for failure to attach the appraisal summary, provided that the donor's failure to attach the appraisal summary was a good faith omission and the requirements of paragraph (c)(3) and (4) of this section are met (including the completion of the qualified appraisal prior to the date specified in paragraph (c)(3)(iv)(B) of this section).

(5) Qualified appraiser—(i) In general. The term "qualified appraiser" means an individual (other than a person described in paragraph (c)(5)(iv) of this section) who includes on the appraisal summary (described in paragraph (c)(4) of this section), a declaration that—

(A) The individual either holds himself or herself out to the public as an appraiser or performs appraisals on a regular basis;

(B) Because of the appraiser's qualifications as described in the appraisal (pursuant to paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(F) of this section), the appraiser is qualified to make appraisals of the type of property being valued;

(C) The appraiser is not one of the persons described in paragraph (c)(5)(iv) of this section; and

(D) The appraiser understands that an intentionally false or fraudulent overstatement of the value of the property described in the qualified appraisal or appraisal summary may subject the appraiser to a civil penalty under section 6701 for aiding and abetting an understatement of tax liability, and, moreover, the appraiser may have appraisals disregarded pursuant to 31 U.S.C. §330(c) (see paragraph (c)(3)(iii) of this section).

(ii) Exception. An individual is not a qualified appraiser with respect to a particular donation, even if the declaration specified in paragraph (c)(5)(i) of this section is provided in the appraisal summary, if the donor had knowledge of facts that would cause a reasonable person to expect the appraiser falsely to overstate the value of the donated property (e.g., the donor and the appraiser make an agreement concerning the amount at which the property will be valued and the donor knows that such amount exceeds the fair market value of the property).

(iii) Numbers of appraisers. More than one appraiser may appraise the donated property. If more than one appraiser appraises the property, the donor does not have to use each appraiser's appraisal for purposes of substantiating the charitable contribution deduction pursuant to this paragraph (c). If the donor uses the appraisal of more than one appraiser, or if two or more appraisers contribute to a single appraisal, each appraiser shall comply with the requirements of this paragraph (c), including signing the qualified appraisal and appraisal summary as required by paragraphs (c)(3)(i)(B) and (c)(4)(i)(C) of this section, respectively.

(iv) Qualified appraiser exclusions. The following persons cannot be qualified appraisers with respect to particular property:

(A) The donor or the taxpayer who claims or reports a deduction under section 170 for the contribution of the property that is being appraised.

(B) A party to the transaction in which the donor acquired the property being appraised (i.e., the person who sold, exchanged, or gave the property to the donor, or any person who acted as an agent for the transferor or for the donor with respect to such sale, exchange, or gift), unless the property is donated within 2 months of the date of acquisition and its appraised value does not exceed its acquisition price.

(C) The donee of the property.

(D) Any person employed by any of the foregoing persons (e.g., if the donor acquired a painting from an art dealer, neither the art dealer nor persons employed by the dealer can be qualified appraisers with respect to that painting).

(E) Any person related to any of the foregoing persons under section 267(b), or, with respect to appraisals made after June 6, 1988, married to a person who is in a relationship described in section 267(b) with any of the foregoing persons.

(F) An appraiser who is regularly used by any person described in paragraph (c)(5)(iv)(A), (B), or (C) of this section and who does not perform a majority of his or her appraisals made during his or her taxable year for other persons.

(6) Appraisal fees—(i) In general. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (c)(6)(ii) of this section, no part of the fee arrangement for a qualified appraisal can be based, in effect, on a percentage (or set of percentages) of the appraised value of the property. If a fee arrangement for an appraisal is based in whole or in part on the amount of the appraised value of the property, if any, that is allowed as a deduction under section 170, after Internal Revenue Service examination or otherwise, it shall be treated as a fee based on a percentage of the appraised value of the property. For example, an appraiser's fee that is subject to reduction by the same percentage as the appraised value may be reduced by the Internal Revenue Service would be treated as a fee that violates this paragraph (c)(6).

(ii) Exception. Paragraph (c)(6)(i) of this section does not apply to a fee paid to a generally recognized association that regulates appraisers provided all of the following requirements are met:

(A) The association is not organized for profit and no part of the net earnings of the association inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual (these terms have the same meaning as in section 501(c)),

(B) The appraiser does not receive any compensation from the association or any other persons for making the appraisal, and

(C) The fee arrangement is not based in whole or in part on the amount of the appraised value of the donated property, if any, that is allowed as a deduction under section 170 after Internal Revenue Service examination or otherwise.

(7) Meaning of terms. For purposes of this paragraph (c)—

(i) Closely held corporation. The term "closely held corporation" means any corporation (other than an S corporation) with respect to which the stock ownership requirement of paragraph (2) of section 542(a) of the Code is met.

(ii) Personal service corporation. The term "personal service corporation" means any corporation (other than an S corporation) which is a service organization (within the meaning of section 414(m)(3) of the Code).

(iii) Similar items of property. The phrase "similar items of property" means property of the same generic category or type, such as stamp collections (including philatelic supplies and books on stamp collecting), coin collections (including numismatic supplies and books on coin collecting), lithographs, paintings, photographs, books, nonpublicly traded stock, nonpublicly traded securities other than nonpublicly traded stock, land, buildings, clothing, jewelry, furniture, electronic equipment, household appliances, toys, everyday kitchenware, china, crystal, or silver. For example, if a donor claims on her return for the year deductions of $2,000 for books given by her to College A, $2,500 for books given by her to College B, and $900 for books given by her to College C, the $5,000 threshold of paragraph (c)(1) of this section is exceeded. Therefore, the donor must obtain a qualified appraisal for the books and attach to her return three appraisal summaries for the books donated to A, B, and C. For rules regarding the number of qualified appraisals and appraisal summaries required when similar items of property are contributed, see paragraphs (c)(3)(iv)(A) and (c)(4)(iv)(B), respectively, of this section.

(iv) Donor. The term "donor" means a person or entity (other than an organization described in section 170(c) to which the donated property was previously contributed) that makes a charitable contribution of property.

(v) Donee. The term "donee" means—

(A) Except as provided in paragraph (c)(7)(v)(B) and (C) of this section, an organization described in section 170(c) to which property is contributed,

(B) Except as provided in paragraph (c)(7)(v)(C) of this section, in the case of a charitable contribution of property placed in trust for the benefit of an organization described in section 170(c), the trust, or

(C) In the case of a charitable contribution of property placed in trust for the benefit of an organization described in section 170(c) made on or before June 6, 1988, the beneficiary that is an organization described in section 170(c), or if the trust has assumed the duties of a donee by signing the appraisal summary pursuant to paragraph (c)(4)(i)(B) of this section, the trust.

In general, the term refers only to the original donee. However, with respect to paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(D), the last sentence of paragraph (c)(4)(iii), and paragraph (c)(5)(iv)(C) of this section, the term "donee" means the original donee and all successor donees in cases where the original donee transfers the contributed property to a successor donee after July 5, 1988.

(vi) Original donee. The term "original donee" means the donee to or for which property is initially donated by a donor.

(vii) Successor donee. The term "successor donee" means any donee of property other than its original donee (i.e., a transferee of property for less than fair market value from an original donee or another successor donee).

(viii) Fair market value. For the meaning of the term "fair market value," see section 1.170A-1(c)(2).

(ix) Nonpublicly traded securities. The term "nonpublicly traded securities" means securities (within the meaning of section 165(g)(2) of the Code) which are not publicly traded securities as defined in paragraph (c)(7)(xi) of this section.

(x) Nonpublicly traded stock. The term "nonpublicly traded stock" means any stock of a corporation (evidence by a stock certificate) which is not a publicly traded security. The term stock does not include a debenture or any other evidence of indebtedness.

(xi) Publicly traded securities—(A) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(C) of this section, the term "publicly traded securities" means securities (within the meaning of section 165(g)(2) of the Code) for which (as of the date of the contribution) market quotations are readily available on an established securities market. For purposes of this section, market quotations are readily available on an established securities market with respect to a security if:

(1) The security is listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange, or any city or regional exchange in which quotations are published on a daily basis, including foreign securities listed on a recognized foreign, national, or regional exchange in which quotations are published daily basis;

(2) The security is regularly traded in the national or regional over-the-counter market, for which published quotations are available; or

(3) The security is a share of an open-end investment company (commonly known as a mutual fund) registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended (15 U.S.C. 80a-1 to 80b-2), for which quotations are published on a daily basis in a newspaper of general circulation throughout the United States.

(If the market value of an issue of a security is reflected only on an interdealer quotation system, the issue shall not be considered to be publicly traded unless the special rule described in paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(B) of this section is satisfied.)

(B) Special rule—(1) In General. An issue of a security that does not satisfy the requirements of paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(A)(1), (2), or (3) of this section shall nonetheless be considered to have market quotations readily available on an established securities market for purposes of paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(A) of this section if all of the following five requirements are met:

(i) The issue is regularly traded during the computational period (as defined in paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(B)(2)(iv) of this section) in a market that is reflected by the existence of an interdealer quotation system for the issue,

(ii) The issuer or an agent of the issuer computes the average trading price (as defined in paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(B)(2)(iii) of this section) for the issue for the computational period,

(iii) The average trading price and total volume of the issue during the computational period are published in a newspaper of general circulation throughout the United States not later than the last day of the month following the end of the calendar quarter in which the computational period ends,

(iv) The issuer or its agent keeps books and records that list for each transaction during the computational period involving each issue covered by this procedure the date of the settlement of the transaction, the name and address of the broker or dealer making the market in which the transaction occurred, and the trading price and volume, and

(v) The issuer or its agent permits the Internal Revenue Service to review the books and records described in paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(B)(1)(iv) of this section with respect to transactions during the computational period upon giving reasonable notice to the issuer or agent.

(2) Definitions. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(B)—

(i) Issue of a security. The term "issue of a security" means a class of debt securities with the same obligor and identical terms except as to their relative denominations (amounts) or a class of stock having identical rights.

(ii) Interdealer quotation system. The term "interdealer quotation system" means any system of general circulation to brokers and dealers that regularly disseminates quotations of obligations by two or more identified brokers or dealers, who are not related to either the issuer of the security or to the issuer's agent, who compute the average trading price of the security. A quotation sheet prepared and distributed by a broker or dealer in the regular course of its business and containing only quotations of such broker or dealer is not an interdealer quotation system.

(iii) Average trading price. The term "average trading price" means the mean price of all transactions (weighted by volume), other than original issue or redemption transactions, conducted through a United States office of a broker or dealer who maintains a market in the issue of the security during the computational period. For this period, bid and asked quotations are not taken into account.

(iv) Computational period. For calendar quarters beginning on or after June 6, 1988, the term "computational period" means weekly during October through December (beginning with the first Monday in October and ending with the first Sunday following the last Monday in December) and monthly during January through September (beginning January 1). For calendar quarters beginning before June 6, 1988, the term "computational period" means weekly during October through December and monthly during January through September.

(C) Exception. Securities described in paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(A) or (B) of this section shall not be considered publicly traded securities if—

(1) The securities are subject to any restrictions that materially affect the value of the securities to the donor or prevent the securities from being freely traded, or

(2) If the amount claimed or reported as a deduction with respect to the contribution of the securities is different than the amount listed in the market quotations that are readily available on an established securities market pursuant to paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(A) or (B) of this section.

(D) Market quotations and fair market value. The fair market value of a publicly traded security, as defined in this paragraph (c)(7)(xi), is not necessarily equal to its market quotation, its average trading price (as defined in paragraph (c)(7)(xi)(B)(2)(iii) of this section), or its face value, if any. See section 1.170A-1(c)(2) for the definition of "fair market value."

Par. 4. Paragraph (i) of §.170A-14 is amended by removing from the last sentence "§1.170A-13T(c)" and adding in its place "§1.170A-13(c)".

Par. 5. Section 1.6050L-1T is removed.

Par. 6. A new §1.6050L-1 is added immediately after §1.6050K-1 to read as follows:

§1.6050L-1 Information return by donees relating to certain dispositions of donated property.

(a) Information returns—(1) Disposition of charitable deduction property. If a donee of any charitable deduction property (as defined in paragraph (e) of this section) sells, exchanges, consumes, or otherwise disposes of (with or without consideration) such property (or any portion thereof) within 2 years after the date of the donor's contribution of such property, the donee shall make an information return on the form prescribed by the Internal Revenue Service. For special rules with respect to successor donees, see paragraph (c) of this section.

(2) Disposition of items appraised for $500 or less—(i) In general. Paragraph (a)(1) of this section shall not apply with respect to an item of charitable deduction property disposed of by sale if the appraisal summary (as defined in §1.170A-13(c)(4)) signed by the donee with respect to the item contains, at the time of the donee's signature, a statement signed by the donor that the appraised value of the item does not exceed $500. In the case of an appraisal summary that describes more than one item, this exception shall apply only with respect to an item clearly identified as having an appraised value of $500 or less. For purposes of this paragraph (a)(2)(i), items that form a set (such as, for example, a collection of books written by the same author, components of a stereo system, or a group of place settings of a pattern of silverware) are considered one item. In addition, all nonpublicly traded stock is considered one item as are all nonpublicly traded securities other than nonpublicly traded stock.

(ii) Transitional rule. Paragraph (a)(2)(i) of this section is satisfied with respect to an appraisal summary submitted to the donee on or before January 31, 1986, if such donee obtained the required statement from the donor on or before March 31, 1986, on either an amended appraisal summary or an attachment to the original appraisal summary.

(3) Consumption or distribution for exempt purpose. Paragraph (a)(1) of this section shall not apply with respect to an item of charitable deduction property consumed or distributed by a donee without consideration if the consumption or distribution is in furtherance of a purpose or function constituting a basis for such donee's exemption under section 501 of the Code. For example, no reporting is required with respect to medical supplies consumed or distributed by a tax-exempt relief organization in aiding disaster victims.

(b) Information required to be provided on return. The information return required by paragraph (a)(1) of this section shall include the following:

(1) The name, address, and employer identification number of the donee making the information return;

(2) A description of the property (or portion disposed of) in sufficient detail to identify the charitable deduction property received by such donee;

(3) The name and taxpayer identification number of the donor (social security number if the donor is an individual or employer identification number if the donor is a corporation or partnership);

(4) The date of the contribution to such donee;

(5) Any amount received by such donee with respect to the disposition;

(6) The date of the disposition by such donee; and

(7) Such other information as may be specified by the form or its instructions.

(c) Successor donees—(1) In general. Section 6050L and this section shall apply to successor donees that receive charitable deduction property (as defined in paragraph (e) of this section) that was transferred by the original donee after July 6, 1988, whether the successor donee received the property from the original donee or another successor donee). For definitions of the term "donor," "donee," "original donee," and "successor donee," see §1.170A-13(c)(7)(iv)-(vii).

(2) Information required to be provided on return. With respect to charitable deduction property that is transferred to one or more successor donees to which this section applies, the information return required by paragraph (a)(1) of this section shall include, in addition to the information described in paragraph (b) of this section, the following:

(i) The name, address, and employer identification number of the immediately succeeding successor donee (if any) and the immediately preceding successor donee (if any);

(ii) The name, address, and employer identification number of the original donee if different from the information required by paragraph (b)(1) of this section;

(iii) The date of contribution to the original donee; and

(iv) Such other information as may be specified by the form or its instructions.

(3) Information to be provided to transferor. Every successor donee to which this section applies that receives any charitable deduction property within the 2-year period described in paragraph (a)(1) of this section shall provide its name, address, and employer identification number to that preceding donee on or before the 15th day after the later of—

(i) The date of transfer to such successor donee, or

(ii) The date such successor donee receives a copy of the appraisal summary from the preceding donee.

(4) Donees that transfer property to successor donees. In addition to complying with the requirements of paragraph (a)(1) of this section, every donee that transfers any charitable deduction property to a successor donee to which this section applies within the 2-year period described in paragraph (a)(1) of this section—

(i) Shall provide its name, address, and employer identification number and copy of the appraisal summary (as described in §1.170A-13(c)(4)) relating to the transferred property to the successor donee on or before the 15th day after the latest of—

(A) The date of such transfer, or

(B) The date the original donee signs the appraisal summary, or

(C) In a case in which the transferring donee is a successor donee, the date such donee receives a copy of the appraisal summary from such donee's transferor, and

(ii) Shall provide a copy of its information return required by paragraph (a)(1) this section to the successor donee on or before the 15th day after the transferring donee files the information return pursuant to paragraph (e)(2) of this section.

(5) Donee. In the case of charitable deduction property that is transferred to a successor donee to which this section applies, the term "donee" as used in paragraph (a)(2) and (e) of this section means only the original donee.

(d) Special rules—(1) Statement to be furnished to donors. Every donee making a return under section 6050L and this section with respect to the disposition of charitable deduction property shall furnish a copy of the return to the donor of the property.

(2) Retention of appraisal summary. Every donee shall retain the appraisal summary described in §1.170A-13(c)(4) in the donee's records for so long as it may be relevant in the administration of any internal revenue law.

(e) Charitable deduction property. For purposes of this section, the term "charitable deduction property" means any property (other than money and publicly traded securities to which §1.170A-13(c)(7)(xi)(B) does not apply) contributed after December 31, 1984, with respect to which the donee signs (or is presented with for signature in cases described in §1.170A-13(c)(4)(iv)(C)(2)) an appraisal summary (as required by §1.170A-13(c)(4)(i)(B)). For purposes of this section, if such donee signs (or is presented with for signature in cases described in §1.170A-13(c)(4)(iv)(C)(2)) the appraisal summary after the date of contribution of the property, the property is deemed to be charitable deduction property from the date of contribution.

(f) Place and time for filing information returns—(1) Place for filing. The donee information return required by section 6050L and this section shall be filed with the Internal Revenue Service center listed on the return form or its instructions.

(2) Time for filing—(i) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (f)(2)(ii) of this section, the donee information return shall be filed on or before the 125th day after a donee sells, exchanges, consumes or otherwise disposes of the charitable deduction property. A donee information return filed pursuant to this paragraph (f)(2)(i) does not have to include the information required by paragraphs (b)(3), (4), (5), or (6), or (c)(2)(i)-(iii) of this section if such information is not available to the donee by the due date of the return.

(ii) Exception. Notwithstanding paragraph (f)(2)(i) of this section, in the case of a donee who, on the date of receipt of the transferred property, had no reason to believe that the substantiation requirements of §1.170A-13(c) apply with respect to the property, the donee information return is not required to be filed until the 60th day after the later of May 5, 1988, or the date on which such donee has reason to believe that the substantiation requirements of §1.170A-13(c) apply with respect to the property. A donee information return filed pursuant to this paragraph (f)(2)(ii) does not have to include the information required by paragraphs (b)(3), (4), (5), or (6), or (c)(2)(i)-(iii) of this section if such information is not available to the donee by the due date of the return.

(g) Penalties. For penalties for failure to comply with the requirements of this section, see sections 6676, 6721, and 6723.

Part VII.—Additional Itemized Deductions for Individuals

Section 212.—Expenses For Production of Income

26 CFR 1.212-1: Nontrade or nonbusiness expenses.

The fee paid by a syndicated limited partnership for the tax opinion used in the partnership's prospectus is a syndication expense chargeable by the partnership to a capital account and can not be amortized. See Rev. Rul. 88-4, page 264.

Section 217.—Moving Expenses

26 CFR 1.217-2: Deduction for moving expenses paid or incurred in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1969.

Moving expenses; U.S. Government employee. The transfer of a U.S. Government employee is not a transfer within the meaning of section 217(d)(1)(B) of the Code if the employee initiates the transfer even if the transfer is in the interest of the government.

Rev. Rul. 88-47

ISSUE

If a transfer of a U.S. government employee is determined to be in the interest of the government and not primarily for the convenience or benefit of the employee or at the employee's request and, based on this determination, the employee's moving expenses are reimbursed, is the transfer necessarily "for the benefit of an employer" within the meaning of section 217(d)(1)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

During 1986, A, an individual, was employed by L, a private company. On January 2, 1987, A commenced employment with M, an agency of the U.S. government located in a different part of the country from where L was located. On A's 1986 federal income tax return, deductions were claimed for moving expenses associated with the move from employer L to employer M. None of A's costs associated with this move were reimbursed by M.

When A commenced employment with M, A expected to remain employed in that position indefinitely. However, on April 1, 1987, A applied for another position with M in response to a vacancy announcement posted by M under its merit promotion program. M subsequently offered the position to A, and on July 1, 1987, A accepted the offer. The new position was not located in the same part of the country as A's original position with M. In connection with the change of positions, M reimbursed A for a portion of A's travel, transportation, and relocation expenses. The reimbursement was made pursuant to 5 U.S.C. sections 5724, 5724a, 5724b, and 5724c (1987). Such reimbursement is authorized only if the employing agency determines that the transfer is in the interest of the government and is not made primarily for the convenience or benefit of the employee or at the employee's request. See 5 U.S.C. section 5724(h) and paragraph 2-1.3, Federal Travel Regulations, FPMR 101-7 (March 13, 1984). See also Eugene R. Platt, 61 Comp. Gen. 156 (1981), and 59 Comp. Gen. 699 (1980).

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 217(a) of the Code provides for the allowance of a deduction for moving expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in connection with the commencement of work by the taxpayer as an employee or as a self-employed individual at a new principal place of work. In general, no deduction is allowed under section 217 unless the requirements stated in section 217(c) are satisfied.

Section 217(c)(2) of the Code requires that the taxpayer be either a full-time employee or a self-employed individual for specified time periods following the taxpayer's arrival in the general location of the new principal place of work. For a full-time employee such as A, this requirement may be satisfied under section 217(c)(2)(A) if the taxpayer is a full-time employee in the general location of the new principal place of work for at least 39 weeks during the 12-month period immediately following the taxpayer's arrival in that general location.

Under section 217(d)(1) of the Code, the foregoing requirement is inapplicable if the taxpayer is unable to satisfy the requirement by reason of (A) death or disability, or (B) involuntary separation (other than for willful misconduct) from the service of an employer, or a transfer for the benefit of an employer, after obtaining full-time employment in which the taxpayer could reasonably have been expected to satisfy such requirement.

Section 217(d) was added to the Code by the Tax Reform Act of 1969, section 231, 1969-3 C.B. 10, 61-63. Prior to the addition of the section, there was no provision for waiving the 39-week requirement imposed by the predecessor of section 217(c)(2)(A). Section 217(d)(1) was added to eliminate the hardship that arose when an employee "is prevented from satisfying the test by circumstances beyond his control, such as his death or an unexpected action of his employer." S. Rep. No. 91-552, 91st Cong., 1st Sess. 108 (1969), 1969-3 C.B. 423, 493 (emphasis added); see also H.R. Rep. No., 91-413 (Part 1) 91st Cong., 1st Sess. 75 (1969), 1969-3 C.B. 200,

247. In reliance on this legislative history, the Tax Court has denied moving expense deductions in cases where a taxpayer was not required by the employer to transfer from one location to another. Muse v. Commissioner, 76 T.C. 574, 577 (1981), and Rohwer v. Commissioner, T.C.M. 1984-60.

In Rohwer, the taxpayer transferred from the employer's Bakersfield, California, office to its Los Angeles, California, office in response to the employer's advertisement of the need for additional staff in the Los Angeles office. Because of a hiring freeze at the time of the transfer, the employer could fill vacancies only by transferring employees. The taxpayer had not satisfied the 39-week test in section 217(c)(2)(A) of the Code with respect to the Bakersfield work location. The Tax Court held that while the employee's transfer served a need of the employer, that alone is insufficient under section 217(d)(1)(B) to waive the section 217(c)(2)(A) 39-week requirement. The court concluded that the taxpayer must be required by the employer to transfer in order for the transfer to be considered for the employer's benefit for purposes of the section 217(d)(1)(B) waiver. Congress intended to grant relief from the requirement imposed by section 217(c)(2) only in the case of events beyond the taxpayer's control, such as the taxpayer's death, disability, or involuntary termination, or a transfer required by the employer.

In Muse, the Tax Court stated that the phrase "transfer for the benefit of an employer" used in section 217(d)(1) " . . .was meant to cover a transfer beyond the control of the employee; that is, a transfer initiated by the employer, not one initiated by the employee." 76 T.C. at 577.

Although A's change of positions was sufficiently in the government's interest for A's moving expenses to be reimbursed, the transfer was initiated by A and was not required by M. Therefore, the transfer was not for the benefit of M within the meaning of section 217(d)(1) of the Code. A's expenses of moving in connection with commencing work on January 2, 1987, for employer M in the new location are not deductible because neither the 39-week requirement of section 217(c)(2)(A) nor the waiver provision in section 217(d)(1)(B) has been satisfied.

HOLDING

A is not entitled to a deduction under section 217(a) of the Code for the expenses of moving in connection with commencing work for employer M.

Part IX.—Items Not Deductible

Section 263.—Capital Expenditures

26 CFR 1.263(a)-1: Capital expenditures; in general.
(Also Section 612; 1.612-4.)

Intangible drilling and development costs; exploratory holes. Costs incurred to drill expendable holes to determine the location and delineation of offshore hydrocarbon deposits and capable of conducting hydrocarbons to the surface on completion are within the option to expense intangible drilling and development costs (IDC) provided by section 263(c) of the Code regardless of whether there is an intent to produce hydrocarbons.

Rev. Rul. 88-10

ISSUE

Whether costs incurred to drill expendable holes to determine the location and delineation of offshore hydrocarbon deposits are within the option to expense intangible drilling and development costs (IDC) pursuant to section 263(c) of the Internal Revenue Code.

FACTS

The taxpayer, an integrated oil and gas company, was the successful bidder for certain United States oil and gas leases on the outer continental shelf. The taxpayer had previously obtained favorable geological and geophysical information on the lease area. During the tax year, the taxpayer drilled 16 bore holes from mobile drilling rigs in water depths varying from 170 feet to 370 feet and at locations ranging from 25 to 130 miles offshore. The drilling sites were located according to structural interpretations of geological and geophysical data. The bore holes were drilled to ascertain the existence, extent, and configuration of hydrocarbon deposits. The taxpayer sought this information to determine whether to develop the leases and, if it did so, the optimum number and location of wells and platforms that should be used for development. Although the diameters of the bore holes and the casings were similar to those of wells that would be drilled to comparable depths for the production of oil and gas, the bore holes were drilled without the intention of attempting any completions for the production of oil and gas. Some of the bore holes exhibited producing potential, but after testing and logging were plugged and the casings cut off below the sea floor.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 263(a) of the Internal Revenue Code provides that no deduction shall be allowed for capital expenditures. Section 263(c) of the Code provides that, notwithstanding section 263(a), regulations shall be prescribed that grant the option to deduct as expenses intangible drilling and development costs in the case of oil and gas wells.

Section 1.612-4 of the Income Tax Regulations provides that intangible drilling and development costs (IDC) incurred by an operator in the development of oil and gas properties may at the operator's option be chargeable to capital or to expense. Expenditures that are included in this option are listed in section 1.612-4(a) as wages, fuel, repairs, hauling, supplies, etc., incident to and necessary for the drilling of wells and the preparation of wells for the production of oil and gas.

In Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) v. Commissioner, 68 T.C. 325 (1977), acq., 1983-1 C.B. 1, the Tax Court concluded that the option to capitalize or expense applied to the costs incurred by the taxpayer in drilling offshore expendable holes to determine the location and delineation of offshore hydrocarbon deposits. Although it held that such costs were eligible for the IDC option even under the test urged by the Service, the court went on to add that the dividing line between "exploratory" work that must be capitalized and "development" activities that come within the IDC option should be the point at which the preparation for drilling begins. The court noted that the regulations neither expressly or implicitly limit "wells" to those drilled after a decision has been made to install a permanent drilling and production platform. Accordingly, the court reasoned that the intangible cost of drilling all offshore wells, including those drilled with mobile drilling rigs, should be subject to the IDC option.

In Gates Rubber Co. v. Commissioner, 74 T.C. 1456 (1980), acq., 1983-1 C.B. 1, aff'd per curiam, 694 F.2d 648 (10th Cir. 1982), the Tax Court confirmed its dicta from the Standard Oil case, concluding that the cost of drilling exploratory holes at offshore lease sites comes within the IDC option. The court stated that the Commissioner's attempted distinction between exploratory and development activities would deny the deduction for the precise high risk drillings for which the deduction was intended.

In Sun Co. v. Commissioner, 677 F.2d 294 (3rd Cir. 1982), aff'g 74 T.C. 1481 (1980), acq., 1983-1 C.B. 1, the Third Circuit affirmed the decision of the Tax Court that the cost of drilling exploratory holes at offshore lease sites comes within the IDC option. The Third Circuit reasoned that since the IDC regulation does not expressly distinguish between exploratory and developmental drilling, the Service's argument, based upon that purported distinction, was misplaced.

The Tax Court, in Sun Co. defined the term "well" for purposes of section 263(c) of the Code and section 1.612-4 of the regulations as a shaft drilled in search of hydrocarbons, which is designed and drilled to be capable, upon encountering hydrocarbons and upon appropriate completion of the shaft by the operator, of conducting or aiding in the conduction of hydrocarbons to the surface. This definition of wells excludes shafts such as core drilling which, because of their design or the manner in which they are drilled, are not capable of conducting or aiding in the conduction of hydrocarbons to the surface; they are capable solely of yielding geological information. If an appropriately designed shaft is drilled in search of hydrocarbons, it is a well regardless of whether there is an intent to produce hydrocarbons.

In this case, the bore holes drilled offshore from mobile drilling rigs during the tax year fit the definition of a well. Therefore, the costs incurred by the taxpayer are, at its option, intangible drilling costs chargeable to capital or to expense. These wells are distinguished from offshore stratigraphic test wells described in Rev. Rul. 80-342, 1980-2 C.B. 99, drilled to obtain geological data by the participants who do not have an economic interest in the property.

HOLDING

Costs incurred to drill expendable holes to determine the location and delineation of offshore hydrocarbon deposits are within the option to expense intangible drilling and development costs (IDC) provided by section 263(c) of the Code and section 1.612-4 of the regulations.

Subchapter C.—Corporate Distributions and Adjustments
Part I.—Distributions by Corporations
Subpart A.—Effects on Recipients

Section 302.—Distributions in Redemption of Stock

26 CFR 1.346-1: Partial liquidation.

Several revenue rulings dealing the active trade or business requirement under section 355(b) or the substantially similar requirement under former section 346(b) (now section 302(e)) of the Code have been reconsidered and are being revoked because of the failure of those revenue rulings to state sufficient facts to support their respective conclusions. See Rev. Rul. 88-19, page 114.

Part III.—Corporate Organizations and Reorganizations
Subpart A.—Corporate Organizations

Section 351.—Transfer to Corporation Controlled by Transferor

26 CFR 1.351-1: Transfer to corporation controlled by transferor.

Transfer to corporation controlled by transferor. The transfers of stock of one corporation to a newly created corporation by the transferors followed by the sale of the transferred stock and purchase of other stocks and securities by the transferee corporation do not constitute transfers to an investment company within the meaning of section 351(e) of the Code. The transfers qualify for nonrecognition of gain or loss under section 351(a).

Rev. Rul. 88-32

ISSUE

If several persons transfer the marketable stock of a corporation to a newly organized corporation and the transferee corporation, pursuant to a preexisting plan, subsequently sells the stock and purchases other marketable stocks and securities, do the initial transfers constitute transfers to an "investment company" within the meaning of section 351(e)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

The stock of Y corporation is actively traded on a public stock exchange. Some Y shareholders transferred Y stock to X, a newly organized corporation, in exchange for all of the X stock. No assets other than the Y stock were transferred to X. None of the transferors had acquired any of the Y stock transferred to X as part of the same plan to organize X. However, as part of the same plan, X sold significant amounts of the Y stock in transactions in which X recognized gain or loss. X used the proceeds from the sales to purchase other readily marketable stocks and securities. Immediately after the transfer, Y will fit the description in section 1.351-1(c)(1)(ii) of the Income Tax Regulations. Except for the question here at issue regarding limitations on transfers to an investment company under section 351(e)(1), the exchange of the Y stock for X stock met all requirements of section 351 and the regulations thereunder.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 351(a) of the Code provides that no gain or loss will be recognized if property is transferred to a corporation by one or more persons solely in exchange for stock or securities in such corporation and immediately after the exchange the transferors are in control (as defined in section 368(c)) of the corporation.

Section 351(e)(1) of the Code and section 1.351-1(c)(1) of the regulations provide that section 351 will not apply to transfers of property to an investment company ocurring after June 30, 1967. Section 1.351-1(c)(1) further provides that a transfer of property will be considered a transfer to an investment company if (i) the transfer results, directly or indirectly, in diversification of the transferors' interests and (ii) the transferree is (a) a regulated investment company, (b) a real estate investment trust, or (c) a corporation more than 80 percent of the value of whose assets are held for investment and are readily marketable stocks or securities, or interests in regulated investment companies or real estate investment trusts.

Section 1.351-1(c)(2) of the regulations provides that the determination of whether a corporation is an investment company is ordinarily made by reference to the circumstances in existence immediately after the transfer in question.

Section 1.351-1(c)(5) of the regulations provides that if two or more persons transfer identical assets to a newly organized corporation, the transfer will generally be treated as not resulting in diversification. However, if a transfer is part of a plan to achieve diversification without the recognition of gain, the transfer will be treated as resulting in diversification.

The initial transfer of the Y stock to X did not result in diversification. The Y shareholders transferred identical assets (Y stock) to a newly organized corporation (X). Under section 1.351-1(c)(5) of the regulations, such a transfer is treated as not resulting in diversification unless it is part of a plan to achieve diversification in a series of nonrecognition transactions. In the present situation, although the transferors acquire a more diversified investment than the Y stock, by reason of X's subsequent sale of the Y stock and X's purchase of other marketable investments, this diversification does not occur in a transaction purporting to qualify for nonrecognition treatment. Thus, despite the economic diversification ultimately enjoyed by this transferors, their transfer of the Y stock to X does not result in diversification within the meaning of section 1.351-1(c)(1)(i) of the regulations.

HOLDING

The transfers of Y stock to X, followed by the sale of the Y stock by X and the purchase of other stocks and securities, do not constitute transfers to an "investment company" within the meaning of section 351(e)(1) of the Code. Therefore, the transfers qualify for nonrecognition of gain or loss to the transferors under section 351(a).

Subpart B.—Effects on Shareholders and Security Holders

Section 354.—Exchanges of Stock and Securities in Certain Reorganizations

26 CFR 1.354-1: Exchanges of stock and securities in certain reorganizations.

When a foreign corporation becomes a domestic corporation pursuant to a state domestication statute, the shareholders will be treated as having exchanged stock or securities in the foreign corporation for stock or securities in the new domestic corporation. See Rev. Rul. 88-25, page 116.

Section 355.—Distribution of Stock and Securities of a Controlled Corporation

26 CFR 1.355-1: Distribution of stock and securities of controlled corporation.
(Also Section 302; 1.346-1.)

Controlled corporation; stock distribution; active business. Several revenue rulings dealing with the active trade or business requirement under section 355(b) or the substantially similar requirement under former section 346(b) (now section 302(e)) of the Code have been reconsidered and are being revoked because of the failure of those revenue rulings to state sufficient facts to support their respective conclusions. Rev. Ruls. 58-164, 57-334, 56-557, 56-555, and 56-554 are revoked.

Rev. Rul. 88-19

The Internal Revenue Service has reconsidered several revenue rulings dealing with the active trade or business requirement under section 355(b) or the substantially similar requirement under former section 346(b) (now section 302(e)) of the Internal Revenue Code.

The active trade or business requirement of these Code provisions connotes substantial managerial and operational activities directly carried on by the corporation. See, e.g., Rev. Rul. 86-126, 1986-2 C.B. 58; Rev. Rul. 86-125, 1986-2 C.B. 57; Rev. Rul. 73-237, 1973-1 C.B. 184; and Rev. Rul. 73-234, 1973-1 C.B. 180. Furthermore, the activities must be sufficient to distinguish the corporation's entrepreneurial endeavors from mere passive investments. See, e.g., Rev. Rul. 79-394, 1979-2 C.B. 141.

The following revenue rulings do not represent the position of the Service because each concluded that the active trade or business test was met but failed to state sufficient facts to support that conclusion: Rev. Rul. 58-164, 1958-1 C.B. 184; Rev. Rul. 57-334, 1957-2 C.B. 240; Rev. Rul. 56-557, 1956-2 C.B. 199, clarified on another point by Rev. Rul. 86-4, 1986-1 C.B. 174; Rev. Rul. 56-555, 1956-2 C.B. 210; and Rev. Rul. 56-554, 1956-2 C.B. 198.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Ruls. 58-164, 57-334, 56-557, 56-555, and 56-554 are revoked.

26 CFR 1.355-2: Limitations.

Controlled corporation; stock distribution; business purpose. The business purpose requirement of section 1.355-2(c) of the regulations is satisfied when a corporation distributes the stock of its subsidiary in order to eliminate the time, expense and administrative fees involved in meeting state regulatory requirements imposed on the parent corporation because of the subsidiary's business.

Rev. Rul. 88-33

ISSUE

Is the business purpose requirement of section 1.355-2(c) of the Income Tax Regulations satisfied when stock of a controlled corporation is distributed in order to reduce substantially the amount of administrative time and expense necessary for compliance with state regulatory licensing and reporting requirements?

FACTS

P, a large, widely held, publicly traded corporation, has engaged primarily in the design, manufacture, and marketing of computers and associated software. No single P shareholder owns as much as 3 percent of the outstanding P stock.

At the time the transaction described below was consummated, S corporation had been a wholly owned subsidiary of P for more than 5 years. S had been engaged for over 5 years in the design and manufacture of hardware and software for the electronic gaming industry in state Q. No officer or director of P was also an officer or director of S.

Under the laws of Q, every gaming corporation and any corporation related to a gaming corporation must be licensed annually by the Q Gaming Commission. Because S was a wholly owned subsidiary of P, it too was subject to the Q licensing procedure. Under the laws of Q, P would have been subject to the annual licensing procedure even if P and S were brother-sister corporations. As part of the Q annual licensing procedure, both S and P had to prepare and file detailed annual financial reports. In addition to the annual financial reports, Q required that every officer and director of S and P submit each year to a full personal investigation, including a detailed, lengthy personal questionnaire. The annual licensing fee imposed by Q is 25,000*x* dollars for S, and an additional 25,000*x* dollars for P. The annual preparation of the questionnaires by the officers and directors of P involved a significant number of working hours for P's top management. As a result, the amount of time that P's top management could devote to the management of P's business was unnecessarily reduced, which reduction had a significant negative impact on the normal operations of P. These questionnaires also required a substantial increase in record keeping and the involvement of P's outside accountants and lawyers at an added annual cost to P of 20,000*x* dollars.

In order to eliminate the continuing administrative time and expense directly involving S, P and its officers and directors in meeting the annual Q licensing requirements for S, P distributed all the S stock pro rata to the P shareholders. Except for the question of the business purpose, the distribution of S stock by P met all the requirements of section 355 of the Internal Revenue Code and the applicable regulations.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 355 of the Code provides that under certain circumstances a corporation may distribute stock in a corporation it controls to its shareholders in a transaction in which no gain or loss is recognized to (and no amount is includible in the income of) the shareholders. Section 1.355-2(c) of the regulations provides that a distribution by a corporation of stock of a controlled corporation to its shareholders with respect to its own stock will not qualify under section 355 if carried out for purposes not germane to the business of the corporations. This provision is intended to limit the application of section 355 to those readjustments of corporate structure that are required by business exigencies.

Several revenue rulings have found a valid business purpose for a distribution under section 355 of the Code where the transaction resulted in a substantial reduction in the costs of doing business or a substantial reduction in impediments to the business of either the distributing or controlled corporation. Rev. Rul. 76-187, 1976-1 C.B. 97, concerned a distribution of the stock of a subsidiary corporation to the sole corporate shareholder in order to reduce substantially the amount of state and local capital taxes paid by the corporations. The ruling holds that the distribution was undertaken for a valid business purpose. In Rev. Rul 77-22, 1977-1 C.B. 91, a distribution of the stock of a subsidiary in order to increase the amount of commercial credit that would be available constituted a valid business purpose under section 355.

In the present situation, the distribution was undertaken for reasons similar to those in the cited revenue rulings—to eliminate significant limitations on profitability. The distribution relieved P of a substantial annual administrative burden imposed upon it and its management by Q as a result of P's stock ownership of S; and it removed P's computer business from the gaming licensing review of Q. An important factor present here is the annually recurring negative effect on business that was relieved by the distribution. Accordingly, the distribution by P of the S stock was for a purpose germane to the business of P within the meaning of section 1.355-2(c) of the regulations.

HOLDING

The business purpose requirement of section 1.355-2(c) of the regulations is satisfied by P's distribution of S stock to remove P's nongaming business from the licensing review process and to free P from the substantial continuing administrative expense and time required of P by Q for the annual licensing of S.

26 CFR 1.355-2: Limitations.

Controlled corporation; stock distribution; business purpose. The business purpose requirement under section 355 of the Code is met if a corporation distributes all of the stock of its subsidiary corporation in order to enable the subsidiary to hire a key employee who also wishes to acquire shares of stock of the subsidiary.

Rev. Rul. 88-34

ISSUE

Is the business purpose requirement of section 355 of the Internal Revenue Code and section 1.355-2(c) of the Income Tax Regulations met where a distribution of the stock of a controlled corporation is made to enable that corporation to hire a new president?

FACTS

X, a large widely held and publicly traded corporation, owned all the stock of Y corporation for more than five years. X and Y were each engaged in the active conduct of a separate and distinct trade or business for over five years. No shareholder of X owns as much as 5 percent of the outstanding stock of X.

The president of Y has recently retired and Y has conducted an extensive search for a new president. Y has interviewed A, an individual with substantial prior experience and an outstanding reputation as the president of a public corporation engaged in the same line of business as Y. Because of A's prior experience and success in managing a similar corporation, A is the person Y wishes to hire as its new president. A is interested in becoming the president of Y but will not accept the position unless permitted to acquire a significant equity interest in Y. A has further advised Y that A is not interested in acquiring X stock or in acquiring an equity interest in Y as a subsidiary of X.

In order to permit Y to obtain the services of A, X has distributed all of the stock of Y pro rata to the shareholders. Thereafter, A will be employed by Y at an annual salary of $250x and, within one year, will purchase newly issued shares of stock from Y having a fair market value of $775x.

Except for the issue of the business purpose for the distribution, the proposed distribution by X of the Y stock meets all the requirements of section 355 of the Code and the pertinent regulations.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 355 of the Code provides that under certain circumstances a corporation may distribute stock or securities in a corporation it controls to its shareholders or security holders in a transaction that is not taxable to those shareholders or security holders. Section 1.355-2(c) of the regulations states that a distribution by a corporation of stock or securities of a controlled corporation will not qualify under section 355 when carried out for purposes not germane to the business of the corporations. This provision is intended to limit the application of section 355 to those readjustments of a corporate structure that are required by business exigencies.

Situation 2 of Rev. Rul. 69-460, 1969-2 C.B. 51, concerns a distribution of the stock of a subsidiary corporation so that key employees of the parent corporation could afford to buy stock in that corporation. That ruling holds that the distribution was undertaken for a valid business purpose. Rev. Rul. 85-127, 1985-2 C.B. 119, holds that the business purpose requirement was also met where a corporation transfers one of its businesses to a new corporation and distributes the stock of the new corporation to its shareholders in order to retain the services of a key employee and permit that employee to obtain a majority of the stock of the new corporation.

In the present situation, the distribution enables the subsidiary corporation to hire the key employee it believes is necessary to the continued success of the business. This is consistent with both Rev. Rul. 69-460 (Situation 2) and Rev. Rul. 85-127.

HOLDING

The pro rata distribution of the stock of Y by X to the X shareholders to enable Y to hire A as its new president is for a valid business purpose within the meaning of section 1.355-2(c) of the regulations. The distribution qualifies under section 355 of the Code because all other requirements of section 355 and the regulations thereunder have been met.

Reorganizations; conversion of foreign corporation to domestic. The conversion of a foreign corporation to a domestic corporation pursuant to a state domestication statute will be treated as a reorganization qualifying under section 368(a)(1)(F) of the Code.

ISSUE

What is the federal income tax treatment of the conversion of a foreign corporation to a domestic corporation under a state domestication statute?

FACTS

F was incorporated in Country Y. For valid business reasons, the shareholders of F decided that it would be advantageous for F to become a State A corporation. Under State A corporate law, a foreign corporation may become a State A corporation by filing a certificate of domestication and a certificate of incorporation with the appropriate official. Pursuant to a plan of reorganization, F filed a certificate of domestication and a certificate of incorporation in State A.

Upon filing the certificate of domestication and certificate of incorporation, F was considered by State A to be incorporated in State A and became subject to State A law, whether or not F continued to be considered a Country Y corporation for Country Y purposes. Thus, F was not required to incorporate anew in State A, but merely "converted" itself into a State A corporation by filing the appropriate documents. For State A law purposes, the existence of F was deemed to have commenced on the date F commenced its existence in Country Y.

Following the domestication, F possessed the same assets and liabilities as before the domestication and continued its previous business without interruption. There was no change in the shareholders of F or in the shareholders' proprietary interests.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

For federal income tax purposes, the conversion of F from a Country Y to a State A corporation under the State A domestication statute is treated as: (1) a transfer by a foreign corporation (F) of all of its assets and liabilities to a new domestic corporation (F-D) in exchange for F-D stock; and (2) a liquidating distribution by F to its shareholders of the F-D stock received in exchange for F's assets and liabilities. There was no change in the shareholders of F or in the shareholders' proprietary interests. Furthermore, F-D possessed the same assets and liabilities and continued the same business activities after the conversion as F did before the conversion. Because there was no alteration in shareholder continuity, asset continuity, or business enterprise, the effect of the conversion was a mere change in the place of organization of F. Therefore, the conversion qualified as a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(F) of the Internal Revenue Code, which provides that the term "reorganization" includes a mere change in identity, form, or place of organization of one corporation, however effected. See Rev. Rul. 87-27, 1987-1 C.B. 134, concluding that the reincorporation in a foreign country of a dual resident U.S. corporation was a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(F). F, the transferor corporation, and F-D, the transferee corporation, are considered "part[ies] to a reorganization" under section 368(b).

Generally, section 361 and section 354 of the Code provide the transferor corporation and the shareholders of the transferor corporation, respectively, with nonrecognition treatment in a reorganization under section 368. However, in certain circumstances, the nonrecognition treatment normally accorded to the transferor corporation and its shareholders in an international reorganization is overridden by the operation of section 367 and the corresponding regulations, or the rules of sections 897(d) and (e). If, for example, a corporate shareholder of F is a "United States shareholder" under section 7.367(b)-2(b) of the Temporary Income Tax Regulations, then the shareholder is denied section 354 nonrecognition treatment unless it agrees to include the "all earnings and profits amount" in income as a dividend. See section 7.367(b)-7(c)(2) of the Temporary Regulations.

In addition, section 897(e)(1) of the Code denies section 361 nonrecognition treatment to F with respect to the transfer by F to F-D of any "United States real property interest[s]" if F-D is not a "United States real property holding corporation" immediately after the exchange. Furthermore, subject to section 897(d)(2) or regulations to be promulgated, section 897(d)(1) denies section 361 nonrecognition treatment to F on the distribution to its shareholders (whether U.S. or foreign) of the F-D stock constitutes a U.S. real property interest at the time of the distribution. See Rev. Rul. 87-66, 1987-2 C.B. 168, for a more complete discussion of the treatment of reorganizations involving the transfer of U.S. real property interests by a foreign corporation to a U.S. corporation.

HOLDING

For federal income tax purposes, the conversion of F from a Country Y corporation to a State A corporation under the State A domestication statute is treated as a transfer by F of its assets and liabilities to a new corporation (F-D) and a distribution by F to its shareholders of the F-D stock received in exchange. The transaction qualifies as a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(F) of the Code.

Reorganization; "substantially all" requirement. If a transferor corporation sells 50 percent of its historic assets to unrelated parties for cash and immediately afterwards transfers to an acquiring corporation all of its assets (including cash from the sale), the transfer meets the "substantially all" requirement of section 368(a)(1)(C) of the Code.

ISSUE

If a transferor corporation sold 50 percent of its historic assets to unrelated parties for cash and immediately afterwards transferred to an acquiring corporation all of its assets (including the cash from the sale), did the subsequent transfer meet the "substantially all" requirement of section 368(a)(1)(C) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

X and Y were unrelated corporations that for many years were engaged in the hardware business. X operated two significant lines of business, a retail hardware business and a wholesale plumbing supply business. Y desired to acquire and continue to operate X's hardware business but did not desire to acquire the other business. Accordingly, pursuant to an overall plan, the following steps were taken. First, in a taxable transaction, X sold its entire interest in the plumbing supply business (constituting 50 percent of its total historic business assets) to purchasers unrelated to either X or Y or their shareholders. Second, X transferred all of its assets, including the cash proceeds from the sale, to Y solely for Y voting stock and the assumption of X's liabilities. Finally, in pursuance of the plan of reorganization, X distributed the Y stock (the sole asset X then held) to the X shareholders in complete liquidation.

Except for the issue relating to the "substantially all" requirement, the transfer of assets from X to Y constituted a corporate reorganization within the meaning of section 368(a)(1)(C) of the Code.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 368(a)(1)(C) of the Code defines a corporate reorganization to include the acquisition by one corporation, in exchange solely for all or part of its voting stock, of substantially all the properties of another corporation.

Section 368(a)(1)(C) of the Code is intended to accommodate transactions that are, in effect, mergers, but which fail to meet the statutory requirements that would bring them within section 368(a)(1)(A). See S. Rep. No. 558, 73d Cong., 2d Sess. 16, 17 (1939), 1939-1 C.B. (Pt. 2) 586, 598.

Congress intended that transactions that are divisive in nature not qualify under section 368(a)(1)(C) of the Code, but, instead, be subject to the tests under section 368(a)(1)(D). See S. Rep. No. 1622, 83d Cong., 2d Sess. 274 (1954). The enactment of section 368(a)(2)(G) indicates the continuing interest in furthering this underlying objective of preventing divisive "C" reorganizations.

Rev. Rul. 57-518, 1957-2 C.B. 253, concerns whether, in a "C" reorganization, assets may be retained to pay liabilities. The ruling states that what constitutes "substantially all" for purposes of section 368(a)(1)(C) of the Code depends on the facts and circumstances in each case. Rev. Rul. 57-518 exemplifies the Service's longstanding position that where some assets are transferred to the acquiring corporation and other assets retained, then the transaction may be divisive and so fail to meet the "substantially all" requirement of section 368(a)(1)(C). See also Rev. Rul. 78-47, 1978-1 C.B. 113.

In the present situation, 50 percent of the X assets acquired by Y consisted of cash from the sale of one of X's significant historic businesses. Although Y acquired substantially all the assets X held at the time of transfer, the prior sale prevented Y from acquiring substantially all of X's historic business assets. The transaction here at issue, however, was not divisive. The sale proceeds were not retained by the transferor corporation or its shareholders, but were transferred to the acquiring corporation. Moreover, the prior sale of the historic business assets was to unrelated purchasers, and the X shareholders retained no interest, direct or indirect, in these assets. Under these circumstances, the "substantially all" requirement of section 368(a)(1)(C) was met because all of the assets of X were transferred to Y.

HOLDING

The transfer of all of its assets by X to Y met the "substantially all" requirement of section 368(a)(1)(C) of the Code, even though immediately prior to the transfer X sold 50 percent of its historic business assets to unrelated parties for cash and transferred that cash to Y instead of the historic assets.

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953
Minimum Vesting Standards

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations regarding the minimum vesting standards for qualified employee plans. These temporary regulations conform to changes in the law made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. The regulations provide the public with guidance needed to comply with the minimum vesting standards and affect all employers maintaining qualified plans. The text of the temporary regulations  [page 881, this Bulletin] also serves as the text of the proposed regulations.

DATES: These temporary regulations are generally effective for plan years beginning after December 31, 1988.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains temporary regulations regarding the minimum vesting standards for qualified employee plans under sections 410 and 411 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. These temporary regulations conform to the changes made by sections 1113(a), (c), and (d) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Pub. L. 99-514) [1986-3 C.B. (Vol.1) 1, 363] and are required by section 1141 of that Act. These temporary regulations do not reflect amendments to the Internal Revenue Code made by the Retirement Equity Act of 1984 (Pub. L. 98-397, 98 Stat. 1436, et seq.) [1984-2 C.B. 433], the technical corrections to the Retirement Equity Act of 1984 (section 1898 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986) [1986-3 C.B. (Vol.1) 1, 858], the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1986 (Pub. L. 99-509), or section 1113(b) of the Tax Reform Act 1986 [1986-3 C.B. (Vol.1) 1, 364] (repealing section 411(d)(4), pertaining to class year vesting), and no inferences should be drawn by reason of the fact that an issue relating to these amendments is not addressed in these temporary regulations. There is a need for immediate guidance so that employers maintaining qualified plans can comply by making the necessary plan amendments to conform the plans to the new minimum vesting standards. These regulations will remain in effect until superseded by final regulations on this subject.

PRIOR LAW

An employee plan does not qualify under section 401(a) unless it satisfies the minimum participation standards of section 410(a) and the minimum vesting standards of section 411(a). In general, section 410(a) provides that a plan will not qualify if it requires, as a condition of participation in the plan, that an employee complete a period of service with the employer beyond the later of the date on which the employee attains age 21 or the date on which the employee completes a year of service. An exception, however, is provided for plans providing that after not more than 3 years of service each participant has a right to 100 percent of his or her accrued benefit under the plan. In such a plan, participation may be conditioned on not more than 3 years of service. Section 411(a) provides that a plan will not qualify unless an employee's right to his or her accrued benefits derived from employer contributions becomes nonforfeitable (1) upon the attainment of normal retirement age; and (2) at least as rapidly as under one of three alternative minimum vesting schedules. Section 411(a)(2) sets out the schedules as follows: (A) 10-year cliff vesting (100 percent vesting after 10-years of service); (B) 5- to 15-year graded vesting (25 percent vesting after 5 years of service, increasing gradually to 100 percent after 15 years of service); and (C) Rule of 45 (taking both age and service into account so that an employee who has completed at least 5 years of service, and the sum of whose age and years of service equals or exceeds 45, vests according to a table, but, in any event, in 50 percent after 10 years of service and an additional 10 percent for each additional year of service).

Section 411(a)(10)(B) provides that a plan amendment changing the plan's vesting schedule must permit all employees with at least 5 years of service to elect to remain under the vesting schedule in effect prior to the amendment.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Sections 1113(a), (c), and (d) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 amended sections 410(a) and 411(a). Section 410(a) was amended to provide that a plan may require no more than 2 years of service with the employer as a condition of participation in the plan if the plan provides for 100 percent vesting after no more than 2 years. Section 411(a) was amended to provide that an employee's right to all accrued benefits derived from employer contributions must become nonforfeitable at least as rapidly as under one of two alternative schedules, changing 10-year cliff vesting to 5-year cliff vesting and changing the 5- to 15-year graded schedule to a 3- to 7-year graded schedule. Ten-year cliff vesting is still allowed in the case of certain employees covered pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement and participating in a multiemployer plan. Employees who are not covered by the collective bargaining agreement are not eligible for the 10-year cliff vesting schedule, even if such employees are in the multiemployer plan pursuant to a participation agreement that relates to the collective bargaining agreement. Further, section 411(a)(10)(B) was amended to provide that plan amendment changing the plan's vesting schedule must permit employees with 3, rather than 5, years of service to elect to remain under the prior vesting schedule. These changes apply to all accrued benefits derived from employer contributions whether accrued before or after the effective date of the changes. This Treasury decision provides temporary regulations in conformity with these changes.

NONAPPLICABILITY OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis therefore is not required.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT

A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, these temporary regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS

(26 CFR Part 1)

Paragraph 1. The authority citation for Part 1 continues to read in part:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805 ***

Par. 2. New §1.410(a)-3T is added immediately after §1.410(a)-3 to read as follows:

§1.410(a)-3T. Minimum age and service conditions.

(a) [Reserved.]

(b) Special rule for plan with 2-year 100 percent vesting. A plan which provides that after not more than 2 years of service each participant's right to his or her accrued benefit under the plan is completely nonforfeitable (within the meaning of section 411 and the regulations thereunder) at the time such benefit accrues satisfies the requirements of paragraph (a) of this section if the period of service required by the plan as a condition of participation does not extend beyond the later of—

(1) [Reserved.]

(2) Two years of services. The date on which the employee completes 2 years of service. For employees not described in §1.411(a)-3T(e)(1), which describes employees with one hour of service in any plan year beginning after December 31, 1988, or later in the case of certain collectively bargained plans, the preceding sentence shall be applied by substituting "3 years of service" for "2 years of service".

Par. 3. New §1.410(a)-8T is added immediately after §1.410(a)-7T to read as follows:

§1.410(a)-8T. Year of service; break in service.

(a) [Reserved.]

(b) [Reserved.]

(c) Breaks in service—

(1) [Reserved.]

(2) Employees under 2-year 100 percent vesting schedule—(i) General rule. In the case of an employee who incurs a 1-year break in service under a plan which provides that after not more than 2 years of service each participant's right to his accrued benefit under the plan is completely nonforfeitable (within the meaning of section 411 and the regulations thereunder) at the time such benefit accrues, the employee's service before the break in service is not required to be taken into account after the break in service in determining the employee's years of service under section 410(a)(1) and §1.410(a)-3 if such employee has not satisfied such service requirement.

(ii) Example. The rules of this subparagraph are illustrated by the following example:

Example. A qualified plan computing service by the actual counting of hours provides full and immediate vesting. The plan can not require as a condition of participation that an employee complete 2 consecutive years of service with the employer because the requirement as to consecutive years is not permitted under section 410(a)(5). However, such a plan can require 2 years without a break in service, i.e., 2 years with no intervening years in which the employee fails to complete more than 500 hours of service. Under a plan containing such a participation requirement, the following example illustrates when employees would become eligible to participate.

	Hours of service completed
Year	Employee A	Employee B	Employee C
1	1,000	1,000	1,000
2	1,000	700	500
3	1,000	1,000	1,000
4	1,000	1,000	700
5	1,000	1,000	1,000

Note.—Employee A will have satisfied the plan's service requirement at the end of year 2, Employee B at the end of year 3, and Employee C at the end of year 5.

(3) One-year break in service—

(i) [Reserved.]

(ii) Examples. The rules provided by this subparagraph are illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Employee A completes a year of service under a plan computing service by the actual counting of hours for the 12-month period ending December 31, 1989, and incurs a 1-year break in service for the 12-month period ending December 31, 1990. The plan does not contain the provisions permitted by section 410(a)(5)(B) (relating to 2-year 100 percent vesting) and section 410(a)(5)(D) (relating to nonvested participants). Thereafter, he does not complete a year of service. As of January 1, 1991, in computing his period of service under the plan his service prior to December 31, 1990, is not required to be taken into account for purposes of section 410(a)(1) and §1.410(a)-3.

Example (2). [Reserved.]

Par. 4. New §1.410(a)-9T is added immediately after §1.410(a)-8T to read as follows:

§1.410(a)-9T. Elapsed time.

(a) [Reserved.]

(b) [Reserved.]

(c) Eligibility to participate—

(1) [Reserved.]

(2) Determination of one-year period of service.

(i) [Reserved.]

(ii) For purposes of section 410(a)(1)(B)(i), a "2-year period of service" shall be deemed to be "2 years of service."

(d) Vesting—(1) General rule.

(i) [Reserved.]

(ii) [Reserved.]

(iii) [Reserved.]

(iv) For purposes of determining an employee's nonforfeitable percentage of accrued benefits derived from employer contributions, a plan, after calculating an employee's period of service in the manner prescribed in this paragraph, may disregard any remaining less than whole year, 12-month or 365-day period of service. Thus, for example, if a plan provides for the statutory three to seven year graded vesting, an employee with a period (or periods) of service which yields 3 whole year periods of service and an additional 321-day period of service is twenty percent vested in his or her employer-derived accrued benefits (based solely on the 3 whole year periods of service).

(2) [Reserved.]

Par. 5. New §1.411(a)-3T is added immediately after §1.411(a)-3 to read as follows:

§1.411(a)-3T. Vesting in employer-derived benefits.

(a) In general.

(1) [Reserved.]

(2) Composite arrangements. A plan will not be considered to satisfy the requirements of paragraph (b), (c), or (d) of this section unless it satisfies all requirements of a particular one of such paragraphs with respect to all of an employee's years of service. A plan which, for example, satisfies the requirements of paragraph (b) (but not (c) or (d)) for an employee's first 4 years of service and satisfies the requirements of paragraph (c) (but not (b)) for all of his remaining years of service does not satisfy the requirements of this section. A plan is not precluded from satisfying the requirements of one such paragraph with respect to one group of employees and another such paragraph with respect to another group provided that the groups are not so structured as to evade the requirements of this paragraph.

(3) [Reserved.]

(b) 5-year vesting. A plan satisfies the requirements of section 411(a)(2)(A) and this paragraph if an employee who has completed 5 years of service has a nonforfeitable right to 100 percent of his or her accrued benefits derived from employer contributions.

(c) 3- to 7-year vesting. A plan satisfies the requirements of section 411(a)(2)(B) and this paragraph if an employee who has completed at least 3 years of service has a nonforfeitable right to a percentage of his accrued benefit derived from employer contributions, which percentage is not less than the nonforfeitable percentage determined under the following table:

Completed years of service	Nonforfeitable percentage
5	60
7 or more	100

(d) Multiemployer plans. A plan satisfies the requirements of section 411(a)(2)(C) and this paragraph if—

(1) The plan is a multiemployer plan (within the meaning of section 414(f)), and

(2) Under the plan—

(i) An employee who is covered pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement described in section 414(f)(1)(B) has a nonforfeitable right to 100 percent of the employee's accrued benefit derived from employer contributions not later than upon completion of 10 years of service, and

(ii) The requirements of paragraph (b) or (c) of this section are met with respect to employees who are not covered pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement described in section 414(f)(1)(B).

(iii) For purposes of this provision, an employee is not covered pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement unless the employee is represented by a bona fide employee representative that is a party to the collective bargaining agreement pursuant to which the multiemployer plan is maintained. Thus, for example, an employee of either the multiemployer plan or the employee representative is not covered pursuant to the collective bargaining agreement under which the plan is maintained even if the employee is covered pursuant to an agreement entered into by the multiemployer plan or employee representative on behalf of the employee and even if all such employees covered under the plan constitute only a de minimis percentage of the total employees covered under the plan.

(e) Effective date. (1) The provisions of this section apply to all employees who have one hour of service in any plan year beginning after—

(i) December 31, 1988, or

(ii) In the case of a plan maintained pursuant to one or more collective bargaining agreements between employee representatives and one or more employers ratified before March 1, 1986, for employees covered by any such agreement, the earlier of—

(A) the later of—

(1) January 1, 1989, or

(2) the date on which the last of such collective bargaining agreements terminates (determined without regard to any extension thereof after February 28, 1986), or

(B) January 1, 1991.

(2) For employees not described in paragraph (e)(1), above, the regulations in effect prior to January 1, 1989, shall be applied to determine the requirements of this section.

(f) Examples. The rules provided by this section are illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Plan B provides that each employee's rights to his employer-derived accrued benefit are nonforfeitable as follows:

3	25
5	65
7	100

Plan B does not satisfy the requirements of paragraph (c) of this section (relating to 3- to 7-year vesting) because the nonforfeitable percentage provided by the plan after completion of 6 years of service (75 percent) is less than the percentage required by paragraph (c) of this section at that time (80 percent). The fact that the nonforfeitable percentage provided by the plan for years prior to the 6th year of service is greater than the percentage required under paragraph (c) of this section is immaterial. The plan fails to satisfy the requirements of paragraph (c) of this section even if it is demonstrated that the value of the vesting provided by the plan to the employees is at least equal to the value of the vesting rate required by this paragraph.

Example (2). Plan C provides for plan participation after the completion of 1 year of service. The plan provides that each employee's rights to his employer-derived accrued benefits are 100 percent nonforfeitable after 5 years of plan participation rather than service. The plan does not satisfy the requirements of paragraph (b) of this section because, under the plan, an employee obtains a 100 percent nonforfeitable right to his or her employer-derived accrued benefit only after completion of more than 5 years of service.

Example (3). Plan D provides that each employee's rights to his employer-derived accrued benefits are nonforfeitable in accordance with the following schedule:

The plan does not satisfy the requirements of paragraph (b) of this section after the 4th year of service. It does not satisfy the requirements of paragraph (c) of this section for years prior to the 5th year of service. The plan does not satisfy the requirements of this section because it does not satisfy the requirements of a particular one of the two paragraphs for each of an employee's years of service.

Example (4). Plan G provides that each employee's rights to his employer-derived accrued benefit are 100 percent nonforfeitable upon completion of 3 years of service. The plan satisfies the requirements of paragraphs (b) and (c) of this section and, because it satisfies the requirements of at least one of such paragraphs for all of an employee's years of service, it satisfies the requirements of this section.

Par. 6. New §1.411(a)–4T is added immediately after §1.411(a)–4 to read as follows:

§1.411(a)–4T. Forfeitures, suspensions, etc.

(a) Nonforfeitability. Certain rights in an accrued benefit must be nonforfeitable to satisfy the requirements of section 411(a). This section defines the term "nonforfeitable" for purposes of these requirements. For purposes of section 411 and the regulations thereunder, a right to an accrued benefit is considered to be nonforfeitable at a particular time if, at that time and thereafter, it is an unconditional right. Except as provided by paragraph (b) of this section, a right which, at a particular time, is conditioned under the plan upon a subsequent event, subsequent performance, or subsequent forbearance which will cause the loss of such right is a forfeitable right at that time. Certain adjustments to plan benefits, such as adjustments in excess of reasonable actuarial reductions, can result in rights being forfeitable. Rights which are conditioned upon a sufficiency of plan assets in the event of a termination or partial termination are considered to be forfeitable because of such condition. However, a plan does not violate the nonforfeitability requirements merely because in the event of a termination an employee does not have any recourse toward satisfaction of his nonforfeitable benefits from other than the plan assets, the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, or a trust established and maintained pursuant to sections 4041(c)(3)(B)(ii) or (iii) and section 4049 of ERISA with respect to the plan. Furthermore, nonforfeitable rights are not considered to be forfeitable by reason of the fact that they may be reduced as allowed under sections 401(a)(5) and 401(l). To the extent that rights are not required to be nonforfeitable to satisfy the minimum vesting standards, or the nondiscrimination requirements of section 401(a)(4), they may be forfeited without regard to the limitations on forfeitability required by this section. The right of an employee to repurchase his accrued benefit, for example under section 411(a)(3)(D), is an example of a right which is required to satisfy such standards. Accordingly, such a right is subject to the limitations on forfeitability. Rights which are required to be prospectively nonforfeitable under the vesting standards are nonforfeitable and may not be forfeited until it is determined that such rights are, in fact, in excess of the vesting standards. Thus, employees have a right to vest in the accrued benefits if they continue in employment of employers maintaining the plan unless a forfeitable event recognized by section 411 occurs. For example, if a plan covered employees in Division A of Corporation X under a plan utilizing a 5-year 100 percent vesting schedule, the plan could not forfeit employees' rights on account of their moving to service in Division B of Corporation X prior to completion of 5 years of service even though employees are not vested at that time.

(b) [Reserved.]

(c) Examples. The rules of this section are illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Corporation A's plan provides that an employee is fully vested in his employer-derived accrued benefit after completion of 3 years of service. The plan also provides that if the employee works for a competitor he forfeits his right in the plan. Such provision could result in the forfeiture of an employee's rights which are required to be nonforfeitable under section 411 and therefore the plan would not satisfy the requirements of section 411. If the plan limited the forfeiture to employees who completed less than 5 years of service, the plan would not fail to satisfy the requirements of section 411 because the forfeitures under this provision are limited to rights which are in excess of the minimum required to be nonforfeitable under section 411(a)(2)(A).

Example (2). [Reserved.]

Par. 7. New §1.411(a)-8T is added immediately after §1.411(a)-8 to read as follows:

§1.411(a)-8T. Changes in vesting schedule.

(a) [Reserved.]

(b) Election of former schedule—(1) In general. Under section 411(a)(10)(B), for plan years for which section 411 applies, if the vesting schedule of a plan is amended, the plan will not be treated as meeting the minimum vesting standards of section 411(a)(2) unless the plan as amended provides that each participant whose nonforfeitable percentage of his accrued benefit derived from employer contributions is determined under such schedule, and who has completed at least 3 years of service with the employer, may elect, during the election period, to have the nonforfeitable percentage of his accrued benefit derived from employer contributions determined without regard to such amendment. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, no election need be provided for any participant whose nonforfeitable percentage under the plan, as amended, at any time cannot be less than such percentage determined without regard to such amendment. For employees not described in §1.411(a)-3T(e)(1), this section shall be applied by substituting "5 years of service" for "3 years of service" where such language appears.

(2) Election period. For purposes of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, the election period under the plan must begin no later than the date the plan amendment is adopted and end no earlier than the latest of the following dates:

(i) The date which is 60 days after the day the plan amendment is adopted,

(ii) The date which is 60 days after the day the plan amendment becomes effective, or

(iii) The date which is 60 days after the day the participant is issued written notice of the plan amendment by the employer or plan administrator.

(3) Service requirement. For purposes of subparagraph (1) of this paragraph, a participant shall be considered to have completed 3 years of service if such participant has completed 3 years of service, whether or not consecutive, without regard to the exceptions of section 411(a)(4) prior to the expiration of the election period described in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph. For the meaning of the term "year of service", see regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Labor under 29 CFR Part 2530, relating to minimum standards for employee pension benefit plans.

There is a need for immediate guidance with respect to the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason, it would be impractical to issue it first under the notice and comment procedure provided in 5 U.S.C. 553(b) or subject to the effective date limitation of 5 U.S.C. 553(d).

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Section 412.—Minimum Funding Standards

The procedure described in Rev. Proc. 83-41, 1983-1 C.B. 775, to obtain a waiver from the minimum funding standards is modified to reflect changes made by the Single Employer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1986. See Rev. Proc. 88-5, page 587.

Section 414.—Definitions and Special Rules

26 CFR 1.414(b)-1: Controlled group of corporations.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953; SUBCHAPTER H—INTERNAL REVENUE PRACTICE; PART 602—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Organizations Under Common Control; 80% Control Test for a Brother-Sister Controlled Group

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations and withdrawal of temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides final regulations relating to organizations under common control for purposes of certain rules relating to pension, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans. The applicable tax law was enacted as part of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) and amended by the Revenue Act of 1978 (1978 Act) and the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA). This document also contains final amendments to the income tax regulations relating to the definition of a brother-sister group of corporations under common control. These amendments conform the regulations to the decision in United States v. Vogel Fertilizer by the Supreme Court which held that a person's stock ownership is not taken into account for purposes of the 80% control test unless that person owns stock in each corporation of the putative brother-sister controlled group. These regulations provide the public with the guidance needed to comply with the law.

DATES: Generally, the amendments to the regulations under section 52 of the Code (relating to tax credits for employees) apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1976. The amendments to §1.414(b)-1 and §§1.414(c)-1 through -4 (relating to employees of trades or businesses under common control) generally are effective for plan years beginning after September 2, 1974 (subject to special rules for plans in existence on January 1, 1974). Sections 1.414(b)-1(c) and 1.414(c)-1 are amended to include references to section 408(k), which was added to the Code by the 1978 Act, and section 416, which was added by TEFRA. The additions of sections 408(k) and 416 are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1978, and December 31, 1983, respectively. The amendments to §1.1563-1, which defines a controlled group of corporations, are effective for taxable years ending after December 31, 1970. However, §1.1563-1(d) provides that certain of the amendments will not apply retroactively if the result would be adverse to certain taxpayers.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains final amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Parts 1, 11, and 13) under section 414(b) and (c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, relating to the aggregation of employees of members of a group of corporations, trades, or businesses that are under common control. The employees are treated as if employed by a single employer for purposes of applying certain rules relating to pension, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans, enacted by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (88 Stat. 925). These regulations were published in proposed form in the FEDERAL REGISTER on November 5, 1975 (40 FR 51467), following the adoption of temporary regulations by Treasury decision, published on October 29, 1975 (40 FR 51435). The final regulations reflect amendments to section 414(b) and (c) made by section 152(d) of the 1978 Act (92 Stat. 2799) and section 240(c)(1) of TEFRA (96 Stat. 520), which made the provisions of section 414(b) and (c) applicable with respect to simplified employee pension plans under section 408(k) and to the special rules for top-heavy plans under section 416, respectively.

The final amendments to the regulations under section 1563, relating to the definition of a brother-sister group of corporations under common control, conform those regulations to a decision of the Supreme Court, United States v. Vogel Fertilizer Co., 455 U.S. 16 (1982). The amendments were proposed in a notice of rulemaking published in the FEDERAL REGISTER on November 16, 1983 (48 FR 52081) [1983-2 C.B. 735] Section 414(c) delegates authority to the Secretary to prescribe regulations for the determination of common control, limited to rules based upon principles similar to those which apply in the case of section 414(b). Common control in section 414(b) is defined by reference to section 1563(a), determined without regard to subsections (a)(4) (relating to certain insurance companies) and (e)(3)(C) (relating to attribution from an employee's trust described in section 401(a)). In addition, section 52 provides that, for purposes of certain jobs credits, employees of members of the same group of controlled corporations or other business organizations are treated as employed by a single employer. Regulations prescribed under section 52 are also based on principles similar to the rules under section 1563. Because the proposed and temporary regulations under section 414(b) and (c) and the regulations under section 52 paralleled the regulations under section 1563, the November 16, 1983 notice of rulemaking proposed conforming amendments to those regulations. Those amendments are also adopted by this Treasury decision.

COMMENTS

Comments were received in response to both notices of proposed rulemaking, but no public hearing was requested and none was held. Generally, the comments raised issues that had already been considered before publication of the two notices of proposed rulemaking.

Several comments contended that the regulations initially proposed under section 414(b) and (c) were partly inconsistent with the legislative history of ERISA. They objected that the proposed regulations aggregating employees of commonly controlled entities for various tests relating to coverage, vesting, and benefit limitations of employee plans could be interpreted to require complete uniformity among the separate plans established by individual organizations within the group. The proposed regulations, therefore, did not give effect to certain permissible variances described in the report of the House Ways and Means Committee. The comments suggested that the final regulations contain a provision to the effect that section 414(b) and (c) was "not intended to mean that all pension plans of a controlled group of corporations or partnerships must be exactly alike, or that a controlled group could not have pension plans for some corporations but not for others" (H.R. Rep. No. 779, 93d Cong., 2d Sess. 49 (1974)). This suggestion is not adopted. These regulations are inteded to be definitional only, and do not determine the actual treatment of the employees of a group defined as being a single employer. Thus, once a group of organizations is defined as a single employer, whether or not plans maintained by members of that group are qualified is tested under sections 401, 408(k), 410, 411, 415, and 416.

Other comments suggested that foreign organizations be ignored for purposes of section 414(b) and (c) and that only employees of organizations that are under common control and engaged in similar businesses be aggregated. These suggestions are also rejected as beyond the scope of definitional regulations.

Only one comment was received in response to the second notice of rulemaking. The comment noted that the decision in Vogel Fertilizer and the proposed amendments to the regulations result in the retroactive disaggregation of what were brother-sister controlled groups under the regulations before their amendment by this Treasury decision. Such disaggregation may decrease the tax liability of the individual organizations that no longer have to share a graduated rate schedule (or a single surtax exemption for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1979) or other deductions and credits. The comment suggested that the effects of this disaggregation be mitigated by allowing taxpayers to file amended returns, including claims for refunds, even for closed taxable years. This suggestion is not adopted because the period of limitation on filing a claim for credit or refund as specified in section 6511 cannot be extended by regulation.

DESCRIPTION OF CHANGES

Two changes have been made to the regulations as proposed. The first is to add references to sections 408(k) and 416 as provisions to which these regulations apply. These references were added to sections 414(b) and (c) by section 152(d) of the 1978 Act and section 240(c)(1) of TEFRA, respectively.

A new paragraph (f) has been added to §1.414(c)-3. That section generally provides that for purposes of determining control of an organization, certain defined interests will not be counted as either an "interest" or as "stock". However, in some situations the application of this general rule will result in the exclusion of an organization from a controlled group. The new paragraph provides that if an interest is owned by a person directly or constructively and that ownership results in the inclusion of an organization in a group of trades or businesses under common control, then that interest will not be treated as not outstanding under paragraph (b) or (c) of §1.414(c)-3 if the result would be that the organization would not be a member of a group of trades or businesses under common control. This rule, which is necessary to prevent the exclusion rules from being used to avoid common control status, is analogous to the rule of section 1563(f)(3)(C), which applies for purposes of determining whether a corporation is a component member of a controlled group of corporations. New paragraph (f) of §1.414(c)-3 is effective April 1, 1988.

REMOVAL OF TEMPORARY REGULATIONS

The final regulations under section 414(b) and (c) supersede the temporary regulations (§§11.414(c)-1 through 11.414(c)-5) under ERISA, published in the FEDERAL REGISTER on October 29, 1975 (40 FR 51435). This document, therefore, removes those temporary regulations.

Temporary regulations under the Tax Reform Act of 1969 (26 CFR §§13.16 and 13.16-1) were superseded by final regulations published on April 25, 1972 (37 FR 8068). As proposed in the notice of rulemaking published on November 16, 1983 (48 FR 52081), those temporary regulations are removed.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291 AND REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT

The Commissioner of the Internal Revenue has determined that this final rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required. The Regulatory Flexibility Act does not apply to the portion of this document that adopts the amendments to the regulations proposed in 1975. The Internal Revenue Service has also concluded that the portion of the final regulations contained herein, which adopt the amendments proposed in 1983, are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these final regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6).

PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

The collection of information requirements contained in these regulations have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in accordance with the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. These requirements have been approved by OMB.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1, Part 11, Part 13, and Part 602 are amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. The authority citation for Part 1 is amended to add the following citations:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.  §1.52-1 also issued under 26 U.S.C. 52(b); §§1.414(c)-1 through 1.414(c)-5 also issued under 26 U.S.C. 414(c).

Par. 2. Section 1.52-1 is amended as follows:

1. Paragraphs (c)(1)(i) and (c)(1)(ii), are amended by removing "§11.414(c)-4(b)(1)" and adding instead "§1.414(c)-4(b)(1)".

2. Paragraph (d)(1)(i) is amended by removing §11.414(c)-4 and adding instead §1.414(c)-4 and by removing", singly or in combination,".

3. A new flush paragraph to read as set forth below is added at the end of paragraph (d)(1)(ii).

4. Paragraph (g) is amended by removing "§11.414(c)-3" from the first sentence and adding instead "§1.414(c)-3".

5. A new paragraph (h) is added at the end thereof to read as set forth below.

§1.52-1 Trades or businesses that are under common control.

* * * * *

(d) Brother-sister group of trade or businesses under common control—(1) In general.  The five or fewer persons whose ownership is considered for purposes of the controlling interest requirement for each organization must be the same persons whose ownership is considered for purposes of the effective control requirement.

* * * * *

(b) Transitional rule—(1) In general. Paragraph (d) of this section, as amended by T.D. 8179, applies to all taxable years to which section 52(b) applies.

(2) Election. In the case of taxable years ending before March 2, 1988—

(i) If, pursuant to paragraph (b) of this section, an organization indicated in a timely filed return that it chose to be a member of a brother-sister group under common control, and it is not a member of such group because of the amendments to paragraph (d) of this section made by T.D. 8179, such organization may make the choice described in paragraph (b) of this section by filing an amended return on or before September 2, 1988 if such organization would otherwise still be a member of more than one group of trades or businesses under common control, and

(ii) If an organization

(A) Is a member of a brother-sister group of trades or businesses under common control under §1.52-1(d)(1), as in effect before amendment by T.D. 8179 ("old group") for such taxable year and

(B) Is not such a member for such taxable year because of the amendments made by such Treasury decision, such organization (whether or not a corporation) nevertheless will be treated as a member of such old group if all the organizations (whether or not corporations) that are members of the old group meet all the requirements of §1.1563-1(d)(3) with respect to such taxable year.

Par. 3. The following new sections are added immediately after §1.413-2.

(a) Definition of controlled group of corporations. For purposes of this section, the term "controlled group of corporations" has the same meaning as is assigned to the term in section 1563(a) and the regulations thereunder, except that (1) the term "controlled group of corporations" shall not include an "insurance group" described in section 1563(a)(4), and (2) section 1563(e)(3)(C) (relating to stock owned by certain employees' trusts shall not apply. For purposes of this section, the term "members of a controlled group" means two or more corporations connected through stock ownership described in section 1563(a)(1), (2), or (3), whether or not such corporations are "component members of a controlled group" within the meaning of section 1563(b). Two or more corporations are members of a controlled group at any time such corporations meet the requirements of section 1563(a) (as modified by this paragraph). For purposes of this section, if a corporation is a member of more than one controlled group of corporations, such corporation shall be treated as a member of each controlled group.

(b) Single plan adopted by two or more members. If two or more members of a controlled group of corporations adopt a single plan for a plan year, then the minimum funding standard provided in section 412, the tax imposed by section 4971, and the applicable limitations provided by section 404(a) shall be determined as if such members were a single employer. In such a case, the amount of such items and the allocable portion attributable to each member shall be determined in the manner provided in regulations under sections 412, 4971, and 404(a).

(c) Cross reference. For rules relating to the application of sections 401, 408(k), 410, 411, 415, and 416 with respect to two or more trades or businesses which are under common control, see section 414(c) and the regulations thereunder.

§1.414(c)-1 Commonly controlled trades or businesses.

For purposes of applying the provisions of sections 401 (relating to qualified pension, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans), 408(k) (relating to simplified employee pensions), 410 (relating to minimum participation standards), 411 (relating to minimum vesting standards), 415 (relating to limitations on benefits and contributions under qualified plans), and 416 (relating to top-heavy plans), all employees of two or more trades or businesses under common control within the meaning of §1.414(c)-2 for any period shall be treated as employed by a single employer. See sections 401, 408(k), 410, 411, 415, and 416 and the regulations thereunder for rules relating to employees of trades or businesses which are under common control. See §1.414(c)-5 for effective date.

§1.414(c)-2 Two or more trades or businesses under common control.

(a) In general. For purposes of this section, the term "two or more trades or businesses under common control" means any group of trades or businesses which is either a "parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control" as defined in paragraph (b) of this section, a "brother-sister group of trades or businesses under common control" as defined in paragraph (c) of this section, or a "combined group of trades or businesses under common control" as defined in paragraph (d) of this section. For purposes of this section and §§1.414(c)-3 and 1.414(c)-4, the term "organization" means a sole proprietorship, a partnership (as defined in section 7701(a)(2)), a trust, an estate, or a corporation.

(b) Parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control—(1) In general. The term "parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control" means one or more chains of organizations conducting trades or businesses connected through ownership of a controlling interest with a common parent organization if—

(i) A controlling interest in each of the organizations, except the common parent organization, is owned (directly and with the application of §1.414(c)-4(b)(1), relating to options) by one or more of the other organizations; and

(ii) The common parent organization owns (directly and with the application of §1.414(c)-4(b)(1), relating to options) a controlling interest in at least one of the other organizations, excluding, in computing such controlling interest, any direct ownership interest by such other organizations.

(2) Controlling interest defined—(i) Controlling interest. For purposes of paragraphs (b) and (c) of this section, the phrase "controlling interest" means:

(A) In the case of an organization which is a corporation, ownership of stock possessing at least 80 percent of total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote of such corporation or at least 80 percent of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of such corporation;

(B) In the case of an organization which is a trust or estate, ownership of an actuarial interest of a least 80 percent of such trust or estate;

(C) In the case of an organization which is a partnership, ownership of at least 80 percent of the profits interest or capital interest of such partnership; and

(D) In the case of an organization which is a sole proprietorship, ownership of such sole proprietorship.

(ii) Actuarial interest. For purposes of this section, the actuarial interest of each beneficiary of a trust or estate shall be determined by assuming the maximum exercise of discretion by the fiduciary in favor of such beneficiary. The factors and methods prescribed in §20.2031-7 or §20.2031-10 (Estate Tax Regulations), whichever is appropriate, for use in ascertaining the value of an interest in property for estate tax purposes shall be used for purposes of this subdivision in determining a beneficiary's acturial interest.

(c) Brother-sister group of trades or businesses under common control—(1) In general. The term "brother-sister group of trades or businesses under common control" means two or more organizations conducting trades or businesses if (i) the same, five or fewer persons who are individuals, estates, or trusts own (directly and with the application of §1.414(c)-4) a controlling interest in each organization, and (ii) taking into account the ownership of each such person only to the extent such ownership is identical with respect to each such organization, such persons are in effective control of each organization. The five or fewer persons whose ownership is considered for purposes of the controlling interest requirement for each organization must be the same persons whose ownership is considered for purposes of the effective control requirement.

(2) Effective control defined. For purposes of this paragraph, persons are in "effective control" of an organization if—

(i) In the case of an organization which is a corporation, such persons own stock possessing more than 50 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or more than 50 percent of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of such corporation;

(ii) In the case of an organization which is a trust or estate, such persons own an aggregate actuarial interest of more than 50 percent of such trust or estate;

(iii) In the case of an organization which is a partnership, such persons own an aggregate of more than 50 percent of the profits interest or capital interest of such partnership; and

(iv) In the case of an organization which is a sole proprietorship one of such persons owns such sole proprietorship.

(d) Combined group of trades or businesses under common control. The term "combined group of trades or businesses under common control" means any group of three or more organizations, if (1) each such organization is a member of either a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control or a brother-sister group of trades or businesses under common control, and (2) at least one such organization is the common parent organization of a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control and is also a member of a brother-sister group of trades or businesses under common control.

(e) Examples. The definitions of parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control, brother-sister group of trades or businesses under common control, and combined group of trades or businesses under common control may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1) (a) The ABC partnership owns stock possessing 80 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote of S corporation. ABC partnership is the common parent of a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control consisting of the ABC partnership and S corporation.

(b) Assume the same facts as in (a) and assume further that S owns 80 percent of the profits interest in the DEF Partnership. The ABC Partnership is the common parent of a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control consisting of the ABC Partnership, S Corporation, and the DEF Partnership. The result would be the same if the ABC Partnership, rather than S, owned 80 percent of the profits interest in the DEF Partnership.

Example (2) L Corporation owns 80 percent of the only class of stock of T Corporation, and T, in turn, owns 40 percent of the capital interest in the GHI Partnership. L also owns 80 percent of the only class of stock of N Corporation and N, in turn, owns 40 percent of the capital interest in the GHI Partnership. L is the common parent of parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control consisting of L Corporation, T Corporation, N Corporation, and the GHI Partnership.

Example (3). ABC Partnership owns 75 percent of the only class of stock of X and Y Corporations; X owns all the remaining stock of Y, and Y owns all the remaining stock of X. Since interorganization ownership is excluded (that is, treated as not outstanding) for purposes of determining whether ABC owns a controlling interest of at least one of the other organizations. ABC is treated as the owner of stock possessing 100 percent of the voting power and value of all classes of stock of X and of Y for purposes of paragraph (b)(1)(ii) of this section. Therefore, ABC is the common parent of a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control consisting of the ABC Partnership, X Corporation, and Y Corporation.

Example (4). Unrelated individuals A, B, C, D, E, and F own an interest in sole proprietorship A, a capital interest in the GHI Partnership, and stock of corporations M, W, X, Y, and Z (each of which has only one class of stock outstanding) in the following proportions:

Individuals	Organizations
	A	GHI	M	W	X	Y	Z
A	100%	50%	100%	60%	40%	20%	60%
B	—	40%	—	15%	40%	50%	30%
C	—	—	—	—	10%	10%	10%
D	—	—	—	25%	—	20%	—
E	—	10%	—	—	10%	—	—
	100%	100%	100%	100%	100%	100%	100%

Under these facts the following four brother-sister groups of trades or businesses under common control exist: GHI, X and Z; X, Y and Z; W and Y; A and M. In the case of GHI, X, and Z, for example, A and B together have effective control of each organization because their combined identical ownership of GHI, X and Z is greater than 50%. (A's identical ownership of GHI, X and Z is 40% because A owns at least a 40% interest in each organization. B's identical ownership of GHI, X and Z is 30% because B owns at least a 30% interest in each organization.) A and B (the persons whose ownership is considered for purposes of the effective control requirement) together own a controlling interest in each organization because they own at least 80% of the capital interest of partnership GHI and at least 80% of the total combined voting power of corporations X and Z. Therefore, GHI, X and Z comprise a brother-sister group of trades or businesses under common control. Y is not a member of this group because neither the effective control requirement nor the 80% controlling interest requirement are met. (The effective control requirement is not met because A's and B's combined identical ownership in CHI, X, Y and Z (20% for A and 30% for B) does not exceed 50%. The 80% controlling interest test is not met because A and B together only own 70% of the total combined voting power of the stock of Y.) A and M are not members of this group because B owns no interest in either organization and A's ownership of GHI, X and Z, considered alone, is less than 80%.

Example (5). The outstanding stock of corporations U and V, which have only one class of stock outstanding, is owned by the following unrelated individuals:

Individuals	Corporations
	U	V
A	12%	12%
B	12%	12%
C	12%	12%
D	12%	12%
E	13%	13%
F	13%	13%
G	13%	13%
	100%	100%

Any group of five of the shareholders will own more than 50 percent of the stock in each corporation, in identical holdings. However, U and V are not members of a brother-sister group of trades or businesses under common control because at least 80 percent of the stock of each corporation is not owned by the same five of fewer persons.

Example (6). A, an individual, owns a controlling interest in ABC Partnership and DEF Partnership. ABC, in turn, owns a controlling interest in X Corporation. Since ABC, DEF, and X are each members of either a parent-subsidiary group or a brother-sister group of trades or businesses under common control, and ABC is the common parent of a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control consisting of ABC and X, and also a member of a brother-sister group of trades or businesses under common control consisting of ABC and DEF, ABC Partnership, DEF Partnership, and X Corporation are members of the same combined group of trades or businesses under common control.

§1.414(c)-3 Exclusion of certain interests or stock in determining control.

(a) In general. For purposes of §1.414 (c)-2(b)(2)(i) and (c)(2), the term "interest" and the term "stock" do not include an interest which is treated as not outstanding under paragraph (b) of this section in the case of a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control or under paragraph (c) of this section in the case of a brother-sister group of trades or businesses under common control. In addition, the term "stock" does not include treasury stock or nonvoting stock which is limited and preferred as to dividends. For definitions of certain terms used in this section, see paragraph (d) of this section.

(b) Parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control—(1) In general. If an organization (hereinafter in this section referred to as "parent organization") owns (within the meaning of paragraph (b)(2) of this section)—

(i) In the case of a corporation, 50 percent or more of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or 50 percent or more of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of such corporation.

(ii) In the case of a trust or an estate, an actuarial interest (within the meaning of §1.414(c)—2(b)(2)(ii)) of 50 percent or more of such trust or estate, and

(iii) In the case of a partnership, 50 percent or more of the profits or capital interest of such partnership, then for purposes of determining whether the parent organization or such other organization (hereinafter in this section referred to as "subsidiary organization") is a member of a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control, an interest in such subsidiary organization excluded under paragraph (b)(3), (4), (5), or (6) of this section shall be treated as not outstanding.

(2) Ownership. For purposes of paragraph (b)(1) of this section, a parent organization shall be considered to own an interest in or stock of another organization which it owns directly or indirectly with the application of paragraph (b)(1) of §1.414(c)-4 and—

(3) Plan of deferred compensation. An interest which is an interest in or stock of the subsidiary organization held by a trust which is part of a plan of deferred compensation (within the meaning of section 406(a)(3) and the regulations thereunder) for the benefit of the employees of the parent organization or the subsidiary organization shall be excluded.

(4) Principal owners, officers, etc. An interest which is an interest in or stock of the subsidiary organization owned (directly and with the application of §1.414(c)-4) by an individual who is a principal owner, officer, partner, or fiduciary of the parent organization shall be excluded.

(5) Employees. An interest which is an interest in or stock of the subsidiary organization owned (directly and with the application of §1.414(c)-4) by an employee of the subsidiary organization shall be excluded if such interest or such stock is subject to conditions which substantially restrict or limit the employee's right (or if the employee constructively owns such interest or such stock, the direct or record owner's right) to dispose of such interest or such stock and which run in favor of the parent or subsidiary organization.

(6) Controlled exempt organization. An interest which is an interest in or stock of the subsidiary organization shall be excluded if owned (directly and with the application of §1.414(c)-4) by an organization (other than the parent organization):

(i) To which section 501 (relating to certain educational and charitable organizations which are exempt from tax) applies, and

(ii) Which is controlled directly or indirectly (within the meaning of paragraph (d)(7) of this section) by the parent organization or subsidiary organization, by an individual, estate, or trust that is a principal owner of the parent organization, by an officer, partner, or fiduciary of the parent organization, or by any combination thereof.

(c) Brother-sister group of trades or businesses under common control—(1) In general. If five or fewer persons (hereinafter in this section referred to as "common owners") who are individuals, estates, or trusts own (directly and with the application of §1.414(c)-4)—

(i) In the case of a corporation, 50 percent or more of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or 50 percent or more of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of such corporation,

(ii) In the case of a trust or an estate, an actuarial interest (within the meaning of §1.414(c)-2(b)(2)(ii)) of 50 percent or more of such trust or estate, and

(iii) In the case of a partnership, 50 percent or more of the profits or capital interest of such partnership, then for purposes of determining whether such organization is a member of a brother-sister group of trades or businesses under common control, an interest in such organization excluded under paragraph (c)(2), (3), or (4) of this section shall be treated as not outstanding.

(2) Exempt employees' trust. An interest which is an interest in or stock of such organization held by an employees' trust described in section 401(a) which is exempt from tax under section 501(a) shall be excluded if such trust is for the benefit of the employees of such organization.

(3) Employees. An interest which is an interest in or stock of such organization owned (directly and with the application of §1.414(c)–4) by an employee of such organization shall be excluded if such interest or stock is subject to conditions which run in favor of a common owner of such organization or in favor of such organization and which substantially restrict or limit the employee's right (or if the employee constructively owns such interest or stock, the direct or record owner's right) to dispose of such interest or stock.

(4) Controlled exempt organization. An interest which is an interest in or stock of such organization shall be excluded if owned (directly and with the application of §1.414(c)–4) by an organization:

(i) To which section 501(c)(3) (relating to certain educational and charitable organizations which are exempt from tax) applies, and

(ii) Which is controlled directly or indirectly (within the meaning of paragraph (d)(7) of this section) by such organization, by an individual, estate, or trust that is a principal owner of such organization, by an officer, partner, or fiduciary of such organization, or by any combination thereof.

(d) Definitions—(1) Employee. For purposes of this section, the term "employee" has the same meaning such term is given in section 3306(i) of the Code (relating to definitions for purposes of the Federal Unemployment Tax Act).

(2) Principal owner. For purposes of this section, the term "principal owner" means a person who owns (directly and with the application of §1.414(c)–4)—

(i) In the case of a corporation, 5 percent or more of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote in such corporation or 5 percent of more of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of such corporation:

(ii) In the case of a trust or estate, an actuarial interest of 5 percent or more of such trust or estate; or

(iii) In the case of a partnership, 5 percent or more of the profits or capital interest of such partnership.

(3) Officer. For purposes of this section, the term "officer" includes the president, vice-presidents, general manager, treasurer, secretary, and comptroller of a corporation, and any other person who performs duties corresponding to those normally performed by persons occupying such positions.

(4) Partner. For purposes of this section, the term "partner" means any person defined in section 7701(a)(2) (relating to definitions of partner).

(5) Fiduciary. For purposes of this section and §1.414(c)–4, the term, "fiduciary" has the same meaning as such term is given in section 7701(a)(6) and the regulations thereunder.

(6) Substantial conditions. (i) In general. For purposes of this section, an interest in or stock of an organization is subject to conditions which substantially restrict or limit the right to dispose of such interest or stock and which run in favor of another person if the condition extends directly or indirectly to such person preferential rights with respect to the acquisition of the direct owner's (or the record owner's) interest or stock. For a condition to be in favor of another person it is not necessary that such person be extended a discriminatory concession with respect to price. A right of first refusal with respect to an interest or stock in favor of another person is a condition which substantially restricts or limits the direct or record owner's right of disposition which runs in favor of such person. Further, any legally enforceable condition which prohibits the direct or record owner from disposing of his or her interest or stock without the consent of another person will be considered to be a substantial limitation running in favor of such person.

(ii) Special rule. For purposes of paragraph (c)(3) of this section only, if a condition which restricts or limits an employee's right (or direct or record owner's right) to dispose of his or her interest or stock also applies to the interest or stock in such organization held by a common owner pursuant to a bona fide reciprocal purchase arrangement, such condition shall not be treated as a substantial limitation or restriction. An example of a reciprocal purchase arrangement is an agreement whereby a common owner and the employee are given a right of first refusal with respect to stock of the employer corporation owned by the other party. If, however, the agreement also provides that the common owner has the right to purchase the stock of the employer corporation owned by the employee in the event the corporation should discharge the employee for reasonable cause, the purchase arrangement would not be reciprocal within the meaning of this subdivision.

(7) Control. For purposes of paragraphs (b)(6) and (c)(4) of this section, the term "control" means control in fact. The determination of whether there exists control in fact will depend upon all of the facts and circumstances of each case, without regard to whether such control is legally enforceable and irrespective of the method by which such control is exercised or exercisable.

(e) Examples. The provision of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). ABC Partnership owns 70 percent of the capital interest and of the profits interest in the DEF Partnership. The remaining capital interest and profits interest in DEF is owned as follows: 4 percent by A (a general partner in ABC), and 26 percent by D (a limited partner in ABC). ABC satisfies the 50-percent capital interest or profits interest ownership requirement of paragraph (b)(1)(iii) of this section with respect to DEF. Since A and D are partners of ABC, under paragraph (b)(4) of this section the capital and profits interests in DEF owned by A and D are treated as not outstanding for purposes of determining whether ABC and DEF are members of a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control under §1.414(c)–2(b) Thus, ABC is considered to own 100 percent (7 ÷ 70) of the capital interest and profits interest in DEF. Accordingly, ABC and DEF are members of a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1) and assume further than A owns 15 shares of the 100 shares of the only class of stock of S Corporation and DEF Partnership owns 75 shares of such stock. ABC satisfies the 50 percent stock requirement of paragraph (b)(1)(l) of this section with respect to S since ABC is considered as owning 52.5 percent (70 percent × 75 percent) of the S stock with the application of §1.414(c)–4(b)(2). Since A is a partner of ABC, the stock owned by A is treated as not outstanding for purposes of determining whether S is a member of a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control. Thus, DEF Partnership is considered to own stock possessing 88.2 percent (75 ÷ 85) of the voting power and value of the S Stock. Accordingly, ABC Partnership, DEF Partnership, and S Corporation are members of a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control.

Example (3). ABC Partnership owns 60 percent of the only class of stock of Corporation Y. D, the president of Y, owns the remaining 40 percent of the stock of Y. D has agreed that if she offers her stock in Y for sale she will first offer the stock to ABC at a price equal to the fair market value of the stock on the first date the stock is offered for sale. Since D is an employee of Y within the meaning of section 3306(i) of the Code and her stock in Y is subject to a condition which substantially restricts or limits her right to dispose of such stock and runs in favor of ABC Partnership, under paragraph (b)(5) of this section such stock is treated as not outstanding for purposes of determining whether ABC and Y are members of a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control. Thus, ABC Partnership is considered to own stock possessing 100 percent of the voting power and value of the stock of Y. Accordingly, ABC Partnership and Y Corporation are members of a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control. The result would be the same if D's husband, instead of D, owned directly the 40 percent stock interest in Y and such stock was subject to a right of first refusal running in favor of ABC Partnership.

(f) Exception—(1) In general. If an interest in an organization (including stock of a corporation) is owned by a person directly or with the application of the rules of paragraph (b) of §1.414(c)-4 and such ownership results in the membership of that organization in a group of two or more trades or businesses under common control for any period, then the interest will not be treated as an excluded interest under paragraph (b) or (c) of this section if the result of applying such provisions is that the organization is not a member of a group of two or more trades or businesses under common control for the period.

(2) Example. The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Corporation P owns directly 50 of the 100 shares of the only class of stock of corporation S. A, an officer of P, owns directly 30 shares of S stock which P has an option to acquire. If, under paragraph (b)(4) of this section, the 30 shares owned directly by A are treated as not outstanding, P would be treated as owning stock possessing only 71 percent (50/70) of the total voting power and value of S stock, and S should not be a member of a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control. However, because the 30 shares owned by A that P has an option to purchase are considered as owned by P under paragraph (b)(2) of this section, and that ownership plus P's direct ownership of 50 shares result in S's membership in a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control for 1985, the provisions of this paragraph apply. Therefore, A's stock is not treated as an excluded interest and S is a member of a parent-subsidiary group consisting of P and S.

§1.414(c)- Rules for determining ownership.

(a) In general. In determining the ownership of an interest in an organization for purposes of §1.414(c)-2 and §1.414(c)-3, the constructive ownership rules of paragraph (b) of this section shall apply, subject to the operating rules contained in paragraph (c). For purposes of this section the term "interest" means: in the case of a corporation, stock; in the case of a trust or estate, an actuarial interest; in the case of a partnership, an interest in the profits or capital; and in the case of a sole proprietorship, the proprietorship.

(b) Constructive ownership—(1) Options. If a person has an option to acquire any outstanding interest in an organization, such interest shall be considered as owned by such person. For this purpose, an option to acquire an option, and each one of a series of such options, shall be considered as an option to acquire such interest.

(2) Attribution from partnerships—(i) General. An interest owned, directly or indirectly, by or for a partnership shall be considered as owned by any partner having an interest of 5 percent or more in either the profits or capital of the partnership in proportion to such partner's interest in the profits or capital, whichever such proportion is greater.

(ii) Example. The provisions of paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. A, B, and C, unrelated individuals, are partners in the ABC Partnership. The partners' interests in the capital and profits of ABC are as follows:

[In percent]

Partner	Capital	Profits
A	36	25

The ABC Partnership owns the entire outstanding stock (100 shares) of X Corporation. Under paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section, A is considered to own the stock of X owned by the partnership in proportion to his interest in capital (36 percent) or profits (25 percent), whichever such proportion is greater. Therefore, A is considered to own 36 shares of X stock. Since B has a greater interest in the profits of the partnership than in the capital, B is considered to own X stock in proportion to his interest in such profits. Therefore, B is considered to own 71 shares of X stock. Since C does not have an interest of 5 percent or more in either the capital or profits of ABC, he is not considered to own any shares of X stock.

(3) Attribution from estates and trusts—(i) In general. An interest in an organization (hereinafter called an "organization interest") owned, directly or indirectly, by or for an estate or trust shall be considered as owned by any beneficiary of such estate or trust who has an actuarial interest of 5 percent or more in such organization interest, to the extent of such actuarial interest. For purposes of this subparagraph, the actuarial interest of each beneficiary shall be determined by assuming the maximum exercise of discretion by the fiduciary in favor of such beneficiary and the maximum use of the organization interest to satisfy the beneficiary's rights. A beneficiary of an estate or trust who cannot under any circumstances receive any part of an organization interest held by the estate or trust, including the proceeds from the disposition thereof, or the income therefrom, does not have an actuarial interest in such organization interest. Thus, where stock owned by a decedent's estate has been specifically bequeathed to certain beneficiaries and the remainder of the estate has been specifically bequeathed to other beneficiaries, the stock is attributable only to the beneficiaries to whom it is specifically bequeathed. Similarly a remainderman of a trust who cannot under any circumstances receive any interest in the stock of a corporation which is a part of the corpus of the trust (including any accumulated income therefrom or the proceeds from a disposition thereof) does not have an actuarial interest in such stock. However, an income beneficiary of a trust does have an actuarial interest in stock if he has any right to the income from such stock even though under the terms of the trust instrument such stock can never be distributed to him. The factors and methods prescribed in §20.2031-7 or §20.2031-10 (Estate Tax Regulations), whichever is appropriate for use in ascertaining the value of an interest in property for estate tax purposes shall be used for purposes of this subdivision in determining a beneficiary's actuarial interest in an organization interest owned directly or indirectly by or for an estate or trust.

(ii) Special rules for estates. (A) For purposes of this paragraph (b)(3) with respect to an estate, property of a decedent shall be considered as owned by his or her estate if such property is subject to administration by the executor or administrator for the purposes of paying claims against the estate and expenses of administration notwithstanding that, under local law, legal title to such property vests in the decedent's heirs, legatees or devisees immediately upon death.

(B) For purposes of this paragraph (b)(3) with respect to an estate, the term "beneficiary" includes any person entitled to receive property of a decedent pursuant to a will or pursuant to laws of descent and distribution.

(C) For purposes of this paragraph (b)(3) with respect to an estate, a person shall no longer be considered a beneficiary of an estate when all the property to which he or she is entitled has been received by him or her, when he or she no longer has a claim against the estate arising out of having been a beneficiary, and when there is only a remote possibility that it will be necessary for the estate to see the return of property from him or her or to seek payment from him or her by contribution or otherwise to satisfy claims against the estate or expenses of administration.

(iii) Grantor trusts, etc. An interest owned, directly or indirectly, by or for any portion of a trust of which a person is considered the owner under subpart E, part I, subchapter J of the Code (relating to grantors and others treated as substantial owners) is considered as owned by such person.

(4) Attribution from corporations—(i) General. An interest owned, directly or indirectly, by or for a corporation shall be considered as owned by any person who owns (directly and, in the case of a parent-subsidiary group of trades or businesses under common control, with the application of paragraph (b)(1) of this section, or in the case of a brother-sister group of trades or business under common control, with the application of this section), 5 percent or more in value of the stock in that proportion which the value of the stock which such person so owns bears to the total value of all the stock in such corporation.

(ii) Example. The provisions of paragraph (b)(4)(i) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. B, an individual, owns 60 of the 100 shares of the only class of outstanding stock of corporation P. C, an individual, owns 4 shares of the P stock, and corporation X owns 36 shares of the P stock. Corporation P owns, directly and indirectly, 50 shares of the stock of corporation S. Under this subparagraph, B is considered to own 30 shares of the S stock (60/100 × 50), and X is considered to own 18 shares of S stock (36/100 × 50). Since C does not own 5 percent or more in the value of P stock, he is not considered as owning any of the S stock owned by P. If in this example, C's wife had owned directly 1 share of the P stock, C and his wife would each be considered as owning 5 shares of the P stock, and therefore C and his wife would be considered as owning 2.5 shares of the S stock (5/100 × 50).

(5) Spouse—(i) General rule. Except as provided in paragraph (b)(5)(ii) of this section, an individual shall be considered to own an interest owned, directly or indirectly, by or for his or her spouse, other than a spouse who is legally separated from the individual under a decree of divorce, whether interlocutory or final, or a decree of separate maintenance.

(ii) Exception. An individual shall not be considered to own an interest in an organization owned, directly or indirectly, by or for his or her spouse on any day of a taxable year of such organization, provided that each of the following conditions are satisfied with respect to such taxable year:

(A) Such individual does not, at any time during such taxable year, own directly any interest in such organization;

(B) Such individual is not a member of the board of directors, a fiduciary, or an employee of such organization and does not participate in the management of such organization at any time during such taxable year;

(C) Not more than 50 percent of such organization's gross income for such taxable year was derived from royalties, rents, dividends, interest, and annuities; and

(D) Such interest in such organization is not, at any time during such taxable year, subject to conditions which substantially restrict or limit the spouse's right to dispose of such interest and which run in favor of the individual or the individual's children who have not attained the age of 21 years. The principles of §1.414(c)–3(d)(6)(i) shall apply in determining whether a condition is a condition described in the preceding sentence.

(iii) Definitions. For purposes of paragraph (b)(5)(ii)(C) of this section, the gross income of an organization shall be determined under section 61 and the regulations thereunder. The terms "interest", "royalties", "rents", "dividends", and "annuities" shall have the same meaning such terms are given for purposes of section 1244(c) and §1.1244(c)–1(e)(1).

(6) Children, grandchildren, parents, and grandparents—(i) Children and parents. An individual shall be considered to own an interest owned, directly or indirectly, by or for the individual's children who have not attained the age of 21 years, and if the individual has not attained the age of 21 years, an interest owned, directly or indirectly, by or for the individual's parents.

(ii) Children, grandchildren, parents, and grandparents. If an individual is in effective control (within the meaning of §1.414(c)–2(c)(2)), directly and with the application of the rules of this paragraph without regard to this subdivision, of an organization, then such individual shall be considered to own an interest in such organization owned, directly or indirectly, by or for the individual's parents, grandparents, grandchildren, and children who have attained the age of 21 years.

(iii) Adopted children. For purposes of this section, a legally adopted child of an individual shall be treated as a child of such individual.

(iv) Example. The provisions of this subparagraph (6) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example—(A) Facts. Individual F owns directly 40 percent of the profits interest of the DEF Partnership. His son, M, 20 years of age, owns directly 30 percent of the profits interest of DEF, and his son, A, 30 years of age, owns directly 20 percent of the profits interest of DEF. The 10 percent remaining of the profits interest and 100 percent of the capital interest of DEF is owned by an unrelated person.

(B) F's ownership. F owns 40 percent of the profits interest in DEF directly and is considered to own the 30 percent profits interest owned directly by M. Since, for purposes of the effective control test contained in paragraph (b)(6)(ii) of this section, F is treated as owning 70 percent of the profits interest of DEF, F is also considered as owning the 20 percent profits interest of DEF owned by his adult son, A. Accordingly, F is considered as owning a total of 90 percent of the profits interest in DEF.

(C) M's ownership. Minor son, M, owns 30 percent of the profits interest in DEF directly, and is considered to own the 40 percent profits interest owned directly by his father, F. However, M is not considered to own the 20 percent profits interest of DEF owned directly by his brother, A, and constructively by F, because an interest constructively owned by F by reason of family attribution is not considered as owned by him for purposes of making another member of his family the constructive owner of such interest. (See paragraph (c)(2) of this section.) Accordingly, M is considered as owning a total of 70 percent of the profits interest of the DEF Partnership.

(D) A's ownership. Adult son, A, owns 20 percent of the profits interest in DEF directly. Since, for purposes of determining whether A effectively controls DEF under paragraph (b)(6)(ii) of this section, A is treated as owning only the percentage of profits interest he owns directly, he does not satisfy the condition precedent for the attribution of the DEF profits interest from his father. Accordingly, A is considered as owning only the 20 percent profits interest in DEF which he owns directly.

(c) Operating rules—(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(2) of this section, an interest constructively owned by a person by reason of the application of paragraph (b)(1), (2), (3), (4), (5), or (6) of this section shall, for the purposes of applying such paragraph, be treated as actually owned by such person.

(2) Members of family. An interest constructively owned by an individual by reason of the application of paragraph (b)(5) or (6) of this section shall not be treated as owned by such individual for purposes of again applying such subparagraphs in order to make another the constructive owner of such interest.

(3) Precedence of option attribution. For purposes of this section, if an interest may be considered as owned under paragraph (b)(1) of this section (relating to option attribution) and under any other subparagraph of paragraph (b) of this section, such interest shall be considered as owned by such person under paragraph (b)(1) of this section.

(4) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). A, 30 years of age, has a 90 percent interest in the capital and profits of DEF Partnership. DEF owns all the outstanding stock of corporation X and X owns 60 shares of the 100 outstanding shares of corporation Y. Under paragraph (c)(1) of this section, the 60 shares of Y constructively owned by DEF by reason of paragraph (b)(4) of this section are treated as actually owned by DEF for purposes of applying paragraph (b)(2) of this section. Therefore, A is considered as owning 54 shares of the Y stock (90 percent of 60 shares).

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1). Assume further that B, who is 20 years of age and the brother of A, directly owns 40 shares of Y stock. Although the stock of Y owned by B is considered as owned by C (the father of A and B) under paragraph (b)(6)(i) of this section, under paragraph (c)(2) of this section such stock may not be treated as owned by C for purposes of applying paragraph (b)(6)(ii) of this section in order to make A the constructive owner of such stock.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (2), and further assume that C has an option to acquire the 40 shares of Y stock owned by his son, B. The rule contained in paragraph (c)(2) of this section does not prevent the reattribution of such 40 shares to A because, under paragraph (c)(3) of this section, C is considered as owning the 40 shares by reason of option attribution and not by reason of family attribution. Therefore, since A is in effective control of Y under paragraph (b)(6)(ii) of this section, the 40 shares of Y stock constructively owned by C are reattributed to A. A is considered as owning a total of 94 shares of Y stock.

§1.414(c)-5 Effective date.

(a) General rule. Except as provided in paragraph (b), (c), (e), or (f) of this section, the provisions of §1.414(b)-1 and §§1.414(c)-1 through 1.414(c)-4 shall apply for plan years beginning after September 22, 1974.

(b) Existing plans. In the case of a plan in existence on January 1, 1974, unless paragraph (c) of this section applies, the provisions of §1.414(b)-1 and §§1.414(c)-1 through 1.414(c)-4 shall apply for plan years beginning after December 31, 1975. For definition of the term "existing plan", see §1.410(a)-2(c).

(c) Existing plans electing new provisions. In the case of a plan in existence on January 1, 1974, for which the plan administrator makes an election under §1.410(a)-2(d), the provisions of §1.414(b)-1 and §§1.414(c)-1 through 1.414(c)-4 shall apply to the plan years elected under §1.410(a)-2(d).

(d) Application. For purposes of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, the provisions of §1.414(b)-1 and §§1.414(c)-1 through 1.414(c)-4 do not apply for any period of time before the plan years described in paragraph (a), (b), or (c) of this section, whichever is applicable.

(e) Special rule. Notwithstanding paragraph (a), (b), or (c) of this section, §1.414(c)-3(f) is effective April 1, 1988.

(f) Transitional rule—(1) In general. The amendments made by T.D. 8179 apply to the plan years or period described in paragraphs (a), (b), or (c) of this section, whichever is applicable.

(2) Exception. In the case of a plan year or period beginning before March 2, 1988, if an organization—

(i) Is a member of a brother-sister group of trades or businesses under common control under §11.414(c)-2(c), as in effect before removal by T.D. 8179 ("old group"), for such plan year or period, and

(ii) Is not such a member for such plan year or period because of the amendments made by such Treasury decision, such member (whether or not a corporation) nevertheless will be treated as a member of such old group for purposes of section 414(c) for that plan year or period to the extent provided in §1.1563-1(d)(2). Also, such member will be treated as a member of an old group for all purposes of the Code for such plan year or period if all the organizations (whether or not corporations) that are members of the old groups meet all the requirements of §1.1563-1(d)(3) with respect to such plan year or period.

Par. 4. Section 1.1563-1 is amended as follows:

1. Paragraph (a)(3)(i) is amended by deleting ", singly or in combination," and by adding a new flush paragraph at the end of (a)(3)(i)(b) as set forth below.

2. Paragraph (a)(3) is amended by revising Examples (1) and (2) and by adding new Examples (3) and (4) in paragraph (a)(3)(ii) and by paragraph (a)(3)(iii) as set forth below.

3. Paragraph (c)(2)(iv) is amended by revising the charts in Examples (1) and (2) as set forth below.

4. Paragraph (d) is added to read as set forth below:

§1.1563-1 Definition of controlled group of corporations and component members.

(a) Controlled group of corporations. . . .

(3) Brother-sister controlled group

(i) . . .

The five or fewer persons whose stock ownership is considered for purposes of the 80 percent requirement must be the same persons whose stock ownership is considered for purposes of the more-than-50 percent requirement.

* * * * *

(ii) ***

Example (1). The outstanding stock of corporations P, Q, R, S, and T, which have only one class of stock outstanding, is owned by the following unrelated individuals:

Individuals	Corporations P	Q	R	S	T	Identical Ownership
A	55%	51%	55%	55%	55%	51%
B	45%	49%	—	—	—	(45% in P & Q)
C	—	—	45%	—	—	—
D	—	—	—	45%	—	—
E	—	—	—	—	45%	—
Total	100%	100%	100%	100%	100%

Corporations P and Q are members of a brother-sister controlled group of corporations. Although the more-than-50 percent identical ownership requirement is met for all 5 corporations, corporations R, S, and T are not members because at least 80 percent of the stock of each of those corporations is not owned by the same 5 or fewer persons whose stock ownership is considered for purposes of the more-than-50 percent identical ownership requirement.

Example (2). The outstanding stock of corporations U and V, which have only one class of stock outstanding, is owned by the following unrelated individuals:

Individuals	Corporations U (Percent)	C (percent)
A............	12	12
B............	12	12
C............	12	12
D............	12	12
E............	13	13
F............	13	13
G............	13	13

Any group of five of the shareholders will own more than 50 percent of the stock in each corporation, in identical holdings. However, U and V are not members of a brother-sister controlled group because at least 80 percent of the stock of each corporation is not owned by the same five or fewer persons.

Example (3). Corporations X and Y each have two classes of stock outstanding, voting common and non-voting common. (None of this stock is excluded from the definition of stock under section 1563(c).) Unrelated individuals A and B own the following percentages of the class of stock entitled to vote (voting) and of the total value of shares of all classes of stock (value) in each of corporations X and Y:

Individuals	Corporations X	Y
A	100% voting 60% value	75% voting 60% value
B	0% voting 10% value	25% voting 10% value

No other shareholder of X owns (or is considered to own) any stock in Y. X and Y are a brother-sister controlled group of corporations. The group meets the more-than-50 percent ownership requirement because A and B own more than 50 percent of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of X and Y in identical holdings. (The group also meets the more-than-50 percent ownership requirement because of A's voting stock ownership.) The group meets the 80 percent requirement because A and B own at least 80 percent of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote.

Example (4). Assume the same facts as in example (3) except that the value of the stock owned by A and B is not more than 30 percent of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of each corporation in identical holdings. X and Y are not a brother-sister controlled group of corporations. The group meets the more-than-50 percent ownership requirement because A owns more than 50 percent of the total combined voting power of the voting stock of each corporation. For purposes of the 80 percent requirement, B's voting stock in Y cannot be combined with A's voting stock in Y since B, who does not own any voting stock in X, is not a person whose ownership is considered for purposes of the more-than-50 percent requirement. Because no other shareholder owns stock in both X and Y, these other shareholders' stock ownership is not counted towards meeting either the more-than-50 percent ownership requirement or the 80-percent ownership requirement.

(iii) Paragraph (a)(3) of this section, as amended by T.D. 8179 of this Treasury decision, applies to taxable years ending on or after December 31, 1970. See, however, the transitional rule in paragraph (d) of this section.

(d) Transitional rules—(1) In general. Treasury decision 8179 amended paragraph (a)(3) of this section to revise the definition of a brother-sister controlled group of corporations. In general, those amendments are effective for taxable years ending on or after December 31, 1970.

(2) Limited nonretroactivity. (i) Under the authority of section 7805 (b), the Internal Revenue Service will treat an old group as a brother-sister controlled group of corporations for purposes of applying sections 401, 404(a), 406(k), 409A, 410, 411, 412, 414, 415, and 4971 of the Code and sections 202, 203, 204, and 302 of the Employment Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) in a plan year or taxable year beginning before March 2, 1988 to the extent necessary to prevent an adverse effect on any old member (or any other corporation), or on any plan or other entity described in such sections (including plans, etc., of corporations not part of such old group), that would result solely from the retroactive effect of the amendment to this section by T.D. 8179. An adverse effect includes the disqualification of a plan or the disallowance of a deduction or credit for a contribution to a plan. The Internal Revenue Service, however, will not treat an old member as a member of an old group to the extent that such treatment will have an adverse effect on that old member.

(ii) Section 7805(b) will not be applied pursuant to paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section to treat an old member of an old group as a member of a brother-sister controlled group to prevent an adverse effect for a taxable year if, for that taxable year, that old member treats or has treated itself as not being a member of that old group for purposes of section 401, 404(a), 408(k), 409A, 410, 411, 412, 414, 415, and 4971 of the Code and sections 202, 203, 204, and 302 and Title IV of ERISA for such taxable year (such as by filing, with respect to such taxable year, a return, amended return, or claim for credit or refund in which the amount of any deduction, credit, limitation, or tax due is determined by treating itself as not being a member of the old group for purposes of those sections). However, the fact that one or more (but not all) of the old members do not qualify for section 7805(b) treatment because of the preceding sentence will not preclude that old member (or members) from being treated as a member of the old group under paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section in order to prevent the disallowance of a deduction or credit of another old member (or other corporation) or to prevent the disqualification of, or other adverse effect on, another old member's plan (or other entity) described in the sections of the Code and ERISA enumerated in such paragraph.

(3) Election of general nonretroactivity. In the case of a taxable year ending on or after December 31, 1970, and before (the date March 2, 1988), an old group will be treated as a brother-sister controlled group of corporations for all purposes of the Code for such taxable year if—

(i) Each old member files a statement consenting to such treatment for such taxable year with the District Director having audit jurisdiction over its return within six months after the date March 2, 1988 and

(ii) No old member (A) files or has filed, with respect to such taxable year, a return, amended return, or claim for credit or refund in which the amount of any deduction, credit, limitation, or tax due is determined by treating any old member as not a member of the old group or (B) treats the employees of all members of the old group as not being employed by a single employer for purposes of sections 401, 404(a), 408(k), 409A, 410, 411, 412, 414, 415, and 4971 of the Code and sections 202, 203, 204, and 302 of ERISA for such taxable year.

(4) Definitions. For purposes of this paragraph (d) of this section—

(i) An "old group" is a brother-sister controlled group of corporations, determined by applying paragraph (a)(3) of this section as in effect before the amendments made by Treasury decision 8179, (insert T.D. number of this), that is not a brother-sister controlled group of corporations, determined by applying paragraph (a)(3) of this section as amended by such Treasury decision, and

(ii) An "old member" is any corporation that is a member of an old group.

(5) Election to choose between membership in more than one controlled group. If—

(i) An old member has filed an election under paragraph (c)(2) of this section to be treated as a component member of an old group for a December 31 before March 2, 1988, and

(ii) That corporation would (without regard to such paragraph) be a component member of more than one brother-sister controlled group (not including an old group) on the December 31, that corporation may make an election under that paragraph by filing an amended return on or before September 2, 1988. This paragraph (d)(5) does not apply to a corporation that is treated as a member of an old group under paragraph (d)(3) of this section

(6) Refunds. See section 6511(a) for period of limitation on filing claims for credit or refund.

Par. 5. Section 1.1583-3 is amended by revising Example (3) in paragraph (d)(3) as set forth below.

§1.1563-3 Rules for determining stock ownership.

* * * * *

(d) Special rule of section 1583(f)(3)(B)

(3) Examples. * * *

Example (3). Unrelated individuals A and E each own 49 percent of all the outstanding stock of corporation R, which in turn owns 70 percent of the only class of outstanding stock of corporation S. The remaining 30 percent of the stock of corporation S is owned by unrelated individual C. C also owns the remaining 2 percent of the stock of corporation R. Under the attribution rule of paragraph (b)(4) of this section A and B are each considered to own 34.9 percent of the stock of corporation S. Accordingly, since five or fewer persons own at least 80 percent of the stock of corporations R and S and also own more than 50 percent identically (A's and B's identical ownership each is 34.3 percent, C's identical ownership is 2 percent), on December 31, 1970, corporations R and S are treated as component members of the same brother-sister controlled group.

Par. 6. Section 1.7476-1 is amended by removing from paragraph (b)(2)(i) "§11.414(c)-3 of this chapter (Temporary Income Tax Regulations under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974))" and adding instead "§1.414(c)-3)".

Section 414

26 CFR 1.414(q)-1T: Highly compensated employee.

T.D. 8173

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A—INCOME TAX—PART 1—INCOME TAX REGULATIONS

Definitions of Highly Compensated Employee and Compensation

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations relating to the scope and meaning of the terms "highly compensated employee" in section 414(q) and "compensation" in section 414(s) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. They reflect changes made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (TRA '86) and conform the regulations to sections 1114(a) and 1115 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 2448 and 2453) [1986-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 365, 369]. These regulations will provide the public with guidance necessary to comply with the law and would affect sponsors of, and participants in, pension, profit-sharing and stock bonus plans, and certain other employee benefit plans. The text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text of the proposed regulations for the notice of proposed rulemaking  [page 880, this Bulletin].

DATE: In general, these regulations apply to years beginning on or after January 1, 1987, except as otherwise specified in TRA '86.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document amends the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) by adding new sections 1.414(q)-1T and 1.414(s)-1T to provide guidance with respect to the definitions of highly compensated employee and compensation within the meaning of Internal Revenue Code section 414(q) and (s).

AMENDMENTS TO QUALIFIED PLANS

Generally, subsections (q) and (s) of section 414 are definitional provisions that do not, of themselves, require plan amendments or impose operational requirements. However, in order to meet the requirements for qualification, plans are required to contain provisions designed to meet certain statutory requirements that rely on these definitions. Therefore, amendments will generally be necessary to conform plans to these definitions.

The definitions contained in subsections (q) and (s) of section 414 are generally effective for years beginning on or after January 1, 1987. Nevertheless, subject to certain conditions, a plan will not be disqualified solely because it is not amended to the extent necessary to conform to these definitions prior to the close of the amendment period contained in section 1140 of TRA '86. This delayed date for conforming amendments is conditioned on a requirement that such plan amendments are adopted retroactively to the later of the first day of the first plan year beginning after December 31, 1986, or the relevant effective date for the plan provisions to which these definitions are applicable. In addition, plans must satisfy the statutory requirements of applicable sections that incorporate these definitions in operation, beginning with the effective date for such requirements, notwithstanding the absence of plan provisions. For example, a plan to which the nondiscrimination tests of section 401(k)(3) or 401(m)(2) apply must satisfy these tests on the basis of comparisons between the group of highly compensated employees as defined in section 414(q) and the group of all other employees beginning with plan years beginning after December 31, 1986, except to the extent that the optional transition rule of §1.414(q)-1T Question and Answer (A) 15 is applicable. In contrast, the provisions of the coverage requirements of section 410(b), as amended by section 1112(a) of the TRA '86, which provisions contain tests based in part on groups of employees who are highly compensated employees within the meaning of section 414(q), are generally effective for plan years beginning after December 31, 1988.

AMENDMENT DATE FOR ELECTIVE PROVISIONS

These temporary regulations with respect to section 414(q) and (s) provide for certain elections that require corresponding plan provisions. Any amendments necessary to adopt such plan provisions may be made by the section 1140 delayed effective date in the same manner as amendments required with respect to TRA '86.

OPTIONAL TRANSITION RULE FOR 1987 AND 1988

A-15 of §1.414(q)-1T provides that certain employers with plans subject to the nondiscrimination requirements of section 401(k)(3) or plans that are subject to section 401(m)(2) may elect an optional transition rule in determining the group of "highly compensated employees" for purposes of applying these requirements to plan years beginning in 1987 or 1988. This elective rule is applicable solely to the transition period ending before the first plan year beginning on or after January 1, 1989. Thus, this elective rule may be used for the 1987 and 1988 determination year calculations and the corresponding 1986 and 1987 look-back year calculations for the 1987 and 1988 determination years. It may not, however, be used for the 1989 determination year calculation or the 1988 look-back year calculation with respect to the 1989 determination year. This rule is designed to reduce the potential administrative difficulties employers might experience in attempting to reconstruct data and initiate new compensation reporting systems for the transition period.

DEFINITION OF HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEES

These temporary regulations under section 414(q) provide rules for determining which employees are "highly compensated employees". This term is used in various Code sections relating to qualified retirement plans, qualified cash or deferred arrangements, and certain other employee benefit plans for the purpose of determining whether these plans discriminate in favor of such employees. The term is also used in Code provisions that impose specific tax consequences on highly compensated employees. See e.g., sections 402(b)(2) and 89(a)(1). This definition is generally applicable only to sections that incorporate the new definition of highly compensated employees by reference.

This regulation provides for two categories of highly compensated employees: highly compensated active employees and highly compensated former employees. The determination of whether such employees are active or former employees is made on the basis of whether or not the individual performed services for the employer during the determination year. Generally, the group of highly compensated active employees consists of individual who, at any time during the determination year, or the preceding year, were either: 5-percent owners of the employer; compensated by the employer in an amount above $75,000; compensated by the employer in an amount above $50,000 and within the top 20 percent of employees ranked by compensation paid by the employer; or officers of the employer whose compensation is above a certain level. The definition of highly compensated employees set forth in A-2(b) of these regulations anticipates that a technical correction indexing the threshold $75,000 and $50,000 dollar amounts at the same time and in the same manner as the section 415(b)(1)(A) dollar limitation for defined benefit plans will be enacted, with retroactive effect. Applying this rule, the indexed threshold dollar amounts for 1988 are $78,353 and $52,235 respectively. An elective special rule is provided for purposes of administrative simplicity in determining whether employees who left employment prior to the effective date of section 414(q) are highly compensated former employees. The regulations state that highly compensated active and former employees are to be identified on an employer-wide basis, taking into account the aggregation rules of section 414(b), (c), (m), and (o) and the rules with respect to leased and other deemed employees contained in section 414(n) and (o). The regulations further provide that the threshold dollar amounts used in determining who is a highly compensated employee are indexed to reflect changes in the cost of living at the same time and in the same manner as the section 415(b)(1)(A) limitation with respect to defined benefit plans.

Special rules are provided in the regulations for making determinations with respect to (1) which employees are officers and includible as highly compensated employees; (2) the manner in which the determination of highly compensated employees is made for the current year; (3) former employees; and (4) family aggregation.

The regulations do not include rules applicable to the identification of the highly compensated employees when there are changes in the composition of the employer due to mergers, acquisitions, divisive reorganizations, and similar business transactions. The Internal Revenue Service requests comments and suggestions with respect to the application of section 414(q) and these regulations to such situations. The Service plans to issue proposed rules on such situations later this year.

The regulations provide, where appropriate, that the definitions provided herein apply only to the definition of highly compensated employee in section 414(q) and these regulations. In addition, the specific rules with respect to family aggregation and the inclusion or exclusion of certain categories of employees (e.g. former employees and employees covered under a collective bargaining agreement) apply only to the extent not otherwise provided in regulations prescribed under sections that incorporate the definition of highly compensated employees.

RELATIONSHIP TO TITLE I OF ERISA

The primary purpose of section 414(q) of the Internal Revenue Code is to provide objective rules for identifying those employees of an employer who are to be treated as highly compensated employees in determining whether an employer-maintained retirement or other employee benefit plan impermissibly discriminates in favor of highly compensated employees. Nondiscrimination is a condition to many of the tax advantages provided with respect to such plans.

Some have inquired about whether section 414(q) is applicable with respect to the determination under sections 201(2), 301(a)(3), and 401(a)(1) of ERISA when an employee benefit plan is "maintained by an employer primarily for the purposes of providing deferred compensation for a select group of management or highly compensated employees." The Department of Labor has jurisdiction over the interpretation of these provisions. However, the Department of the Treasury would like to clarify its understanding that section 414(q) is not determinative with respect to provisions of Title I or ERISA, other than those provisions that explicitly incorporate such section by reference (e.g., section 408(b)(1)(B) of ERISA). The Departments of Treasury and Labor concur in the view that a braod extension of section 414(q) to determinations under sections 201(2), 301(a)(3), and 401(a)(1) of ERISA would be inconsistent with the tax and retirement policy objectives of encouraging employers to maintain tax-qualified plans that provide meaningful benefits to rank-and-file employees.

DEFINITION OF COMPENSATION

Generally, the term "compensation" as defined in section 414(s) means compensation, other than qualified or previously qualified deferred compensation, received for services performed for the employer that is currently includible in gross income for income tax purposes. This definition is generally applicable for Part 1 of Subchapter D of the Code, sections 401 through 419A, for purposes of applying the nondiscrimination rules (including the actual deferral percentage limits for cash or deferred arrangements and for employee and employer matching contributions). This section 414(s) definition of compensation is not applicable to sections that provide for another definition of compensation. For example, provisions to which this definition is not applicable include section 414(q) and section 415 for purposes of applying the section 415 limits on contributions and benefits except to the extent applicable to the section 415(c)(6) special rule with respect to employee stock ownership plans. A definition of compensation with respect to self-employed individuals is provided in A-2. These regulations also provide exceptions and alternatives to the section 414(s) definition of compensation in A-3 and A-4 of these regulations. Included among these alternatives is a provision permitting use of the section 415(c) definition of compensation. In this context, the Service contemplates revising the regulations with respect to section 415(c) and invites comment with respect to the section 415(c) definition of compensation as amended by TRA '86. The regulations also provide a delegation of authority to the Commissioner to provide for additional alternative definitions of compensation for purposes of section 414(s). It is anticipated that this delegation to the Commissioner will be exercised in the form of revenue rulings, Internal Revenue Bulletin notices or other Internal Revenue Service publications of general applicability.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF THESE REGULATIONS

These regulations are generally effective for plan years beginning on or after January 1, 1987, except as otherwise specified in TRA '86.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis is not required. A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the temporary regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS

(26 CFR Part 1)

Paragraph 1. The authority citation for Part 1 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.  section 1.414(s)-1T is also issued under 26 U.S.C. 414(s).

Par. 2. There are inserted immediately after §1.414(l)-1 the following new sections 1.414(q)-1T and 1.414(s)-1T to read as follows:

§1.414(q)-1T Highly compensated employee (Temporary).

The following questions and answers relate to the definition of "highly compensated employee" provided in section 414(q). The definitions and rules provided in these questions and answers are provided solely for purposes of determining the group of highly compensated employees.

Q-1: To what employee benefit plans and statutory provisions is the definition of highly compensated employee contained in section 414(q) applicable?

A-1: (a) In general. This definition is applicable to statutory provisions that incorporate the definition by reference.

(b) Qualified retirement plans—(1) In general. Generally, this definition is incorporated in many of the nondiscrimination requirements applicable to pension, profit-sharing, and stock bonus plans qualified under section 401(a). See, e.g., the nondiscrimination provisions of sections 401(a)(4) and (5), 401(k)(3), 401(l), 401(m), 406(b), 407(b), 408(k), 410(b) and 411(d)(1). The definition is also incorporated by certain other provisions with respect to such plans, including the aggregation rules of section 414(m) and section 4975 (tax on prohibited transactions).

(2) Not applicable where not incorporated by reference. This definition is not applicable to qualified plan provisions that do not incorporate it. See e.g., section 415 (limitations on contributions and benefits), with the exception of section 415(c)(3)(C) and 415(c)(6) (special rules for permanent and total disability and employee stock ownership plans respectively).

(c) Other employee benefit plans or arrangements. This definition is incorporated by various sections relating to employee benefit provisions. See e.g., section 89 (certain other employee benefit plans), section 106 (accident and health plans), 117(d) (qualified tuition reduction), section 125 (cafeteria plans), section 129 (dependent care assistance programs), section 132 (certain fringe benefits), section 274 (certain entertainment, etc. expenses), section 423(b) (employee stock purchase plan provisions), section 501(c)(17) and (18) (certain exempt trusts providing benefits to employees), and section 505 (certain exempt organizations or trusts providing benefits to individuals). See the respective sections for the applicable effective dates.

(d) ERISA. This definition is not determinative with respect to any provisions of Title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), unless it is explicitly incorporated by reference (e.g., section 408(b)(1)(B)).

Q-2: Who is a highly compensated employee?

A-2: The group of employees (including former employees) who are highly compensated employees consists of both highly compensated active employees (see A-3 of this §1.414(q)-1T) and highly compensated former employees (see A-4 of this §1.414(q)-1T). In many circumstances, highly compensated active employees and highly compensated former employees are considered separately in applying the provisions for which the definition of highly compensated employees in section 414(q) is applicable. Specific rules with respect to the treatment of highly compensated active employees and highly compensated former employees will be provided in the regulations with respect to the sections to which the definition of highly compensated employees is applicable.

Q-3: Who is a highly compensated active employee?

A-3: (a) General rule. For purposes of the year for which the determination is being made (the determination year), a highly compensated active employee is any employee who, with respect to the employer, performs services during the determination year and is described in any one or more of the following groups applicable with respect to the look-back year calculation and/or determination year calculation for such determination year. See A-14 for rules relating to the periods for which the look-back year calculation and determination year calculation are to be made.

(1) Look-back year calculation.

(i) 5-percent owner. The employee is a 5-percent owner at any time during the look-back year (i.e., generally, the 12-month period immediately preceding the determination year; see A-14. (See A-8 of this §1.414(q)-1T.)

(ii) Compensation above $75,000. The employee receives compensation in excess of $75,000 during the look-back year.

(iii) Compensation above $50,000 and top-paid group. The employee receives compensation in excess of $50,000 during the look-back year and is a member of the top-paid group for the look-back year. (See A-9 of this §1.414(q)-1T.)

(iv) The employee is an "includible officer" during the look-back year. (See A-10 of this §1.414(q)-1T.)

(2) Determination year calculation.

(i) 5-percent owner. The employee is a 5-percent owner at any time during the determination year. (See A-8 of this §1.414(q)-1T.)

(ii) Top-100 employees. The employee is both (A) described in paragraph (a)(1)(i), (ii) and/or (iv) of this A-3, when such paragraphs are modified to substitute the determination year for the look-back year, and (B) one of the 100 employees who receive the most compensation from the employer during the determination year.

(b) Rounding and tie-breaking rules. In making the look-back year and determination year calculations for a determination year, it may be necessary for an employer to adopt a rule for rounding calculations (e.g., in determining the number of employees in the top-paid group). In addition, it may be necessary to adopt a rule breaking ties among two or more employees (e.g., in identifying those particular employees who are in the top-paid group or who are among the 100 most highly compensated employees). In such cases, the employer may adopt any rounding or tie-breaking rules it desires, so long as such rules are reasonable, nondiscriminatory, and uniformly and consistently applied.

(c) Adjustments to dollar threshold—(1) Indexing of dollar thresholds. The dollar amounts in paragraph (a)(1)(i) and (ii) of this A-3 are indexed at the same time and in the same manner as the section 415(b)(1)(A) dollar limitation for defined benefit plans.

(2) Applicable dollar threshold. The applicable dollar amount for a particular determination year or look-back year is the dollar amount for the calendar year in which such determination year or look-back year begins. Thus, the dollar amount for purposes of determining the highly compensated active employees for a particular look-back year is based on the calendar year in which such look-back year begins, not the calendar year in which such look-back year ends or in which the determination year with respect to such look-back year begins.

(d) Employees described in more than one group. An individual who is a highly compensated active employee for a determination year, by reason of being described in one group in paragraph (a) of this A-3, under either the look-back year calculation or the determination year calculation, is not disregarded in determining whether another individual is a highly compensated active employee by reason of being described in another group under paragraph (a). For example, an individual who is a highly compensated active employee for a determination year, by reason of being a 5-percent owner during such year, who receives compensation in excess of $50,000 during both the look-back year and the determination year, is taken into account in determining the group of employees who are highly compensated active employees for such determination year by reason of (i) receiving more than $50,000, and (ii) being in the top-paid group under either or both the look-back year calculation or determination year calculation for such determination year.

(e) Examples. The following examples, in which the determination year and look-back year are the calendar year, are illustrative of the rules in paragraph (a) of this A-3. For purposes of these examples, the threshold dollar amounts in paragraph (a)(1)(ii) and (iii) of this A-3 are not increased pursuant to paragraph (c) of this A-3.

Example (1). Employee A, who is not at any time a 5-percent owner, an officer, or a member of the top-100 within the meaning of paragraph (a)(1)(i), or (iv), or (a)(2)(i) or (ii), but who was a member of the top-paid group for each year, is included in or excluded from the highly compensated group as specified below for the following years:

Year	Compensation	Status	Comments
1986	$45,000	N/A	Although prior to 414(q) effective date, 1986 constitute the look-back year for purposes of determining the highly compensated group for the 1987 determination year.
1987	$80,000	Excl.	Excluded because A was not an employee described in paragraph (a)(1)(ii) or (iii) of this A-3 for the look-back year (1986).
1988	$80,000	Incl.	Included because A was an employee described in paragraph (a)(1)(ii) or (iii) of this A-3 for the look-back year (1987).
1989	$45,000	Incl.	Included because A was an employee described in paragraph (a)(1)(ii) or (iii) of this A-3 for the look-back year (1988).
1990	$45,000	Excl.	Excluded because A was not an employee described in paragraph (a)(1)(ii) or (iii) of this A-3 for the look-back year (1989).

Example (2). Assuming the same facts as those given in Example (1), except that A is a member of the top-100 employees within the meaning of paragraph (a)(2)(ii) of this A-3 for the 1987 year and 1990 year, the results are as follows:

Year	Compensation	Status	Comments
1986	$45,000	N/A	Although prior to 414(q) effective date, 1986 constitute the look-back year for purposes of determining the highly compensated group for the 1987 determination year.
1987	$80,000	Incl.	Included because A was an employee described in paragraph (a)(1)(ii) or (iii) of this A-3 for the determination year (1987) and was described in paragraph (a)(2)(ii) of this A-3 in that year.
1988	$80,000	Incl.	Included because A was an employee described in paragraph (a)(1)(ii) or (iii) of this A-3 for the look-back year (1987).
1989	$45,000	Incl.	Included because A was an employee described in paragraph (a)(1)(ii) or (iii) of this A-3 for the look-back year (1988).
1990	$45,000	Excl.	Excluded even though in top-100 employees during 1990 determination year because A was not an employee described in paragraph (a)(1)(ii) or (iii) of this A-3 for the look-back year (1989) or for the determination year (1990).

Q-4 Who is a highly compensated former employee?

A-4 (a) General rule. Except to the extent provided in paragraph (d) of this A-4, a highly compensated former employee for a determination year is any former employee who, with respect to the employer, had a separation year (as defined in A-5 of this §1.414(q)-1T) prior to the determination year and was a highly compensated active employee as defined in A-3 of this §1.414(q)-1T for either (1) such employee's separation year or (2) any determination year ending on or after the employee's 55th birthday. Thus, for example, an employee who is a highly compensated active employee for such employee's separation year, by reason of receiving over $75,000 during the look-back year, is a highly compensated former employee for determination years after such employee's separation year.

(b) Special rule for employees who perform no services for the employer in the determination year. For purposes of this rule, employees who perform no services for an employer during a determination year are treated as former employees. Thus, for example, an employee who performed no services for the employer during a determination year, by reason of a leave of absence during such year, is treated as a former employee for such year.

(c) Dollar amounts for pre-1987 determination years. For determination years beginning before January 1, 1987, the dollar amounts in paragraph (a)(1)(B) and (C) of A-2 of this §1.414(q)-1T are $75,000 and $50,000 respectively.

(d) Special rule for employees who separated from service before January 1, 1987—(1) Election of special rule. Employers may elect to apply paragraph (d)(2) of this A-4 in lieu of paragraph (a) of this A-4 in determining whether former employees who separated from service prior to January 1, 1987, are highly compensated former employees. If this election is made with respect to any qualified plan, it must be provided for in the plan. If the employer makes this election with respect to any employee benefit plan, such election must be used uniformly for all purposes for which the section 414(q) definition is applicable. The election, once made, cannot be changed without the consent of the Commissioner.

(2) Special definition of highly compensated former employee. A highly compensated former employee includes any former employee who separated from service with the employer prior to January 1, 1987, and was described in any one or more of the following groups during either (A) the employee's separation year (or the year preceding such separation year) or (B) any year ending on or after such individual's 55th birthday (or the last year ending before such employee's 55th birthday):

(A) 5-percent owner. The employee was a 5-percent owner of the employer at any time during the year.

(B) Compensation amount. The employee received compensation in excess of $50,000 during the year.

The determinations provided for in this paragraph (b)(2) may be made on the basis of the calendar year, the plan year, or any other twelve month period selected by the employer and applied on a reasonable and consistent basis.

(e) Rules with respect to former employees—(1) In general. For specific provisions with respect to the treatment of former employees and of highly compensated former employees, refer to the rules with respect to which the section 414(q) definition of highly compensated employee is applicable.

(2) Former employees excluded in determining top-paid group, top-100 employees and includible officers. Former employees are not included in the top-paid group, the group of the top-100 employees, or the group of includible officers for purposes of applying section 414(q) to active employees. In addition, former employees are not counted as employees for purposes of determining the number of employees in the top-paid group.

Q-5 What is a separation year for purposes of section 414(q)?

A-5 (a) Separation year—(1) In general. The separation year generally is the determination year during which the employee separates from service with the employer. For purposes of this rule, an employee who performs no services for the employer during a determination year will be treated as having separated from service with the employer in the year in which such employee last performed services for the employer. Thus, for example, an employee who performs no services for the employer by reason of being on a leave of absence throughout the determination year is considered to have separated from service with the employer in the year in which such employee last performed services prior to beginning the leave of absence.

(2) Deemed separation. An employee who performs services for the employer during a determination year may be deemed to have separated from service with the employer during such year pursuant to the rules in paragraph (a)(3) of this A-5. Such deemed separation year is relevant for purposes of determining whether such employee is a highly compensated former employee after such employee actually separates from service, not for purposes of identifying such employee as either an active or former employee. Because employees to whom the provisions of paragraph (a)(2) of this A-5 apply are still performing services for the employer during the determination year, they are treated provisions of paragraph (a) of this A-5 will not be treated as a highly compensated former employee (by reason of such deemed separation year) after such employee actually separates from service with the employer if, after such deemed separation year, and before the year of actual separation, such employee's services for and compensation from the employer for a determination year increase significantly so that such employee is treated as having a deemed resumption of employment. The determination of whether an employee who has incurred a deemed separation year has an increase in services and compensation sufficient to result in a deemed resumption of employment will be made on the basis of all the surrounding facts and circumstances pertaining to each individual case. At a minimum, there must be an increase in compensation from the employer to the extent that such compensation would not result in a deemed separation year under the tests in paragraph (a)(2)(i) and (ii) of this A-5 using the same three year period taken into account in such paragraph.

(c) Examples. Paragraphs (a) and (b) of this A-5 are illustrated by the following examples based on calendar years. For purposes of these examples the threshold dollar amounts in A-5(a) of this §1.414(q)-1T have not been increased pursuant to A-5(b) of this §1.414(q)-1T.

Example (1). Assume that in 1990 A is a highly compensated employee of X by reason of having earned more than $75,000 during the 1989 look-back year. In 1987, 1988 and 1989, A's years of greatest compensation received from X, A received $76,000, $80,000 and $79,000 respectively. In February of 1990, A received $30,000 in compensation. Because A's compensation during the 1990 determination year is less than 50% of A's average annual compensation from X during A's high three prior determination years, A is deemed to have a separation year during the 1990 determination year pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (a) of this A-5. Since A is a highly compensated employee for X in 1990, A's deemed separation year, A will be treated as a highly compensated former employee after A actually separates from service with the employer unless A experiences a deemed resumption of employment within the meaning of paragraph (b) of this A-5.

Example (2). Assume that in 1990 A is a highly compensated employee by reason of having been an officer (with annual compensation in excess of the section 415(c)(1)(A) dollar limitation) during the 1989 look-back year. A's compensation from X during 1990 is $37,000. A's average compensation from X for the three-year period ending with or within January, 1990, was $60,000. A's compensation during the 1990 determination year is not less than 50% of the compensation earned during the test period. Therefore, A is not deemed to have a separation year under paragraph (a)(2)(i) of this A-5.

Example (3). Assume that in 1990 C is 35 and a highly compensated employee of Z for the reasons given in Example (1) with the same compensation set forth in that example. During 1990, D leaves C's 40 hour a week position as director of the actuarial division of Z and starts working as an actuary for the same division, producing actuarial reports approximately 15 to 20 hours a week, approximately half of these hours at home. C contemplates returning to full-time employment with Z when C's child enters school. During the 1990 determination year, C's compensation is less than 50% of C's compensation during her high three preceding determination years. Therefore, C has a deemed separation year during the 1990 determination year. In 1991 C commences working 32 hours a week for X at X's place of business and receives compensation in an amount equal to 80 percent of her average annual compensation during her high three prior determination years. The C's increased compensation, considered in conjunction with the reasons for the reduction in service, the nature and extent of the services performed before and after the reduction in services, and the lack of proximity of C's age to age 55 at the time of the reduction are sufficient to establish that C has a deemed resumption of employment within the meaning of paragraph (b) of this A-5. Therefore, when C separates from service with the employer, C will not be treated as a highly compensated former employee by reason of C's deemed separation year in 1990.

Q-6 Who is the employer?

A-6 (a) Aggregation of certain entities. The employer is the entity employing the employees and includes all other entities aggregated with such employing entity under the aggregation requirements of section 414(b), (c), (m) and (o). Thus, the following entities must be taken into account as a single employer for purposes of determining the employees who are "highly compensated employees" within the meaning of section 414(q):

(1) All corporations that are members of a controlled group of corporations (as defined in section 414(b)) that includes the employing entity.

(2) All trades or businesses (whether or not incorporated) that are under common control (as defined in section 414(c)) which group includes the employing entity.

(3) All organizations (whether or not incorporated) that are members of an affiliated service group (as defined in section 414(m)) that includes the employing entity.

(4) Any other entities required to be aggregated with the employing entity pursuant to section 414(o) and the regulations thereunder.

(b) Priority of aggregation provisions. The aggregation requirements of paragraph (a) of this A-6 and of A-7(b) of this section with respect to leased employees are applied before the application of any of the other provisions of section 414(q) and this section.

(c) Line of business rules. The section 414(r) rules with respect to separate lines of business are not applicable in determining the group of highly compensated employees.

Q-7: Who is an employee for purposes of section 414(q)?

A-7: (a) General rule. Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this A-7, the term "employee" for purposes of section 414(q) refers to individuals who perform services for the employer and are either common-law employees of the employer or self-employed individuals who are treated as employees pursuant to section 401(c)(1). This rule with respect to the inclusion of certain self-employed individuals in the group of highly compensated employees is applicable whether or not such individuals are eligible to participate in the plan or benefit arrangement being tested.

(b) Leased employees—(1) In general. The term "employee" includes a leased employee who is treated as an employee of the recipient pursuant to the provisions of section 414(n)(2) or 414(o)(2). Employees that an employer treats as leased employees under section 414(n), pursuant to the requirements of section 414(o), are considered to be leased employees for purposes of this rule.

(2) Safe-harbor exception. For purposes of qualified retirement plans, if an employee who would be a leased employee within the meaning of section 414(n)(2) is (i) covered in a safe-harbor plan described in section 414(n)(5) (a qualified money purchase pension plan maintained by the leasing organization), and (ii) not otherwise covered under a qualified retirement plan of the employer, then such employee is excluded from the term "employee" unless the employer elects to include such employee pursuant to the provisions of subparagraph (4) of this paragraph (b).

(3) Other employee benefit plans. The exception in paragraph (b)(2) of this A-7 is not applicable to the determination of the highly compensated employee group for purposes of the sections enumerated in section 414(n)(3)(C). Thus, for example, a leased employee covered by a safe-harbor plan is considered to be an employee in applying the nondiscrimination provisions of section 89 to statutory benefit plans. Consequently, an employer with leased employees covered in a safe-harbor plan may have 2 groups of highly compensated employees, one with respect to its retirement plans and another with respect to its statutory benefit plans.

(4) Election with respect to leased employee exclusion. An employer may elect to include the employees excepted under the provisions of paragraph (b)(2) of this A-7 in determining the highly compensation group with respect to an employer's retirement plans. Thus, for example, by electing to forego the exception in paragraph (b)(2) of this A-7, an employer may achieve more uniform highly compensated employee groups for purposes of its retirement plans and welfare benefit plans. The election to include such employees must be made on a reasonable and consistent basis and must be provided for in the plan.

Q-8: Who is a 5-percent owner of the employer?

A-8: An employee is a 5-percent owner of the employer for a particular year if, at any time during such year, such employee is a 5-percent owner as defined in section 416(i)(B)(i) and §1.416-1 A T-17&18. Thus, if the employer is a corporation, a 5-percent owner is any employee who owns (or is considered as owning within the meaning of section 318) more than 5 percent of the value of the outstanding stock of the corporation or stock possessing more than 5 percent of the total combined voting power of all stock of the corporation. If the employer is not a corporation, a 5-percent owner is any employee who owns more than 5 percent of the capital or profits interest in the employer. The rules of subsections (b), (c), and (m) of section 414 do not apply for purposes of determining who is a 5-percent owner. Thus, for example, an individual who is a 5-percent owner of a subsidiary corporation that is part of a controlled group of corporations within the meaning of section 414(b) is treated as a 5-percent owner for purposes of these rules.

Q-9: How is the "top-paid group" determined?

A-9: (a) General rule. An employee is in the top-paid group of employees for a particular year if such employee is in the group consisting of the top 20 percent of the employer's employees when ranked on the basis of compensation received from the employer during such year. The identification of the particular employees who are in the top-paid group for a year involves a two-step procedure: (1) the determination of the number of employees that corresponds to 20 percent of the employer's employees, and (2) the identification of the particular employees who are among the number of employees who receive the most compensation during the year. Employees who perform no services for the employer during a year are not included in making either of these determinations for such year.

(b) Number of employees in the top-paid group—(1) Exclusions. The number of employees who are in the top-paid group for a year is equal to 20 percent of the total number of active employees of the employer for such year. However, solely for purposes of determining the total number of active employees in for a year, the employees excluded in subdivisions (i), (ii), and (iii) of this paragraph (b)(1) are disregarded.

(i) Age and service exclusion. The following employees are excluded on the basis of age or service absent an election by the employer pursuant to the rules in paragraph (b)(2) of this A-9:

(A) Employees who have not completed 6 months of service by the end of such year. For purposes of this subdivision (A), an employee's service in the immediately preceding year is added to service in the current year in determining whether the exclusion is applicable with respect to a particular employee in the current year. For example, given a plan with a calendar determination year, if employee A commences work August 1, 1989, and terminates employment May 31, 1990, A may be excluded under this paragraph (b)(1)(i)(A) in 1989 because A completed only 5 months of service by December 31, 1989. However, A cannot be excluded pursuant to this rule in 1990 because A has completed 10 months of service, for purposes of this rule, by the end of 1990.

(B) Employees who normally work less than 17 1/2 hours per week as defined in paragraph (d) of this A-9 for such year.

(C) Employees who normally work during less than 6 months during any year as defined in paragraph (e) of this A-9 for such year.

(D) Employees who have not had their 21st birthdays by the end of such year.

(ii) Nonresident alien exclusion. Employees who are nonresident aliens and who receive no earned income (within the meaning of section 911(d)(2)) from the employer that constitutes income from sources within the United States (within the meaning of section 861(a)(3)) are excluded.

(iii) Collective bargaining exclusion—(A) In general. Except as provided in subdivision (B) of this paragraph (b)(1)(iii), employees who are included in a unit of employees covered by an agreement that the Secretary of Labor finds to be a collective bargaining agreement between employee representatives and the employer, which agreement satisfies section 7701(a)(46) and §301.7701-17T (Temporary), are included in determining the number of employees in the top-paid group.

(B) Percentage exclusion provision. If (1) 90 percent or more of the employees of the employer are covered under collective bargaining agreements that the Secretary of Labor finds to be collective bargaining agreements between employee representatives and the employer, which agreements satisfy section 7701(a)(46) and §301.7701-17T (Temporary), and (2) the plan being tested covers only employees who are not covered under such agreements, then the employees who are covered under such collective bargaining agreements are not counted in determining the number of noncollective bargaining employees who will be included in the top-paid group for purposes of testing such plan. In addition, such employees are not included in the top-paid group for such purposes. Thus, if the conditions of this paragraph (b)(1)(iii)(B) are satisfied, a separate calculation is required to determine the number and identity of noncollective bargaining employees who will be highly compensated employees by reason of receiving over $50,000 and being in the top-paid group of employees for purposes of testing those plans that cover only noncollective bargaining employees.

(2) Alternative exclusion provisions—(i) Age and service exclusion election. An employer may elect, on a consistent and uniform basis, to modify the permissible exclusions set forth in paragraph (b)(1)(i)(A), (B), (C), and (D) of this A-9 by substituting any shorter period of service or lower age than that specified in such paragraph. These exclusions may be modified to substitute a zero service or age requirement.

(ii) Election not to apply percentage exclusion provision. An employer may elect not to exclude employees under the rules in paragraph (b)(1)(iii)(B) of this A-9.

(iii) Method of election. The elections in this paragraph (b)(2) must be provided for in all plans of the employer and must be uniform and consistent with respect to all situations in which the section 414(q) definition is applicable to the employer. Thus, with respect to all plan years beginning in the same calendar year, the employer must apply the test uniformly for purposes of determining its top-paid group with respect to all its qualified plans and employee benefit plans and for purposes of the line of business rules set forth in section 414(r). If either election is changed during the determination year, no recalculation of the look-back year based on the new election is required, provided the change in election does not result in discrimination in operation.

(c) Identification of top-paid group members. With the exception of the paragraph (b)(1)(iii) of this A-9 exclusion for certain employees covered by collective bargaining agreements, the exclusions in paragraph (b)(1) of this A-9 are not applicable for purposes of identifying the particular employees in the top-paid group. Thus, for example, even if an employee who normally works for less than 17 1/2 hours is excluded in determining the number of employees in the top-paid group, such employee may be a member of the top-paid group. Similarly, if during a determination year, employee A receives over $75,000 and is one of the top-100 employees ranked by compensation, then employee A is a highly compensated active employee for such determination year. This is true even though employee A has worked less than six months and thus may be excluded in determining the number of persons in the top-paid group for the determination year.

(d) Example. Paragraphs (b) and (c) of this A-9 are illustrated by the following example:

Example. Employer X has 200 active employees during the 1989 determination year, 100 of whom normally work less than 17 1/2 hours per week during such year and 80 of whom normally work less than 15 hours per week during such year. X elects to exclude all employees who normally work less than 15 hours per week in determining the number of employees in the top-paid group. Thus, X excludes 80 employees in determining the number of employees in the top-paid group. X's top-paid group for the 1989 determination year consists of 20% of 120 or 24 employees. All 200 of X's employees must then be ranked in order by compensation received during the year, and the 24 employees X paid the greatest amount of compensation during the year are top-paid employees with respect to X for the 1989 determination year.

(e) 17 1/2 hour rule—(1) In general. The determination of whether an employee normally works less than 17 1/2 hours per week is made independently for each year based on the rules in paragraph (e)(2) and (3) of this A-9. In making this determination, weeks during which the employee did not work for the employer are not considered. Thus, for example, if an employee normally works twenty hours a week for twenty-five weeks during the fall and winter school quarters, 10 hours a week for the 12 week spring quarter, and does not work for the employer during the three-month summer quarter, such employee is treated as normally working more than 17 1/2 hours per week under the rule of this paragraph (e).

(2) Deemed above 17 1/2. An employee who works 17 1/2 hours a week or more, for more than fifty percent of the total weeks worked by such employee during the year, is deemed to normally work more than 17 1/2 hours a week for purposes of this rule.

(3) Deemed below 17 1/2. An employee who works less than 17 1/2 hours a week for fifty percent or more of the total weeks worked by such employee during the year is deemed to normally work less than 17 1/2 hours a week for purposes of this rule.

(4) Application. The determination provided for in paragraph (e)(1), (2), and (3) of this A-9 may be made (i) separately with respect to each employee, or (ii) on the basis of groups of employees who fall within particular job categories as established by the employer on a reasonable basis. For example, under the rule of this paragraph (e)(4) an employer may exclude all office cleaning personnel if, for the year in question, the employees performing this function normally work less than 17 1/2 hours a week. This is true even though one or more employees within this group normally work in excess of 17 1/2 hours. The election to make this determination on the basis of individuals or groups is operational and does not require a plan provision.

(5) Application based on groups. (i) Groups of employees who perform the same job are not required to be considered as one category for purposes of the rule in paragraph (e)(4) of this A-9. Thus, for example, an employer supermarket may determine its highly compensated employees by excluding part-time grocery checkers if such personnel normally work less than 17 1/2 hours a week while continuing to include full-time personnel performing this function. In general, 80 percent of the positions within a particular job category must be filled by employees who normally work less than 17 1/2 hours a week before any employees may be excluded under this rule on the basis of their membership in that job category.

(ii) Alternatively, an employer may exclude employees who are members of a particular job category if the median number of hours of service credited to employees in that category during a determination or look-back year is 500 or less.

(f) 6-month rule—(1) In general. The determination of whether employees normally work during not more than 6 months in any year is made on the basis of the facts and circumstances of the particular employer as evidenced by the employer's customary experience in the years preceding the determination year. An employee who works on one day during a month is deemed to have worked during that month.

(2) Application of prior year experience. In making the determination under this paragraph (f), the experience for years immediately preceding the determination year will generally be weighed more heavily than that of earlier years. However, this emphasis on more recent years is not appropriate if the data for a particular year reflects unusual circumstances. For example, if fishermen working for employer X worked 9 months in 1987 and 1988, 8 months in 1989, and then, because of abnormal ice conditions, worked only 5 months in 1990, such fishermen could not be excluded under this rule in 1990. Furthermore, the data with respect to 1990 would not be weighed more heavily in making a determination with respect to subsequent years.

(3) Individual or group basis. This determination may be made separately with respect to each employee or on the basis of groups of employees who fall within particular job categories in the manner set forth in paragraph (e)(4) of this A-8.

Q-10: For purposes of determining the group of highly compensated employees, which employees are officers and which officers must be included in the highly compensated group?

A-10: (a) In general. Subject to the limitations set forth in paragraph (b) of this A-10 and the top-100 employee rule set forth in A-2, an employee is an includible officer for purposes of this section and is a member of the group of highly compensated employees if such employee is (1) an officer of the employer (within the meaning of section 416(i) and §1.416-1A-T 13 & A-T 15) at any time during the determination year or look-back year and (2) receives compensation during such year that is greater than 150 percent of the dollar limitation in effect under section 415(c)(1)(A) for the calendar year in which the determination or look-back year begins. In addition, an officer who does not meet the 415(c)(1)(A) dollar limitation requirement may be an includible officer based on the minimum inclusion rules set forth in paragraph (c) of this A-10.

(b) Maximum limitation—(1) In general. No more than 50 employees (or, if lesser, the greater of 3 employees or 10 percent of the employees without regard to any exclusions) shall be treated as officers for purposes of this provision in determining the group of highly compensated employees for any determination year or look-back year.

(2) Total number of employees. The total number of employees for purposes of the limitation in this paragraph (b) is the number of employees the employer has during the particular determination year or look-back year. For purposes of this A-10, employees include only those individuals who perform services for the employer during the determination or look-back year. The exclusions applicable for purposes of determining the number of employees in the top-paid group are not applicable for purposes of the limitations in this paragraph (b).

(3) Inclusion ranking. If the number of the employer's officers who satisfy paragraph (a) of this A-10 during either the determination year or the look-back year exceeds the limitation under this paragraph (b), then the officers who will be considered as includible officers for purposes of this rule are those who receive the greatest compensation from the employer during such determination or look-back year. The definition of compensation in A-13 is to be used for this purpose.

(c) Minimum inclusion rule. This paragraph (c) is applicable when no officer of the employer satisfies the compensation requirements of paragraph (a) of this A-10 during either a determination year or look-back year. In such case, the highest paid officer of the employer for such year is treated as a highly compensated employee by reason of being an officer, without regard to the amount of compensation paid to such officer in relation to the section 415(c)(1)(A) dollar amount for the year. This is true whether or not such employee is also a highly compensated employee on any other basis. Thus, for example, if no officer of employer X meets the compensation requirements of paragraph (a) of this A-10 during the 1989 look-back year, and employee A is both the highest paid officer during such year and a 5-percent owner, employee A is treated as an includible officer satisfying the minimum inclusion rules of this paragraph.

(d) Separate application. The maximum and minimum officer inclusion rules of paragraphs (b) and (c) of this A-10 apply separately with respect to the determination year calculation and the look-back year calculation. Thus, for example, if no officer of employer X receives compensation above the threshold amount in paragraph (a) of this A-10 during either the determination year or look-back year, application of the minimum inclusion rule would result in the officer of employer X who received the greatest compensation during the look-back year being treated as a highly compensated employee and, in addition, the officer of employer X who receives the most compensation during the determination year would be included in the highly compensated group if such officer is also in the top-100 employees of employer X for such year. Thus, two officers may be treated as highly compensated active employees for a determination year by reason of the provisions of the minimum inclusion rule.

Q-11: To what extent must family members who are employed by the same employer be aggregated for purposes of section 414(q)?

A-11: (a) Family aggregation—(1) In general. Aggregation is required with respect to an employee who is, during a particular determination year or look-back year, a family member (as defined in A-12) of either (i) a 5-percent owner who is an active or former employee or (ii) a highly compensated employee who is one of the ten most highly compensated employees ranked on the basis of compensation paid by the employer during such year.

(2) Aggregation of contributions or benefits. As prescribed in regulations under the provisions to which section 414(q) is applicable, a family member and a 5-percent owner or top-10 highly compensated employee aggregated under this rule are generally treated as a single employee receiving an amount of compensation and a plan contribution or benefit that is based on the compensation, contributions, and benefits of such family member and 5-percent owner or top-10 highly compensated employee.

(b) Exclusion status irrelevant. Family members are subject to this aggregation rule whether or not they fall within the categories of employees that may be excluded for purposes of determining the number of employees in the top-paid group and whether or not they are highly compensated employees when considered separately.

(c) Order of determination—(1) Determination of highly compensated employees. The determination of which employees are highly compensated employees and which highly compensated employees are among the ten most highly compensated employees in making the look-back year calculation or the determination year calculation for a determination year will be made prior to the application of the rules in paragraph (a) of this A-11.

(2) Determination of top-paid group and top-100 employees. The determination of the number and identity of employees in the top-paid group under the look-back year calculation or the determination year calculation for a determination year and the identity of individuals in the top-100 employees under the determination year calculation for a determination year is made prior to application of the rules in paragraph (a) of this A-11.

(d) Determination period. The rules under paragraph (a) of this A-11 apply separately to the determination year and the look-back year. Thus, assuming there are no 5-percent owners, if employees, A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I and J are the top 10 highly compensated employees in the 1988 look-back year, and employees F, G, H, I J, K, L, M, N and O are the top 10 highly compensated employees in the 1989 determination year, then family aggregation would be required with respect to all fifteen of such employees (i.e., employees A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, J, K, L, M, N, and O).

Q-12: Which individuals are family members for purposes of the aggregation rules in section 414(q)(6)(A) and A-11?

A-12: (a) Definition of family member. Individuals who are family members for purposes of these provisions include, with respect to any employee or former employee, such employee's or former employee's spouse and lineal ascendants or descendants and the spouses of such lineal ascendants and descendants. In determining whether an individual is a family member with respect to an employee or former employee, legal adoptions shall be taken into account.

(b) Test period. If an individual is a family member with respect to an employee or former employee on any day during the year, such individual is treated as a family member for the entire year. Thus, for example, if an individual is a family member with respect to an employee on the first day of a year, such individual continues to be a family member with respect to such employee throughout the year even though their relationships changes as a result of death or divorce.

Q-13: How is "compensation" determined for purposes of determining the group of "highly compensated employees."

A-13: (a) In general. For purposes of section 414(q), the term "compensation" means compensation within the meaning of section 415(c)(3) without regard to sections 125, 402(a)(8), and 402(h)(1)(B) and, in the case of employer contributions made pursuant to a salary reduction agreement, without regard to section 403(b). Thus, compensation includes elective or salary reduction contributions to a cafeteria plan, cash or deferred arrangement or tax-sheltered annuity.

(b) Determination period. For purposes of determining the group of highly compensated employees, compensation must be calculated on the basis of the applicable period for the determination year and look-back year respectively.

(c) Compensation taken into account. Only compensation received by an employee during the determination year or during the look-back year is considered in determining whether such employee is a highly compensated active employee under either the look-back year calculation or determination year calculation for such determination year. Thus, compensation is not annualized for purposes of determining an employee's compensation in the determination year or the look-back year in applying the rules of paragraph (a) of this A-13.

Q-14: What periods must be used for determining who is a highly compensated employee for a determination year?

A-14: (a) Determination year and look-back year—(1) In general. For purposes of determining the group of highly compensated employees for a determination year, the determination year calculation is made on the basis of the applicable year of the plan or other entity for which a determination is being made and the look-back year calculation is made on the basis of the twelve month period immediately preceding such year. Thus, in testing plans X and Y of an employer, if plan X has a calendar year plan year and plan Y has a July 1 to June 30 plan year, the determination year calculation and look-back year calculation for plan X must be made on the basis of the calendar year. Similarly, the determination year calculation and look-back year calculation for plan Y must be made on the basis of the July 1 to June 30 year.

(2) Applicable year. For purposes of this A-14, the applicable year is the plan year of the qualified plan or other employee benefit arrangement to which the definition of highly compensated employees is applicable as defined in the written plan document or otherwise identified in regulations pursuant to sections to which the definition of highly compensated employees is applicable. To the extent that the definition of highly compensated employees is applicable to entities or other arrangements that do not have an otherwise identified plan year, then either the calendar year or the employer's fiscal year may be treated as the plan year.

(3) Look-back year. The look-back year is never less than a twelve month period.

(b) Calendar year calculation election—(1) In general. An employer may elect to make the look-back year calculation for a determination year on the basis of the calendar year ending with or within the applicable determination year (or, in the case of a determination year that is shorter than twelve months, the calendar year ending with or within the twelve-month period ending with the end of the applicable determination year). In such case, the employer must make the determination year calculation for the determination year on the basis of the period (if any) by which the applicable determination year extends beyond such calendar year (i.e., the lag period). If the applicable year for which the determination is being made is the calendar year, the employer still may elect to make the calendar year calculation election under this A-14(b). In such case, the look-back year calculation is made on the basis of the calendar year determination year and, because there is no lag period, a separate determination year calculation under A-3(a)(2) of this §1.414(q)-1 is not required.

(2) Lag period calculation. In making the determination year calculation under A-3(a)(2) of this §1.414(q)-1 on the basis of the lag period, the dollar amounts applicable under A-3(a)(1)(B) and (C) of this §1.414 (q)-1 are to be adjusted by multiplying such dollar amounts by a fraction, the numerator of which is the number of calendar months that are included in the lag period and the denominator of which is twelve.

(3) Determination of active employees. An employee will be considered an active employee for purposes of a determination year for which the calendar year calculation election is in effect so long as such employee performs services for the employer during the applicable year for which the determination is being made. This is the case even if such employee does not perform services for the employer during the lag-period for such determination year.

(4) Election requirement. If the employer elects to make the calendar year calculation election with respect to one plan, entity, or arrangement, such election must apply with respect to all plans, entities, and arrangements of the employer. In addition, such election must be provided for in the plan.

(c) Change in applicable years. Where there is a change in the applicable year for which a determination is being made with respect to a plan entity, or other arrangement that is not subject to the calendar year calculation election, the look-back year calculation for the short applicable year is to be made on the basis of the twelve month period preceding the short applicable year (i.e., generally, the old applicable year) and the determination year calculation for the short applicable year is to be made on the basis of the short applicable year. In addition, the dollar amounts under A-3(a)(1)(B) and (C) are to be adjusted for such determination year calculation as if the short applicable year were a lag period under paragraph (b)(2) of this A-14.

(e) Example. The following examples illustrate the rules of this A-14:

Example 1. Employer X has a single plan (Plan A) with an April 1 to March 31 plan year. Employer X makes no election to use the calendar year for the determination period. Therefore, in determining the group of highly compensated employees for the April 1, 1989 to March 31, 1990 plan year, the determination year is the plan year ending March 31, 1990 and the look-back year is the plan year ending March 31, 1989.

Example 2. Assume the same facts given above. With respect to the plan year beginning in 1990, employer X elects to use the calendar year for the determination period. Therefore, in determining the group of highly compensated employees for the April 1, 1990 to March 31, 1991 plan year, the lag-period determination year is the period from January 1, 1991, through March 31, 1991, and the applicable look-back year is the 1990 calendar year.

Example 3. Employer Y has a single plan (Plan B) with a calendar plan year. With respect to the plan year beginning in 1990, employer Y elects to make the look-back year calculation for the 1990 determination year on the basis of the calendar year ending with or within the 1990 determination year. Because employer Y's determination year is the 1990 calendar year there is no lag period and employer Y determines the group of highly compensated employees for purposes of the 1990 calendar plan year on the basis of such plan year alone.

Q-15: Is there any transition rule in determining the group of highly compensated employees for 1987 and 1988?

A-15: (a) In general. Solely for purposes of section 401(k)(3) and (m)(2) and solely for twelve-month plan years beginning in 1987 and 1988, an eligible employer may elect to define the group of highly compensated employees as the group consisting of 5-percent owners of the employer at any time during the plan year and employees who receive compensation in excess of $50,000 during the plan year. This rule would apply in lieu of the look-back year calculation and determination year calculation otherwise applicable under A-3(a) of this §1.414(q)-1. In addition, an eligible employer may elect to make the determinations permitted under this transition rule on the basis of the calendar year ending in the plan year and the period by which such plan year extends beyond such calendar year, in accordance with the rules of A-14(b), in lieu of making the determinations under this transition rule on the basis of the plan year for which the determinations are being made.

(b) Eligible employers. An employer is an eligible employer under this A-15 if such employer satisfies both of the following requirements:

(1) The employer does not maintain any top-heavy plan within the meaning of section 416 at any time during 1987 and 1988; and

(2) Under each plan of the employer to which section 401(k)(3) or 401(m)(2) is applicable, the group of eligible employees that comprises the highest 25% of eligible employees ranked on the basis of compensation includes at least one employee whose compensation is $50,000 or below. This requirement must be met separately with respect to each such plan of the employer.

(c) Uniformity requirement. An eligible employer may not make the election under paragraph (a) of this A-15 unless the election applies to all of the plans maintained by the employer to which section 401(k)(3) or 401(m)(2) applies.

(d) Election requirements. This election is operational and does not require a plan provision.

§1.414(s)-1T Compensation.

The following questions and answers relate to the definition of compensation provided in section 414(s). The definitions and rules provided in these questions and answers are provided solely for purposes of defining "compensation" under this section.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Q&A-1 General definition of compensation.

Q&A-2	Definition of compensation for self-employed individuals.
Q&A-3	Election with respect to certain deferred compensation.
Q&A-4	Alternative definitions of compensation.

Q-1: What is the basic definition of compensation for purposes of section 414(s) and when is this definition applicable?

A-1: (a) In general. For purposes of section 414(s), the term "compensation" means compensation received during the applicable period by the employee from the employer, other than compensation in the form of qualified or previously qualified deferred compensation, that (taking into account the provisions of this chapter) is currently includible in gross income for income tax purposes. See A-3 and A-4 of this §1.414(s)-1 for adjustments and alternatives to this basic definition.

(b) For purposes of this section, the "applicable period" is the period of time specified under the particular rule for which the section 414(s) definition of compensation is applicable. Thus, the regulations applicable to a particular rule that utilizes the section 414(s) definition of compensation will specify the applicable period under section 414(s) for purposes of such rule.

(c) Applicability. The definition in paragraph (a) of this A-1 is generally applicable for purposes of applying the nondiscrimination rules of sections 401 through 419A (including the actual deferral percentage test for a cash or deferred arrangement and the actual contribution percentage test for employee and employer matching contributions contained in section 401(k)(3) and 401(m)(3) respectively). However, the definition of compensation in paragraph (a) of this A-1 does not apply to sections that specifically define compensation in a different manner. Examples of provisions for which the section 414(s) definition of compensation is not applicable include, but are not limited to, the definition of highly compensated employees contained in section 414(q), the limitations on benefits and contributions set forth in section 415, and the deduction provisions of section 404(a) and (b).

Q-2: How is compensation determined for self-employed individuals within the meaning of section 401(c)(1)?

A-2: The basic definition of compensation, for purposes of self-employed individuals, is earned income (as defined in section 401(c)(1)) for the applicable period (as defined in A-1(c) of this §1.414(s)-1) derived from such individual's trade or business.

Q-3: May an employer elect to treat certain deferrals as compensation?

A-3: Yes. An employer may elect to include in the basic definition of compensation all elective contributions made by the employer on behalf of its employees that are not includible in the gross income of an employee under sections 125, 402(a)(8), 402(h), or 403(b). This election must be made on a consistent and uniform basis with respect to all employees and all plans of the employer for any particular year, must be made on a reasonable and consistent basis from year to year, and must be provided for in the plan. The employer may change this election provided such change does not result in discrimination in favor of highly compensated employees.

Q-4: What, if any, alternative definitions of compensation may be used by an employer?

A-4: (a) Alternative basic definitions. For applicable periods beginning in 1987 and 1988, an employer may elect to use the following alternative definitions of compensation in lieu of the basic definition set forth in A-1 of this section. Any such election must be provided for in the plan and made on a reasonable and consistent basis from year to year. An employer may change an election made under this A-4(a) provided such change does not result in discrimination in favor of highly compensated employees.

(1) W-2 compensation. Compensation received during the applicable period (as defined in A-1(c) of this §1.414(s)-1) by the employee from the employer that is required to be reported as wages on the employee's Form W-2 for income tax purposes. This election may include or exclude all amounts that are not currently includible in the employee's gross income by reason of the application of sections 125, 402(a)(8), 402(h)(1)(B) or 402(b), provided such total inclusion or exclusion is (i) made on a consistent and uniform basis with respect to all plans of the employer for any particular year, (ii) made on a reasonable and consistent basis from year to year, and (iii) provided for in the plan. The employer may change this inclusion or exclusion election provided such change does not result in discrimination in favor of highly compensated employees.

(2) Section 415 compensation. Compensation as defined in §1.415-2(d)(1)&(2) received during the applicable period (as defined in A-1(c) of this §1.414(s)-1) by the employee from the employer.

(b) Alternative definitions—(1) In general. In lieu of the basic definition of compensation set forth in A-1 of this §1.414(s)-1 (and in lieu of the alternative basic definitions set forth in (a) of this A-4), an employer may elect to use an alternative definition of compensation. Any such alternative definition is permissible under section 414(s) only if it is described in A-4(b)(2) and satisfies the nondiscrimination rule set forth in A-4(b)(3).

(2) Available alternative definitions of compensation—(i) Regular or base salary or wages. Regular or base salary or wages (excluding overtime and bonuses) received during the applicable period (defined in A-1(c) of this §1.414(s)-1) by the employee from the employer.

(ii) Regular or base salary or wages plus overtime and/or bonuses. Regular or base salary or wages, plus either or both overtime and/or bonuses, received during the applicable period (defined in A-1(c) of this §1.414(s)-1) by the employee from the employer.

(iii) Commissioner may make additional definitions available. The Commissioner may, consistent with the provisions of this section, make additional definitions of compensation available under this A 4(b). Any such additional definition is permissible under section 414(s) only if such definition satisfies the nondiscrimination rule set forth in A-4(b)(3).

(3) Nondiscrimination rule. An alternative definition of compensation described in A-4(b)(2) satisfies this rule only if the compensation percentage for the employer's highly compensated employees is not greater than the compensation percentage for the employer's other employees. The compensation percentage for a group of employees is calculated by averaging the separately calculated compensation ratios for each employee in the group. An employee's compensation ratio is calculated by dividing the amount of the employee's compensation that is included in the alternative definition by the amount of such employee's compensation that is included in the basic definition of compensation (set forth in A-1 of this §1.414(s)-1 or (a) of this A-4) for the applicable period (defined in A-1(c) of this section).

There is a need for immediate guidance with respect to the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason, it is found impractical to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) or section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

Lawrence B. Gibbs,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Subchapter E.—Accounting Periods and Methods of Accounting
Part I.—Accounting Periods

Section 441.—Period for Computation of Taxable Income

26 CFR 1.441-1T: Period for computation of taxable income.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953, PART 18-TEMPORARY INCOME TAX REGULATIONS UNDER THE SUBCHAPTER S REVISION ACT OF 1982

Taxable Years of Certain Entities

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations relating to the requirement that certain entities generally conform their taxable years to the taxable years of their owners. In addition, the text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text of the proposed regulations  [page 929, this Bulletin]. Changes to the applicable law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. The regulations affect personal service corporations, partnerships, and S corporations (and owners of those entities) and provide them with the guidance needed to comply with the law.

EFFECTIVE DATE: The temporary regulations are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document amends the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) to provide temporary regulations interpreting section 806 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (the 1986 Act), Pub. L. No. 99-514, 100 Stat. 2362 [1986-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 279], which amended sections 441, 706(b) and 1378 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. In general, section 806 of the 1986 Act requires personal service corporations (PSCs), partnerships and S corporations to conform their taxable years to the taxable years of their owners. These temporary regulations provide guidance on the amendments to section 441, relating to (a) the definition of a PSC (section 441(i)), and (b) the special rules for applying a 52-53 week taxable year in the case of a partnership, S corporation, personal service corporation or the owners of such entities (section 441(f)). In addition, the temporary regulations provide special rules for the application of the amendments to sections 706(b) and 1378 with respect to the spread of income and expense items ratably over a 4-year period in the case of partners and shareholders of S corporations required in one taxable year to take into account items from more than one taxable year of a partnership or S corporation. Furthermore, the temporary regulations make conforming changes to the general provisions regarding taxable years under section 441.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

TAXABLE YEAR OF A PERSONAL SERVICE CORPORATION

Section 441(i)(1) provides that a PSC must use the calendar year as its taxable year unless the PSC establishes, to the satisfaction of the Secretary, a business purpose for using a different period as its taxable year. The temporary regulations provide that the taxable year of a PSC is the calendar year, unless the PSC's annual accounting period is a fiscal year and the PSC obtains the approval of the Commissioner to have such a fiscal year as its taxable year.

Approval of the Commissioner is not required in the case of a PSC changing its taxable year to the calendar year. For this purpose, a 52-53 week taxable year of a PSC ending with reference to the month of December will be treated as if it were the calendar year. In the case of a change to the calendar year, the PSC should notify the Internal Revenue Service of the change, in accordance with the applicable revenue procedure, such as, for example, Rev. Proc. 87-32, 1987-2 C.B. 396.

Approval of a fiscal year by the Commissioner requires the PSC to demonstrate a business purpose. For example, a PSC which demonstrates that the desired fiscal year coincides with its natural business year, as defined in section 4.01(1) of Rev. Proc. 87-32, is deemed to have established a business purpose to the satisfaction of the Secretary. In this regard, taxpayers should review Announcement 87-82, 1987-37 I.R.B. 30, for modifications to Rev. Proc. 87-32 extending the due date for PSCs requesting the Commissioner's approval to establish a business purpose.

DEFINITION OF A PERSONAL SERVICE CORPORATION

Under the temporary regulations, a taxpayer is a PSC for a taxable year only if (a) the taxpayer is a C corporation; (b) the principal activity of the taxpayer during the testing period for the taxable year is the performance of personal services; (c) the personal services are substantially performed by employee-owners; and (d) employee-owners hold more than 10 percent of the fair market value of the outstanding stock in the taxpayer as of the last day of the testing period for the taxable year.

Under the temporary regulations, the testing period for a taxable year is generally the taxable year preceding such taxable year. For example, a corporation that has been using June 30 as its taxable year will use the taxable year ended June 30, 1987, as the testing period for the taxable year beginning July 1, 1987.

With respect to a corporation whose first taxable year begins after December 31, 1986, the temporary regulations provide that the testing period for the corporation's first taxable year is the period beginning on the first day of the taxable year and ending on the earlier of (a) the last day of such taxable year, or (b) the last day of the calendar year in which the taxable year began.

PERFORMANCE OF PERSONAL SERVICES

During the course of drafting the temporary regulations, the Service considered many different approaches for determining whether an activity should be treated as the performance of a personal service. The approaches considered ranged from a narrow definition (e.g., only activities described in section 448(d)(2)(A), relating to limitations on the use of the cash method of accounting) to a broad definition (e.g., all activities except selling tangible property). After evaluating the various approaches, the Service concluded that the narrow definition of personal services provided in section 448(d)(2)(A) will apply for purposes of section 441(i).

Thus, under the temporary regulations any activity described in section 448(d)(2)(A) is treated as the performance of personal services. An activity not described in section 448(d)(2)(A) is not treated as the performance of personal services under the temporary regulations.

It should be noted, however, that although the temporary regulations provide that an activity is treated as the performance of personal services by reference to section 448(d)(2)(A), the definition of the term "personal service corporation" under these temporary regulations is different from the definition of the term "qualified personal service corporation" under section 448(d)(2). The principal differences relate to ownership requirements and the necessary percentage of personal service activities.

PRINCIPAL ACTIVITY

The temporary regulations provide that the corporation's principal activity during the testing period will be the performance of personal services if the total amount of the corporation's compensation cost for such taxable year that is attributable to its personal service activities exceeds 50 percent of the corporation's total compensation cost. Compensation cost is defined as (a) salaries and wages, and (b) other amounts attributable to services rendered in the course of employment. However, compensation cost does not include amounts attributable to a plan, qualified under section 401(a) or 403(a), or defined in section 408(k).

SERVICES SUBSTANTIALLY PERFORMED BY EMPLOYEE-OWNERS

The temporary regulations provide that the personal services performed by a corporation during a testing period will be treated as substantially performed by employee-owners of the corporation if more than 20 percent of the corporation's compensation cost with respect to personal services is attributable to employee-owners. Such determination is to be made by the taxpayer in any reasonable and consistent manner.

In the process of drafting the temporary regulations, the Service received many informal comments relating to the appropriate percentage for determining "substantially performed." Most of the commentators suggested that the term "substantially" should be interpreted as "substantially all." "Substantially all" would imply a very high percentage of services performed by employee-owners whereas "substantially" would imply a lower percentage. Given that the term "substantially" is used in the Code rather than the term "substantially all," the temporary regulations use 20 percent as the threshold for determining whether services are substantially performed by employee-owners.

Temporary regulations (§1.441-3T) issued under the authority to prescribe rules relating to the 52-53-week taxable year were published February 5, 1987 (52 FR 3615). Those temporary regulations interpreted the phrase "substantially performed by employee-owners" by using a 10 percent time test. That test was limited to taxpayers that desired to use a 52-53 week taxable year for a short taxable year ending on or before January 5, 1987. Upon further review, the Service determined that the 10 percent time test is inappropriate for purposes of interpreting section 441(i), because that test does not adequately weight the relative contributions of the various employees, in particular the employee-owners. For example, under the time test, an hour billed at $100/hour by an employee-owner of a law firm (that is a C corporation) is treated the same as an hour of a junior associate that may be billed at $40/hour. A compensation test, however, provides a weighted approach to measure relative performance of personal services. In addition to changing the measurement base from time spent to compensation, these temporary regulations differ from the 10 percent time test provided in §1.441-3T by (a) increasing the percentage from 10 percent to 20 percent, and (b) including the compensation cost for all employees involved in the corporation's personal service activity in the 20 percent calculation rather than including only compensation cost that is "directly and intrinsically related" to the providing of personal services.

Under the temporary regulations, a person is an employee-owner if that person is an employee on any day of the testing period, and the person owns any stock of the corporation on any day of the testing period. Attribution rules in section 318, as modified, apply for purposes of determining stock ownership. In addition, any person who is an owner and performs services for or on behalf of the corporation shall be treated as an employee for purposes of this rule, even if the legal form of that person's relationship to the corporation is such that he or she would be considered an independent contractor for other purposes.

52-53-WEEK TAXABLE YEAR

Section 441(f)(3) provides that the Secretary may by regulation provide terms and conditions for the application of the rules relating to the 52-53-week taxable year of a partnership, S corporation, personal service corporation, or any owner of such an entity.

The temporary regulations provide rules for cases in which the taxable year of a partnership and a partner, or an S corporation and an S corporation shareholder, or a personal service corporation and an employer-owner, end with or with reference to the same calendar month. Under the temporary regulations, in certain cases the taxable year of a partner, S corporation shareholder, or employee-owner will be deemed to end on the last day of the partnership's, S corporation's, or PSC's taxable year. For example, a calendar year partner in a 52-53-week partnership with a January 3, 1988 year end will be required to include in his 1987 income tax return his distributive share of partnership income for the taxable year ended January 3, 1988.

4-YEAR SPREAD

The temporary regulations provide that partners and S corporation shareholders may spread items of income and expense if (a) the items of income and expense are attributable to a partnership or S corporation that is required under section 806 of the 1986 Act to change its taxable year for the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, and (b) the partner or S corporation would be required under the temporary regulations to include in one taxable year the items from more than one taxable year of the partnership or S corporation. The temporary regulations define the terms "income items" and "expense items" and provide other guidance with respect to section 806 of the 1986 Act.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis therefore is not required. A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the temporary regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

Amendments to the regulations

For the reasons set out in the preamble, Subchapter A, Parts 1 and 18 of Title 26, Chapter 1 of the Code of Federal Regulations is amended as set forth below:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS

(26 CFR Part 1)

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.  Section 1.441-2T also issued under 26 U.S.C. 441(f).

Par. 2. Section 1.441-1 is redesignated as §1.441-1T and amended by revising the caption, revising paragraphs (b), (f), and (g), and adding a new paragraph (h) to read as follows:

§1.441-1T Period for computation of taxable income (temporary).

* * * * *

(b)Taxable year—(1) Definition of taxable year—(i) In general. Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph (b)(1), the term "taxable year" means—

(A) The taxpayer's annual accounting period if it is a calendar year or a fiscal year; or

(B) The calendar year if section 441(g) (relating to taxpayers who keep no books or have no accounting period) applies. Except as provided in administrative provisions of the Internal Revenue laws, a taxable year may not cover a period of more than 12 calendar months. If a return is made under section 443 for a period of less than 12 months (a "short period"), the taxable year is the short period for which the return is made.

(ii) Special rules for certain entities. The general rule provided in paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section may be modified by the Internal Revenue laws or regulations. For example, special rules are provided for the following taxpayers—

(A) In the case of personal service corporations, the applicable rules are contained in §1.441-4T.

(B) In the case of partnerships, the applicable rules are contained in §1.706-1T.

(C) In the case of S corporations, the applicable rules are contained in section 1378.

(D) In the case of members of an affiliated group which makes a consolidated return, the applicable rules are contained in §1.1502-76 and paragraph (d) of §1.442-1.

(E) In the case of trusts, the applicable rules are contained in section 645.

(F) In the case of real estate investment trusts, the applicable rules are contained in section 859.

(G) In the case of real estate mortgage investment conduits, the applicable rules are contained in section 860D(a)(5).

(H) In the case of FSCs or DISCs, the applicable rules are contained in section 441(h).

(2) Adoption of taxable year. A new taxpayer adopts a taxable year or on before the time prescribed by law (not including extensions) for the filing of the taxpayer's first return and may adopt, without prior approval, any taxable year that satisfies the requirements of section 441 and this section.

(3) Change in taxable year—(i) General rule. After a taxpayer has adopted a taxable year, such year must be used in computing taxable income and making returns for all subsequent years unless prior approval is obtained from the Commissioner to make a change or unless a change is otherwise permitted or required under the Internal Revenue laws or regulations. See section 442 and §1.442-1. Also see paragraph (b)(4) of this section.

(ii) Change in taxable year required by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. Procedures for entities (certain personal service corporations, partnerships and S corporations) required to change their taxable year under section 806 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, Pub. L. No. 99-514, 100 Stat. 2362, are provided in Rev. Proc. 87-32, 1987-2 C.B. 396, or successor revenue procedures.

(4) Retention of taxable year—(i) In general. In certain cases, taxpayers will be required under the Internal Revenue laws or regulations to change their taxable year unless they establish a business purpose for retaining their current taxable year. For example, corporations electing to be S corporations, corporations that are personal service corporations for the first time, and certain partnerships with new partners may be required to change their taxable year unless they establish a business purpose for retaining their current taxable year.

(ii) Section 806 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986. Rev. Proc. 87-32 provides (and any successor revenue procedure would provide) procedures for certain entities (i.e., personal service corporations, partnerships and S corporations) requesting the Commissioner's approval to retain a fiscal year when such entity would otherwise by required to change its taxable year under section 806 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986. In addition, personal service corporations should see Announcement 87-82, 1987-37 I.R.B. 30, for modifications to Rev. Proc. 87-32 extending the due date for personal service corporations requesting the Commissioner's approval to establish a business purpose.

(f) Election of year consisting of 52-53 weeks. For rules relating to the 52-53-week taxable year, see §§1.441-2T, 1.441-3T, and 1.441-4T.

(g) No books kept; no accounting period. Except as otherwise provided in the Internal Revenue laws or regulations, the taxpayer's taxable year shall be the calendar year if—

(1) The taxpayer keeps no books;

(2) The taxpayer does not have an annual accounting period (as defined in section 441(c) and paragraph (c) of this section); or

(3) The taxpayer has an annual accounting period, but such period does not qualify as a fiscal year (as defined in section 441(e) and paragraph (e) of this section).

For purposes of paragraph (g)(1) of this section, the keeping of books does not require that records be bound. Records which are sufficient to reflect income adequately and clearly on the basis of an annual accounting period will be regarded as the keeping of books. A taxpayer whose taxable year is required to be a calendar year under section 441(g) and this paragraph (g) may not adopt a fiscal year without obtaining prior approval from the Commissioner. See section 442 and §1.442-1T(a)(2).

(h) Effective date. This section is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986. See 26 CFR 1.441-1 (revised as of April 1, 1987) for rules applicable to taxable years beginning before January 1, 1987.

Par. 3. Section 1.441-2 is redesignated as §1.441-2T and amended by revising the caption and paragraph (e) to read as follows:

§1.441-2T Election of year consisting of 52-53 weeks (temporary.

(e) Partnerships, S corporations, and personal service corporations—(1) In general. Paragraph (e) of this section applies if a partnership, partner, S corporation, S corporation shareholder, personal service corporation (within the meaning of §1.441-4T(d)), or employee-owner (within the meaning of §1.441-4T(h)) uses a 52-53-week taxable year.

(2) Treatment of taxable years ending with reference to the same calendar month—(i) Timing of partners taking into account partnership items. If the taxable year of a partnership and a partner end with reference to the same calendar month, then for purposes of determining the taxable year in which a partner takes into account—

(A) Items described in section 702, and

(B) Items that are deductible by the partnership (including items described in section 707(c)) and includible in the income of the partner, the partner's taxable year will be deemed to end on the last day of the partnership's taxable year.

(ii) Timing of S shareholders taking into account S corporation items. If the taxable year of an S corporation and a shareholder end with reference to the same calendar month, then for purposes of determining the taxable year in which a shareholder takes into account—

(A) Items described in section 1366(a), and

(B) Items that are deductible by the S corporation and includible in the income of the shareholder, the shareholder's taxable year will be deemed to end on the last day of the S corporation's taxable year.

(iii) Personal service corporations and employee-owners. If the taxable year of a personal service corporation and an employee-owner end with reference to the same calendar month, then for purposes of determining the taxable year in which an employee-owner takes into account items that are deductible by the personal service corporation and includible in the income of the employee-owner, the employee-owner's taxable year will be deemed to end on the last day of the personal service corporation's taxable year.

(3) Automatic approval for partnerships and S corporations. If a partnership or S corporation is required to use a taxable year ending with respect to the last day of a particular month and the partnership or S corporation desires to use a 52-53-week taxable year with reference to such month, the partnership or S corporation is granted automatic approval to use such 52-53-week taxable year. See §1.441-4T(b)(2)(ii) for a similar rule for personal service corporations.

(4) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (e)(2) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). ABC Partnership uses a 52-53-week taxable year that ends on the Sunday nearest to December 31, and its partners, A, B, and C, are individual calendar year taxpayers. Assume that, for ABC's taxable year ending January 3, 1988, each partner's distributive share of ABC's taxable income is $10,000. Under section 706(a) and paragraph (e)(2)(i) of this section, for the taxable year ending December 31, 1987, A, B, and C each must include $10,000 in income with respect to the ABC year ending January 3, 1988. Similarly, if ABC makes a guaranteed payment to A on January 2, 1988, A must include the payment in income for his or her taxable year ending December 31, 1987.

Example (2). X, a personal service corporation, uses a 52-53-week taxable year that ends on the Sunday nearest to December 31, and all of the employee-owners of X are individual calendar year taxpayers. Assume that, for its taxable year ending January 3, 1988, X pays a bonus of $10,000 to each employee-owner. Under paragraph (e)(2)(iii) of this section, each employee-owner must include the bonus in income for the taxable year ending December 31, 1987.

(5) Effective date. Paragraph (e) of this section applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

Par. 4. Section 1.441-2T is amended by revising the heading and text of paragraph (f) to read as follows:

§1.441-2T Election of year consisting of 52-53 weeks (temporary).

* * * * *

(f) Special rules for 1986 and subsequent years. For special rules relating to certain adoptions of, or changes to or from, a 52-53-week taxable year ending in 1986 or 1987, see §1.441-3T. For special rules relating to a 52-53-week taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, see §1.441-2T(e).

Par. 5. Section 1.441-4T is added in the appropriate place.

§1.441-4T Taxable year of a personal service corporation (temporary).

(a) Taxable year. The taxable year of a personal service corporation (as defined in paragraph (d) of this section) is—

(1) The calendar year, or a "short period" (as provided in §1.441-1T (b)(1)(i)) ending December 31; or

(2) A fiscal year, or a short period (other than a short period provided in paragraph (a)(1) of this section), if the corporation obtains the approval of the Commissioner (in accordance with paragraph (c) of this section) for using such fiscal year.

(b) Change in taxable year required—(1)In general. For any taxable year after December 31, 1986, a taxpayer that is a personal service corporation for such taxable year must—

(i) Use a taxable year described in paragraph (a) of this section; or

(ii) Change to such a taxable year by using a short taxable year that ends on the last day of a taxable year described in paragraph (a) of this section.

(2) Approval not required for change to a calendar year—(i) In general. A personal service corporation may change its taxable year to the calendar year without the approval of the Commissioner. In such cases, however, the taxpayer should notify the Internal Revenue Service of the change in accordance with the provisions of the applicable revenue procedure. See, for example, section 5.02(1) of Rev. Proc. 87-32, 1987-2 C.B. 396.

(ii) Special rule for 52-53-week taxable year ending with reference to the month of December. For purposes of this section, a 52-53-week taxable year of a personal service corporation ending with reference to the month of December shall be treated as the calendar year. In order to assist in the processing of the retention or change in taxable year, taxpayers should refer to this special rule by either typing or legibly printing the following statement at the top of page 1 of the income tax return: "FILED UNDER §1.441-4T(b)(2)(ii)." See §1.441-2T(e) for special rules regarding 52-53-week taxable years for personal service corporations.

(3) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (b) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). X corporation's last taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987, ends on January 31, 1987. In addition, X is a personal service corporation for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987, and does not obtain the approval of the Commissioner for using a fiscal year. Thus, under paragraph (b)(1) of this section, X is required to change its taxable year to the calendar year by using a short taxable year that begins on February 1, 1987, and ends on December 31, 1987. Under paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section, X may change its taxable year without the consent of the Commissioner, but should notify the Internal Revenue Service of the change in accordance with section 5.02(1) of Rev. Proc. 87-32.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1), except that for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987, X obtains the approval of the Commissioner to change its annual accounting period to a fiscal year ending September 30. Under paragraph (b)(1) of this section, X must file a tax return for the short period from February 1, 1987, through September 30, 1987.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in example (1), except that the first taxable year for which X is a personal service corporation is the taxable year that begins on February 1, 1990. Thus, for taxable years ending before that date, this section does not apply with respect to X. For its taxable year beginning on February 1, 1990, however, X will be required to comply with paragraph (b) of this section. If X does not obtain the approval of the Commissioner to use a fiscal year, X will be required to change its taxable year to the calendar year by using a short taxable year that ends on December 31, 1990.

Example (4). Assume the same facts as in example (1), except that X desires to change to a 52-53-week taxable year ending with reference to the month of December. Pursuant to paragraphs (b)(2)(i) and (b)(2)(ii) of this section, X may change its taxable year to a 52-53-week taxable year ending with reference to the month of December without the consent of the Commissioner, but should notify the Internal Revenue Service of the change in accordance with paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of this section.

(c) Approval of a fiscal year. A personal service corporation must establish to the satisfaction of the Commissioner a business purpose for using a fiscal year under paragraph (a)(2) of this section. Business purpose is established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner in the case of a personal service corporation that—

(1) Requests to use, or is using, a fiscal year that coincides with its natural business year, as defined in section 4.01(1) of Rev. Proc. 87-32, or successor revenue procedures, or

(2) Receives permission from the Commissioner to use the fiscal year by establishing a business purpose for the fiscal year under section 6.01 of Rev. Proc. 87-32, or successor revenue procedures. See also Rev. Rul. 87-57, 1987-2 C.B. 117. See Announcement 87-82 for modifications to Rev. Proc. 87-32 regarding due dates for personal service corporations filing applications and income tax returns for certain short taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

(d) Personal service corporation for a taxable year—(1) In general. For purposes of this section, a taxpayer is a personal service corporation for a taxable year only if—

(i) The taxpayer is a C corporation (as defined in section 1361(a)(2)) for the taxable year;

(ii) The principal activity of the taxpayer during the testing period for the taxable year is the performance of personal services;

(iii) During the testing period for the taxable year, such services are substantially performed by employee-owners; and

(iv) Employee-owners, as defined in paragraph (h) of this section, own (as determined under the attribution rules of section 318, except that "any" shall be substituted for "50 percent" in section 318(a)(2)(C)) more than 10 percent of the fair market value of the outstanding stock in the taxpayer on the last day of the testing period for the taxable year.

(2) Testing period—(i) In general. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (d)(2)(ii) of this section, the testing period for a taxable year is the taxable year preceding such taxable year.

(ii) New corporations. The testing period for a taxpayer's first taxable year is the period beginning on the first day of such taxable year and ending on the earlier of—

(A) The last day of such taxable year; or

(B) The last day of the calendar year in which such taxable year begins.

(3) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (d)(2) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). Corporation A has been in existence since 1980 and has used a January 31 taxable year for all taxable years beginning before 1987. For purposes of determining whether A is a personal service corporation for the taxable year beginning February 1, 1987, A's testing period under paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section is the taxable year ending January 31, 1987.

Example (2). B corporation's first taxable year begins on June 1, 1987, and B desires to use a September 30 taxable year. However, if B is a personal service corporation, it must obtain the Commissioner's approval to use a September 30 taxable year. Pursuant to paragraph (d)(2)(ii) of this section, B's testing period for its first taxable year beginning June 1, 1987, is the period June 1, 1987 through September 30, 1987. Thus, if, based upon such testing period, B is a personal service corporation, B must obtain the Commissioner's permission to use a September 30 taxable year.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (2), except that B desires to use a March 31 taxable year. Pursuant to paragraph (d)(2)(ii) of this section, B's testing period for its first taxable year beginning June 1, 1987, is the period June 1, 1987, through December 31, 1987. Thus, if, based upon such testing period, B is a personal service corporation, B must obtain the Commissioner's permission to use a March 31 fiscal year.

(e) Determination of whether an activity during the testing period is treated as the performance of personal services—(1) Activities described in section 448(d)(2)(A). For purposes of this section, any activity of the taxpayer described in section 448(d)(2)(A) or the regulations thereunder will be treated as the performance of personal services. Therefore, any activity of the taxpayer that involves the performance of services in the fields of health, law, engineering, architecture, accounting, actuarial science, performing arts, or consulting (as such fields are defined in the regulations interpreting section 448) will be treated as the performance of personal services for purposes of this section.

(2) Activities not described in section 448(d)(2)(A). For purposes of this section, any activity of the taxpayer not described in section 448(d)(2)(A) or the regulations thereunder will not be treated as the performance of personal services.

(f) Principal activity—(1) General rule. For purposes of this section, the principal activity of a corporation for any testing period will be considered to be the performance of personal services if the cost of the corporation's compensation (the "compensation cost") for such testing period that is attributable to its activities that are treated as the performance of personal services under paragraph (e) of this section exceeds 50 percent of the corporation's total compensation cost for such testing period.

(2) Compensation cost. For purposes of this section, the compensation cost of a corporation for a taxable year is equal to the sum of the following amounts allowable as a deduction, allocated to a long-term contract, or otherwise chargeable to a capital account by the corporation during such taxable year—

(i) Wages and salaries, and

(ii) Any other amounts attributable to services performed for or on behalf of the corporation by a person who is an employee of the corporation (including an owner of the corporation who is treated as an employee under paragraph (h)(2) of this section) during the testing period. Such amounts include, but are not limited to, amounts attributable to deferred compensation, commissions, bonuses, compensation includible in income under section 83, compensation for services based on a percentage of profits, and the cost of providing fringe benefits that are includible in income.

However, for purposes of this section, compensation cost does not include amounts attributable to a plan qualified under section 401(a) or 403(a), or to a simplified employee pension plan defined in section 408(k).

(3) Attribution of compensation cost to personal service activity—(i) Employees involved only in the performance of personal services. The compensation cost for employees involved only in the performance of activities that are treated as personal services under paragraph (e) of this section, or employees involved only in supporting the work of such employees, shall be considered to be attributable to the corporation's personal service activity.

(ii) Employees involved only in activities that are not treated as the performance of personal services. The compensation cost for employees involved only in the performance of activities that are not treated as personal services under paragraph (e) of this section, or for employees involved only in supporting the work of such employees, shall not be considered to be attributable to the corporation's personal service activity.

(iii) Other employees. The compensation cost for any employee who is not described in either paragraph (f)(3)(i) or paragraph (f)(3)(ii) of this section ("a mixed activity employee") shall be allocated as follows—

(A) Compensation cost attributable to personal service activity. That portion of the compensation cost for a mixed activity employee that is attributable to the corporation's personal service activity equals the compensation cost for such employee multiplied by the percentage of the total time worked for the corporation by such employee during the year that is attributable to activities of the corporation that are treated as the performance of personal services under paragraph (e) of this section. Such percentage shall be determined by the taxpayer in any reasonable and consistent manner. Time logs are not required unless maintained for other purposes;

(B) Compensation cost not attributable to personal service activity. That portion of the compensation cost for a mixed activity employee that shall not be considered to be attributable to the corporation's personal service activity is the compensation cost for such employee less the amount determined in paragraph (f)(3)(iii)(A) of this section.

(g) Services substantially performed by employee-owners—(1) General rule. Personal services are substantially performed during the testing period by employee-owners of the corporation if more than 20 percent of the corporation's compensation cost for such period attributable to its activities that are treated as the performance of personal services (within the meaning of paragraph (e) of this section), is attributable to personal services performed by employee-owners.

(2) Compensation cost attributable to personal services. For purposes of paragraph (g)(1) of this section—

(i) The corporation's compensation cost attributable to its activities that are treated as the performance of personal services shall be determined under paragraph (f)(3) of this section; and

(ii) The portion of the amount determined under paragraph (g)(2)(i) of this section that is attributable to personal services performed by employee-owners shall be determined by the taxpayer in any reasonable and consistent manner.

(3) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (g) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). For its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987, Corporation A's testing period is the taxable year ending January 31, 1987. During such testing period, A's only activity was the performance of personal services. The total compensation cost of A (including compensation cost attributable to employee-owners) for the testing period was $1,000,000. The total compensation cost attributable to employee-owners of A for the testing period was $210,000. Pursuant to paragraph (g)(1) of this section, the employee-owners of A substantially performed the personal services of A during the testing period because the compensation cost of A's employee-owners was more than 20 percent of the total compensation cost for all of A's employees (including employee-owners).

Example (2). Corporation B has the same facts as corporation A in example (1), except that during the taxable year ending January 31, 1987, B also participated in an activity that would not be characterized as the performance of personal services under this section. The total compensation cost of B (including compensation cost attributable to employee-owners) for the testing period was $1,500,000 ($1,000,000 attributable to B's personal service activity and $500,000 attributable to B's other activity). The total compensation cost attributable to employee-owners of B for the testing period was $250,000 ($210,000 attributable to B's personal service activity and $40,000 attributable to B's other activity). Pursuant to paragraph (g)(1) of this section, the employee-owners of B substantially performed the personal services of B during the testing period because more than 20 percent of B's compensation cost during the testing period attributable to its personal service activities was attributable to personal services performed by employee-owners ($210,000).

(h) Employee-owner defined—(1) General rule. For purposes of this section, a person is an employee-owner of a corporation for a testing period if—

(i) The person is an employee of the corporation on any day of the testing period, and

(ii) The person owns any outstanding stock of the corporation on any day of the testing period.

(2) Special rule for independent contractors who are owners. Any person who is an owner of the corporation within the meaning of paragraph (h)(1)(ii) of this section and who performs personal services for or on behalf of the corporation shall be treated as an employee for purposes of this section, even if the legal form of that person's relationship to the corporation is such that he or she would be considered an independent contractor for other purposes.

(i) Special rules for affiliated group filing consolidated return—(1) In general. For purposes of applying this section to the members of an affiliated group of corporations filing a consolidated return for the taxable year—

(i) The members of the affiliated group shall be treated as a single corporation;

(ii) The employees of the members of the affiliated group shall be treated as employees of such single corporation; and

(iii) All of the stock, of the members of the affiliated group, that is not owned by any other member of the affiliated group shall be treated as the outstanding stock of such corporation.

(2) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph (i) may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). The affiliated group AB, consisting of corporation A and its wholly owned subsidiary B, filed a consolidated Federal income tax return for the taxable year ending January 31, 1987, and AB is attempting to determine whether it is affected by this section for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987. During the testing period (i.e., the taxable year ending January 31, 1987), A did not perform personal services while B's only activity was the performance of personal services. On the last day of the testing period, employees of A did not own any stock in A while some of B's employees own stock in A. In the aggregate, B's employees own 9 percent of A's stock on the last day of the testing period. Pursuant to paragraph (i)(1) of this section, this section is effectively applied on a consolidated basis to members of an affiliated group filing a consolidated Federal income tax return. Since the only employee-owners of AB are the employees of B and since B's employees do not own more than 10 percent of AB on the last day of the testing period, AB is not subject to the provisions of this section. Thus, AB is not required to determine on a consolidated basis whether, during the testing period, (a) its principal activity is the providing of personal services, or (b) the personal services are substantially performed by employee-owners.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that on the last day of the testing period A owns only 80 percent of B. The remaining 20 percent of B is owned by employees of B. The fair market value of A, including its 80 percent interest in B, as of the last day of the testing period, is $100,000. In addition, the fair market value of the 20 percent interest in B owned by B's employees is $5,000 as of the last day of the testing period. Pursuant to paragraph (d)(1)(iv) and paragraph (i)(1) of this section, AB must determine whether the employee-owners of A and B (i.e., B's employees) own more than 10 percent of the fair market value of A and B as of the last day of the testing period. Since the $14,000 [($100,000 × .09) + $5,000] fair market value of the stock held by B's employees is greater than 10 percent of the $105,000 ($100,000 + $5,000) aggregate fair market value of A and B as of the last day of the testing period, AB may be subject to this section if, on a consolidated basis during the testing period, (a) the principal activity of AB is the performance of personal services and (b) the personal services are substantially performed by employee-owners.

(j) Effective date. This section applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

Par. 6. Section 1.702-3T is added in the appropriate place.

§1.702-3T 4-year spread (temporary).

(a) Applicability. This section applies to a partner in a partnership if—

(1) The partnership is required by section 806 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (the 1986 Act), Pub. L. No. 99-514, 100 Stat. 2362, to change its taxable year for the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986 (partnerhip's year of change); and

(2) As a result of such change in taxable year, items from more than one taxable year of the partnership would, but for the provisions of this section, be included in the taxable year of the partner with or within which the partnership's year of change ends.

(b) Partner's treatment of items from the partnership's year of change—(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (c) of this section, if a partner's share of "income items" exceeds the partner's share of "expense items," the partner's share of each and every income and expense item shall be taken into account ratably (and retain its character) over the partner's first 4 taxable years beginning with the partner's taxable year with or within which the partnership's year of change ends.

(2) Definitions—(i) Income items. For purposes of this section, the term "income items" means the sum of—

(A) The partner's distributive share of taxable income (exclusive of separately stated items) from the partnership's year of change,

(B) The partner's distributive share of all separately stated income or gain items from the partnership's year of change, and

(C) Any amount includible in the partner's income under section 707(c) on account of payments during the partnership's year of change.

(ii) Expense items. For purposes of this section, the term "expense items" means the sum of—

(A) The partner's distributive share of taxable loss (exclusive of separately stated items) from the partnership's year of change, and

(B) The partner's distributive share of all separately stated items of loss or deduction from the partnership's year of change.

(c) Electing out of 4-year spread. A partner may elect out of the rules of paragraph (b) of this section by meeting the requirements of §5h.5 (temporary regulations relating to elections under the Tax Reform Act of 1986).

(d) Special rules for a partner that is a partnership or S corporation—(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (d)(2) of this section, a partner that is a partnership or S corporation may, if otherwise eligible, use the 4-year spread (with respect to partnership interests owned by the partner) described in this section.

(2) Certain partners prohibited from using 4-year spread—(i) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (d)(2)(ii) of this section, a partner that is a partnership or S corporation may not use the 4-year spread (with respect to partnership interests owned by the partner) if such partner is also changing its taxable year pursuant to section 806 of the 1986 Act.

(ii) Exception. If a partner's year of change does not include any income or expense items with respect to the partnership's year of change, such partner may, if otherwise eligible, use the 4-year spread (with respect to such partnership interest) described in this section even though the partner is a partnership or S corporation. See examples (13) and (14) in paragraph (h) of this section.

(e) Basis of partner's interest. The basis of a partner's interest in a partnership shall be determined as if the partner elected not to spread the partnership items over 4 years, regardless of whether such election was in fact made. Thus, for example, if a partner is eligible for the 4-year spread and does not elect out of the 4-year spread pursuant to paragraph (c) of this section, the partner's basis in the partnership interest will be increased in the first year of the 4-year spread period by an amount equal to the excess of the income items over the expense items. However, the partner's basis will not be increased again, with respect to the unamortized income and expense items, as they are amortized over the 4-year spread period.

(f) Effect on other provisions of the Code. Except as provided in paragraph (e) of this section, determinations with respect to a partner, for purposes of other provisions of the Code, must be made with regard to the manner in which partnership items are taken into account under the rules of this section. Thus, for example, a partner who does not elect out of the 4-year spread must take into account, for purposes of determining net earnings from self-employment under section 1402(a) for a taxable year, only the ratable portion of partnership items for that taxable year.

(g) Treatment of dispositions—(1) In general. If a partnership interest is disposed of before the last taxable year in the 4-year spread period, unamortized income and expense items that are attributable to the interest disposed of and that would be taken into account by the partner for subsequent taxable years in the 4-year spread period shall be taken into account by the partner as determined under paragraph (g)(2) of this section. For purposes of this section, the term "disposed of" means any transfer, including (but not limited to) transfers by sale, exchange, gift, and by reason of death.

(2) Year unamortized items taken into account. (i) In general. If, at the end of a partner's taxable year, the fraction determined under paragraph (g)(2)(ii) of this section is—

(A) Greater than 2/3, the partner must continue to take the unamortized income and expense items into account ratably over the 4-year spread period;

(B) Greater than 1/3 but less than or equal to 2/3, the partner must, in addition to its ratable amortization, take into account in such year 50 percent of the income and expense items that would otherwise be unamortized at the end of such year (however, this paragraph (g)(2)(i)(B) is only applied once with respect to a partner's interest in a particular partnership); or

(C) Less than or equal to 1/3, the partner must take into account the entire balance of unamortized income and expense items in such year.

(ii) Determination of fraction. For purposes of paragraph (g)(2)(i) of this section, the numerator of the fraction is the partner's proportionate interest in the partnership at the end of the partner's taxable year and the denominator is the partner's proportionate interest in the partnership as of the last day of the partnership's year of change.

(h) Examples. The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). Assume that P1, a partnership with a taxable year ending September 30, is required by the 1986 Act to change its taxable year to a calendar year. All of the partners of P1 are individual taxpayers reporting on a calendar year. P1 is required to change to a calendar year for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987, and to file a return for the short taxable year ending December 31, 1987. Based on the above facts, the partners of P1 are required to include the items from more than one taxable year of P1 in income for their 1987 taxable year. Thus, under paragraph (b) of this section, if a partner's share of income items exceeds the partner's share of expense items, the partner's share of each and every income and expense item shall be taken into account ratably by such partner in each of the partner's first four taxable years beginning with the partner's 1987 taxable year, unless such partner elects under paragraph (c) of this section to include all such amounts in his 1987 taxable year.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1), except P1 is a personal service corporation with all of its employee-owners reporting n a calendar year. Although P1 is required to change to a calendar year for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987, neither P1 nor its employee-owners obtain the benefits of a 4-year spread. Pursuant to section 806(e)(2)(C) of the 1986 Act, the 4-year spread provision is only applicable to short taxable years of partnerships and S corporations required to change their taxable year under the 1986 Act.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as example (1) and that I is one of the individual partners of P1. Further assume that I's distributive share of P1's taxable income for the short taxable year ended December 31, 1987 (i.e., P1's year of change), is $10,000. In addition, I has $8,000 of separately stated expense from P1's year of change. Since I's income items (i.e., $10,000 of taxable income) exceed I's expense items (i.e., $8,000 of separately stated expense) attributable to P1's year of change, I is eligible for the 4-year spread provided by this section. If I does not elect out of the 4-year spread, I will recognize $2,500 of taxable income and $2,000 of separately stated expense in his 1987 calendar year return. Assuming I does not dispose of his partnership interest in P1 by December 31, 1989, the remaining $7,500 of taxable income and $6,000 of separately stated expense will be amortized (and retain its character) over I's next three taxable years (i.e., 1988, 1989 and 1990).

Example (4). Assume the same facts as example (3), except that I disposes of his entire interest in P1 during 1988. Pursuant to paragraph (g) of this section, I would recognize $7,500 of taxable income and $6,000 of separately stated expense in his 1988 calendar year return.

Example (5). Assume the same facts as in example (3), except that I disposes of 50 percent of his interest in P1 during 1989. Pursuant to paragraph (g) of this section, I would recognize $3,750 of taxable income in his 1989 calendar year return ($2,500 ratable portion for 1989 plus 50 percent of the $2,500 of income items that would otherwise be unamortized at the end of 1989). I would also recognize $3,000 of separately stated expense items in 1989 ($2,000 ratable portion for 1989 plus 50 percent of the $2,000 of separately stated expense items that would otherwise be unamortized at the end of 1989).

Example (6). Assume the same facts as in example (1), except that X, a personal service corporation as defined in section 441(i), is a partner of P1. X is a calendar year taxpayer, and thus is not required to change its taxable year under the 1986 Act. The same result occurs as in example 1 (i.e., unless X elects to the contrary, X is required to include one fourth of its share of income and expense items from P1's year of change in the first four taxable years of X beginning with the 1987 taxable year).

Example (7). Assume the same facts as in example (6), except that X is a fiscal year personal service corporation with a taxable year ending September 30. X is required under the 1986 Act to change to a calendar year for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987, and to file a return for its short year ending December 31, 1987. Based on the above facts, X is not required to include the items from more than one taxable year of P1 in any one taxable year of X. Thus, the provisions of this section do not apply to X, and X is required to include the full amount of income and expense items from P1's year of change in X's taxable income for X's short year ending December 31. Under section 443 of the Code, X is required to annualize the taxable income for its short year ending December 31, 1987.

Example (8). Assume that P2 is a partnership with a taxable year ending September 30. Under the 1986 Act, P2 would have been required to change its taxable year to a calendar year, effective for the taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. However, P2 properly changed its taxable year to a calendar year for the year beginning October 1, 1986, and filed a return for the short period ending December 31, 1986. The provisions of the 1986 Act do not apply to P2 because the short year ending December 31, 1986, was not required by the amendments made by section 806 of the 1986 Act. Thus, the partners of P2 are required to take all items of income and expense for the short taxable year ending December 31, 1986, into account for the taxable year with or within which such short year ends.

Example (9). Assume that P3 is a partnership with a taxable year ending March 31 and I, a calendar year individual, is a partner in P3. Under the 1986 Act, P3 would have been required to change its taxable year to a calendar year. However, under Rev. Proc. 87-32, P3 establishes and changes to a natural business year beginning with the taxable year ending June 30, 1987. Thus, P3 is required to change its taxable year under section 806 of the 1986 Act, and I is required to include items from more than one taxable year of P3 in one of her taxable years. Furthermore, I's share of P3's income items exceeds her share of P3's expense items for the short period April 1, 1987 through June 30, 1987. Accordingly, under this section, unless I elects to the contrary, I is required to take one fourth of her share of items of income and expense from P3's short taxable year ending June 30, 1987 into account for her taxable year ending December 31, 1987.

Example (10). Assume that P4 is a partnership with a taxable year ending March 31. Y, a C corporation, owns a 51 percent interest in the profits and capital of P4. Y reports its income on the basis of a taxable year ending March 31. P4 establishes and changes to a natural business year beginning with the taxable year ending June 30, 1987, under Rev. Proc. 87-32. Under the above facts, P4 is not required to change its taxable year because its March 31 taxable year was the taxable year of Y, the partner owning a majority of the partnership's profits and capital. Therefore, the remaining partners of P4 owning 49 percent of the profits and capital are not permitted the 4-year spread of the items of income and expense with respect to the short year, even though they may be required to include their distributive share of P4's items from more than one taxable year in one of their years.

Example (11). Assume that X and Y are C corporations with taxable years ending June 30. Each owns a 50-percent interest in the profits and capital of partnership P5. P5 has a taxable year ending March 31. Assume that P5 cannot establish a business purpose in order to retain a taxable year ending March 31, and thus P5 must change to a June 30 taxable year, the taxable year of its partners. Furthermore, assume that X's share of P5's income items exeeds its share of P5's expense items for P5's short taxable year ending June 30, 1987. Unless X elects out of the 4-year spread, the taxable year ending June 30, 1987, is the first of the four taxable years in which X must take into account its share of the items of income and expenses resulting from P5's short taxable year ending June 30, 1987.

Example (12). Assume that I, an individual who reports income on the basis of the calendar year, is a partner in two partnerships, P6 and P7. Both partnerships have a taxable year ending September 30. Neither partnership can establish a business purpose for retaining its taxable year. Consequently, each partnership will change its taxable year to December 31, for the taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. The election to avoid a 4-year spread is made at the partner level; in addition, a partner may make such elections on a partnership-by-partnership basis. Thus, assuming I is eligible to obtain the 4-year spread with respect to income and expense items from partnerships P6 and P7, I may use the 4-year spread with respect to items from P6, while not using the 4-year spread with respect to items from P7.

Example (13). I, an individual taxpayer using a calendar year, owns an interest in P8, a partnership using a taxable year ending June 30. Furthermore, P8 owns an interest in P9, a partnership with a taxable year ending March 31. Under section 806 of the 1986 Act, P8 will be required to change to a taxable year ending December 31, while P9 will be required to change to a taxable year ending June 30. As a result, P8's year of change will be July 1 through December 31, 1987, while P9's year of change will be from April 1 through June 30, 1987. Since P9's year of change does not end with or within P8's year of change, paragraph (d)(2) of this section does not prevent P8 from obtaining a 4-year spread with respect to its interest in P9.

Example (14). the facts are the same as in example (13), except that P9 has a taxable year ending September 30, and under the 1986 Act P9 is required to change to a taxable year ending December 31. Therefore, P9's year of change will be from October 1, 1987 through December 31, 1987. Although P8's year of change from July 1, 1987 through December 31, 1987 includes two taxable years of P9 (i.e., October 1, 1986 through September 30, 1987 and October 1, 1987 through December 31, 1987), paragraph (d)(2) of this section prohibits P8 from using the 4-year spread with respect to its interest in P9, because P9's year of change ends with or within P8's year of change.

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805. ***

Par. 8. Sections 18.1366-1, 2, 3 and 4 are added and reserved and section 18.1366-5 is added in the appropriate place.

§18.1366-1 [Reserved].

§18.1366-3 [Reserved].

§18.1366-4 [Reserved].

§18.1366-5 4-year spread.

(a) Applicability. This section applies to a shareholder in an S corporation if—

(1) The S corporation is required by section 806 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (the 1986 Act), Pub. L. No. 99-514, 100 Stat. 2362, to change its taxable year for the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986 (S corporation's year of change);

(2) As a result of such change in taxable year, items from more than one taxable year of the S corporation would, but for the provisions of this section, be included in the taxable year of the shareholder with or within which the S corporation's year of change ends; and

(3) The corporation was an S corporation for a taxable year beginning in 1986.

(b) Shareholder's treatment of items from the S corporation's year of change—(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (c) of this section, if a shareholder's share of "income items" exceeds the shareholder's share of "expense items," the shareholder's share of each and every income and expense item shall be taken into account ratably (and retain its character) over the shareholder's first 4 taxable years beginning with the shareholder's taxable year with or within which the S corporation's year of change ends.

(2) Definitions—(i) Income items. For purposes of this section, the term "income items" means the sum of—

(A) The shareholder's pro rata share of the nonseparately computer income from the S corporation's year of change, and

(B) The shareholder's pro rata share of the items of income (including tax-exempt income), from the S corporation's year of change, the separate treatment of which items of income could affect the liability for tax of any shareholder.

(ii) Expense items. For purposes of this section, the term "expense items" means the sum of—

(A) The shareholder's pro rata share of the nonseparately computed loss from the S corporation's year of change, and

(B) The shareholder's pro rata share of the items of loss and deduction from the S corporation's year of change, the separate treatment of which items of loss and deduction could affect the liability for tax of any shareholder.

(c) Electing out of 4-year spread. A shareholder may elect out of the rules of paragraph (b) of this section by meeting the requirements of §5h.5 (temporary regulations relating to elections under the Tax Reform Act of 1986).

(d) Basis of shareholder's interest. The basis of a shareholder's interest in an S corporation shall be determined as if the S corporation shareholder elected not to spread the partnership items over 4 years, regardless of whether such election was in fact made. Thus, for example, if an S corporation shareholder is eligible for the 4-year spread and does not elect out of the 4-year spread pursuant to paragraph (c) of this section, the shareholder's basis in the S corporation interest will be increased in the first year of the 4-year spread period by an amount equal to the excess of the income items over the expense items. However, the shareholder's basis will not be increased again, with respect to the unamortized income and expense items, as they are amortized over the 4-year spread period.

(e) Effect on other provisions of the Code. Except as provided in paragraph (d) of this section, determinations with respect to a shareholder, for purposes of other provisions of the Code, must be made with regard to the manner in which S corporation items are taken into account under the rules of this section. Thus, for example, a shareholder who does not elect out of the 4-year spread must take into account, for purposes of determining his or her charitable contribution deduction limitations for a taxable year, only the ratable portion of S corporation items for that taxable year.

(f) Treatment of dispositions—(1) In general. If S corporation stock is disposed of before the last taxable year in the 4-year spread period, unamortized income and expense items that are attributable to the interest disposed of and that would be taken in account by the shareholder for subsequent taxable years in the 4-year spread period shall be taken into account by the shareholder as determined under paragraph (f)(2) of this section. For purposes of this section, the term "disposed of" means any transfer, including (but not limited to) transfers by sale, exchange, gift, and by reason of death.

(2) Year unamortized items taken into account—(i) In general. If, at the end of a shareholder's taxable year, the fraction determined under paragraph (f)(3)(ii) of this section is—

(A) Greater than 2/3, the shareholder must continue to take the unamortized income and expense items into account ratably over the 4-year spread period;

(B) Greater than 1/3 but less than or equal to 2/3, the shareholder must, in addition to its ratable amortization, take into account in such year 50 percent of the income and expense items that would otherwise be unamortized at the end of such year (however, this paragraph (f)(2)(i)(B) is only applied once with respect to an S shareholder's interest in a particular S corporation); or

(C) Less than or equal to 1/3, the shareholder must take into account the entire balance of unamortized income and expense items in such year.

(ii) Determination of fraction. For purposes of paragraph (f)(2)(i) of this section, the numerator of the fraction is the shareholder's proportionate interest in the S corporation at the end of the shareholder's taxable year and the denominator is the shareholder's proportionate interest in the S corporation as of the last day of the S corporation's year of change.

(g) Examples. The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). Assume that S1, an S corporation with a taxable year ending September 30, is required by the 1986 Act to change its taxable year to a calendar year. All of the shareholders of S1 are individual taxpayers reporting on a calendar year. S1 is required to change to a calendar year for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987, and to file a return for the short taxable year ending December 31, 1987. Based on the above facts, the shareholders of S1 are required to include the items from more than one taxable year of S1 in income for their 1987 taxable year. Thus, under paragraph (b) of this section, if a shareholder's share of income items exceeds the shareholder's share of expense items, the shareholder's share of each and every income and expense item shall be taken into account ratably by such shareholder in each of the shareholder's first four taxable years beginning with the shareholder's 1987 taxable year, unless such shareholder elects under paragraph (c) of this section to include all such amounts in his 1987 taxable year.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1), except S1 is a personal service corporation with all of its employee-owners reporting on a calendar year. Although S1 is required to change to a calendar year for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987, neither S1 nor its employee-owners obtain the benefits of a 4-year spread. Pursuant to section 806(e)(2)(C) of the 1986 Act, the 4-year spread provision is only applicable to short taxable years of partnerships and S corporations required to change their taxable year under the 1986 Act.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as example (1) and that I is one of the individual shareholders of S1. Further assume that I's share of the nonseparately computed income from S1's taxable income for the short taxable year ended December 31, 1987 (i.e., S1's year of change) is $10,000. In addition, I has $8,000 of nonseparately computed loss from S1's year of change. Since I's income items (i.e., $10,000 of taxable income) exceed I's expense items (i.e., $8,000 of loss) attributable to S1's year of change, I is eligible for the 4-year spread provided by this section. If I does not elect out of the 4-year spread, I will recognize $2,500 of taxable income and $2,000 of loss in his 1987 calendar year return. Assuming I does not dispose of his S corporation interest in S1 by December 31, 1989, the remaining $7,500 of taxable income and $6,000 of loss will be amortized (and retain its character) over I's next three taxable years (i.e., 1988, 1989 and 1990).

Example (4). Assume the same facts as in example (3), except that I disposes of his entire interest in S1 during 1988. Pursuant to paragraph (f) of this section, I would recognize $7,500 of taxable income and $6,000 of loss in his 1988 calendar year return.

Example (5). Assume the same facts as in example (3), except that I disposes of 50 percent of his stock in S1 during 1989. Pursuant to paragraph (f) of this section, I would recognize $3,750 of taxable income in his 1989 calendar year return ($2,500 ratable portion for 1989 plus 50 percent of the $2,500 of income items that would otherwise be unamortized at the end of 1989). I would also recognize $3,000 of separately stated expense items in 1989 ($2,000 ratable portion for 1989 plus 50 percent of the $2,000 of separately stated expense items that would otherwise be unamortized at the end of 1989).

Example (6). Assume that S2 is an S corporation with a taxable year ending September 30. Under the 1986 Act, S2 would have been required to change its taxable year to a calendar year, effective for the taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. However, S2 properly changed its taxable year to a calendar year for the year beginning October 1, 1986, and filed a return for the short period ending December 31, 1986. The provisions of the Act do not apply to S2 because the short year ending December 31, 1986 was not required by the amendments made by section 806 of the 1986 Act. Thus, the shareholders of S2 are required to take all items of income and expense for the short taxable year ending December 31, 1986, into account for the taxable year with or within which such short year ends.

Example (7). Assume that S3 is an S corporation with a taxable year ending March 31 and I, a calendar year individual, is a shareholder in S3. Under the 1986 Act, S3 would have been required to change its taxable year to a calendar year. However, under Rev. Proc. 87-32, S3 establishes and changes to a natural business year beginning with the taxable year ending June 30, 1987. Thus, S3 is required to change its taxable year under section 806 of the 1986 Act, and I is required to include items from more than one taxable year of S3 in one of her taxable years. Furthermore, I's share of S3's income items exceeds her share of S3's expense items for the short period April 1, 1987 through June 30, 1987. Accordingly, under this section, unless I elects to the contrary, I is required to take one fourth of her share of items of income and expense from S3's short taxable year ending June 30, 1987, into account for her taxable year ending December 31, 1987.

Example (8). Assume that S4 is an S corporation with a taxable year ending March 31. I, an individual, owns 51 percent of the stock of S4. I reports her income on the basis of a taxable year ending March 31. S4 establishes and changes to a natural business year beginning with the taxable year ending June 30, 1987, under Rev. Proc. 87-32. Under the above facts, S4 is not required to change its taxable year because its March 31 taxable year is allowed pursuant to Rev. Proc. 87-32. Therefore, the remaining shareholders of S4 owning 49 percent of the stock are not permitted the 4-year spread of the items of income and expense with respect to the short year, even if they are required to include their share of S4's items of income and expense from more than one taxable year in one of their years.

Example (9). Assume that C and D are individuals with a taxable year ending June 30. Each owns 50 percent of the stock of corporation S5, an S corporation. S5 has a taxable year ending March 31. S5 cannot establish a business purpose in order to retain a taxable year ending March 31, and thus S5 must change to either a calendar year or a June 30 taxable year (the taxable year of more than 50 percent of its shareholders). Assume that S5 changes to a June 30 taxable year. Furthermore, assume that C's share of S5's income items exceeds C's share of S5's expense items for S5's short taxable year ending June 30, 1987. Unless C elects out of the four-year spread, C's taxable year ending June 30, 1987, is the first of the four taxable years in which C must take into account its share of the items of income and expense resulting from S5's short taxable year ending June 30, 1987.

Example (10). Assume that I, an individual who reports income on the basis of the calendar year, is a shareholder in two S corporations, S6 and S7. Both S corporations have a taxable year ending September 30. Neither S corporation can establish a business purpose for retaining its taxable year. Consequently, each S corporation will change its taxable year to December 31, for the taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. The election to avoid a 4-year spread is made at the shareholder level; in addition, a shareholder may make such elections on an S corporation-by-S corporation basis. Thus, assuming I is eligible to obtain the 4-year spread with respect to income and expense items from S corporations S6 and S7, I may use the 4-year spread with respect to items from S6, while not using the 4-year spread with respect to items from S7.

Example (11). Corporation S8 elected subchapter S status for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1986 and had a short taxable year for the period July 1 through December 31, 1986. S8's shareholders use a calendar year. The shareholders of S8 are not entitled to a 4-year spread with respect to S8's short taxable year ended December 31, 1986, because (a) S8 was not required to change its taxable year for the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, and (b) S8's shareholders did not have items from more than one taxable year of S8 included in their 1986 taxable year.

Example (12). The facts are the same as in example (12), except S8 elected subchapter S status for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987 and will have a short taxable year for the period July 1 to December 31, 1987. The shareholders of S8 are not entitled to a 4-year spread with respect to S8's short taxable year ended December 31, 1987, because (a) S8's shareholders did not have items from more than one taxable year of S8 included in their 1987 return, and (b) S8 was not an S corporation for a taxable year beginning in 1986.

There is need for immediate guidance with respect to the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason it is impracticable to issue the Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

Section 444.—Election of Taxable Year Other Than Required Taxable Year

26 CFR 1.444-1T: Election to use a taxable year other than the required taxable year (temporary).

T.D. 8205

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER A, SUBCHAPTER H, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953; PART 602—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Election of Taxable Year Other Than Required Year by Partnerships, S Corporations and Personal Service Corporations

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations relating to the election by partnerships, S corporations, and personal service corporations to use a taxable year other than their required taxable year. In addition, the text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document serves as the text of the proposed regulations cross-referenced in the notice of proposed rulemaking in  [LR-53-88, page 935, this Bulletin]. Changes to the applicable law were made by the Revenue Act of 1987. The regulations affect partnerships, S corporations, and personal service corporations (and owners of those entities) and provide them with the guidance needed to comply with the law. In addition, the temporary regulations include conforming and clarifying rules regarding the determination of the taxable year of a partnership under section 706.

EFFECTIVE DATE: The temporary regulations are generally effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

Sections 706(b), 1378, and 441(i) of the Internal Revenue Code (the Code), as amended by section 806 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (the 1986 Act) (Pub. L. 99-514, 100 Stat. 2085)[1986-3 (Vol.1) C.B. 1, 279], generally require partnerships, S corporations, and personal service corporations ("PSCs"), respectively, to conform their taxable years to the taxable years of their owners.

The Revenue Act of 1987 (the 1987 Act) (Pub. L. 100-203, 101 Stat. 1330), enacted on December 22, 1987, added sections 44, 7519, and 280H to the Code, effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986. Section 444 allows certain partnerships, S corporations, and PSCs to make an election (a "section 444 election") to use a taxable year that is different from the taxable year that such entities would otherwise be required to use. Section 444(d)(3), however, generally prohibits entities that are members of a tiered structure from making a section 444 election.

Electing partnerships and S corporations are required to make payments under section 7519 ("required payments") to the Federal government that are intended to represent the value of the tax deferral obtained by the owners of those entities through the entity's use of a taxable year different from the required taxable year.

Electing PSCs failing to distribute certain amounts to employee-owners by December 31 of a taxable year may be required, under section 280H, to defer certain deductions for amounts includible (at any time) in the gross income of employee-owners.

On January 15, 1988, the Internal Revenue Service issued Notice 88-10 (page 478, this Bulletin) to provide guidance with respect to certain issues of immediate concern to taxpayers affected by section 444. Notice 88-10 stated that forthcoming temporary regulations would provide that a section 444 election shall not be required to be made before the later of (i) April 30, 1988, or (ii) 60 days after the publication of those temporary regulations in the Federal Register. Publication of these temporary regulations in the Federal Register commences the beginning of the 60-day period for making a section 444 election. Thus, a section 444 election for the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, must be made on or before July 26, 1988.

On March 11, 1988, the Internal Revenue Service issued Announcement 88-49 (1988-13 I.R.B. 34) to provide guidance to corporations electing S status that are considering whether to make a section 444 election. On March 15, 1988, the Internal Revenue Service issued Notice 88-36 (page 517, this Bulletin) to provide guidance regarding the definition of a "tiered structure" for purposes of section 444(d)(3).

Furthermore, on April 4, 1988, the Internal Revenue Service issued Notice 88-49 (page 532, this Bulletin). Notice 88-49 waived certain penalties and answered additional questions regarding sections 444, 6519, and 280H that had not been answered in the earlier notices related to these sections.

a. In general.

If three conditions are met, a partnership, S corporation, or PSC is eligible to make a section 444 election. First, with one limited exception, the entity may not be a member of a tiered structure. Second, the entity must not have had a section 444 election in effect previously. Third, certain restrictions on the deferral period of the taxable year to be elected must be satisfied. In general, the deferral period of the taxable year to be elected must be no more than three months. However, there are special rules regarding the deferral period for entities that are changing or retaining their taxable year.

For purposes of section 444 and these temporary regulations, the term "required taxable year" is defined as the taxable year that is determined under section 706(b), 1378, or 441(i), without taking into account any taxable year which is allowable by reason of business purpose. Thus, the calendar year is the required taxable year for most partnerships and all S corporations and PSCs. The only partnerships that can have a required taxable year of other than a calendar year are certain partnerships with fiscal year partners.

Furthermore, for purposes of section 444 and these temporary regulations, the term "deferral period" is defined as the number of months that occur after the end of the taxable year desired under section 444 and through the close of the required taxable year. For example, if the taxable year desired under section 444 is September 30 and the required taxable year is December 31, the deferral period for such September 30 taxable year is 3 months (September 30 to December 31). With respect to taxpayers using a taxable year that is the same as their required taxable year, the deferral period for such year is zero.

If an entity qualifies to make a section 444 election and desires to make such election, the entity must file Form 8716 in accordance with §1.444-3T of these temporary regulations. Furthermore, the entity must comply with the requirements of section 7519 or 280H, whichever is applicable.

A section 444 election shall remain in effect until it is terminated. Paragraph (a)(5) of §1.444-1T of these temporary regulations provides that a section 444 election is terminated when the entity (1) changes to the required taxable year, (2) liquidates (including a deemed liquidation of a partnership pursuant to §1.708-1(b)(1)(iv)), (3) willfully fails to comply with the requirements of section 7519 or 280H, whichever is applicable, or (4) becomes a member of a tiered structure (unless the "same taxable year exception" provided in §1.444-2T(e) of these temporary regulations applies). In addition, a section 444 election is generally terminated if (5) a corporation's S election is terminated or (6) a PSC ceases to be a PSC. However, if a corporation is a PSC immediately after termination of its S election, a section 444 election may be continued by the PSC (subject to the rules of §1.280H-1T). Furthermore, a PSC that ceases to be a PSC solely because it becomes an S corporation may also continue a section 444 election (subject to the rules of §§1.7519-1T and 1.7519-2T).

b. Tiered structure.

1. In general.

If an entity is a member of a tiered structure, such entity cannot make or continue a section 444 election unless the same taxable year exception provided in §1.444-2T(e) applies. An entity is generally considered a member of a tiered structure if the entity directly owns any portion of a deferral entity or a deferral entity owns any portion of the entity. A deferral entity is any entity that is a partnership, S corporation, PSC, or trust. However, grantor trusts and certain trusts treated like grantor trusts are excluded from the definition of a deferral entity. Furthermore, as provided in §1.444-2T(c) of these temporary regulations, certain deferral entities may be disregarded if, in the aggregate, they are de minimis with respect to the entity desiring to make a section 444 election.

These temporary regulations provide that the date for determining the existence of a tiered structure is generally the last day of the required taxable year ending within the taxable year that would result from a section 444 election. Thus, for example, assume an S corporation that historically used a September 30 taxable year desires to retain its September 30 taxable year by making a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. The general rule provides that December 31, 1987, is the time for determining whether such S corporation is a member of a tiered structure. However, for taxable years beginning in 1987, these temporary regulations provide that an entity will not be a member of a tiered structure if, on the date the entity files its section 444 election for such taxable year, the entity is not a member of a tiered structure. Thus, in the above example, the S corporation will be considered to be a member of a tiered structure for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987, only if the S corporation is a member of a tiered structure on both December 31, 1987, and the date the S corporation files its section 444 election for such year.

2. De minimis rules.

These temporary regulations include two de minimis rules that allow an entity to disregard certain deferral entities in determining whether the entity is a member of a tiered structure. The "downstream de minimis rule" provides that if an entity owns any portion of one or more deferral entities, such ownership is disregarded if, in the aggregate, all such deferral entities meet either (i) the 5 percent adjusted taxable income test, or (ii) the 2 percent gross income test. See §1.444-2T(c)(2) of these temporary regulations for further details on these two tests. The "upstream de minimis rule" provides that if an entity is directly owned by one or more deferral entities, such ownership is disregarded if deferral entities directly own, in the aggregate, 5 percent or less of the entity desiring to make or continue a section 444 election.

3. Same taxable year exception.

Paragraph (e) of §1.444-2T of these temporary regulations provides that if a partnership or S corporation is a member of a tiered structure, the partnership or S corporation may have a section 444 election in effect if the tiered structure consists entirely of partnerships or S corporations (or both), all of which have the same taxable year. The same taxable year exception is generally not available if a PSC is a member of the tiered structure. The temporary regulations provide detailed rules for the interaction of the de minimis rules with the same taxable year exception (see §1.444-2T(e)(5)).

4. Notice 88-36.

Except for three minor clarifications and several minor editorial changes, §1.444-2T of these temporary regulations contains the same tiered structure rules first provided in Notice 88-36. The first clarification relates to the date for determining the existence of a tiered structure (see §1.444-2T(d)). Specifically, these temporary regulations clarify that if the taxable year resulting from a section 444 election does not include the last day of the required taxable year for such taxable year, then the entity making the section 444 election is not considered to be a member of a tiered structure for such year (see example (2) in §1.444-2T(d)(1)).

The second clarification relates to the exception from the term "deferral entity" for grantor trusts (and certain trusts treated as grantor trusts) in §1.444-2T(b)(2)(ii). Specifically, these temporary regulations clarify that to the extent any taxpayer owns a grantor trust, such taxpayer is treated as directly owning the assets of such a trust. For illustrations of this rule, see examples (1) and (2) in §1.444-2T(b)(2)(ii).

The third clarification is that an affiliated group of personal service corporations filing a consolidated income tax return is treated as a single entity for purposes of determining whether a taxpayer is part of a tiered structure. See §1.444-2T(b)(2)(i).

c. Limitations on deferral period.

In general, a section 444 election may be made only if the deferral period of the taxable year to be elected is not longer than three months. However, if an entity is changing its taxable year, the deferral period of the taxable year to be elected may not be longer than the shorter of (1) three months or (2) the deferral period of the taxable year that is being changed. These temporary regulations define the phrase "deferral period of the taxable year that is being changed" as the deferral period of the taxable year immediately preceding the taxable year for which the entity desires to make a section 444 election.

Thus, for example, assume a partnership that has historically used a March 31 taxable year desires to change to a taxable year ending September 30 for its taxable year beginning April 1, 1987. Further assume that for the taxable year beginning April 1, 1987, the partnership's required taxable year is December 31. Based on these facts, the deferral period of the taxable year being changed is nine months (March 31 to December 31) and the deferral period of the taxable year being elected is three months (September 30 to December 31). As a result, the partnership may, if otherwise qualified (i.e., the partnership is not considered to be a member of a tiered structure), make a section 444 election to change to a year ending September 30 for its taxable year beginning April 1, 1987.

These temporary regulations provide special transitional rules for certain taxpayers. First, §1.444-1T(b)(2)(ii) of these temporary regulations provides that if a corporation (1) elected S status after September 18, 1986, and before January 1, 1988, and (2) elected to have a calendar taxable year, then such corporation is allowed to modify the normal deferral period limitations on changing its taxable year. Specifically, such corporation may substitute the deferral period of the last taxable year prior to electing to be an S corporation for the deferral period of the taxable year that is being changed. Thus, in order to benefit from this special rule, the corporation electing S status must have been in existence prior to electing S status.

The second special transitional rule provides that an entity may, if otherwise qualified, make a section 444 election for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, to have a taxable year that is the same as the entity's last taxable year beginning in 1986. See §1.444-1T(b)(3) of these temporary regulations.

d. Procedures for making a section 444 election (§1.444-3T).

1. In general.

A section 444 election is made by filing Form 8716, "Election to Have a Tax Year Other Than a Required Tax Year," with the Service Center indicated by the instructions to Form 8716. In general, Form 8716 must be filed by the earlier of (i) the 15th day of the fifth month following the month that includes the first day of the taxable year for which the election will first be effective, or (ii) the due date (without regard to extensions) of the income tax return resulting from the section 444 election. However, if, based on the general rule set forth in the preceding sentence, the due date for filing Form 8716 is prior to July 26, 1988, the due date is extended to July 26, 1988. In addition to filing Form 8716 with the appropriate Service Center, a copy of Form 8716 must be attached to the entity's income tax return for the taxable year for which the section 444 election is made.

2. Corporations electing S status.

A corporation electing S status is subject to the same procedural rules for filing Form 8716 as any other entity making a section 444 election. Thus, a corporation electing S status that desires to make a section 444 election is required to file Form 8716 in accordance with the rules in these temporary regulations, but is not required to file Form 8716 with its Form 2553, "Election by a Small Business Corporation." However, a corporation electing S status after September 26, 1988, that desires to make a section 444 election, is required to state on Form 2553 its intention to (i) make a section 444 election, if qualified, or (ii) make a "back-up section 444 election." If a corporation electing S status fails to state either of the above intentions, the District Director may, at his discretion, disregard a subsequent section 444 election for such entity.

Section 1.444-1T(a)(6) provides rules for reactivating certain S elections with respect to the first taxable year of the taxpayer beginning after December 31, 1986.

e. Back-up section 444 election.

These temporary regulations provide that if an entity requests permission, based on business purpose, to use a particular taxable year, such entity may, if otherwise qualified, file a back-up section 444 election. Thus, if the entity's business purpose request is subsequently denied by the Commissioner, the entity shall activate the back-up election for such year. The rules and procedures concerning back-up section 444 elections are provided in §1.444-3T(b)(4) of these temporary regulations.

f. Miscellaneous administrative relief.

These temporary regulations automatically extend the due dates for filing certain income tax returns (see §1.444-3T(c)(1)). These temporary regulations also waive certain late payment penalties that may otherwise be imposed on a PSC or S corporation (see §1.444-3T(c)(2)).

Section III. B. of Notice 88-49 waived certain late payment and filing penalties that may otherwise be imposed on the owners of a partnership or S corporation considering whether to make a section 444 election for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986. However, section III. C. of Notice 88-49 requires that interest must be paid on any underpayment of income tax.

a. In general.

Section 7519 and the temporary regulations thereunder apply to any taxable year that a partnership or S corporation has a section 444 election in effect (an "applicable election year"). For each applicable election year, a partnership or S corporation must file a return and make a required payment as provided in §1.7519-2T. However, if the required payment for an applicable election year is not more than $500 and the partnership or S corporation has not been required to make a required payment for a prior year, the partnership or S corporation should not make a required payment for that applicable election year. Nevertheless, such partnership or S corporation must file a return.

b. Required payment.

1. In general.

Section 1.7519-1T(a)(3) provides that the term "required payment" means, with respect to any applicable election year of a partnership or S corporation, an amount equal to the excess of—

(i) The product of the applicable percentage of the adjusted highest section 1 rate, multiplied by the net base year income of the entity, over

(ii) the cumulative amount of the required payments actually made for all preceding applicable election years (reduced by the cumulative amount of payments refunded under section 7519(c) for all such preceding years).

Under the temporary regulations, a partnership or S corporation that has made a section 444 election and that is a member of a tiered structure must separately determine the amount of its required payment without regard to the required payment of any other member of the tiered structure. (See example (3) of §1.7519-1T(d)).

2. Applicable percentage.

Under section 806(e)(2)(C) of the 1986 Act, certain partners and shareholders are entitled to a four-year "spread" of the income and expense items from a partnership or S corporation that is required to change its taxable year under the 1986 Act. In order to provide a de facto four-year spread, section 7519(b)(1)(A) multiplies the required payment otherwise required to be made by a partnership or S corporation by the applicable percentage defined in section 7519(d)(4). However, certain entities (e.g., a corporation that elected to be an S corporation for a taxable year beginning in 1987) that qualify to make a section 444 election, and thereby obtain the de facto four-year spread, may have partners or shareholders that would not have been entitled to the four-year spread under section 806(e)(2)(C) of the 1986 Act. Nevertheless, the temporary regulations provide that the applicable percentage for the first taxable year beginning in 1987 of any partnership or S corporation properly making a section 444 election is 25 percent.

3. Adjusted highest section 1 rate.

For any applicable election year, the term "adjusted highest section 1 rate" means the highest rate of tax under section 1 applicable to the period defined in the regulations, plus 1 percentage point. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, the adjusted highest section 1 rate is 36 percent for applicable election years beginning in 1987. The temporary regulations provide that for purposes of section 7519 the highest rate of tax is determined without regard to the effect of section 1(g) (relating to the phaseout of the 15-percent rate and personal exemptions).

4. Net base year income.

In general, the net base year income of a partnership or S corporation is the sum of—

(i) The deferral ratio multiplied by the partnership's or S corporation's net income for the base year, plus

(ii) The excess (if any) of—

(A) The deferral ratio multiplied by the aggregate amount of applicable payments made by the partnership or S corporation during the base year, over

(B) The aggregate amount of such applicable payments made during the deferral period of the base year.

For purposes of section 7519 and the temporary regulations, the term "base year" means, with respect to any applicable election year, the taxable year of the partnership or S corporation immediately preceding such applicable election year. The temporary regulations define the term "deferral ratio" as the number of months in the deferral period of the applicable election year divided by 12 months.

5. Applicable payment.

For purposes of section 7519, the temporary regulations generally define the term "applicable payment" as any amount deductible in the base year that is includible at any time, directly or indirectly, in the gross income of a taxpayer that during the base year is a partner or shareholder. The temporary regulations provide that the term "applicable payment" does not include any guaranteed payments under section 707(c).

In general, an amount is indirectly includible in the gross income of a partner or shareholder if the amount is includible in the gross income of a related party, as determined under §1.7519-1T(b)(5)(iv)(D) of the temporary regulations.

The temporary regulations further provide that if an S corporation was a C corporation for the base year, the corporation shall be treated as if it were an S corporation for the base year for purposes of determining the corporation's net base year income, including applicable payments. Thus, amounts deductible by a C corporation in the base year that are includible at any time in the gross income of a taxpayer that is a shareholder during the base year are treated as if deductible by an S corporation and are, therefore, within the meaning of the term "applicable payment."

6. Special rule for base year of less than twelve months.

If a base year is a taxable year of less than twelve months (a "short base year"), the temporary regulations provide special rules for computing the net base year income for such short year. The net base year income for the short base year is an amount equal to the excess, if any, of—

(i) The deferral ratio multiplied by the annualized short base year income, over

(ii) Applicable payments made during the deferral period of the applicable election year following the base year.

See §1.7519-1T(b)(5)(v) of these temporary regulations.

c. Special rules for certain applicable election years.

The temporary regulations provide special rules for determining the applicable payment for certain applicable election years. If an applicable election year is a partnership's or S corporation's first year in existence (i.e., the partnership or S corporation is newly formed and therefore does not have a base year), the temporary regulations provide that the required payment for such applicable election year is zero. If a partnership or S corporation makes a section 444 election and the resulting applicable election year (the "first applicable election year") of the partnership or S corporation ends prior to the last day of the required year, the temporary regulations provide that the required payment for the first applicable election year is zero.

d. Refunds of required payments.

A partnership or S corporation is entitled to make a claim for refund if (1) the product of the applicable percentage of the adjusted highest section 1 rate multiplied by the net base year income is less than the cumulative amount of required payments in all preceding applicable election years (reduced by the cumulative amount of refunds for such preceding years), or (2) the partnership or S corporation terminates its section 444 election as defined in paragraph (a)(5) of §1.444-1T

e. Returns under section 7519.

Section 7519(e)(3) provides that each partnership or S corporation that makes a section 444 election shall include on any required return or statement such information as the Secretary shall prescribe as is necessary to carry out the provisions of section 7519. The temporary regulations provide that with respect to an applicable election year, a partnership or S corporation must file a return showing the required payment, even if the required payment for the applicable election year is zero. For an applicable election year beginning in 1987, the return shall be made on Form 720, "Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return." For an applicable election year beginning after 1987, the return shall also be made on Form 720 unless another form is prescribed by the Commissioner.

Partnerships and S corporations that would otherwise file Form 720 for the second quarter of 1988 must file Form 720 by the normal due date of such form for the second quarter of 1988. Thus, in most cases, these partnerships and S corporations will file Form 720 on or before July 31, 1988. However, some partnerships and S corporations (for example, those required to pay the windfall profits tax) must file Form 720 on or before August 31, 1988. See the instructions to Form 720 for additional general information. Partnerships and S corporations making a section 444 election that would not otherwise file Form 720 for the second quarter of 1988 must file Form 720 on or before July 31, 1988. See §1.444-3T(b)(4)(iii) for a special rule that may extend the due date for filing a return when a partnership or S corporation makes a back-up section 444 election.

f. Payment of required payments.

For an applicable election year beginning in 1987, the required payment is due and payable without assessment and notice on or before the date specified in the temporary regulations for filing the Form 720. The required payment must be paid by check or money order and such check or money order must be sent, together with Form 720, to the Service Center indicated by the instructions to Form 720. See §1.444-3T(b)(4)(iii) for a special rule that may extend the due date for making a required payment when a partnership or S corporation makes a back-up section 444 election.

For an applicable election year beginning after 1987, the required payment is due and payable without assessment and notice on or before May 15 of the calendar year following the calendar year in which the applicable election year begins.

SECTION 280H

a. In general.

Section 280H applies to any taxable year that a personal service corporation (PSC) has a section 444 election in effect (an "applicable election year"). For purposes of section 280H, the term "personal service corporation" has the same meaning given such term in §1.441-4T(d).

If, for any applicable election year, a PSC does not satisfy the minimum distribution requirement of section 280H(c), the deduction otherwise allowable under chapter 1 of the Code for applicable amounts shall not exceed the maximum deductible amount. Any amount not allowed as a deduction in an applicable election year is allowed as a deduction in the succeeding taxable year.

Section 280H provides that the disallowance of deductions under section 280H shall not apply for purposes of subchapter G of chapter 1 of the Code (relating to personal holding companies). The temporary regulations clarify that the disallowance of deductions under section 280H does not apply for purposes of determining whether compensation to employee-owners is reasonable.

b. Applicable amount.

For purposes of section 280H, the term "applicable amount" means, with respect to a taxable year, any amount that is otherwise deductible by a PSC in such year and includible at any time, directly or indirectly, in the gross income of employee-owners. The temporary regulations clarify that an amount includible in the gross income of an employee-owner will be considered an applicable amount even though such employee owns no stock of the corporation on the date the employee included the amount in income.

In general, an amount is indirectly includible in the gross income of an employee-owner if the amount is includible in the gross income of a related party, as determined under §1.280H-1T(b)(4)(ii) of the temporary regulations.

c. Minimum distribution requirement.

A PSC meets the minimum distribution requirement for an applicable election year if, during the deferral period of such year, applicable amounts (not including excess applicable amounts carried over from the preceding year) for all employee-owners in the aggregate equal or exceed the lesser of the amount determined under the "preceding year test" or the amount determined under the "3-year average test" as described in paragraph (c) of §1.280H-1T.

The temporary regulations provide special rules for applying section 280H to newly organized personal service corporations and to existing corporations that become PSCs. A newly organized PSC is deemed to satisfy the preceding year test and the 3-year average test for the first year of the corporation's existence. If an existing corporation was not a PSC for each of the three years preceding the corporation's first applicable election year, the determination of whether the corporation satisfies the preceding year test and the three-year average test is made by treating the corporation as though it were a PSC for each of the three preceding years (or as many years as the corporation has been in existence).

d. Preceding year test.

The amount determined under the preceding year test is the product of (1) the applicable amounts during the taxable year preceding the applicable election year (the "preceding taxable year"), divided by the number of months in the preceding taxable year, multiplied by (2) the number of months in the deferral period of the preceding taxable year.

e. 3-year average test.

The amount determined under the 3-year average test is the applicable percentage multiplied by the adjusted taxable income for the deferral period of the applicable election year. The term "applicable percentage" means the percentage (not in excess of 95 percent) determined by dividing—

(1) The applicable amounts during the 3 taxable years of the corporation immediately preceding the applicable election year, by

(2) The adjusted taxable income of such corporation for such 3 taxable years.

The temporary regulations provide that if the PSC has been in existence less than 3 years, the 3-year average test is applied taking into account the years the corporation has been in existence.

f. Adjusted taxable income.

The temporary regulations define the term "adjusted taxable income" as taxable income determined without regard to applicable amounts. The temporary regulations provide that the adjusted taxable income for the deferral period of the applicable election year equals the adjusted taxable income that would result if the PSC filed an income tax return for the deferral period of the applicable election year under its normal methods of accounting. However, under the temporary regulations, a PSC may make a reasonable estimate of such amount.

For purposes of determining the adjusted taxable income for any period, the temporary regulations provide that any NOL carryover shall be reduced by the amount of such carryover that is attributable to the deduction of applicable amounts. The portion of the NOL carryover attributable to the deduction of applicable amounts is the difference between the NOL carryover computed with the deduction of such amounts and the NOL carryover computed without the deduction of such amounts. For purposes of determining the adjusted taxable income for the deferral period, an NOL carryover to the applicable election year, as reduced, shall be allowed first against the income of the deferral period.

g. Maximum deductible amount.

The term "maximum deductible amount" means the applicable amounts during the deferral period of the applicable election year, plus the product of (1) such applicable amounts divided by the number of months in the deferral period of the applicable election year, multiplied by (2) the number of months in the nondeferral period of the applicable election year. The term "nondeferral period" means the portion of the applicable election year that occurs after the portion of such year constituting the deferral period.

h. NOL carrybacks disallowed.

No net operating loss carryback is allowed to (or from) any taxable year of a PSC to which a section 444 election applies.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis therefore is not required. A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the temporary regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

The collection of information requirements contained in this regulation have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. These requirements have been approved by OMB under control number 1545-1036.

§1.444-1T Election to use a taxable year other than the required taxable year (temporary).

(a) General rules—(1) Year other than required year. Except as otherwise provided in this section and §1.444-2T, a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation (as defined in §1.441-4T(d)) may make or continue an election (a "section 444 election") to have a taxable year other than its required taxable year. See paragraph (b) of this section for limitations on the taxable year that may be elected. See §1.444-2T for rules that generally prohibit a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation that is a member of a tiered structure from making or continuing a section 444 election. See §1.444-3T for rules explaining how and when to make a section 444 election.

(2) Effect of section 444 election—(i) In general. A partnership or S corporation that makes or continues a section 444 election shall file returns and make payments as required by §§1.7519-1T and 1.7519-2T. A personal service corporation that makes or continues a section 444 election is subject to the deduction limitation of §1.280H-1T.

(ii) Duration of section 444 election. A section 444 election shall remain in effect until the election is terminated pursuant to paragraph (a)(5) of this section.

(3) Section 444 election not required for certain years. A partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation is not required to make a section 444 election to use—

(i) A taxable year for which such entity establishes a business purpose to the satisfaction of the Commissioner (i.e., approved under section 4 or 6 of Rev. Proc. 87-32, 1987-2 C.B. 396, or any successor revenue ruling or revenue procedure), or

(ii) A taxable year that is a "grandfathered fiscal year," within the meaning of section 5.01(2) of Rev. Proc. 87-32 or any successor revenue ruling or revenue procedure.

Although a partnership, S corporation or personal service corporation qualifies to use a taxable year described in paragraph (a)(3)(i) or (ii) of this section, such entity may, if otherwise qualified, make a section 444 election to use a different taxable year. Thus, for example, assume that a personal service corporation that historically used a January 31 taxable year established to the satisfaction of the Commissioner, under section 6 of Rev. Proc. 87-32, a business purpose to use a September 30 taxable year for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987. Pursuant to this paragraph (a)(3), such personal service corporation may use a September 30 taxable year without making a section 444 election. However, the corporation may, if otherwise qualified, make a section 444 election to use a year ending other than September 30 for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987.

(4) Required taxable year. For purposes of this section, the term "required taxable year" means the taxable year determined under section 706(b), 1378, or 441(i) without taking into account any taxable year which is allowable either—

(i) By reason of business purpose (i.e., approved under section 4 or 6 of Rev. Proc. 87-32 or any successor revenue ruling or procedure), or

(ii) As a "grandfathered fiscal year" within the meaning of section 5.01(2) of Rev. Proc. 87-32, or any successor revenue ruling or procedure.

(5) Termination of section 444 election—(i) In general. A section 444 election is terminated when—

(A) A partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation changes to its required taxable year; or

(B) A partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation liquidates (including a deemed liquidation of a partnership under §1.708-1(b)(1)(iv)); or

(C) A partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation willfully fails to comply with the requirements of section 7519 or 280H, whichever is applicable; or

(D) A partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation becomes a member of a tiered structure (within the meaning of §1.444-2T), unless it is a partnership or S corporation that meets the same taxable year exception under §1.444-2T(e); or

(E) An S corporation's S election is terminated; or

(F) A personal service corporation ceases to be a personal service corporation.

However, if a personal service corporation, that has a section 444 election in effect, elects to be an S corporation, the S corporation may continue the section 444 election of the personal service corporation. Similarly, if an S corporation that has a section 444 election in effect terminates its S election and immediately becomes a personal service corporation, the personal service corporation may continue the section 444 election of the S corporation. If a section 444 election is terminated under this paragraph (a)(5), the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation may not make another section 444 election for any taxable year.

(ii) Effective date of termination. A termination of a section 444 election shall be effective—

(A) In the case of a change to the required year, on the first day of the short year caused by the change;

(B) In the case of a liquidating entity, on the date the liquidation is completed for tax purposes;

(C) In the case of willful failure to comply, on the first day of the taxable year (determined as if a section 444 election had never been made) determined in the discretion of the District Director;

(D) In the case of membership in a tiered structure, on the first day of the taxable year in which the entity is considered to be a member of a tiered structure, or such other taxable year determined in the discretion of the District Director;

(E) In the case of termination of S status, on the first day of the taxable year for which S status no longer exists;

(F) In the case of a personal service corporation that changes status, on the first day of the taxable year, for which the entity is no longer a personal service corporation.

In the case of a termination under this paragraph (a)(5) that results in a short taxable year, an income tax return is required for the short period. In order to allow the Service to process the affected income tax return in an efficient manner, a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation that files such a short period return should type or legibly print at the top of the first page of the income tax return for the short taxable year—"SECTION 444 ELECTION TERMINATED." In addition, a personal service corporation that changes its taxable year to the required taxable year is required to annualize its income for the short period.

(iii) Example. The provisions of paragraph (a)(5)(ii) of this section may be illustrated by the following example.

Example. Assume a partnership that is 100 percent owned, at all times, by calendar year individuals has historically used a June 30 taxable year. Also assume the partnership makes a valid section 444 election to retain a year ending June 30 for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. However, for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1988, the partnership changes to a calendar year, its required year. Based on these facts, the partnership's section 444 election is terminated on July 1, 1988, and the partnership must file a short period return for the period July 1, 1988—December 31, 1988. Furthermore, pursuant to §1.702-3T(a)(1), the partners in such partnership are not entitled to a 4-year spread with respect to partnership items of income and expense for the taxable year beginning July 1, 1988 and ending December 31, 1988.

(iv) Special rule for entity that liquidates or is sold prior to making a section 444 election, required return, or required payment. A partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation that is liquidated or sold for tax purposes before a section 444 election, required return, or required payment is made for a particular year may, nevertheless, make or continue a section 444 election, if otherwise qualified. (See §§1.7519-2T(a)(2) and 1.7519-1T(a)(3), respectively, for a description of the required return and a definition of the term "required payment.") However, the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation (or a trustee or agent thereof) must comply with the requirements for making or continuing a section 444 election. Thus, if applicable, required payments must be made and a subsequent claim for refund must be made in accordance with §1.7519-2T(a)(6). The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (a)(5)(iv).

Example (1). Assume an existing S corporation historically used a June 30 taxable year and desires to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. Assume further that the S corporation is liquidated for tax purposes on February 15, 1988. If otherwise qualified, the S corporation (or a trustee or agent thereof) may make a section 444 election to have a taxable year beginning July 1, 1987, and ending February 15, 1988. However, if the S corporation makes a section 444 election, it must comply with the requirements for making a section 444 election, including making required payments.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that instead of liquidating on February 15, 1988, the shareholders of the S corporation sell their stock to a corporation on February 15, 1988. Thus, the corporation's S election is terminated on February 15, 1988. If otherwise qualified, the corporation may make a section 444 election to have a taxable year beginning July 1, 1987, and ending February 14, 1988.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (2), except that the new shareholders are individuals. Furthermore, the corporation's S election is not terminated. Based on these facts, the S corporation, if otherwise qualified, may make a section 444 election to retain a year ending June 30 for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. Furthermore, the S corporation may, if otherwise qualified, continue its section 444 election for subsequent taxable years.

(6) Re-activating certain S elections—(i) Certain corporations electing S status that did not make a back-up calendar year request. If a corporation that timely filed Form 2553, Election by a Small Business Corporation, effective for its first taxable year beginning in 1987—

(A) Requested a fiscal year based on business purpose,

(B) Did not agree to use a calendar year in the event its business purpose request was denied, and

(C) Such business purpose request is denied or withdrawn, such corporation may retroactively re-activate its S election by making a valid section 444 election for its first taxable year beginning in 1987 and complying with the procedures in paragraph (a)(6)(iii) of this section.

(ii) Certain corporations that revoked their S status. If a corporation that used a fiscal year revoked its S election (pursuant to section 1362(d)(1)) for its first taxable year beginning in 1987, such corporation may retroactively re-activate its S election (i.e., rescind its revocation) by making a valid section 444 election for its first taxable year beginning in 1987 and complying with the procedures in paragraph (a)(6)(iii) of this section.

(iii) Procedures for re-activating an S election. A corporation re-activating its S election pursuant to paragraph (a)(6)(i) or (ii) of this section must—

(A) Obtain the consents of all shareholders who have owned stock in the corporation since the first day of the first taxable year of the corporation beginning after December 31, 1986,

(B) Include the following statement at the top of the first page of the corporation's Form 1120S for its first taxable year beginning in 1987—"SECTION 444 ELECTION—RE-ACTIVATES S STATUS," and

(C) Include the following statement with Form 1120S—"RE-ACTIVATION CONSENTED TO BY ALL SHAREHOLDERS WHO HAVE OWNED STOCK AT ANY TIME SINCE THE FIRST DAY OF THE FIRST TAXABLE YEAR OF THIS CORPORATION BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1986."

(iv) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph (a)(6) may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). Assume a corporation historically used a June 30 taxable year and such corporation timely filed Form 2553, Election by a Small Business Corporation, to be effective for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. On its Form 2553, the corporation requested permission to retain its June 30 taxable year based on business purpose. However, the corporation did not agree to use a calendar year in the event its business purpose request was denied. On April 1, 1988, the Internal Revenue Service notified the corporation that its business purpose request was denied and therefore the corporation's S election was not effective. Pursuant to paragraph (a)(6)(i) of this section, the corporation may re-activate its S election by making a valid section 444 election and complying with the procedures in paragraph (a)(6)(iii) of this section.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that as of July 26, 1988, the Internal Revenue Service has not yet determined whether the corporation has a valid business purpose to retain a June 30 taxable year. Based on these facts, the corporation may, if otherwise qualified, make a back-up section 444 election as provided in §1.444-3T(b)(4). If the corporation's business purpose request is subsequently denied, the corporation should follow the procedures in §1.444-3T(b)(4)(iii) for activating a back-up section 444 election rather than the procedures provided in this paragraph (a)(6) for re-activating an S election.

Example (3). Assume a corporation has historically been an S corporation with a March 31 taxable year. However, for its taxable year beginning April 1, 1987, the corporation revoked its S election pursuant to section 1362(d)(1). Pursuant to paragraph (a)(6)(ii) of this section, such corporation may retroactively rescind its S election revocation by making a valid section 444 election for its taxable year beginning April 1, 1987, and complying with the procedures provided in paragraph (a)(6)(iii) of this section. If the corporation retroactively rescinds its S revocation, the corporation shall file a Form 1120S for its taxable year beginning April 1, 1987.

(b) Limitation on taxable years that may be elected—(1) General rule. Except as provided in paragraphs (b)(2) and (3) of this section, a section 444 election may be made only if the deferral period (as defined in paragraph (b)(4) of this section) of the taxable year to be elected is not longer than three months.

(2) Changes in taxable year—(i) In general. In the case of a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation changing its taxable year, such entity may make a section 444 election only if the deferral period of the taxable year to be elected is not longer than the shorter of—

(A) Three months, or

(B) The deferral period of the taxable year that is being changed, as defined in paragraph (b)(2)(iii) of this section.

(ii) Special rule for certain existing corporations electing S status. If a corporation with a taxable year other than the calendar year—

(A) Elected after September 18, 1986, and before January 1, 1988, under section 1362 of the Code to be an S corporation, and

(B) Elected to have the calendar year as the taxable year of the S corporation, then, for taxable years beginning before 1989, paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section shall be applied by taking into account the deferral period of the last taxable year of the corporation prior to electing to be an S corporation, rather than the deferral period of the taxable year that is being changed. Thus, the provisions of the preceding sentence do not apply to a corporation that elected to be an S corporation for its first taxable year.

(iii) Deferral period of the taxable year that is being changed. For purposes of paragraph (b)(2)(i)(B) of this section, the phrase "deferral period of the taxable year that is being changed" means the deferral period of the taxable year immediately preceding the taxable year for which the taxpayer desires to make a section 444 election. Furthermore, the deferral period of such year will be determined by using the required taxable year of the taxable year for which the taxpayer desires to make a section 444 election. For example, assume P, a partnership that has historically used a March 31 taxable year, desires to change to a September 30 taxable year by making a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning April 1, 1987. Furthermore, assume that pursuant to paragraph (a)(4) of this section, P's required taxable year for the taxable year beginning April 1, 1987 is a year ending December 31. Based on these facts, the deferral period of the taxable year being changed is nine months (the period from March 31 to December 31).

(iv) Examples. See paragraph (d)(1) of this section for examples that illustrate the provisions of this paragraph (b)(2).

(3) Special rule for entities retaining 1986 taxable year. Notwithstanding paragraph (b)(2) of this section, a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation may, for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, if otherwise qualified, make a section 444 election to have a taxable year that is the same as the entity's last taxable year beginning in 1986. See paragraph (d)(2) of this section for examples that illustrate the provisions of this paragraph (b)(3).

(4) Deferral period—(i) Retentions of taxable year. For a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation that desires to retain its taxable year by making a section 444 election, the term "deferral period" means the months between the beginning of such year and the close of the first required taxable year (as defined in paragraph (a)(4) of this section). The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (b)(4)(i).

Example. AB partnership has historically used a taxable year ending July 31. AB desires to retain its July 31 taxable year by making a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning August 1, 1987. Calendar year individuals, A and B, each own 50 percent of the profits and capital of AB; thus, under paragraph (a)(4) of this section AB's required taxable year is the year ending December 31. Pursuant to this paragraph (b)(4)(i), if AB desires to retain its year ending July 31, the deferral period is five months (the months between July 31 and December 31).

(ii) Adoptions of and changes in taxable year—(A) In general. For a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation that desires to adopt or change its taxable year by making a section 444 election, the term "deferral period" means the months that occur after the end of the taxable year desired under section 444 and before the close of the required taxable year.

(B) Special rule. If a partnership, S corporation or personal service corporation is using the required taxable year as its taxable year, the deferral period is deemed to be zero.

(C) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph (b)(4)(ii) may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). Assume that CD partnership has historically used the calendar year and that CD's required taxable year is the calendar year. Under the special rule provided in paragraph (b)(4)(ii)(B) of this section, CD's deferral period is zero. See paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section for rules that preclude CD from making a section 444 election to change its taxable year.

Example (2). E, a newly formed partnership, began operations on December 1, 1987, and is owned by calendar year individuals. E desires to make a section 444 election to adopt a September 30 taxable year. E's required taxable year is December 31. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(4)(ii)(A) of this section, E's deferral period for the taxable year beginning December 1, 1987, is three months (the number of months between September 30 and December 31).

Example (3). Assume that F, a personal service corporation, has historically used a June 30 taxable year. F desires to make a section 444 election to change to an August 31 taxable year, effective for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. For purposes of determining the availability of a section 444 election for changing to the taxable year ending August 31, the deferral period of an August 31 taxable year is four months (the number of months between August 31 and December 31). The deferral period for F's existing June 30 taxable year is six months (the number of months between June 30 and December 31). Pursuant to §1.444-1T(b)(2)(i), F may not make a section 444 election to change to an August 31 taxable year.

(5) Miscellaneous rules—(i) Special rule for determining the taxable year of a corporation electing S status. For purposes of this section, and only for purposes of this section, a corporation that elected to be an S corporation for a taxable year beginning in 1987 or 1988 and which elected to be an S corporation prior to September 26, 1988, will not be considered to have adopted or changed its taxable year by virtue of information included on Form 2553, Election by a Small Business Corporation. See example (8) in paragraph (d) of this section.

(ii) Special procedure for cases where an income tax return is superseded—(A) In general. In the case of a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation that filed an income tax return for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, but subsequently makes a section 444 election that would result in a different year end for such taxable year, the income tax return filed pursuant to the section 444 election will supersede the original return. However, any payments of income tax made with respect to such superseded return will be credited to the taxpayer's superseding return and the taxpayer may file a claim for refund for such payments. See examples (5) and (7) in paragraph (d)(2) of this section.

(B) Procedure for superseding return. In order to allow the Service to process the affected income tax returns in an efficient manner, a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation that desires to supersede an income tax return in accordance with paragraph (b)(5)(ii)(A) of this section, should type or legibly print at the top of the first page of the income tax return for the taxable year elected— "SECTION 444 ELECTION—SUPERSEDES PRIOR RETURN."

(iii) Anti-abuse rule—If an existing partnership, S corporation or personal service corporation ("predecessor entities"), or the owners thereof, transfer assets to a related party and the principal purpose of such transfer is to—

(A) Create a deferral period greater than the deferral period of the predecessor entity's taxable year, or

(B) Make a section 444 election following the termination of the predecessor entity's section 444 election,

then such transfer will be disregarded for purposes of section 444 and this section, even if the deferral created by such change is effectively eliminated by a required payment (within the meaning of section 7519) or deferral of a deduction (to a personal service corporation under section 280H). The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (b)(5)(iii).

Example. Assume that P1 is a partnership that historically used the calendar year and is owned by calendar year partners. Assume that P1 desires to make a section 444 election to change to a September year for the taxable year beginning January 1, 1988. P1 may not make a section 444 election to change taxable years under section 444(b)(2) because its current deferral period is zero. Assume further that P1 transfers a substantial portion of its assets to a newly-formed partnership (P2), which is owned by the partners of P1. Absent paragraph (b)(5)(iii) of this section, P2 could, if otherwise qualified, make a section 444 election under paragraph (b)(1) of this section to use a taxable year with a three month or less deferral period (i.e., a September 30, October 31, or November 30 taxable year). However, if the principal purpose of the asset transfer was to create a one-, two-, or three-month deferral period by P2 making a section 444 election, the section 444 election shall not be given effect, even if the deferral would be effectively eliminated by P2 making a required payment under section 7519.

(iv) Special rules for partial months and 52-53-week taxable years. Except as otherwise provided in §1.280H-1T(c)(2)(i)(A), for purposes of this section and §§1.7519-1T, 1.7519-2T and 1.280H-1T—

(A) A month of less than 16 days is disregarded, and a month of more than 15 days is treated as a full month; and

(B) A 52-53-week taxable year with reference to the end of a particular month will be considered to be the same as a taxable year ending with reference to the last day of such month.

(c) Effective date. This section is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

(d) Examples—(1) Changes in taxable year. The following examples illustrate the provisions of paragraph (b)(2) of this section.

Example (1). A is a personal service corporation that historically used a June 30 taxable year. A desires to make a section 444 election to change to an August 31 taxable year, effective with its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. Under paragraph (b)(4)(ii) of this section, the deferral period of the taxable year to be elected is four months (the number of months between August 31 and December 31). Furthermore, the deferral period of the taxable year that is being changed is six months (the number of months between June 30 and December 31). Pursuant to paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section, a taxpayer may, if otherwise qualified, make a section 444 election to change to a taxable year only if the deferral period of the taxable year to be elected is not longer than the shorter of three months or the deferral period of the taxable year being changed. Since the deferral period of the taxable year to be elected (August 31) is greater than three months, A may not make a section 444 election to change to the taxable year ending August 31. However, since the deferral period of the taxable year that is being changed is three months or more, A may, if otherwise qualified, make a section 444 election to change to a year ending September 30, 1987 (three-month deferral period), a year ending October 31, 1987 (two-month deferral period), or a year ending November 30, 1987 (one-month deferral period). In addition, instead of making a section 444 election to change its taxable year, A could, if otherwise qualified, make a section 444 election to retain its June year end, pursuant to paragraph (b)(3) of this section.

Example (2). B, a corporation that historically used an August 31 taxable year, elected on November 1, 1986 to be an S corporation for its taxable year beginning September 1, 1986. As a condition to having the S election accepted, B agreed on Form 2553 to use a calendar year. Pursuant to the general effective date provided in paragraph (c) of this section, B may not make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning in 1986. Thus, B must file a short period income tax return for the period September 1 to December 31, 1986.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (2), except that B desires to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1987. Absent paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of this section, B would not be allowed to change its taxable year because the deferral period of the taxable year being changed (i.e., the calendar year) is zero. However, pursuant to the special rule provided in paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of this section, B shall apply paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section by taking into account the deferral period of the last taxable year of B prior to B's election to be an S corporation (four months), rather than the deferral period of B's taxable year that is being changed (zero months). Thus, if otherwise qualified, B may make a section 444 election to change to a taxable year ending September 30, October 31, or November 30, for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1987.

Example (4). The facts are the same as in example (3), except that B files a calendar year income tax return for 1987 rather than making a section 444 election. However, for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1988, B desires to change its taxable year by making a section 444 election. Given that the special rule provided in paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of this section applies to section 444 elections made in taxable years beginning before 1989, B may, if otherwise qualified, make a section 444 election to change to a taxable year ending September 30, October 31, or November 30 for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1988.

Example (5). C, a corporation that historically used a June 30 taxable year, elected on December 15, 1986 to be an S corporation for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. As a condition to having the S election accepted, C agreed on Form 2553 to use a calendar year. Although pursuant to paragraph (b)(3) of this section, C would, if otherwise qualified, be allowed to retain its June 30 taxable year, C desires to change to a September 30 taxable year by making a section 444 election. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(2) of this section, a taxpayer may, if otherwise qualified, make a section 444 election to change to a taxable year only if the deferral period of the taxable year to be elected is not longer than the shorter of three months or the deferral period of the taxable year being changed. Given these facts, the deferral period of the taxable year to be elected is 3 months (September 30 to December 31) while the deferral period of the taxable year being changed is 6 months (June 30 to December 31). Thus, C may, if otherwise qualified, change to a September 30 taxable year for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987, by making a section 444 election. The fact that C agreed on Form 2553 to use a calendar year is not relevant.

Example (6). D, a corporation that historically used a March 31 taxable year, elects on June 1, 1988 to be an S corporation for its taxable year beginning April 1, 1988. D desires to change to a June 30 taxable year by making a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning April 1, 1988. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section, D may not change to a June 30 taxable year because such year would have a deferral period greater than 3 months. However, if otherwise qualified, D may make a section 444 election to change to a taxable year ending September 30, October 31, or November 30 for its taxable year beginning April 1, 1988.

Example (7). E, a corporation that began operations on November 1, 1986, elected to be an S corporation on December 15, 1986, for its taxable year beginning November 1, 1986. E filed a short period income tax return for the period November 1 to December 31, 1986. E desires to change to a September 30 taxable year by making a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1987. Although E elected to be an S corporation after September 18, 1986, and before January 1, 1988, paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of this section does not apply to E since E was not a C corporation prior to electing S status. Thus, E may not change its taxable year for the taxable year beginning January 1, 1987, by making a section 444 election.

Example (8). The facts are the same as in example (7), except that E began operations on April 15, 1987, and elected to be an S corporation on June 1, 1987, for its taxable year beginning April 15, 1987. As a condition to being an S corporation, E agreed on Form 2553 to use a calendar year. E desires to make a section 444 election to use a year ending September 30 for its taxable year beginning April 15, 1987. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(5)(i) of this section, E's agreement to use a calendar year on Form 2553 does not mean that E has adopted a calendar year. Thus, E's desire to make a section 444 election to use a September 30 taxable year will not be considered a change in taxable year and thus paragraph (b)(2) of this section will not apply. Instead, E will be subject to paragraph (b)(1) of this section. Since a September 30 taxable year would result in only a three-month deferral period (September 30 to December 31), E may, if otherwise qualified, make a section 444 election to use a year ending September 30 for its taxable year beginning April 15, 1987.

(2) Special rule for entities retaining their 1986 taxable year. The following examples illustrate the provisions of paragraph (b)(3) of this section.

Example (1). F, an S corporation that elected to be an S corporation several years ago, has historically used a June 30 taxable year. F desires to retain its June 30 taxable year by making a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(4)(i) of this section, the deferral period of the taxable year being retained is 6 months (June 30 to December 31, F's required taxable year). Absent the special rule provided in paragraph (b)(3) of this section, F would be subject to the general rule provided in paragraph (b)(1) of this section which limits the deferral period of the taxable year elected to three months or less. However, pursuant to paragraph (b)(3) of this section, F may, if otherwise qualified, make a section 444 election to retain its year ending June 30 for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that F received permission from the Commissioner to change its taxable year to the calendar year, and filed a short period income tax return for the period July 1 to December 31, 1986. F desires to make a section 444 election to use a year ending June 30 for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1987. Given that F had a December 31 taxable year for its last taxable year beginning in 1986, the special rule provided in paragraph (b)(3) of this section does not allow F to use a June 30 taxable year for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1987. Furthermore, pursuant to paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section, F is not allowed to change its taxable year from December 31 to June 30 because the deferral period of the taxable year being changed is zero months.

Example (3). G, a corporation that historically used an August 31 taxable year, elected to be an S corporation on November 15, 1986, for its taxable year beginning September 1, 1986. As a condition to obtaining S status, G agreed to use a calendar year. Thus, G filed its first S corporation return for the period September 1 to December 31, 1986. G desires to make a section 444 election to use a year ending August 31 for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1987. Since G's last taxable year beginning in 1986 was a calendar year, G cannot use paragraph (b)(3) of this section, relating to retentions of taxable years, to elect an August 31 taxable year. Thus, G is subject to paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section, relating to changes in taxable year. Although G, if otherwise qualified, may use the special rule provided in paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of this section, G may only change from its current taxable year (i.e., the calendar year) to a taxable year that has no more than a three-month deferral period (i.e., September 30, October 31, or November 30).

Example (4). The facts are the same as in example (3), except that G elected to be an S corporation for its taxable year beginning September 1, 1987, rather than its taxable year beginning September 1, 1986. As a condition to making its S election, G agreed, on Form 2553, to use the calendar year. However, G has not yet filed a short period income tax return for the period September 1 to December 31, 1987. Given these facts, paragraph (b)(3) of this section would allow G, if otherwise qualified, to make a section 444 election to retain an August 31 taxable year for its taxable year beginning September 1, 1987.

Example (5). The facts are the same as in example (4), except that G has already filed a short period income tax return for the period September 1 to December 31, 1987. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(5)(ii)(A) of this section, G may supersede the return it filed for the period September 1 to December 31, 1987. Thus, pursuant to paragraph (b)(3) of this section, G may, if otherwise qualified, make a section 444 election to retain an August 31 taxable year for the taxable year beginning September 1, 1987. In addition, G should follow the special procedures set forth in paragraph (b)(5)(ii)(B) of this section.

Example (6). H, a corporation that historically used a May 31 taxable year, elects to be an S corporation on June 15, 1988 for its taxable year beginning June 1, 1988. H desires to make a section 444 election to use a taxable year other than the calendar year. Since the taxable year in issue is not H's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, H may not use the special rule provided in paragraph (b)(3)(i) and thus may not retain its May 31 year. However, H may, if otherwise qualified, make a section 444 election under paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section, to change to a taxable year that has no more than a three-month deferral period (i.e., September 30, October 31, or November 30) for its taxable year beginning June 1, 1988.

Example (7). I is a partnership that has historically used a calendar year. Sixty percent of the profits and capital of I are owned by Q, a corporation (that is neither an S corporation nor a personal service corporation) that has a June 30 taxable year, and 40 percent of the profits and capital are owned by R, a calendar year individual. Since the partner that has more than a fifty percent interest in I has a June 30 taxable year, I's required taxable year is June 30. Accordingly, I filed an income tax return for the period January 1 to June 30, 1987. Based on these facts, I may, pursuant to paragraph (b)(5)(ii)(A) of this section, disregard the income tax return filed for the period January 1 to June 30, 1987. Thus, if otherwise qualified, I may make a section 444 election under paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section to use a calendar year for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1987. If I makes such a section 444 election, I should follow the special procedures set forth in paragraph (b)(5)(ii)(B) of this section.

§1.444-2T Tiered structure (temporary).

(a) General rule. Except as provided in paragraph (e) of this section, no section 444 election shall be made or continued with respect to a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation that is a member of a tiered structure on the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section. For purposes of this section, the term "personal service corporation" means a personal service corporation as defined in §1.441-4T(d).

(b) Definition of a member of a tiered structure—(1) In general. A partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation is considered a member of a tiered structure if—

(i) The partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation directly owns any portion of a deferral entity, or

(ii) A deferral entity directly owns any portion of the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation.

However, see paragraph (c) of this section for certain de minimis rules, and see paragraph (b)(3) of this section for an anti-abuse rule. In addition, for purposes of this section, a beneficiary of a trust shall be considered to own an interest in the trust.

(2) Deferral entity—(i) In general. For purposes of this section, the term "deferral entity" means an entity that is a partnership, S corporation, personal service corporation, or trust. In the case of an affiliated group of corporations filing a consolidated income tax return that is treated as a personal service corporation pursuant to §1.441-4T(i), such affiliated group is considered to be a single deferral entity.

(ii) Grantor trusts. The term "deferral entity" does not include a trust (or a portion of a trust) which is treated as owned by the grantor or beneficiary under Subpart E, part I, subchapter J, chapter 1, of the Code (relating to grantor trusts), including a trust that is treated as a grantor trust pursuant to section 1361(d)(1)(A) of the Code (relating to qualified subchapter S trusts). Thus, any taxpayer treated under subpart E as owning a portion of a trust shall be treated as owning the assets of the trust attributable to that ownership. The following examples illustrate the provisions of this paragraph (b)(2)(ii).

Example (1). A, an individual, is the sole beneficiary of T. T is a trust that owns 50 percent of the profits and capital of X, a partnership that desires to make a section 444 election. Furthermore, pursuant to Subpart E, Part I, subchapter J, chapter 1 of the Code, A is treated as an owner of X. Based upon these facts, T is not a deferral entity and 50 percent of X is considered to be directly owned by A.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that A is a personal service corporation rather than an individual. Given these facts, 50 percent of X is considered to be directly owned by A, a deferral entity. Thus, X is considered to be a member of a tiered structure.

(3) Anti-abuse rule. Notwithstanding paragraph (b)(1) of this section, a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation is considered a member of a tiered structure if the partnership, S corporation, personal service corporation, or related taxpayers have organized or reorganized their ownership structure or operations for the principal purpose of obtaining a significant unintended tax benefit from making or continuing a section 444 election. For purposes of the preceding sentence, a significant unintended tax benefit results when a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation makes a section 444 election and, as a result, a taxpayer (not limited to the entity making the election) obtains a significant deferral of income substantially all of which is not eliminated by a required payment under section 7519. See examples (15) through (19) in paragraph (f) of this section.

(c) De minimis rules—(1) In general. For rules relating to a de minimis exception to paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section (the "downstream de minimis rule"), see paragraph (c)(2) of this section. For rules relating to a de minimis exception to paragraph (b)(1)(ii) of this section (the "upstream de minimis rule"), see paragraph (c)(3) of this section. For rules relating to the interaction of the de minimis rules provided in this paragraph (c) and the "same taxable year exception" provided in paragraph (e) of this section, see paragraph (e)(5) of this section.

(2) Downstream de minimis rule—(i) General rule. If a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation directly owns any portion of one or more deferral entities as of the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section, such ownership is disregarded for purposes of paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section if, in the aggregate, all such deferral entities accounted for—

(A) Not more than 5 percent of the partnership's, S corporation's, or personal service corporation's adjusted taxable income for the testing period ("5 percent adjusted taxable income test"), or

(B) Not more than 2 percent of the partnership's, S corporation's, or personal service corporation's gross income for the testing period ("2 percent gross income test"). See section 702(c) for rules relating to the determination of gross income of a partner in a partnership. See examples (3) through (5) in paragraph (f) of this section.

(ii) Definition of testing period. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(2), the term "testing period" means the taxable year that ends immediately prior to the taxable year for which the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation desires to make or continue a section 444 election. However, see the special rules provided in paragraph (c)(2)(iv) of this section for certain special cases (e.g., the partnership, S corporation, personal service corporation or deferral entity was not in existence during the entire testing period). The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (c)(2)(ii).

Example. A partnership desires to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning November 1, 1987. The testing period for purposes of determining whether deferral entities owned by such partnerships are de minimis under paragraph (c)(2) of this section is the taxable year ending October 31, 1987. If either the partnership or the deferral entities were not in existence for the entire taxable year ending October 1, 1987, see the special rules provided in paragraph (c)(2)(iv) of this section.

(iii) Definition of adjusted taxable income—(A) Partnership. In the case of a partnership, adjusted taxable income for purposes of paragraph (c)(2) of this section is an amount equal to the sum of the—

(1) Aggregate amount of the partnership items described in section 702(a) (other than credits and tax-exempt income),

(2) Applicable payments defined in section 7519(d)(3) that are deducted in determining the amount described in paragraph (c)(2)(iii)(A)(1) of this section, and

(3) Guaranteed payments defined in section 707(c) that are deducted in determining the amount described in paragraph (c)(2)(iii)(A)(1) of this section and are not otherwise included in paragraph (c)(2)(iii)(A)(2) of this section. For purposes of determining the aggregate amount of partnership items under paragraph (c)(2)(iii)(A)(1) of this section, deductions and losses are treated as negative income. Thus, for example, if under section 702(a) a partnership has $1,000 of ordinary taxable income, $500 of specially allocated deductions, and $300 of capital loss, the partnership's aggregate amount of partnership items under paragraph (c)(2)(iii)(A)(1) of this section is $200 ($1,000 − $500 − $300).

(B) S corporation. In the case of an S corporation, adjusted taxable income for purposes of paragraph (c)(2) of this section is an amount equal to the sum of the—

(1) Aggregate amount of the S corporation items described in section 1366(a) (other than credits and tax-exempt income), and

(2) Applicable payments defined in section 7519(d)(3) that are deducted in determining the amount described in paragraph (c)(2)(iii)(B)(1) of this section. For purposes of determining the aggregate amount of S corporation items under paragraph (c)(2)(iii)(B)(1) of this section, deductions and losses are treated as negative income. Thus, for example, if under section 1366(a) an S corporation has $2,000 of ordinary taxable income, $1,000 of deductions described in section 1366(a)(1)(A) of the Code, and $500 of capital loss, the S corporation's aggregate amount of S corporation items under paragraph (c)(2)(iii)(B)(1) of this section is $500 ($2,000 – $1,000 – $500).

(C) Personal service corporation. In the case of a personal service corporation, adjusted taxable income for purposes of paragraph (c)(2) of this section is an amount equal to the sum of the—

(1) Taxable income of the personal service corporation, and

(2) Applicable amounts defined in section 280H(f)(1) that are deducted in determining the amount described in paragraph (c)(2)(iii)(C)(1) of this section.

(iv) Special rules—(A) Pro-forma rule. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(iv)(C)(2) of this section, if a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation directly owns any interest in a deferral entity as of the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section and such ownership interest is different in amount from the partnership's, S corporation's, or personal service corporation's interest on any day during the testing period, the 5 percent adjusted taxable income test and the 2 percent gross income test must be applied on a pro-forma basis (i.e., adjusted taxable income and gross income must be calculated for the testing period assuming that the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation owned the same interest in the deferral entity that it owned as of the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section). The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (c)(2)(iv)(A).

Example. A personal service corporation desiring to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987, acquires a 25 percent ownership interest in a partnership on or after October 1, 1987. Furthermore, the partnership has been in existence for several years. The personal service corporation must modify its calculations of the 5 percent adjusted taxable income test and the 2 percent gross income test for the testing period ended September 30, 1987, by assuming that the personal service corporation owned 25 percent of the partnership during such testing period and the personal service corporation's adjusted taxable income and gross income were correspondingly adjusted.

(B) Reasonable estimates allowed. If the information necessary to complete the pro-forma calculation described in paragraph (c)(2)(iv)(A) of this section is not readily available, the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation may make a reasonable estimate of such information.

(C) Newly formed entities—(1) Newly formed deferral entities. If a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation owns any portion of a deferral entity on the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section and such deferral entity was not in existence during the entire testing period (hereinafter referred to as a "newly formed deferral entity"), both the 5 percent adjusted taxable income test and the 2 percent gross income test are modified as follows. First, the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation shall calculate the percentage of its adjusted taxable income or gross income that is attributable to deferral entities, excluding newly formed deferral entities. Second, the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation shall calculate (on the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section) the percentage of the tax basis of its assets that are attributable to its tax basis with respect to its ownership interests in all newly formed deferral entities. If the sum of the two percentages is 5 percent or less, the deferral entities are considered de minimis and are disregarded for purposes of paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section. If the sum of the two percentages is greater than 5 percent, the deferral entities do not qualify for the de minimis rule provided in paragraph (c)(2) of this section and thus the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation is considered to be a member of a tiered structure for purposes of this section.

(2) Newly formed partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation desiring to make a section 444 election. If a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation desires to make a section 444 election for the first taxable year of its existence, the 5 percent adjusted taxable income test and the 2 percent gross income test are replaced by a 5 percent of assets test. Thus, if on the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section, 5 percent or less of the assets (measured by reference to the tax basis of the assets) of the newly formed partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation are attributable to the tax basis with respect to its ownership interests in the deferral entities, the deferral entities will be considered de minimis and will be disregarded for purposes of paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section.

(3) Upstream de minimis rule. If a partnership, S corporation or personal service corporation is directly owned by one or more deferral entities as of the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section, such ownership is disregarded for purposes of paragraph (b)(1)(ii) of this section if on the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section the deferral entities directly own, in the aggregate, 5 percent or less of—

(i) An interest in the current profits of the partnership, or

(ii) The stock (measured by value) of the S corporation or personal service corporation.

See examples (6) and (7) in paragraph (f) of this section.

(d) Date for determining the existence of a tiered structure—(1) General rule. For purposes of paragraph (a) of this section, a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation will be considered a member of a tiered structure for a particular taxable year if the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation is a member of a tiered structure on the last day of the required taxable year (as defined in section 444(e) of the Code) ending within such year. If a particular taxable year does not include the last day of the required taxable year for such year, the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation will not be considered a member of a tiered structure for such year. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (d)(1).

Example (1). Assume that a newly formed partnership whose first taxable year begins November 1, 1988, desires to adopt a September 30 taxable year by making a section 444 election. Furthermore, assume that for its taxable year beginning November 1, 1988, the partnership's required taxable year is December 31. If the partnership is a member of a tiered structure on December 31, 1988, it will not be eligible to make a section 444 election for a taxable year beginning November 1, 1988, and ending September 30, 1989.

Example (2). Assume an S corporation that historically used a June 30 taxable year desires to make a section 444 election to change to a year ending September 30 for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. If the S corporation can make the section 444 election, it will have a short taxable year beginning July 1, 1987, and ending September 30, 1987. Given these facts, the short taxable year beginning July 1, 1987, does not include the last day of the S corporation's required taxable year for such year (i.e., December 31, 1987). Thus, pursuant to paragraph (d)(1) of this section, the S corporation will not be considered a member of a tiered structure for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987, and ending September 30, 1987.

(2) Special rule for taxable years beginning in 1987. For purposes of paragraph (a) of this section, a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation will not be considered a member of a tiered structure for a taxable year beginning in 1987 if the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation is not a member of a tiered structure on the day the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation timely files its section 444 election for such year. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (d)(2).

Example (1). Assume that a partnership desires to retain a June 30 taxable year by making a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. Furthermore, assume that the partnership's required taxable year for such year is December 31 and that the partnership was a member of a tiered structure on such date. Also assume that the partnership was not a member of a tiered structure as of the date it timely filed its section 444 election for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. Based upon the special rule provided in this paragraph (d)(2), the partnership will not be considered a member of a tiered structure for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987.

Example (2). Assume the same facts as in example (1), except that the partnership was a member of a tiered structure on the date it filed its section 444 election for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987, but was not a member of a tiered structure on December 31, 1987. Paragraph (d)(1) of this section would still apply and thus the partnership would not be considered part of a tiered structure for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. However, the partnership would be considered a member of a tiered structure for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1988, if the partnership was a member of a tiered structure on December 31, 1988.

(e) Same taxable year exception—(1) In general. Although a partnership or S corporation is a member of a tiered structure as of the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section, the partnership or S corporation may make or continue a section 444 election if the tiered structure (as defined in paragraph (e)(2) of this section) consists entirely of partnerships or S corporations (or both), all of which have the same taxable year as determined under paragraph (e)(3) of this section. However, see paragraph (e)(5) of this section for the interaction of the de minimis rules provided in paragraph (c) of this section with the same taxable year exception. For purposes of this paragraph (e), two or more entities are considered to have the same taxable year if their taxable years end on the same day, even though they begin on different days. See examples (8) through (14) in paragraph (f) of this section.

(2) Definition of tiered structure—(i) General rule. For purposes of the same taxable year exception, the members of a tiered structure are defined to include the following entities—

(A) The partnership or S corporation that desires to quality for the same taxable year exception,

(B) A deferral entity (or entities) directly owned (in whole or in part) by the partnership or S corporation that desires to qualify for the same taxable year exception,

(C) A deferral entity (or entities) directly owning any portion of the partnership or S corporation that desires to qualify for the same taxable year exception, and

(D) A deferral entity (or entities) directly owned (in whole or in part) by a "downstream controlled partnership," as defined in paragraph (e)(2)(ii) of this section.

(ii) Special flow-through rule for downstream controlled partnerships. If more than 50 percent of a partnership's profits and capital are owned by a partnership or S corporation that desires to qualify for the same taxable year exception, such owned partnership is considered a downstream controlled partnership for purposes of paragraph (e)(2)(i) of this section. Furthermore, if more than 50 percent of a partnership's profits and capital are owned by a downstream controlled partnership, such owned partnership is considered a downstream controlled partnership for purposes of paragraph (e)(2)(i) of this section.

(3) Determining the taxable year of a partnership or S corporation. The taxable year of a partnership or S corporation to be taken into account for purposes of paragraph (e)(1) of this section is the taxable year ending with or prior to the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section. Furthermore, the determination of such taxable year will take into consideration any section 444 elections made by the partnership or S corporation. See examples (10) and (11) in paragraph (f) of this section.

(4) Special rule for 52-53-week taxable years. For purposes of this paragraph (e), a 52-53-week taxable year with reference to the end of the particular month will be considered to be the same as a taxable year ending with reference to the last day of such month.

(5) Interaction with de minimis rules—(i) Downstream de minimis rule—(A) In general. If a partnership or S corporation that desires to make or continue a section 444 election is a member of a tiered structure (as defined in paragraph (e)(2) of this section) and directly owns any member (or members) of the tiered structure with a taxable year different from the taxable year of the partnership or S corporation, such ownership is disregarded for purposes of the same taxable year exception of paragraph (e)(1) of this section provided that, in the aggregate, the de minimis rule of paragraph (c)(2) of this section is satisfied with respect to such owned member (or members). The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (e)(5)(i)(A).

Example. P, a partnership with a June 30 taxable year, owns 60 percent of P1, another partnership with a June 30 taxable year. P also owns 1 percent of P2 and P3, calendar year partnerships. If, in the aggregate, P's ownership interests in P2 and P3 are considered de minimis under paragraph (c)(2) of this section, P meets the same taxable year exception and may make a section 444 election to retain its June 30 taxable year.

(B) Special rule for members of a tiered structure directly owned by a downstream controlled partnership. For purposes of paragraph (e)(5)(i)(A) of this section, a partnership or S corporation desiring to make or continue a section 444 election is considered to directly own any member of the tiered structure (as defined in paragraph (e)(2) of this section) directly owned by a downstream controlled partnership (as defined in paragraph (e)(2)(ii) of this section). The adjusted taxable income or gross income of the partnership or S corporation that is attributable to a member of a tiered structure directly owned by a downstream controlled partnership equals the adjusted taxable income or gross income of such member multiplied by the partnership's or S corporation's indirect ownership percentage of such member. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (e)(5)(i)(B).

Example. P, a partnership, desires to retain its June 30 taxable year by making a section 444 election. However, as of the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section, P owns 75 percent of P1, a June 30 partnership, and P1 owns 40 percent of P2, a calendar year partnership. P also owns 25 percent of P3, a calendar year partnership. Pursuant to paragraphs (e)(5)(i)(A) and (B) of this section, P may only qualify to use the same taxable year exception if, in the aggregate, P2 and P3 are de minimis with respect to P. Pursuant to paragraph (e)(5)(i)(B) of this section, P's adjusted taxable income or gross income attributable to P2 equals 30 percent (75 percent times 40 percent) of P2's adjusted taxable income or gross income.

(ii) Upstream de minimis rule. If a partnership or S corporation that desires to make or continue a section 444 election is a member of a tiered structure (as defined in paragraph (e)(2) of this section) and is owned directly by a member (or members) of the tiered structure with taxable years different from the taxable year of the partnership or S corporation, such ownership is disregarded for purposes of the same taxable year exception of paragraph (e)(1) of this section provided that, in the aggregate, the de minimis rule of paragraph (c)(3) of this section is satisfied with respect to such owning member (or members). See example (12) of paragraph (f) of this section.

(f) Examples. The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). A, a partnership, desires to make or continue a section 444 election. However, on the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section, A is owned by a combination of individuals and S corporations. The S corporations are deferral entities, as defined in paragraph (b)(2) of this section. Thus, pursuant to paragraph (b)(1)(ii) of this section, A will be a member of a tiered structure unless under paragraph (c)(3) of this section, the S corporations, in the aggregate, own a de minimis portion of A. If the S corporations' ownership in A is not considered de minimis under paragraph (c)(3) of this section, A is a member of a tiered structure and will be allowed to make or continue a section 444 election only if it meets the same taxable year exception provided in paragraph (e) of this section.

Example (2). B, a partnership, desires to make or continue a section 444 election. However, on the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section, B is a partner in two partnerships, B1 and B2. B1 and B2 are deferral entities, as defined in paragraph (b)(2) of this section. Thus, under paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section, B will be a member of a tiered structure unless B's aggregate ownership interests in B1 and B2 are considered de minimis under paragraph (c)(2) of this section. If B is a member of a tiered structure on the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section, B will be allowed to make or continue a section 444 election only if it meets the same taxable year exception provided in paragraph (e) of this section.

Example (3). C, a partnership with a September 30 taxable year, is 100 percent owned by calendar year individuals. C desires to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. However, on the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section, C owns a 1 percent interest in C1, a partnership. C does not own any other interest in a deferral entity. For the taxable year ended September 30, 1987, 10 percent of C's adjusted taxable income (as defined in paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section) was attributable to C's partnership interest in C1. Furthermore, 4 percent of C's gross income for the taxable year ended September 30, 1987, was attributable to C's partnership interest in C1. Under paragraph (c)(2) of this section, C's partnership interest in C1 is not de minimis because during the testing period more than 5 percent of C's adjusted taxable income is attributable to C1 and more than 2 percent of C's gross income is attributable to C1. Thus, C is a member of a tiered structure for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (4). The facts are the same as example (3), except that for the taxable year ended September 30, 1987, only 2 percent of C's adjusted taxable income was attributable to C1. Under paragraph (c)(2) of this section, C's partnership interest in C1 is considered de minimis for purposes of determining whether C is a member of a tiered structure because not more than 5 percent of C's adjusted taxable income during the testing period is attributable to C1. Thus, C is not a member of a tiered structure for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (5). The facts are the same as example (4), except that in addition to owning C1, C also owns 15 percent of C2, another partnership. For the taxable year ended September 30, 1987, 2 percent of C's adjusted taxable income is attributable to C1 and an additional 4 percent is attributable to C2. Furthermore, for the taxable year ended September 30, 1987, 4 percent of C's gross income is attributable to C1 while 3 percent is attributable to C2. Under paragraph (c)(2) of this section, C1 and C2 must be aggregated for purposes of determining whether C meets either the 5 percent adjusted taxable income test or the 2 percent gross income test. Since C's adjusted taxable income attributable to C1 and C2 is 6 percent (2 percent + 4 percent) and C's gross income attributable to C1 and C2 is 7 percent (4 percent + 3 percent), C does not meet the downstream de minimis rule provided in paragraph (c)(2) of this section. Thus, C is a member of a tiered structure for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (6). The facts are the same as example (3), except that instead of determining whether C is part of a tiered structure, the issue is whether C1 is part of a tiered structure. In addition, assume that on the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section, the remaining 99 percent of C1 is owned by calendar year individuals and C1 does not own an interest in any deferral entity. Although C in Example (3) was considered to be a part of a tiered structure by virtue of its ownership interest in C1, C1 must be tested separately to determine whether it is part of a tiered structure. Since C's interest in C1 is 5 percent or less, C's interest in C1 is de minimis with respect to C1. See paragraph (c)(3) of this section. Thus, based upon these facts, C1 is not part of a tiered structure.

Example (7). The facts are the same as example (6), except that the remaining 99 percent of C1 is owned 94 percent by calendar year individuals and 5 percent by C3, another partnership. Thus, deferral entities own 6 percent of C1 (1 percent owned by C and 5 percent owned by C3). Under paragraph (c)(3) of this section, deferral entities own more than a de minimis interest (i.e. 5 percent) of C1, and thus C1 is part of a tiered structure.

Example (8). D, a partnership with a September 30 taxable year, desires to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. On December 31, 1987, and the date D plans to file its section 444 election, D is 10 percent owned by D1, a personal service corporation with a September 30 taxable year, and 90 percent owned by calendar year individuals. Furthermore, D1 will retain its September 30 taxable year because it previously established a business purpose for such year. Since D is owned in part by D1, a personal service corporation, and the ownership interest is not de minimis under paragraph (c)(3) of this section, D is considered a member of a tiered structure for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. Furthermore, although D and D1 have the same taxable year, D does not qualify for the same taxable year exception provided in paragraph (e) of this section because D1 is a personal service corporation rather than a partnership or S corporation. Thus, pursuant to paragraph (a) of this section, D may not make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (9). The facts are the same as example (8), except that D1 is a partnership rather than a personal service corporation. Based upon these facts, D qualifies for the same taxable year exception provided in paragraph (e) of this section. Thus, D may make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (10). The facts are the same as example (9), except that D1 has not established a business purpose for a September 30 taxable year. In addition, D1 does not desire to make a section 444 election and, under section 706(b), D1 will be required to change to a calendar year for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. Pursuant to paragraph (e)(3) of this section, D and D1 do not have the same taxable year for purposes of the same taxable year exception provided in paragraph (e) of this section. Thus, D may not make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (11). The facts are the same as example (8), except that D1 is a partnership with a March 31 taxable year. Furthermore, for its taxable year beginning April 1, 1987, D1 will change to a September 30 taxable year by making a section 444 election. Pursuant to paragraph (e)(3) of this section, D1 is considered to have a September 30 taxable year for purposes of determining whether D qualifies for the same taxable year exception provided in paragraph (e) of this section. Since both D and D1 will have the same taxable year as of the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section, D may make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (12). The facts are the same as example (11), except that instead of the remaining 90 percent of D being owned by calendar year individuals, it is owned 86 percent by individuals and 4 percent by D2, a calendar year partnership. Thus, D, a September 30 partnership, is 10 percent owned by D1, a September 30 partnership, 86 percent owned by calendar year individuals, and 4 percent owned by D2, a calendar year partnership. Under paragraph (e)(5)(ii) of this section, D2's ownership interest in D is considered de minimis for purposes of the same taxable year exception. Since D2's ownership interest in D is considered de minimis, it is disregarded for purposes of determining whether D qualifies for the same taxable year exception provided in paragraph (e) of this section. Thus, since both D and D1 will have the same taxable year as of the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section, D may make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987.

Example (13). E, a partnership with a June 30 taxable year, desires to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. On the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section, E is 100 percent owned by calendar year individuals; E owns 99 percent of the profits and capital of E1, a partnership with a June 30 taxable year; and E1 owns 30 percent of the profits and capital of E2, a partnership with a September 30 taxable year. E owns no other deferral entities. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section, E is considered to be a member of a tiered structure. Furthermore, pursuant to paragraph (e) of this section, E does not qualify for the same taxable year exception because E2 does not have the same taxable year as E and E1.

Example (14). The facts are the same as example (13), except that E owns only 49 percent (rather than 99 percent) of the profits and capital of E1. Pursuant to paragraph (e) of this section, E qualifies for the same taxable year exception because E and E1 have the same taxable year. Pursuant to paragraph (e) of this section, E1's ownership interest in E2 is disregarded since E does not own more than 50 percent of E1's profits and capital.

Example (15). Prior to consideration of the anti-abuse rule provided in paragraph (b)(3) of this section, H, a partnership that commenced operations on October 1, 1987, is eligible to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. Although H may obtain a significant deferral of income substantially all of which is not eliminated by a required payment under section 7519 (since there will be no required payment for H's first taxable year), the anti-abuse rule of paragraph (b)(3) will not apply unless the principal purpose of organizing H was the attainment of a significant deferral of income that would result from making a section 444 election.

Example (16). F, a partnership with a January 31 taxable year, desires to make a section 444 election to retain its January 31 taxable year for the taxable year beginning February 1, 1987. F is 100 percent owned by calendar year individuals. Prior to the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section, F contributes substantially all of its assets to F1, a partnership, in exchange for a 51 percent interest in F1. The remaining 49 percent of F1 is owned by the calendar year individuals owning 100 percent of F. If F is allowed to make a section 444 election to retain its January 31 taxable year, F1's required taxable year will be January 31 since a majority of F1's partners use a January 31 taxable year (see §1.706-3T). F's principal purpose for creating F1 and contributing its assets to F1 is to obtain an 11-month deferral on 49 percent of the income previously earned by F and now earned by F1. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(3) of this section, F is not allowed to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987.

Example (17). The facts are the same as in example (16), except that F does not create F1 and contribute its assets to F1 until immediately after F makes its section 444 election for the taxable year beginning February 1, 1987. Thus, F is allowed to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987. However, pursuant to paragraph (b)(3) of this section, F will have its section 444 election terminated for subsequent years unless the tax deferral inherent in the structure is eliminated (e.g., F1 is liquidated or the individual owners of F contribute their interests in F1 to F) prior to the date specified in paragraph (d) of this section for subsequent taxable years beginning on or after February 1, 1988.

Example (18). The facts are the same as in example (16), except that F1 is 99 percent owned by F and none of the individual owners of F own any portion of F1. Furthermore, F obtained no tax benefit from creating and contributing assets to F1. Given these facts paragraph (b(93) of this section does not apply and thus, F may make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987.

Example (19). G, a partnership with an October 31 taxable year, desires to retain its October 31 taxable year for its taxable year beginning November 1, 1987. However, as of December 31, 1987, G owns a 30 percent interest in G1, a calendar year partnership. G owns no other deferral entity, and G is 100 percent owned by calendar year individuals. Furthermore, G's interest in G1 does not meet the de minimis rule provided in paragraph (c)(3) of this section. Thus, in order to avoid being a tiered structure, G sells its interest in G1 to an unrelated third party prior to the date G timely makes it section 444 election for its taxable year beginning November 1, 1987. Although the sale of G1 allows G to qualify to make a section 444 election, and therefore to obtain a significant tax benefit, such benefit is not unintended. Thus, paragraph (b)(3) of this section does not apply, and G may make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning November 1, 1987.

(g) Effective date. This section is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

§1.444-3T Manner and time of making section 444 election (temporary).

(a) In general. A section 444 election shall be made in the manner and at the time provided in this section.

(b) Manner and time of making election—(1) General rule. A section 444 election shall be made by filing a properly prepared Form 8716, "Election to Have a Tax

Year Other Than a Required Tax Year," with the Service Center indicated by the instructions to Form 8716. Except as provided in paragraphs (b)(2) and (4) of this section, Form 8716 must be filed by the earlier of—

(i) The 15th day of the fifth month following the month that includes the first day of the taxable year for which the election will first be effective, or

(ii) The due date (without regard to extensions) of the income tax return resulting from the section 444 election.

In addition, a copy of Form 8716 must be attached to Form 1065 or Form 1120 series form, whichever is applicable, for the first taxable year for which the section 444 election is made. Form 8716 shall be signed by any person who is authorized to sign Form 1065 or Form 1120 series form, whichever is applicable. (See sections 6062 and 6063, relating to the signing of returns). The provisions of this paragraph (b)(1) may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). A, a partnership that began operations on September 10, 1988, is qualified to make a section 444 election to use a September 30 taxable year for its taxable year beginning September 10, 1988. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(1) of this section, A must file Form 8716 by the earlier of the 15th day of the fifth month following the month that includes the first day of the taxable year for which the election will first be effective (i.e., February 15, 1989) or the due date (without regard to extensions) of the partnership's tax return for the period September 10, 1988 to September 30, 1988 (i.e., January 15, 1989). Thus, A must file Form 8716 by January 15, 1989.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that A began operations on October 20, 1988. Based upon these facts, A must file Form 8716 by March 15, 1989, the 15th day of the fifth month following the month that includes the first day of the taxable year for which the election will first be effective.

Example (3). B is a corporation that first becomes a personal service corporation for its taxable year beginning September 1, 1988. B qualifies to make a section 444 election to use a September 30 taxable year for its taxable year beginning September 1, 1988. Pursuant to this paragraph (b)(1), B must file Form 8716 by December 15, 1988, the due date of the income tax return for the short period September 1 to September 30, 1988.

(2) Special extension of time for making an election. If, pursuant to paragraph (b)(1) of this section, the due date for filing Form 8716 is prior to July 26, 1988, such date is extended to July 26, 1988. The provisions of this paragraph (b)(2) may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). B, a partnership that historically used a June 30 taxable year, is qualified to make a section 444 election to retain a June 30 taxable year for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. Absent paragraph (b)(2) of this section, B would be required to file Form 8716 by December 15, 1987. However, pursuant to paragraph (b)(2) of this section, B's due date for filing Form 8716 is extended to July 26, 1988.

Example (2). C, a partnership that began operations on January 20, 1988, is qualified to make a section 444 election to use a year ending September 30 for its taxable year beginning January 20, 1988. Absent paragraph (b)(2) of this section, C is required to file Form 8716 by June 15, 1988 (the 15th day of the fifth month following the month that includes the first day of the taxable year for which the election will first be effective). However, pursuant to paragraph (b)(2) of this section, the due date for filing Form 8716 is July 26, 1988.

(3) Corporation electing to be an S corporation—(i) In general. A corporation electing to be an S corporation is subject to the same time and manner rules for filing Form 8716 as any other taxpayer making a section 444 election. Thus, a corporation electing to be an S corporation that desires to make a section 444 election is not required to file Form 8716 with its Form 2553, "Election by a Small Business Corporation." However, a corporation electing to be an S corporation after September 26, 1988, is required to state on Form 2553 its intention to—

(A) Make a section 444 election, if qualified, or

(B) Make a "back-up section 444 election" as described in paragraph (b)(4) of this section.

If a corporation electing to be an S corporation fails to state either of the above intentions, the District Director may, at his discretion, disregard any section 444 election for such taxpayer.

(ii) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph (b)(3) may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). D is a corporation that commences operations on October 1, 1988, and elects to be an S corporation for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1988. All of D's shareholders use the calendar year as their taxable year. D desires to adopt a September 30 taxable year. D does not believe it has a business purpose for a September 30 taxable year and thus it must make a section 444 election to use such year. Based on these facts, D must, pursuant to the instructions to Form 2553, state on Form 2553 that, if qualified, it will make a section 444 election to adopt a year ending September 30 for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1988. If D is qualified (i.e., D is not a member of a tiered structure on December 31, 1988) to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1988, D must file Form 8716 by March 15, 1989. If D ultimately is not qualified to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1988, D's election to be an S corporation will not be effective unless, pursuant to the instructions to Form 2553, D made a back-up calendar year election (i.e., an election to adopt the calendar year in the event D ultimately is not qualified to make a section 444 election for such year).

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that D believes it can establish, to the satisfaction of the Commissioner, a business purpose for adopting a September 30 taxable year. However, D desires to make a "back-up section 444 election" (see paragraph (b)(4) of this section) in the event that the Commissioner does not grant permission to adopt a September 30 taxable year based upon business purpose. Based on these facts, D must, pursuant to the instructions to Form 2553, state on Form 2553 its intention, if qualified, to make a back-up section 444 election to adopt a September 30 taxable year. If, by March 15, 1989, D has not received permission to adopt a September 30 taxable year and D is qualified to make a section 444 election, D must make a back-up election in accordance with paragraph (b)(4) of this section.

(4) Back-up section 444 election—(i) General rule. A taxpayer that has requested (or is planning to request) permission to use a particular taxable year based upon business purpose, may, if otherwise qualified, file a section 444 election (referred to as a "back-up section 444 election"). If the Commissioner subsequently denies the business purpose request, the taxpayer will, if otherwise qualified, be required to activate the back-up section 444 election. See examples (1) and (2) in paragraph (b)(4)(iv) of this section.

(ii) Procedures for making a back-up section 444 election. In addition to following the general rules provided in this section, a taxpayer making a back-up section 444 election should, in order to allow the Service to process the affected returns in an efficient manner, type or legibly print the words "BACK-UP ELECTION" at the top of Form 8716, "Election to Have a Tax Year Other Than a Required Tax Year." However, if such Form 8716 is filed on or after the date a Form 1128, Application for Change in Accounting Period, is filed with respect to a period that begins on the same date, the words "FORM 1128 BACK-UP ELECTION" should be typed or legibly printed at the top of Form 8716.

(iii) Procedures for activating a back-up section 444 election—(A) Partnerships and S corporations—(1) In general. A back-up section 444 election made by a partnership or S corporation is activated by filing the return required in §1.7519-2T(a)(2)(i) and making the payment required in §1.7519-1T. The due date for filing such return and payment will be the later of—

(i) The due dates provided in §1.7519-2T, or

(ii) 60 days from the date the Commissioner denies the business purpose request.

However, interest will be assessed (at the rate provided in section 6621(a)(2)) on any required payment made after the due date (without regard to any extension for a back-up election) provided in §1.7519-2T(a)(4)(i) or (a)(4)(ii), whichever is applicable, for such payment. Interest will be calculated from such due date to the date such amount is actually paid. Interest assessed under this paragraph will be separate from any required payments. Thus, interest will not be subject to refund under §1.7519-2T.

(2) Special rule if Form 720 used to satisfy return requirement. If, pursuant to §1.7519-2T(a)(3), a partnership or S corporation must use Form 720, "Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return," to satisfy the return requirement of §1.7519-2T (a)(2), then in addition to following the general rules provided in §1.7519-2T, the partnership or S corporation must type or legibly print the words "ACTIVATING BACK-UP ELECTION" on the top of Form 720. A partnership or S corporation that would otherwise file a Form 720 on or before the date specified in paragraph (b)(4)(iii)(A)(1) of this section may satisfy the return requirement by including the necessary information on such Form 720. Alternatively, such partnership or S corporation may file an additional Form 720 (i.e., a Form 720 separate from the Form 720 it would otherwise file). Thus, for example, if the due date for activating an S corporation's back-up election is November 15, 1988, and the S corporation must file a Form 720 by October 31, 1988, to report manufacturers excise tax for the third quarter of 1988, the S corporation may use that Form 720 to activate its back-up election. Alternatively, the S corporation may file its regular Form 720 that is due October 31, 1988, and file an additional Form 720 by November 15, 1988, activating its back-up election.

(B) Personal service corporations. A back-up section 444 election made by a personal service corporation is activated by filing Form 8716 with the personal service corporation's original or amended income tax return for the taxable year in which the election is first effective, and typing or legibly printing the words—"ACTIVATING BACK-UP ELECTION" on the top of such income tax return.

(iv) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph (b)(4) may be illustrated by the following examples. Also see example (2) in paragraph (b)(3) of this section.

Example (1). E, a partnership that historically used a June 30 taxable year, requested (pursuant to section 6 of Rev. Proc. 87-32, 1987-28 I.R.B. 14) permission from the Commissioner to retain a June 30 taxable year for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. Furthermore, E is qualified to make a section 444 election to retain a June 30 taxable year for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. However, as of the date specified in paragraph (b)(2) of this section, the Commissioner has not determined whether E has a valid business purpose for retaining its June 30 taxable year. Based on these facts, E may, by the date specified in paragraph (b)(2) of this section, make a back-up section 444 election to retain its June 30 taxable year.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1). In addition, on August 12, 1988, the Internal Revenue Service notifies E that its business purpose request is denied. E asks for reconsideration of the Service's decision, and the Service sustains the original denial on September 30, 1988. Based on these facts, E must activate its back-up section 444 election within 60 days after September 30, 1988.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that E desires to make a section 444 election to use a year ending September 30 for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. Although E qualifies to make a section 444 election to retain its June 30 taxable year, E may make a back-up section 444 election for a September 30 taxable year.

(c) Administrative relief—(1) Extension of time to file income tax returns—(i) Automatic extension. If a partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation makes a section 444 election (or does not make a section 444 election, either because it is ineligible or because it decides not to make the election, and therefore changes to its required taxable year) for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, the due date for filing its income tax return for such year shall be the later of—

(A) The due date established under—

(1) Section 6072, in the case of Form 1065,

(2) §1.6037-1(b), in the case of Form 1120S,

(3) Section 6072(b), in the case of other Form 1120 series form; or

(B) August 15, 1988.

The words "SECTION 444 RETURN" should, in order to allow the Service to process the affected returns in an efficient manner, be typed or legibly printed at the top of the Form 1065 or Form 1120 series form, whichever is applicable, filed under this paragraph (c)(1)(i).

(ii) Additional extensions. If the due date of the income tax return for the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, extended as provided in paragraph (c)(1)(i)(B) of this section, occurs before the date that is 6 months after the date specified in paragraph (c)(1)(i)(A) of this section, the partnership, S corporation, or personal service corporation may request an additional extension or extensions of time (up to 6 months after the date specified in paragraph (c)(1)(i)(A) of this section) to file its income tax return for such first taxable year. The request must be made by the later of the date specified in paragraph (c)(1)(i)(A) or (c)(1)(i)(B) of this section and must be made on Form 7004, "Application for Automatic Extension of Time To File Corporation Income Tax Return", or Form 2758, "Application for Extension of Time to File U.S. Partnership, Fiduciary, and Certain Other Returns," whichever is applicable, in accordance with the form and its instructions. In addition, the following words should be typed or legibly printed at the top of the form—"SECTION 44 REQUEST FOR ADDITIONAL EXTENSION."

(iii) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (c)(1) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). G, a partnership that historically used a January 31 taxable year, makes a section 444 election to retain such year for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987. Absent paragraph (c)(1)(i) of this section, G's Form 1065 for the taxable year ending January 31, 1988, is due on or before May 15, 1988. However, if G types or legibly prints "SECTION 444 RETURN" at the top of Form 1065 for such year, paragraph (c)(1)(i) of this section automatically extends the due date of such return to August 15, 1988.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that G desires to extend the due date of its income tax return for the year ending January 31, 1988, to a date beyond August 15, 1988. Pursuant to paragraph (c)(1)(ii) of this section, G may extend such return to November 15, 1988 (i.e., the date that is up to 6 months after May 15, 1988, the normal due date of the return). However, in order to obtain this additional extension, G must file Form 2758 pursuant to paragraph (c)(1)(i) of this section on or before August 15, 1988.

Example (3). H, a partnership that historically used a May 31 taxable year, makes a section 444 election to use a year ending September 30 for its taxable year beginning on June 1, 1987. Absent paragraph (c)(1)(i) of this section, H's Form 1065 for the taxable year beginning June 1, 1987, and ending September 30, 1987, is due on or before January 15, 1988. However, if H types or legibly prints "SECTION 444 RETURN" at the top of Form 1065 for such year, paragraph (c)(1)(i) of this section automatically extends the due date of such return to August 15, 1988.

Example (4). The facts are the same as in example (3), except H desires to further extend (i.e., extend beyond August 15, 1988) the due date of its income tax return for its taxable year beginning June 1, 1987, and ending September 30, 1987. Since August 15, 1988, is 6 months or more after the due date (without extensions) of such return, paragraph (c)(1)(ii) of this section prevents H from further extending the time for filing such return.

Example (5). I, a partnership that historically used a June 30 taxable year, considered making a section 444 election to retain such taxable year, but eventually decided to change to a December 31 taxable year (I's required taxable year). Absent paragraph (c)(1)(i) of this section, I's Form 1065 for the taxable year beginning July 1, 1987, and ending December 31, 1987, is due on or before April 15, 1988. Pursuant to paragraph (c)(1)(i) of this section, if I types or legibly prints "SECTION 444 RETURN" at the top of Form 1065 for such year, paragraph (c)(1)(i) of this section automatically extends the due date of such return to August 15, 1988. In addition, I may further extend such return pursuant to paragraph (c)(1)(ii) of this section.

(2) No penalty for certain late payments—(i) In general. In the case of a personal service corporation or S corporation described in paragraph (c)(1)(i) of this section, no penalty under section 6651(a)(2) will be imposed for failure to pay income tax (if any) for the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, but only for the period beginning with the last date for payment and ending with the later of the date specified in paragraph (c)(1)(i) or paragraph (c)(1)(ii) of this section.

(ii) Example. The provisions of paragraph (c)(2)(i) of this section may be illustrated by the following example.

Example. J, a personal service corporation that historically used a January 31 taxable year, makes a section 444 election to retain such year for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987. The last date (without extension) for payment of J's income tax (if any) for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987, is April 15, 1988. However, under paragraph (c)(2)(i) of this section, no penalty under section 6651(a)(2) will be imposed on any underpayment of income tax for the period beginning April 15, 1988 and ending August 15, 1988.

(d) Effective date. This section is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

Par. 3. Sections 1.7519-0T through 1.7519-3T are added in the appropriate place.

§1.7519-3T Effective date (temporary).

§1.7519-1T Required payments for entities electing not to have required year (temporary).

(a) In general—(1) Applicability. This section applies to any taxable year that a partnership or S corporation has an election under section 444 in effect (an "applicable election year").

(2) Returns and required payments. For each applicable election year, a partnership or S corporation must—

(i) File a return as provided in §1.7519-2T(a)(2), and

(ii) Make a required payment (as defined in paragraph (a)(3) of this section) as provided in §1.7519-2T.

However, if the required payment for an applicable election year is not more than $500 and the partnership or S corporation has not been required to make a required payment for a prior year, the partnership or S corporation should not make a required payment for such applicable election year.

(3) Required payment. The term "required payment" means, with respect to any applicable election year, an amount equal to the excess of—

(i) The product of the applicable percentage of the adjusted highest section 1 rate, multiplied by the net base year income (as defined in paragraph (b)(5) of this section) of the entity, over

(ii) The cumulative amount of required payments actually made for all preceding applicable election years (reduced by the cumulative amount of such payments refundable under section 7519(c) for all such preceding years). Furthermore, the amount of the required payment is determined without regard to the required payment of any other partnership or S corporation. See example (3) in paragraph (d) of this section.

(4) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (a) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). A, a partnership, makes a section 444 election to retain its taxable year ending September 30. For A's first applicable election year, A's required payment, as defined in paragraph (a)(3) of this section, is $400. Thus, A does not have to make a required payment for that year. However, A is required to file the return prescribed by §1.7519-2T(a)(2).

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), and, in addition to those facts, for A's second applicable election year, the amount determined under paragraph (a)(3)(i) of this section is $800. Because A did not actually make a required payment for A's first applicable election year, A's required payment is $800 for its second applicable election year. Since the required payment is greater than $500, A must make a required payment for its second applicable election year. Furthermore, A must file the return prescribed by §1.7519-2T(a)(2).

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (2), and, in addition to those facts, for A's third applicable election year, the amount determined under paragraph (a)(3)(i) is $1,200. Thus, A's required payment is $400 ($1,200 determined under paragraph (a)(3)(i) of this section less $800 determined under paragraph (a)(3)(ii) of this section). Although A's required payment for its third applicable election year is not more than $500, A must make its required payment for such year because the required payment for a preceding applicable election year exceeded $500. A must also file the return prescribed by §1.7519-2T(a)(2) for its third applicable election year.

(b) Definitions and special rules—(1) Applicable percentage—(i) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (b)(1)(ii) of this section, the term "applicable percentage" means the percentage determined in accordance with the following table:

If the applicable election year of the partnership or S corporation begins during:	The applicable percentage is:
1987	25
1988	50
1989	75
1990 or thereafter	100

(ii) Exception for certain applicable election years beginning after 1987. [Reserved.]

(iii) Example. The provisions of paragraph (b)(1) of this section may be illustrated by the following example.

Example. B is a corporation that has historically used a June 30 taxable year. For its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987, B elects to be an S corporation and elects under section §1.444-1T(b)(3) to retain its June 30 taxable year. Had B changed to a calendar year, its required year under section 1378, B's shareholders would not have been entitled to the 4-year spread under section 806(e)(2)(C) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 because B was not an S corporation for its taxable year beginning in 1986. Nevertheless, for purposes of determining the required payment for B's applicable election year beginning July 1, 1987, the applicable percentage is 25 percent.

(2) Adjusted highest section 1 rate—(i) General rule. For any applicable election year, the term "adjusted highest section 1 rate" means the highest rate of tax under section 1 applicable to the period defined in paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of this section, plus 1 percentage point. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, the adjusted highest section 1 rate is 36 percent for applicable election years beginning in 1987. For purposes of this section, the highest rate of tax is determined without regard to the effect of section 1(g), relating to the phaseout of the 15-percent rate and personal exemptions.

(ii) Period for determining highest section 1 rate. For purposes of paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section, the period for determining the highest rate of tax under section 1 is the 12 month period that—

(A) Ends with the required taxable year for the applicable election year, and

(B) Includes the end of the base year.

For example, assume that a partnership's applicable election year begins on October 1, 1988 and that the required taxable year for such applicable election year is December 31. Based upon these facts, the period for determining the highest section 1 rate is the 12-month period ending December 31, 1988.

(3) Base year. The term "base year" means, with respect to any applicable election year, the taxable year of the partnership or S corporation preceding such applicable election year.

(4) Special rules for certain applicable election years—(i) First applicable election year of new entities. If an applicable election year is a partnership's or S corporation's first year in existence (i.e., the partnership or S corporation is newly formed and therefore does not have a base year), the required payment for such applicable election year is zero.

(ii) Applicable election years ending prior to the required taxable year. If a partnership or S corporation makes a section 444 election and the resulting applicable election year (the "first applicable election year") of the partnership or S corporation ends prior to the last day of the required year, the required payment for the first applicable election year is zero. See example (5) in paragraph (b)(5)(vi) of this section.

(5) Net base year income—(i) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (b)(5)(v) of this section (relating to short base years), the net base year income of a partnership or S corporation is the sum of—

(A) The deferral ratio multiplied by the partnership's or S corporation's net income for the base year, plus

(B) The excess (if any) of—

(1) The deferral ratio multiplied by the aggregate amount of applicable payments made by the partnership or S corporation during the base year, over

(2) The aggregate amount of such applicable payments made during the deferral period of the base year. The term "deferral ratio" means the ratio which the number of months in the deferral period (as defined in §1.444-1T(b)(4)) of the applicable election year bears to 12 months.

(ii) Partnership net income. For purposes of paragraph (b)(5)(i) of this section—

(A) In general. The net income of the partnership is the amount (not below zero) determined by taking into account the aggregate amount of the partnership's items described in section 702(a), except for—

(1) Credits,

(2) Tax-exempt income, and

(3) Guaranteed payments under section 707(c).

(B) Treatment of deductions and losses. For purposes of determining the aggregate amount of partnership items, deductions and losses are treated as negative income. Thus, for example, if under section 702(a) a partnership has $1,000 of ordinary taxable income, $500 of specially allocated deductions, and $300 of capital loss, the net income of the partnership is $200 ($1,000 – $500 – $300).

(C) Partner limitations disregarded. Any limitation on the amount of a partnership item described in section 702(a) which may be taken into account for purposes of computing the taxable income of a partner shall be disregarded in computing the net income of the partnership.

(iii) S corporation net income. For purposes of paragraph (b)(5)(i) of this section—

(A) In general. The net income of an S corporation is the amount (not below zero) determined by taking into account the aggregate amount of the S corporation's items described in section 1366(a) (other than credits and tax-exempt income). If the S corporation was a C corporation for the base year, the taxable income of the C corporation shall be treated as the net income of the S corporation for such year.

(B) Treatment of deductions and losses. For purposes of determining the aggregate amount of S corporation items, deductions and losses are treated as negative income. Thus, for example, if under section 1366(a) an S corporation has $2,000 of ordinary taxable income, $1,000 of deductions described in section 1366(a)(1)(A) of the Code, and $500 of capital loss, the net income of the S corporation is $500 ($2,000 – $1,000 – $500).

(C) Shareholder limitations disregarded. Any limitation on any amount described in section 1366(a) which may be taken into account for purposes of computing the taxable income of a shareholder shall be disregarded in computing the net income of the S corporation.

(iv) Applicable payments—(A) In general. The term "applicable payment" means any amount deductible in the base year that is includible at any time, directly or indirectly, in the gross income of a taxpayer that during the base year is a partner or shareholder.

(B) Exceptions. The term "applicable payment" does not include any guaranteed payments under section 707(c).

(C) Special rule for corporation electing S status. If an S corporation was a C corporation for the base year, the corporation shall be treated as if it were an S corporation for the base year for purposes of determining the amount of applicable payments under this section. Thus, amounts deductible by the C corporation in the base year that are includible at any time in the gross income of a taxpayer that is a shareholder during the base year are treated as if from an S corporation, and therefore within the meaning of the term "applicable payments."

(D) Special rules for certain payments—(1) Certain indirect pay- ments. For purposes of paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(A) of this section, an amount is indirectly includible in the gross income of a partner or shareholder of a partnership or S corporation that has a section 444 election in effect (an electing partnership or S corporation) if the amount is includible in the gross income of—

(i) The spouse (other than a spouse who is legally separated from the partner or shareholder under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance) or child (under age 14) of such partner or shareholder, or

(ii) A corporation more than 50 percent (measured by fair market value) of which is owned in the aggregate by partners or shareholders (and individuals related under paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(1)(i) of this section to any such partners or shareholders), of the electing partnership or S corporation, or

(iii) A partnership more than 50 percent of the profits and capital of which is owned in the aggregate by partners or shareholders (and individuals related under paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(1)(i) of this section to any such partners or shareholders) of the electing partnership or S corporation, or

(iv) A trust more than 50 percent of the beneficial ownership of which is owned in the aggregate by partners or shareholders (and individuals related under paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(1)(i) of this section to any such partners or shareholders), of the electing partnership or S corporation. For purposes of this paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(1), ownership by any person described in this paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(1) shall be treated as ownership by the partners or shareholders of the electing partnership or S corporation. This paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(1) does not apply to amounts deductible by a partnership or S corporation that has made a section 444 election (the "deducting partnership") and included in the gross income of a partnership or S corporation defined in paragraphs (b)(5)(iv)(D)(1)(ii) or (iii) of this section (the "including partnership"), if the including partnership has the same taxable year as the deducting partnership and the including partnership has a section 444 election in effect. Furthermore, notwithstanding the general effective date provided in §1.7519-3T, this paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(1) is effective for amounts deductible on or after June 1, 1988.

(2) Payments by a downstream controlled partnership—(i) In general. If a partnership or S corporation has made a section 444 election, any amounts deducted by a downstream controlled partnership will be considered deducted by the partnership or S corporation that has made the section 444 election for purposes of determining the applicable payments of the partnership or S corporation that has made the section 444 election.

(ii) Definition of a downstream controlled partnership. If a partnership or S corporation that has made a section 444 election owns more than 50 percent of a partnership's profits and capital, such owned partnership is considered a downstream controlled partnership for purposes of paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(2)(i) of this section. Furthermore, if more than 50 percent of a partnership's profits and capital are owned by a downstream controlled partnership, such owned partnership is considered a downstream controlled partnership for purposes of paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(2)(i) of this section.

(3) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D) may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). I1 and I2, calendar year individuals, own 100 percent of the profits and capital of C1, a partnership. In addition to owning C1, I1 and I2 also own 100 percent of the profits and capital of C2, a calendar year partnership. For its taxable years beginning February 1, 1987, 1988, and 1989, C1 has a section 444 election in effect to use a January 31 taxable year. During its base years beginning February 1, 1986, 1987, and 1988, C1 deducted $10,000, $11,000, and $12,000, respectively that was included in C2's gross income. Furthermore, of the $12,000 deducted by C1 for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1988, $7,000 was deducted during the period June 1, 1988 to January 31, 1989. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(1) of this section, the $7,000 deducted by C1 on or after June 1, 1988, and included in C2's gross income is considered an applicable payment for C1's base year beginning February 1, 1988. Amounts deducted by C1 prior to June 1, 1988, are not subject to paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(1) of this section.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that I1 and I2 own only 51 percent of C2's profits and capital. Since the two partners in C1 (i.e., I1 and I2) own more than 50 percent of C2's profits and capital, C2 is considered controlled by the partners of C1 pursuant to paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(1)(iii) of this section. Thus, the conclusions in example (1) are unchanged. Furthermore, if the $7,000 deducted by C1 was included in the income of a partnership more than 50 percent of the profits and capital of which is owned by C2, such $7,000 would be considered an applicable payment for its base year beginning February 1, 1988.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that for its taxable years beginning February 1, 1987, 1988, and 1989, C2 has a section 444 election in effect to use a January 31 taxable year. Since both C1 and C2 have the same taxable year and both have section 444 elections in effect, paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(1) of this section does not apply to the $7,000 deducted by C1 for its base year beginning February 1, 1988.

Example (4). I3 and I4, calendar year individuals, own 100 percent of the profits and capital of C3, a partnership. C3 has made a section 444 election to retain a year ending June 30 for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. Furthermore, C3 owns more than 50 percent of the profits and capital of C4, a partnership that historically used a June 30 taxable year. Pursuant to §1.706-3T(b), C4 retains its year ending June 30 for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987. For its taxable year beginning July 1, 1986, C4 deducted $20,000 that was included in I3's gross income. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(2) of this section, the $20,000 deducted by C4 is considered an applicable payment by C3 for its base year beginning July 1, 1986.

Example (5). The facts are the same as in example (4), except that the $20,000 deducted by C4 is included in the gross income of a calendar year partnership 100 percent owned by I3 and I4. Pursuant to paragraphs (b)(5)(iv)(D)(1) and (2) of this section, the $20,000 deducted by C4 is considered an applicable payment by C3 for its base year beginning July 1, 1986.

Example (6). The facts are the same as in example (4), except that instead of directly owning a portion of C4, C3 owns more than 50 percent of the profits and capital of C5. Furthermore, C5 owns more than 50 percent of the profits and capital of C4. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(2)(ii) of this section, both C5 and C4 are considered downstream controlled partnerships of C3. Thus, pursuant to paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(D)(2)(i) of this section, the $20,000 deducted by C4 is considered an applicable payment by C3 for its base year beginning July 1, 1986.

(v) Special rule for base year of less than twelve months—(A) In general. If a base year is a taxable year of less than twelve months (a "short base year"), net base year income for such year is an amount equal to the excess, if any, of—

(1) The deferral ratio multiplied by the annualized short base year income, over

(2) Applicable payments made during the deferral period of the applicable election year following the base year.

(B) Annualized short base year income. The annualized short base year income is determined by—

(1) Increasing the net income for the short base year by applicable payments deductible in the short base year, and

(2) Multiplying the short base year income as increased in paragraph (b)(5)(v)(B)(1) of this section by twelve, and dividing the result by the number of months in the short base year.

(vi) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (b)(5) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). D, a partnership, is owned 10 percent by a C corporation with a September 30 taxable year and 90 percent by calendar year individuals. D has historically used a September 30 taxable year. For its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987, D makes a section 444 election to retain its September 30 taxable year. For the base year from October 1, 1986 to September 30, 1987, D has net income of $200,000 and no applicable payments. D's deferral ratio is 3/12 (the ratio of the number of months in the deferral period to 12 months). Based upon these facts, D has net base year income of $50,000 ($200,000 × 3/12).

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1) except that D's net income for the base year is $140,000, after applicable payments of $60,000. Of the applicable payments $15,000 were deductible during the deferral period of the base year. Based upon these facts, D has net base year income of $35,000, determined as follows:

Net income multiplied by deferral ratio	$140,000 × 3/12
		$35,000
Plus the excess, if any, of applicable payments multiplied by deferral ratio	$60,000 × 3/12
		$15,000
over aggregate amount of applicable payments deductible during deferral period of base year		$15,000	-0-
Net base year income		$35,000

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (2) except that of the $60,000 applicable payments only $10,000 are deductible during the deferral period of the base year. Based on these facts, D has net base year income of $40,000, determined as follows:

Net income multiplied by deferral ratio	$140,000 × 3/12
			$35,000
plus the excess, if any, of applicable payments multiplied by deferral ratio	$60,000 × 3/12
		$15,000
over aggregate amount of applicable payments deductible during deferral period of base year	$10,000
			$5,000
Net base year income			$40,000

Example (4). E is a C corporation that has historically used a January 31 taxable year. For its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987, E makes an election to be an S corporation and also makes a section 444 election to retain its January 31 taxable year. E's taxable income for the taxable year beginning February 1, 1986 to January 31, 1987 is $120,000. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(5)(iii)(A) of this section, the base year for X's first applicable election year is the taxable year beginning February 1, 1986 and ending January 31, 1987. Thus, E's net income for the base year is $120,000. During the base year, E pays its sole shareholder, A, a salary of $5,000 a month plus a $30,000 bonus on January 15, 1987. Thus, under paragraph (b)(5)(iv)(C) of this section, E's applicable payments for the base year are $90,000, of which $55,000 are applicable payments deductible during the deferral period of the base year (February 1 to December 31, 1986). Based upon these facts, E's net base year income is $137,500, determined as follows:

Net income multiplied by deferral ratio	$120,000 × 11/12
			$110,000
plus the excess, if any, of applicable payments multiplied by the deferral ratio	$90,000 × 11/12
		$82,500
over aggregate amount of applicable payments deductible during deferral period of base year		$55,000	$27,500
Net base year income			$137,500

Example (5). E, a corporation that has historically used a taxable year ending July 31, makes an election to be an S corporation for its taxable year beginning August 1, 1987. For that year, E also makes a section 444 election to use a taxable year ending September 30. Thus, E has two applicable election years beginning in 1987, the first beginning August 1, 1987 and ending September 30, 1987, and the second beginning October 1, 1987 and ending September 30, 1988. E's required year under section 1378 is the calendar year. Because E's first applicable election year ends prior to the last day of E's required year (i.e., December 31, 1987), the required payment for E's first applicable election year is zero. However, E is required to file a return for such year as provided in § 1.7519-2T.

Example (6). The facts are the same as in example (5). E's second applicable election year is the year from October 1, 1987 to September 30, 1988, and the base year for the second applicable election year is a period of less than 12 months (i.e., August 1, 1987 to September 30, 1987). Thus, E must compute its net base year income using the special rule for short base years provided in paragraph (b)(5)(v) of this section. Assume E's net income for the short base year is $50,000, and E's applicable payments for the short base year are $15,000. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(5)(v)(B) of this section, E's annualized short base year net income is $390,000 ($65,000 × 12/2). Furthermore, assume E's applicable payments for the deferral period of its second applicable election year are $20,000. Based on these facts, the net base year income for the applicable election year beginning October 1, 1987 is $77,500, computed as follows:

Annualized short base year income multiplied by deferral ratio	$390,000 × 3/12
		$97,500
less: applicable payments for deferral period		$20,000
Net base year income		$77,500

(c) Refunds of required payments. A partnership or S corporation is entitled to make a claim for refund, in accordance with the procedures provided in §1.7519-2T (a)(6), if—

(1) The amount specified in paragraph (a)(3)(i) of this section is less than the amount specified in paragraph (a)(3)(ii) of this section; or

(2) The partnership or S corporation terminates its section 444 election, within the meaning of §1.444-1T(a)(5).

(d) Examples. The provisions of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). G, a partnership, is owned 10 percent by a C corporation with a June 30 taxable year, and 90 percent by calendar year individuals. G has historically used a June 30 taxable year. For its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987, G makes a section 444 election to retain its June 30 taxable year. For the base year from July 1, 1986 to June 30, 1987, G has net income of $300,000 and no applicable payments. G's deferral ratio is 6/12 (the ratio of the number of months in the deferral period to 12 months). Based on these facts, G's net base year income is $150,000 ($300,000 × 6/12). Thus, G's required payment for its first applicable election year is $13,500 ($150,000 of net base year income multiplied by 9 percent (the product of the applicable percentage for 1987, 25 percent, and the highest section 1 rate for 1987, 36 percent)).

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1). In addition, G continues its section 444 election for the taxable year beginning July 1, 1988, and G's net base year income for the year beginning July 1, 1987 is $150,000. The required payment for G's second applicable election year is $8,250 ($150,000 of net base year income multiplied by 14.5 percent (the product of the applicable percentage for 1988 applicable election years, 50 percent, and the adjusted highest section 1 rate for 1988, 29 percent) less G's $13,500 required payment for the first applicable election year).

Example (3). H, a partnership with a taxable year ending September 30, desires to make a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. H is 15 percent owned by I, a partnership with a taxable year ending September 30, and 85 percent owned by calendar year individuals. Assume H and I are qualified to make section 444 elections as a result of the "same taxable year exception" provided in §1.444-2T(e). If H and I make section 444 elections, they must each make a required payment (assuming the amount computed under paragraph (a)(3) of this section is greater than $500). Pursuant to paragraph (a)(3) of this section, the required payments of H and I are calculated independent of each other. Thus, in determining the amount of its required payment, I may not exclude its income attributable to H, even though H must also make a required payment on the same income.

Example (4). The facts are the same as in example (1) except that H is 90 percent owned by I and 10 percent owned by calendar year individuals. Pursuant to §1.706-3T, if I makes a section 444 election to retain its taxable year ending September 30, H's required year will be September 30, because H's majority interest partner will have a September 30 taxable year. Thus, H is not required to make a section 444 election and a required payment in order to use a September 30 taxable year. I, however, must make a required payment.

§1.7519-2T Required payments—procedures and administration (temporary).

(a) Payment and return required—(1) In general. With respect to any taxable year for which a partnership or S corporation has a section 444 election in effect (an "applicable election year"), the partnership or S corporation shall file a return as provided in paragraphs (a)(2) and (3) of this section and make a payment, if required, as provided in paragraph (a)(4) of this section.

(2) Return required—(i) In general. A return showing the required payment shall be made, even if the required payment for the applicable election year is zero. For an applicable election year beginning in 1987, the return shall be made on Form 720, "Quarterly Federal Excise Tax Return." For an applicable election year beginning after 1987, the return shall also be made on Form 720 unless another form is prescribed by the Commissioner.

(ii) Procedure if amount for applicable election year (and all preceding years) is not greater than $500. If a partnership or S corporation is not required to make a payment under section 7519 for an applicable election year, the partnership or S corporation should type or legibly print "zero" on the appropriate line of the prescribed form.

(3) Time and place for filing return—(i) Applicable election years beginning in 1987. For an applicable election year beginning in 1987, the Form 720 must be filed with the Service Center indicated by the instructions for the Form 720. The date for filing such form is as follows—

(A) Taxpayers that would otherwise file Form 720 for the second quarter of 1988. Taxpayers that are required, without regard to this section, to file Form 720 for the second quarter of 1988 (e.g., taxpayers reporting liability for manufacturers excise tax) must file Form 720 by the normal due date of such form for the second quarter of 1988. Thus, such taxpayers must generally file Form 720 on or before July 31, 1988. However, if such taxpayers must also report tax imposed by section 4251 (relating to communications service tax), sections 4261 and 4271 (relating to air transportation tax), or section 4986 (relating to windfall profits tax) for the second quarter of 1988, they must file Form 720 on or before August 31, 1988.

(B) Other taxpayers. Taxpayers that are not described in paragraph (a)(3)(i)(A) of this section (i.e., taxpayers that but for this section would not be required to file Form 720 for the second quarter of 1988) must file Form 720 on or before July 31, 1988.

(ii) Applicable election years beginning after 1987—(A) Return made on Form 720. [Reserved].

(B) Return made on form other than Form 720. For an applicable election year beginning after 1987, the return showing the required payment is to be filed with the Service Center indicated by the instructions for the form prescribed for payment. The return must be filed on or before the date prescribed by the instructions to the form.

(iii) Special rule for back-up section 444 election. See §1.444-3t(b)(4)(iii) for a special rule that may extend the due date for filing a return required by paragraph (a)(2) of this section.

(4) Time and place for making required payment—(i) Applicable election years beginning in 1987. For an applicable election year beginning in 1987, the required payment is due and payable without assessment and notice on or before the date the taxpayer's Form 720 for the second quarter is due (as specified in paragraph (a)(3) of this section). The required payment must be paid by check or money order, and such check or money order must indicate the partnership's or S corporation's taxpayer identification number and must include the statement: "IRS NO. 11 PAYMENT." The check or money order must be sent, together with Form 720, to the Service Center indicated by the instructions for the Form 720.

(ii) Applicable election years beginning after 1987. For an applicable election year beginning after 1987, the required payment is due and payable without assessment or notice, on or before May 15 of the calendar year following the calendar year in which the applicable election year begins.

(iii) Special rule for back-up section 444 election. See §1.444-3T(b)(4)(iii) for a special rule that may extend the due date for making a required payment.

(5) Penalties for failure to pay. In the case of any failure by a partnership of S corporation to pay the required payment on or before the date prescribed in paragraph (a)(4) of this section, there shall be assessed on such partnership or S corporation a penalty of 10 percent of the underpayment. For purposes of this section, the term "underpayment" means the excess of the amount of the payment required under this section over the amount (if any) of such payment paid on or before the date prescribed in paragraph (a)(4) of this section.

(6) Refund of required payment—(1) In general. If a partnership or S corporation is entitled to make a claim for refund pursuant to §1.7519-1T(c), such partnership or S corporation should file a claim for refund, as provided in paragraph (a)(6)(ii) of this section. However, in no event shall a refund be made prior to April 15 of the second calendar year that follows the calendar year in which an applicable election year begins. For example, assume a partnership made a section 444 election to retain its taxable year for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987, and as a result made a required payment for such year. Further assume that the partnership terminates its election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1988. Based on these facts, the partnership will be entitled to a refund, but no earlier than April 15, 1989.

(ii) Procedures for claiming refund. [Reserved].

(iii) Interest on refund. No interest shall be allowed with respect to any refund of a required payment under §1.7519-1T(c).

(b) Assessment and collection of payment. A required payment shall be assessed and collected in the same manner as if it were a tax imposed by subtitle C. Furthermore, no deduction shall be allowable to a partnership or S corporation (or their owners) with respect to the required payment.

(c) Termination due to willful failure. See §1.444-1T(a)(5)(i)(C), which provides that willful failure to comply with the requirements of this section will result in the termination of the section 444 election.

(d) Negligence and fraud penalties made applicable. For purposes of section 6653, relating to additions to tax for negligence and fraud, any payment required by this section shall be treated as a tax.

§1.7519-3T Effective date (temporary).

The provisions of §§1.7519-1T through §1.7519-3T are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

Par. 4. Section 1.706-3T is added in the appropriate place.

§1.706-3T Temporary regulations under the Tax Reform Act of 1986 and the Revenue Act of 1987 (temporary).

(a) Certain tax-exempt partners disregarded—(1) General rule. In determining the taxable year (the "current year") of a partnership under section 706(b) and the regulations thereunder, a partner that is tax-exempt under section 501(a) shall be disregarded if such partner was not subject to tax, under chapter 1 of the Code, on any income attributable to its investment in the partnership during the partnership's taxable year immediately preceding the current year. However, if a partner that is tax-exempt under section 501(a) was not a partner during the partnership's immediately preceding taxable year, such partner will be disregarded for the current year if the partnership reasonably believes that the partner will not be subject to tax, under chapter 1 of the Code, on any income attributable to such partner's investment in the partnership during the current year.

(2) Example. The provisions of paragraph (a)(1) of this section may be illustrated by the following example.

Example. Assume that partnership A has historically used the calendar year as its taxable year. In addition, assume that A is owned by 5 partners, 4 calendar year individuals (each owning 10 percent of A's profits and capital) and a tax-exempt organization (owning 60 percent of A's profits and capital). The tax-exempt organization has never had unrelated business taxable income with respect to A and has historically used a June 30 fiscal year. Finally, assume that A desires to retain the calendar year for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1987. Under these facts and but for the special rule in paragraph (a)(1) of this section, A would be required under section 706(b)(1)(B)(i) to change to a year ending June 30, for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1987. However, under the special rule provided in paragraph (a)(1) of this section, and assuming the optional effective date provided in paragraph (c) of this section is chosen, the partner that is tax-exempt is disregarded, and A must retain the calendar year, under section 706(b)(1)(B)(i), for its taxable year beginning January 1, 1987.

(b) Effect of partner elections under section 444. For purposes of section 706(b)(1)(B), any section 444 election by a partner in a partnership shall be taken into account in determining the taxable year of the partnership. See example (4) of §1.7519-1T(d).

(c) Effective date. The provisions of this section are generally effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987. However, a partnership may, at its option, apply the provisions of this section for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

Par. 5. Section 706-1T is revised by adding a new sentence at the end of paragraph (a)(1) to read as follows:

§1.706-1T Taxable years of certain partnerships (temporary).

(1)  See §1.706-3T(a) for special rules which provide that certain tax-exempt partners are disregarded.

§1.280H–1T Limitation on certain amounts paid to employee-owners by personal service corporations electing alternative taxable years (temporary).

(a) Introduction. This section applies to any taxable year that a personal service corporation has a section 444 election in effect (an "applicable election year"). For purposes of this section, the term "personal service corporation" has the same meaning given such term in §1.441–4T(d).

(b) Limitation on certain deductions of personal service corporations—(1) In general. If, for any applicable election year, a personal service corporation does not satisfy the minimum distribution requirement in paragraph (c) of this section, the deduction otherwise allowable under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code) for applicable amounts, as defined in paragraph (b)(4) of this section, shall not exceed the maximum deductible amount, as defined in paragraph (d) of this section.

(2) Carryover of nondeductible amounts. Any amount not allowed as a deduction in an applicable election year under paragraph (b)(1) of this section shall be allowed as a deduction in the succeeding taxable year.

(3) Disallowance inapplicable for certain purposes. The disallowance of deductions under paragraph (b)(1) of this section shall not apply for purposes of subchapter G of chapter 1 of the Code (relating to corporations used to avoid income tax on shareholders) nor for determining whether the compensation of employee-owners is reasonable. Thus, for example, in determining whether a personal service corporation is subject to the accumulated earnings tax imposed by section 531, deductions disallowed under paragraph (b)(1) of this section are treated as allowed in computing accumulated taxable income.

(4) Definition of applicable amount—(i) In general. For purposes of section 280H and the regulations thereunder, the term "applicable amount" means, with respect to a taxable year, any amount that is otherwise deductible by a personal service corporation in such year and includible at any time, directly or indirectly, in the gross income of a taxpayer that during such year is an employee-owner. Thus, an amount includible in the gross income of an employee-owner will be considered an applicable amount even though such employee owns no stock of the corporation on the date the employee includes the amount in income. See example (1) in paragraph (b)(4)(iii) of this section.

(ii) Special rule for certain indirect payments. For purposes of paragraph (b)(4)(i) of this section, amounts are indirectly includible in the gross income of an employee-owner of a personal service corporation that has made a section 444 election (an electing personal service corporation) if the amount is includible in the gross income of—

(A) The spouse (other than a spouse who is legally separated from the partner or shareholder under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance) or child (under age 14) of such employee-owner, or

(B) A corporation more than 50 percent (measured by fair market value) of which is owned in the aggregate by employee-owners (and individuals related under paragraph (b)(4)(ii)(A) of this section to such employee-owners), of the electing personal service corporation, or

(C) A partnership more than 50 percent of the profits and capital of which is owned by employee-owners (and individuals related under paragraph (b)(4)(ii)(A) of this section to such employee-owners) of the electing personal service corporation, or

(D) A trust more than 50 percent of the beneficial ownership of which is owned in the aggregate by employee-owners (and individuals related under paragraph (b)(4)(ii)(A) of this section to any such employee-owners), of the electing personal service corporation.

For purposes of this paragraph (b)(4)(ii), ownership by any person described in this paragraph (b)(4)(ii) shall be treated as ownership by the employee-owners of the electing personal service corporation. Paragraph (b)(4)(ii)(B) of this section will not apply if the corporation has made a section 444 election to use the same taxable year as that of the electing personal service corporation.

Similarly, paragraph (b)(4)(ii)(C) of this section will not apply if the partnership has made a section 444 election to use the same taxable year as that of the electing personal service corporation. Notwithstanding the general effective date provision of paragraph (f) of this section, this paragraph (b)(4)(ii) is effective for amounts deductible on or after June 1, 1988.

(iii) Examples. The provisions of paragraph (b)(4) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). A is an employee of P, an accrual basis personal service corporation with a taxable year ending September 30. P makes a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987. On October 1, 1987, A owns no stock of P; however, on March 31, 1988, A acquires 10 of the 200 outstanding shares of P stock. During the period October 1, 1987 to March 31, 1988, A earned $40,000 of compensation as an employee of P. During the period April 1, 1988 to September 30, 1988, A earned $60,000 of compensation as an employee-owner of P. If paragraph (b) of this section does not apply, P would deduct for its taxable year ended September 30, 1988 the $100,000 earned by A during such year. Based upon these facts, the $100,000 otherwise deductible amount is considered an applicable amount under this section.

Example (2). I1 and I2, calendar year individuals, are employees of PSC1, a personal service corporation that has historically used a taxable year ending January 31. I1 and I2 also own all the stock, and are employees, of PSC2, a calendar year personal service corporation. For its taxable years beginning February 1, 1987, 1988, and 1989, PSC1 has a section 444 election in effect to use a January 31 taxable year. During its taxable years beginning February 1, 1986, 1987, and 1988, PSC1 deducted $10,000, $11,000, and $12,000, respectively, that was included in PSC2's gross income. Furthermore, of the $12,000 deducted by PSC1 for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1988, $7,000 was deducted during the period June 1, 1988 to January 31, 1989. Pursuant to paragraph (b)(4)(ii)(B) of this section, the $7,000 deducted by PSC1 on or after June 1, 1988, and included in PSC2's gross income is considered an applicable amount for PSC1's taxable year beginning February 1, 1988. Amounts deducted by PSC1 prior to June 1, 1988, are not subject to paragraph (b)(4)(ii)(B) of this section.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (2), except that for its taxable years beginning February 1, 1987, 1988, and 1989, PSC2 has a section 444 election in effect to use a January 31 taxable year. Since both PSC1 and PSC2 have the same taxable year and both have section 444 elections in effect, paragraph (b)(4)(ii)(B) of this section does not apply to the $7,000 deducted by PSC1 for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1988.

(c) Minimum distribution requirement—(1) Determination of whether requirement satisfied—(i) In general. A personal service corporation meets the minimum distribution requirement of this paragraph (c) for an applicable election year if, during the deferral period of such taxable year, the applicable amounts (determined without regard to paragraph (b)(2) of this section) for all employee-owners in the aggregate equal or exceed the lesser of—

(A) The amount determined under the "preceding year test" (see paragraph (c)(2) of this section), or

(B) The amount determined under the "3-year average test" (see paragraph (c)(3) of this section).

The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (c)(1)(i).

Example. Q, an accrual-basis personal service corporation, makes a section 444 election to retain a year ending January 31 for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987. Q has 4 employee owners, B, C, D, and E. For Q's applicable election year beginning February 1, 1987 and ending January 31, 1988, B earns $6,000 a month plus a $45,000 bonus on January 15, 1988; C earns $5,000 a month plus a $40,000 bonus on January 15, 1988; D and E each earn $4,500 a month plus a $4,000 bonus on January 15, 1988. Q meets the minimum distribution requirement for such applicable election year if the applicable amounts during the deferral period (i.e., $220,000) equal or exceed the amount determined under the preceding year test or the 3-year average test.

(ii) Employee-owner defined. For purposes of section 280H and the regulations thereunder, a person is an employee-owner of a corporation for a taxable year if—

(A) On any day of the corporation's taxable year, the person is an employee of the corporation or performs personal services for or on behalf of the corporation, even if the legal form of that person's relationship to the corporation is that of an independent contractor, and

(B) On any day of the corporation's taxable year, the person owns any outstanding stock of the corporation.

(2) Preceding year test—(i) In general. The amount determined under the preceding year test is the product of—

(A) The applicable amounts during the taxable year preceding the applicable election year (the "preceding taxable year"), divided by the number of months (but not less than one) in the preceding taxable year, multiplied by

(B) The number of months in the deferral period of the applicable election year.

(ii) Example. The provisions of paragraph (c)(2) of this section may be illustrated by the following example.

Example. R, a personal service corporation, has historically used a taxable year ending January 31. For its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987, R makes a section 444 election to retain its January 31 taxable year. R is an accrual basis taxpayer and has one employee-owner, F. For R's taxable year ending January 31, 1987, F earns $5,000 a month plus a $40,000 bonus on January 15, 1987. The amount determined under the preceding year test for R's applicable election year beginning February 1, 1987 is $91,667 ($100,000, the applicable amounts during R's taxable year ending January 31, 1987, divided by 12, the number of months in R's taxable year ending January 31, 1987, multiplied by 11, the number of months in R's deferral period for such year).

(3) 3-year average test—(i) In general. The amount determined under the 3-year average test is the applicable percentage multiplied by the adjusted taxable income for the deferral period of the applicable election year.

(ii) Applicable percentage. The term "applicable percentage" means the percentage (not in excess of 95 percent) determined by dividing—

(A) The applicable amounts during the 3 taxable years of the corporation (or, if fewer, the taxable years the corporation has been in existence) immediately preceding the applicable election year, by

(B) The adjusted taxable income of such corporation for such 3 taxable years (or, if fewer, the taxable years of existence).

(iii) Adjusted taxable income—(A) In general. The term "adjusted taxable income" means taxable income determined without regard to applicable amounts.

(B) Determination of adjusted taxable income for the deferral period of the applicable election year. Adjusted taxable income for the deferral period of the applicable election year equals the adjusted taxable income that would result if the personal service corporation filed an income tax return for the deferral period of the applicable election year under its normal method of accounting. However, a personal service corporation may make a reasonable estimate of such amount.

(C) NOL carryovers. For purposes of determining adjusted taxable income for any period, any NOL carryover shall be reduced by the amount of such carryover that is attributable to the deduction of applicable amounts. The portion of the NOL carryover attributable to the deduction of applicable amounts is the difference between the NOL carryover computed with the deduction of such amounts and the NOL carryover computed without the deduction of such amounts. For purposes of determining the adjusted taxable income for the deferral period, an NOL carryover to the applicable election year, reduced as provided in this paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(C), shall be allowed first against the income of the deferral period.

(D) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph (c)(3)(iii) may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). S is a personal service corporation that has historically used a taxable year ending January 31. For its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987, S makes a section 444 election to retain its taxable year ending January 31. S does not satisfy the minimum distribution requirement for its first applicable election year, and the applicable amounts for that year exceed the maximum deductible amount by $54,000. Under paragraph (b)(2) of this section, the $54,000 excess is carried over to S's taxable year beginning February 1, 1988. Furthermore, if S continues its section 444 election for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1988, and desires to use the 3-year average test provided in this paragraph for such year, pursuant to paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(A) of this section the $54,000 will not be allowed to reduce adjusted taxable income for such year. See also section 280H(e) regarding the disallowance of net operating loss carrybacks to (or from) any taxable year if a corporation personal service election under section 444 applies.

Example (2). T, a personal service corporation with a section 444 election in effect, is determining whether it satisfies the 3-year average test for its second applicable election year. T had a net operating loss (NOL) for its first applicable election year of $45,000. The NOL resulted from $150,000 of gross income less the sum of $96,000 of salary, $45,000 of other expenses, and $54,000 of deductible applicable amounts. Pursuant to paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(C) of this section, the entire amount of the $45,000 NOL is attributable to applicable amounts since the applicable amounts deducted in arriving at the NOL (i.e., $54,000) were greater than the NOL (i.e., $45,000). Thus, for purposes of computing the adjusted taxable income for the deferral period of T's second applicable election year, the NOL carryover to that year is $0 ($45,000 NOL less than $45,000 amount of NOL attributable to applicable amounts).

(d) Maximum deductible amount—(1) In general. For purposes of this section, the term "maximum deductible amount" means the sum of—

(i) The applicable amounts during the deferral period of the applicable election year, plus

(ii) An amount equal to the product of—

(A) The amount determined under paragraph (d)(1)(i) of this section divided by the number of months in the deferral period of the applicable election year, multiplied by

(B) The number of months in the nondeferral period of the applicable election year.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term "nondeferral period" means the portion of the applicable election year that occurs after the portion of such year constituting the deferral period.

(2) Example. The provisions of paragraph (d)(1) of this section may be illustrated by the following example.

Example. U, an accrual basis personal service corporation with a taxable year ending January 31, makes a section 444 election to retain a year ending January 31 for its taxable year beginning February 1, 1987. For its applicable election year beginning February 1, 1987, U does not satisfy the minimum distribution requirement in paragraph (c) of this section. Furthermore, U has 3 employee-owners, G, H, and I. G and H have been employee-owners of U for 10 years. Although I has been an employee of U for 4 years, I did not become an employee-owner until December 1, 1987, when I acquired 5 of the 20 outstanding shares of U stock. For U's applicable election year beginning February 1, 1987, G earns $5,000 a month plus a $40,000 bonus on January 15, 1988, and H and I each earn $4,000 a month plus a $32,000 bonus on January 15, 1988. Thus, the total of the applicable amounts during the deferral period of the applicable election year beginning February 1, 1987 is $143,000. Based on these facts, U's deduction for applicable amounts is limited to $156,000, determined as follows—$143,000 (applicable amounts during the deferral period) plus $13,000 (applicable amounts during the deferral period, divided by the number of months in the deferral period, multiplied by the number of months in the nondeferral period).

(e) Special rules and definition—(1) Newly organized personal service corporations. A personal service corporation is deemed to satisfy the preceding year test and the 3-year average test for the first year of the corporation's existence.

(2) Existing corporations that become personal service corporations. If an existing corporation becomes a personal service corporation and makes a section 444 election, the determination of whether the corporation satisfies the preceding year test and the 3-year average test is made by treating the corporation as though it were a personal service corporation for each of the 3 years preceding the applicable election year.

(3) Disallowance of NOL carryback. No net operating loss carryback shall be allowed to (or from) any applicable election year of a personal service corporation.

(4) Deferral period. For purposes of section 280H and the regulations thereunder, the term "deferral period" has the same meaning as under §1.444-1T(b)(4).

(5) Examples. The provisions of this paragraph (e) may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). V is a personal service corporation with a taxable year ending September 30. V makes a section 444 election for its taxable year beginning October 1, 1987, and incurs a net operating loss (NOL) for such year. Because a NOL is not allowed to be carried back from an applicable election year, V may not carry back the NOL from its first applicable election year to reduce its 1985, 1986, or 1987 taxable income.

Example (2). W, a personal service corporation, commences operations on July 1, 1990. Furthermore, for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1990, W makes a section 444 election to use a year ending September 30. Pursuant to paragraph (e)(1) of this section, W satisfies the preceding year test and the 3-year average test for its first year in existence. Thus, W may deduct, without limitation under this section, any applicable amounts for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1990.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (2). For its taxable year beginning

October 1, 1990, W incurs an NOL and is not a personal service corporation. Furthermore, W desires to carry back the NOL to its preceding taxable year (a year that was an applicable election year). Pursuant to paragraph (e)(3) of this section, W may not carry back a NOL "to" its taxable year beginning July 1, and ending September 30, 1990, because such year was an applicable election year.

(f) Effective date. The provisions of this section are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Nonaccrual-experience Method of Accounting

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations relating to the nonaccrual-experience method of accounting. The Tax Reform Act of 1986 added the nonaccrual-experience method of accounting to the law. These regulations affect taxpayers using the nonaccrual-experience method of accounting and provide them with guidance needed to comply with the law. The text of the temporary regulations contained in this document also serves as the text of the proposed regulations  [LR-26-88, page 933, this Bulletin]. DATES: The regulations contained in this document are effective December 31, 1986, and apply to taxable years beginning after such date.

BACKGROUND

This document amends the Temporary Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) relating to the nonaccrual-experience method under section 448(d)(5) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. Section 801 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (the Act) (Pub. L. 99-514, 100 Stat. 2085) added section 448(d)(5) to the Code.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Section 448(d)(5) provides that taxpayers who use an accrual method of accounting need not accrue any amounts (accounts receivable) to be received from the performance of services if, on the basis of experience, such amounts will not be collected. On June 16, 1987, the Service published temporary regulations under section 448(d)(5), relating to the nonaccrual-experience method (52 FR 22764, T.D. 8143). Those temporary regulations also served as a notice of proposed rulemaking (52 FR 22796).

Under the nonaccrual-experience method of accounting, the portion of a receivable that is considered uncollectible and not required to be accrued is the product of the receivable and a fraction representing the taxpayer's bad debt experience. The numerator of the fraction is the taxpayer's bad debts for the taxpayer's current and five preceding taxable years, and the denominator of the fraction is the taxpayer's account receivable for the same six-year period. The Internal Revenue Service has received questions from taxpayers as to whether the denominator of the fraction is determined on the basis of (i) total accounts receivable earned throughout the six-year period (i.e., the total amount of sales resulting in accounts receivable throughout the period) or (ii) year-end balances of the accounts receivable over the six-year period. These regulations provide that the denominator is based on total accounts receivable earned throughout the period ending at the close of the six-year period. This interpretation is consistent with the legislative history of the Act which provides that "[t]he amount of billings that, on the basis of experience, will not be collected is equal to the total amount billed, multiplied by a fraction whose numerator is the total amount of such receivables which were billed and determined not to be collectible within the most recent five taxable years of the taxpayer, and whose denominator is the total of such amounts billed within the same five year period." H.R. Rep. No. 99-426, 99th Cong., 1st Sess. 608 (1985). These regulations only apply to the determination of a taxpayer's bad debt experience under section 448. These regulations do not apply to any other provision of law including, for example, computations of a taxpayer's reserve for bad debts under section 585 of the Code.

These regulations are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986. Nevertheless, a taxpayer will not be liable for the addition to tax under section 6654 or 6655 (relating to failure to pay estimated tax) for an increase in income for the period before May 16, 1988, attributable to the computation of the bad debt experience ratio using accounts receivable earned throughout the period ending at the close of the six-year period, rather than the computation of the ratio using year-end balances of accounts receivable over the six-year period.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT

A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C.

553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, these temporary regulations are not subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291. Therefore, a regulatory impact analysis is not required.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

For the reasons set out in the preamble, Title 26, Chapter 1, Subchapter A, Part 1 of the Code of Federal Regulations is amended as set forth below:

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 continues to read as follows:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.

Par. 2. Section 1.448-2T is amended by revising the first sentence of paragraph (e)(2)(i), by revising example (1) in paragraph (4), and by adding a new paragraph (5) to read as follows:

§1.448-2T Nonaccrual of certain amounts by service providers (temporary).

* * * * *

(1) ***

(2) Six-year moving average—(i) General rule. For any taxable year the uncollectible amount of a receivable is the amount of that receivable which bears the same ratio to the account receivable outstanding at the close of the taxable year as (A) the total bad debts (with respect to accounts receivable) sustained throughout the period consisting of the taxable year and the five preceding taxable years (or, with the approval of the Commissioner, a shorter period), adjusted for recoveries of bad debts during such period, bears to (B) the sum of the accounts receivable earned throughout the entire six (or fewer) taxable year period (i.e., the total amount of sales resulting in accounts receivable) throughout the period. ***

* * * * *

(4) Examples. ***

Example (1). X is a calendar year service provider that uses an accrual method of accounting with respect to the amounts (accounts receivable) to be received from the provision of services. X does not require the payment of interest or penalties with respect to past due accounts receivable. Assume that under this section, X adopts for taxable year 1987 the nonaccrual-experience method of accounting with respect to its accounts receivable. Further, assume that X's total accounts receivable and bad debt experience for the current and five preceding taxable years is as follows:

Years	Total accounts receivable	Bad debts adjusted for recoveries
1982	$ 30,000	$ 5,700
1983	40,000	7,200
1984	50,000	11,000
1985	60,000	10,200
1986	70,000	14,000
1987	80,000	16,800
	$330,000	$64,900

Thus, the ratio of the bad debts (adjusted for recoveries) for the current and five preceding taxable years to the total accounts received over the same period if 19.67% ($64,900/$330,000). Assume that $49,300 of the total $80,000 of accounts receivable earned throughout the taxable year 1987 are outstanding as of the close of such year. Assume further that the $49,300 of the accounts receivable outstanding as of the close of the tax year 1987 consist of 10 separate accounts receivable. The uncollectible amount of each receivable is 19.67%. The amount of these accounts receivable and the uncollectible amount of each is as follows:

Accounts receivable	Applicable ratio	Uncollectible amount
1. $5,200	.1967	$1,022.84
2. 7,300	.1967	1,435.91
3. 3,200	.1967	629.44
4. 4,300	.1967	845.81
5. 1,700	.1967	334.39
6. 4,000	.1967	786.80
7. 6,300	.1967	1,239,21
8. 8,000	.1967	1,573.60
9. 3,200	.1967	629.44
10. 6,100	.1967	1,199.87
$49,300		$9,697.31

For taxable year 1987, X will not accrue as income $9,697.31 of its accounts receivable of $49,300 outstanding as of the close of the year.

(5) Special rule for estimated tax. For purposes of section 6654 or 6655 only (relating to the addition to tax for underpayment of estimated tax), a taxpayer's income does not include eligible income attributable to the period before May 16, 1988. A taxpayer's eligible income is the excess (if any) of—

(i) Income (including the amount of any adjustment required under section 481(a)) computed with a bad debt experience ratio using accounts receivable earned throughout the period ending at the close of the six-year period (or other shorter period) described in paragraph (e)(2)(i) of this section, over

(ii) Income (including the amount of any adjustment required under section 481(a)) computed with a bad debt experience ratio using the year-end balances of accounts receivable over such six-year (or other shorter) period.

There is a need for immediate guidance with respect to the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason it is impracticable to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

Subpart C.—Taxable Year for Which Deductions Taken

Section 466.—Qualified Discount Coupons Redeemed After Close of Tax Year

26 CFR 1.466-1: Method of accounting for the redemption cost of qualified discount coupons. (Also Section 481; 1.481-1.)

Qualified discount coupons. Guidance is provided regarding the timing and calculation of the section 481(a) adjustments that occur by virtue of abandoning the method of accounting previously allowed under section 466 of the Code.

Rev. Rul. 88-30

ISSUE

If a taxpayer elected to account for the costs of redeeming discount coupons under former section 466 of the Internal Revenue Code, how should that taxpayer account for the change in method of accounting required as a result of the repeal of section 466 by the Tax Reform Act of 1986?

BACKGROUND

Section 823(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (the 1986 Act), 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 290, repealed section 466 of the Code. Section 466 allowed a current deduction for the costs of redeeming qualified discount coupons that were received during a statutory redemption period following the close of the tax year. The "discount coupons" covered by former section 466 were a sales promotion device used to encourage the purchase of a specific product by allowing the purchaser of that product to receive a discount of its purchase price.

As a result of the repeal of section 466 of the Code, for tax years beginning after December 31, 1986, a taxpayer may deduct the costs of redeeming only those discount coupons actually received for redemption during the tax year. If a taxpayer elected to have former section 466 apply to the taxpayer's last tax year beginning before January 1, 1987, then the 1986 Act provides special rules (described below) regarding the required change in method of accounting.

FACTS

Situation 1. Taxpayer W corporation files its income tax returns on a calendar year basis and computes taxable income under an accrual method of accounting. W issues and redeems discount coupons that qualified for the special accounting treatment provided by former section 466 of the Code.

Starting with its tax year beginning January 1, 1979, W elected to account for its coupon redemption costs under former section 466 of the Code. This change from W's previous method of accounting for those costs would have resulted in a net decrease in taxable income under section 481(a) (negative section 481(a) adjustment) for 1979. In accordance with former section 466(e), instead of applying section 481, W established a suspense account, the effect of which was to defer indefinitely the full deduction of the transitional adjustment, so long as W continued to issue and redeem discount coupons.

In tax years 1979 through 1986, W made the adjustments to this suspense account, and the corresponding adjustments to income, required by former section 466(e) of the Code and section 1.466-1(e)(3) of the Income Tax Regulations. The closing balance in the suspense account as of December 31, 1986, was 10*x* dollars.

As a result of the 1986 Act's repeal of section 466 of the Code, starting with W's tax year beginning January 1, 1987, the only redemption costs that W may deduct are those related to coupons actually received during the tax year. Under former section 466, however, W had already deducted, for its 1986 tax year, costs related to coupons received during the first half of 1987. In order to prevent the same costs from reducing W's taxable income twice, section 481(a) requires an adjustment to income for the year of change, 1987. In W's case, this adjustment resulted in a net increase in taxable income (positive section 481(a) adjustment) of 30*x* dollars (not counting the 10*x* dollar balance in W's suspense account). Less than 75 percent of this 30*x* dollar adjustment was attributable to the 1-, 2-, or 3-tax-year period immediately preceding the year of change.

Situation 2. The facts are the same as in Situation 1, except that taxpayer X first elected to use the method provided by former section 466 of the Code for its tax year beginning January 1, 1985.

Situation 3. The facts are the same as in Situation 1, except that the highest percentage of taxpayer Y's 30*x* dollar 1987 positive section 481(a) adjustment that was attributable to the 1-, 2-, or 3-tax-year period immediately preceding 1987 was 90 percent.

Situation 4. The facts are the same as in Situation 1, except that, under section 481(a) of the Code, taxpayer Z's 1979 election to use the accounting method provided by section 466 resulted in a 20*x* dollar net increase in taxable income for 1979. Because this net section 481(a) adjustment was positive, Z did not establish a suspense account. Instead, in accordance with former section 466(f), Z took one-tenth of this positive adjustment into income in each of the years 1979 through 1986, leaving an unamortized balance of 4*x* dollars as of January 1, 1987. Thus, of the 10-year period over which the section 481(a) adjustment resulting from the initial election was to be spread under section 466(f), 2 years remained when Z was required to change its method of accounting as a result of the repeal of section 466.

LAW

Prior to its repeal, section 466(a) of the Code provided for an election by an accrual basis taxpayer to deduct costs incurred by the taxpayer with respect to the redemption of qualified discount coupons that were outstanding at the close of the tax year and that were received by the taxpayer within up to a 6-month period following the close of the tax year. The taxpayer also deducted the costs of coupons actually redeemed during the tax year to the extent those costs were not already deducted in an earlier year. The election applied to all qualified coupons issued in connection with the trade or business with respect to which the taxpayer made the election.

An election to use the method provided by former section 466 of the Code constituted a change in method of accounting. The statute provided that the section 481(a) adjustment caused by the election was to be taken into account under one of two specified methods, depending on whether the net adjustment was negative or positive.

First, former section 466(e) of the Code provided that, in the case of any election under section 466 that (but for section 466(e)) would result in a net decrease in taxable income under section 481(a)(2), the taxpayer, in lieu of applying section 481, had to establish a suspense account for the trade or business for the tax year (year of change) for which the election was made. The initial opening balance of the suspense account for the year of change was the amount by which (A) the largest dollar amount that would have been taken into account for any of the 3 immediately preceding tax years, if section 466 had applied to those years, exceeded (B) the sum of the increases in income (and the decreases in deductions) which (but for section 466(e)) would have resulted under section 481(a)(2) for the year of change. At the close of each year, the suspense account was either (A) reduced by the excess (if any) of (i) the opening balance of the suspense account for the year over (ii) the amount deducted for the year under section 466(a), or (B) increased (but not in excess of the initial opening balance) by the excess (if any) of (i) the amount deducted under section 466(a) over (ii) the opening balance in the suspense account for the year. In the case of any reduction or increase in the suspense account, an amount equal to the reduction was allowed as a deduction for the year, or an amount equal to the increase was included in gross income.

Second, former section 466(f) of the Code provided that, in the case of any election under section 466 that resulted in a net increase in taxable income under section 481(a)(2), the increase was to be taken into account by the taxpayer in computing taxable income in each of the 10 tax years beginning with the year of change, in accordance with regulations. Section 1.466-1(e)(2) of the regulations provided for such a positive adjustment to be taken into income ratably over the 10-year period.

Section 481(a) of the Code provides that in computing taxable income for any taxable year, if the computation is under a method of accounting different from the method under which taxable income for the preceding tax year was computed, then there shall be taken into account those adjustments that are determined to be necessary solely by reason of the change in order to prevent amounts from being duplicated or omitted.

Section 823(c)(2) of the 1986 Act provides that, in the case of any taxpayer that elected to have former section 466 of the Code apply for the taxpayer's last tax year beginning before January 1, 1987, and that is required to change its method of accounting by reason of the amendments made by section 823 for any tax year, the change shall be treated as initiated by the taxpayer and as having been made with the consent of the Secretary. Under section 823(c)(2)(C), the net amount of adjustments required by section 481 of the Code to be taken into account by the taxpayer shall be reduced by the balance in the suspense account under former section 466(e) as of the close of the last tax year beginning before January 1, 1987, and shall be taken into account over a period not longer than 4 years.

According to the Report of the Senate Committee on Finance, the concepts of Rev. Proc. 84-74, 1984-2 C.B. 736, were expected generally to apply to determine the actual timing of recognition of income or expense as a result of the adjustments arising from section 823 of the 1986 Act. See S. Rep. No. 313, 99th Cong., 2d Sess. 159 (1986), 1986-3 (Vol. 3) C.B. 159. In addition, the Report of the Committee of Conference expressed the conferees' intention that (1) net operating loss and tax credit carryforwards be allowed to offset any positive section 481 adjustment, and (2) for the purpose of determining estimated tax payments, the section 481 adjustment be recognized in taxable income ratably throughout the tax year in question. See 2 H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 841, 99th Cong., 2d Sess. II-322 (1986), 1986-3 (Vol. 4) C.B. 322.

Section 5.06 of Rev. Proc. 84-74 describes the appropriate period for taking into account an adjustment, whether positive or negative, required by section 481(a) of the Code as a result of a change in methods of accounting. Sections 6.02 and .03 divided methods of accounting into "Category A" and "Category B." Because Category A includes only methods whose use is clearly erroneous, the method authorized by former section 466 was a Category B method. Generally, under section 5.06(1)(e), the total net adjustment attributable to a change from a Category B method is to be taken into account ratably over the number of tax years (not to exceed 6) the taxpayer has used the method of accounting that is being changed. Under section 5.06(1)(a), however, when the entire net amount of the adjustment is attributable to the tax year immediately preceding the year of change, the adjustment is taken into account in the year of change. Under section 5.06(1)(b), if the method has been used for more than 3 years, and section 5.06(1)(a) does not apply, but 67 percent or more of the net amount of the adjustment is attributable to the 1-, 2-, or 3-tax-year period immediately preceding the year of change, then the highest percent attributable to the 1-, 2-, or 3-tax-year period is taken into account ratably over a 3-tax-year period beginning with the year of change, with any remaining balance taken into account ratably over the remainder of the number of years the taxpayer used the method (or 3 years, whichever is less). When the method of accounting being changed has been used for 4 years, 75 percent rather than 67 percent is used in applying section 5.06(1)(b). For purposes of 5.06(1)(a) and (1)(b), the amount of the adjustment that is attributable to a given period is the difference between the amount of the adjustment determined under section 481(a) for the year of change and the amount that would have been required under section 481(a) had the same change been made at the beginning of the period in question.

ANALYSIS

In Situation 1, W's change from accounting for coupon redemption costs under section 466 of the Code results in a net positive section 481(a) adjustment of 30*x* dollars for 1987, the year of change. W also has an opening balance of 10*x* dollars for 1987 in the section 466(e) suspense account that W was required to establish when it elected to use the section 466 method in 1979. W is not allowed to deduct an amount equal to the full suspense account balance in the year of change. Instead, under section 823(c)(2)(C) of the 1986 Act, the suspense account balance must be netted against the positive net section 481(a) adjustment. The resulting balance of 20*x* dollars is to be recognized over a period that is determined by applying the concepts of Rev. Proc. 84-74.

In this situation, section 5.06(1)(e) of Rev. Proc. 84-74 would normally call for recognition of the adjustment ratably over a 6-year period beginning in the year of change (here, 1987), because W used the section 466 method for 8 years. Under section 823(c)(2)(C) of the 1986 Act, however, the total adjustment period may not exceed 4 years. Accordingly, the net section 481(a) adjustment, after reduction by the suspense account balance, must be taken into income ratably over a 4-year period beginning in 1987.

In Situation 2, as in Situation 1, X must first net the balance in its section 466(e) suspense account against the positive section 481(a) adjustment, resulting in a net balance of 20*x* dollars. In this case, however, X has used the method described in former section 466 of the Code for only 2 years. In requiring that the adjustment be taken into account over a period not longer than 4 years, the 1986 Act and the accompanying legislative history suggest that a shorter adjustment period may be appropriate. Consistent with section 5.05(i)(e) of Rev. Proc. 84-74, therefore, the positive section 481(a) adjustment, after reduction for the amount in the suspense account, must be taken into account in two equal portions in X's tax years 1987 and 1988.

Situation 3 differs from Situation 1 in that a high percentage of Y's positive section 481(a) adjustment for 1987 is attributable to the period immediately preceding the year of change. In such situations, Rev. Proc. 84-74 requires the acceleration of all or a portion of the adjustment that would otherwise be taken into account ratably over the total adjustment period. For example, under section 5.06(1)(a) of Rev. Proc. 84-74, when the entire net amount of the adjustment is attributable to the year immediately preceding the year of change, the full adjustment is taken into account in the year of change. If, as in Situation 3, that is not the case but at least a certain percent or more of the adjustment is attributable to the 1-, 2-, or 3-tax-year period preceding the year of change, then under section 5.06(1)(b) an amount equal to the highest such percent is taken into account ratably over a 3-year period. The balance is taken into account ratably over a period equal to the remaining number of years the taxpayer previously used the method being changed, or 3 years, whichever is shorter. (The total adjustment period thus cannot exceed 6 years.) The threshold percentage used in applying section 5.06(1)(b) is 67 percent if the method being changed was used for more than 4 years, and 75 percent if the method was used for 4 years.

Section 5.06(1)(b) of Rev. Proc. 84-74 would apply only to a taxpayer that has used the section 466 method for 4 years or more prior to the year of change. Under Rev. Proc. 84-74, the relevant threshold percentage for a taxpayer that has used the accounting method being changed for more than 4 years is 67 percent. However, a taxpayer that has used a method for 4 years, and is therefore limited to a total adjustment period of 4 years, must accelerate a portion of the adjustment if the amount of the adjustment attributable to the 1-, 2-, or 3-tax-year period preceding the year of change is 75 percent or more. Use of 75 percent rather than 67 percent in the case of a 4-year adjustment period prevents section 5.06(1)(b) from deferring, rather than accelerating, a portion of the adjustment. Under section 823(c)(2)(C)(ii) of the 1986 Act, every taxpayer making the change from the use of section 466 is limited to a 4-year adjustment period, even if the method was used for more than 4 years. In order to be consistent with the concepts of Rev. Proc. 84-74, section 5.06(1)(b) must be applied only in a way that accelerates recognition of part of the adjustment. Accordingly, even if a taxpayer employed the section 466 method for more than 4 years prior to the year of change, that taxpayer must apply section 5.06(1)(b) by using a 75 percent threshold.

In Situation 3, Y used the method provided by former section 466 of the Code for 8 years prior to repeal. The highest percent of Y's adjustment attributable to the 1-, 2-, or 3-tax-year period preceding 1987 was 90 percent. Because this is more than 75 percent, Y must, after netting its suspense account balance against the positive 1987 section 481(a) adjustment, include 30 percent of the resulting balance in income in each of the years 1987 through 1989 and must include the remaining 10 percent in income in 1990.

Unlike the first three situations, Situation 4 involves a taxpayer whose original election to account for coupon redemption costs under former section 466 of the Code resulted in a net positive section 481(a) adjustment. Z has been including one-tenth of this adjustment in income each year since the election.

There is no explicit guidance in either the 1986 Act or its legislative history concerning the proper treatment of the unamortized portion of such an adjustment. Former sections 466(e) and 466(f) of the Code provided for the treatment of negative and positive adjustments, respectively. Section 823 of the 1986 Act, in repealing section 466, specified a method of handling suspense account balances, and that method differed from the method set out in section 466(e). There is no evidence, however, of any intent to change the original 10-year adjustment period that was provided for positive adjustments by former section 466(f). Accordingly, taxpayers must continue to amortize such adjustments over the remainder of that 10-year period.

In Situation 4, Z used the accounting method to be changed for more than 4 years. Under section 823(c)(2)(C) of the 1986 Act, in each of the years 1987 through 1990 Z must taken into account one-fourth of the 1987 section 481(a) adjustment resulting from the repeal of section 466 of the Code. In addition, the unamortized portion of Z's original 1979 adjustment is taken into income in 1987 and 1988.

HOLDING

Taxpayers that previously accounted for discount coupon redemption costs under the method described in former section 466 of the Code must account for the section 481(a) adjustment required by the repeal of that provision over a period of up to 4 years starting with the first tax year beginning after December 31, 1986. They must apply the concepts of Rev. Proc. 84-74, as set forth in this ruling, to determine the actual timing of recognition of income or expense. Any suspense account balance resulting from a taxpayer's prior election to use section 466 must be netted with the adjustment that results from the repeal of section 466. The balance of a previous positive section 481(a) adjustment continues to be amortized over the period originally prescribed.

Specifically, in Situation 1, W must reduce the net positive section 481(a) adjustment of 30*x* dollars by the 10*x* dollar balance in its suspense account and take one-fourth of the resulting amount, or 5*x* dollars, into income in each of its tax years 1987 through 1990.

In Situation 2, X must reduce the net positive section 481(a) adjustment of 30*x* dollars by the 10*x* dollar balance in its suspense account and take one-half of the resulting amount, or $10x$ dollars, into income in 1987 and one-half in 1988.

In Situation 3, Y must first reduce the net positive section 481(a) adjustment of $30x$ dollars by the $10x$ dollar balance in its suspense account; 90 percent of the resulting $20x$ dollars, or $18x$ dollars, must be recognized in three equal portions of $6x$ dollars over the period 1987 through 1989. The remaining $2x$ dollars is taken into income in 1990.

In Situation 4, Z must take into income the unamortized portion of the previous positive section 481(a) adjustment, or $4x$ dollars, in two equal portions of $2x$ dollars in 1987 and 1988. Z must take the net positive section 481(a) adjustment of $30x$ dollars arising in the year of change into income in four equal increments of $7.5x$ dollars in 1987 through 1990.

Section 469.—Passive Activity Losses and Credits Limited

26 CFR 1.469-1T: General rules (temporary).

T.D. 8175

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Limitations on Passive Activity Losses and Credits

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations relating to the limitations on passive activity losses and passive activity credits. Changes to the applicable tax law were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. The temporary regulations affect taxpayers subject to the limitations on passive activity losses and passive activity credits and provide them with the guidance needed to comply with the law. The text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text of the proposed regulations for the notice of proposed rulemaking  [page 932, this Bulletin].

EFFECTIVE DATE: Except as otherwise provided in § 1.469-11T, the temporary regulations are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Background

This document amends the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) to provide temporary rules relating to the limitations on passive activity losses and passive activity credits (the "passive loss and credit limitations"). The temporary regulations reflect the amendment of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the "Code") by sections 501 and 502 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Pub. L. 99-514, 100 Stat. 2233 and 2241), which added section 469. Section 469 disallows the passive activity loss and the passive activity credit for the taxable year.

Scope of the Regulations

These regulations provide general rules for applying the the passive loss and credit limitations.

Section 1.469-1T contains rules relating to the disallowance of the passive activity loss and passive activity credit, the taxpayers to whom the passive loss and credit limitations apply, the general effect of section 469 on the treatment of items of income, gain, loss, deduction, and credit from passive activities, definitions of essential terms (including "passive activity," "trade or business activity," and "rental activity"), the treatment of certain losses from oil and gas working interests, the application of the passive loss and credit limitations to C corporations (including rules relating to the application of the material participation standard, the computation of net active income, and the application of section 469 to affiliated groups of corporations filing consolidated returns), and the treatment of spouses filing joint returns.

Section 1.469-2T contains rules for computing the passive activity loss, including rules for identifying passive activity gross income, passive activity deductions, and portfolio income and related deductions, and rules (including rules pursuant to section 469 (l), (2), and (3)) requiring that income from certain passive activities be treated as income that is not from a passive activity.

Section 1.469-3T contains rules for computing the passive activity credit, including rules relating to the identification of credits subject to section 469 and the computation of the regular tax liability allocable to passive activities.

Section 1.469-5T contains rules defining the term "material participation" for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder.

Section 1.469-11T explains the effective date of section 469 and the regulations thereunder and provides guidance under the transitional rule for losses and credits from preenactment interests in passive activities.

Future regulations will provide rules identifying economic undertakings that are treated as separate activities for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder (to be located in § 1.469-4T), rules relating to the treatment of losses allowable under section 469(g) upon certain dispositions of interests in activities (to be located in § 1.469-6T), rules relating to the treatment of certain "self-charged" expenses and related income (to be located in § 1.469-7T), rules relating to the application of section 469 to trusts, estates, and their beneficiaries (to be located in § 1.469-8T), rules relating to the application of the $25,000 allowance under section 469 (i) for passive activity losses and credits attributable to certain rental real estate activities (to be located in § 1.469-9T), rules relating to the treatment of publicly traded partnerships under section 469(k) (to be located in § 1.469-10T), and rules relating to the application of the passive loss and credit limitations in the case of former passive activities and corporations that change status from year to year, i.e., corporations that cease to be "personal service corporations," corporations that cease to be "closely held corporations," and C corporations that become S corporations (to be located in § 1.469-1T (k)).

Significant Policy Issues

I. Effect of Section 469 on Other Provisions

A. Items of Income or Gain

Section § 1.469-1T(d)(1) provides that the characterization of items of income or deduction as passive activity gross income or passive activity deductions does not affect the treatment of any item of income or gain under any provision of the Code other than section 469. Thus, for example, an item of capital gain from a passive activity that is treated under the regulations as an item of passive activity gross income is taken into account in determining both the passive activity loss and credit for the taxable year and the allowable capital loss for the taxable year.

B. Items of Deduction

Section 1.469-1T(d)(3) provides that, except as otherwise provided by regulations, a deduction that is disallowed for a taxable year under section 469 is not taken into account as a deduction that is allowed for the taxable year in computing the amount subject to any tax imposed by subtitle A of the Code. Thus, for example, if a deduction is disallowed under section 469 for purposes of computing taxable income subject to income tax, the deduction is not taken into account in computing the taxpayer's net earnings from self-employment for purposes of the tax on self-employment income imposed under chapter 2 of the Code.

II. Definition of Passive Activity

A. Trade or Business Activity

Under section 469(c)(1), an activity which involves the conduct of a trade or business and in which the taxpayer does not materially participate is a passive activity. Section 1.469-1T(e)(2) generally defines the term "trade or business activity" to mean an activity that involves the conduct of a trade or business within the meaning of section 162.

Under section 469(c)(6), the term "trade or business" may include, to the extent provided in regulations, any activity in connection with a trade or business, and any activity with respect to which expenses are allowable as a deduction with respect to which expenses are allowable as a deduction under section 212. Although the Service is studying the possibility of treating certain activities in connection with a trade or business and certain section 212 activities as trade or business activities for purposes of section 469, these regulations do not so treat any such activities.

B. Rental Activity

Section 469(j)(8) provides that the term "rental activity" means any activity where payments are principally for the use of tangible property. Section 1.469-1T(e)(3)(i) provides that an activity generally is a rental activity for a taxable year if the gross income attributable to the conduct of the activity for the year represents amounts paid or to be paid principally for the use of tangible property. In addition, an activity may be a rental activity if tangible property in the activity is held for rent and the expected gross income from the activity will represent payments principally for the use of such property.

Section 1.469-1T(e)(3)(ii) provides six exceptions to the general rule. The first exception provides that an activity involving the use of tangible property is not a rental activity if, on the average, the period for which each customer uses the property is seven days or less. This exception will exclude from treatment as a "rental activity" most activities involving short-term use of tangible personal property such as automobiles, videocassettes, tuxedos, and tools, and short-term use of hotel and motel rooms. The rationale for the "seven-day rule" is that a customer's use of property for seven days or less generally will require the person furnishing the property to provide services significant enough to justify the conclusion that the person is engaged in a service business rather than a rental activity.

The second exception provides that an activity involving the use of tangible property is not a rental activity if (a) on the average, the period for which each customer uses the property is greater than seven days but not greater than 30 days and (b) significant personal services are provided. Thus, for example, a taxpayer operating a hotel will not be treated as engaged in a rental activity, even if guests stay for an average period that exceeds seven days, if significant personal services are provided.

Section 1.469-1T(e)(3)(iv) provides that only services performed by individuals are treated as personal services. Thus, services such as telephone and cable television service are not taken into account. Section 1.469-1T(e)(3)(iv)(B) also provides that certain specified services, referred to as "excluded services" are not taken into account. The excluded services are (a) all services necessary to permit the lawful use of the property, (b) services in connection with the construction of improvements or in connection with the performance of repairs that extend the useful life of the property, and (c) in the case of improved real property, the kinds of services commonly provided in connection with long-term rentals of high-grade commercial and residential property (e.g., janitorial services).

The third exception provides that an activity involving the use of tangible property is not a rental activity if extraordinary personal services are provided by or on behalf of the owner in connection with making property available for use by customers. This exception applies even if, on the average, the period for which each customer uses the property exceeds 30 days. Extraordinary personal services are provided only if the services are performed by individuals, and the customers' use of the property is incidental to their receipt of the services provided. For example, the use by patients of a hospital's boarding facilities generally is incidental to their receipt of the personal services provided by the hospital's medical and nursing staff. In some cases, it may be difficult to determine whether the use of property is incidental to the services provided. The Service invites comment on the extraordinary services rule.

The fourth exception is for rentals incidental to certain nonrental activities of the taxpayer. This exception applies if (a) an insubstantial amount of rental income is derived from renting property incidental to an activity of holding such property for investment, (b) the rented property is lodging provided to the taxpayer's employees for the convenience of the taxpayer, (c) an insubstantial amount of rental income is derived from property that was recently used in a trade or business activity of the taxpayer and is temporarily rented, (d) the property is held for sale to customers in the ordinary course of a trade or business and is in fact sold during the taxable year.

The fifth exception provides that an activity of making property available for use by customers is not a rental activity if the taxpayer customarily makes the property available during defined business hours for nonexclusive use by various customers. Thus, operating a facility (such as a golf course) that is used by customers who would normally be characterized as invitees or licensees rather than lessees or tenants is not a rental activity.

The sixth exception relates to property provided for use in a nonrental activity of a partnership, S corporation, or joint venture in which the taxpayer owns an interest. The provision of such property is not a rental activity if the taxpayer does not rent the property to the partnership, S corporation or joint venture, but provides the property in the taxpayer's capacity as an owner of such an interest.

III. Special Rules Treating Certain Activities as Nonpassive

A. Exception for Certain Oil and Gas Working Interests

1. Property unit to which exception applies. Section 469(c)(3)(A) provides that the term "passive activity" does not include any working interest in any oil or gas property which the taxpayer holds directly or through an entity which does not limit the taxpayer's liability with respect to such interest. Section 1.469-1T(e)(4)((i) applies this rule on a well-by-well basis. Thus, if a taxpayer owns a working interest in a tract of land, assigns the working interest in part of the tract to a partnership in exchange for a limited partnership interest, and drills a well on the retained portion of the tract, the working interest exception will apply to that well. If, however, the partnership drills a well on the assigned portion of the tract, the working interest exception will not apply to the taxpayer's interest in that well.

2. Entities that limit liability. Section 1.469-1T(e)(4)(v) provides that an entity limits the liability of a holder of an interest in the entity only if, under the applicable State law, the holder's potential liability for all obligations of the entity is limited (as in the case of a limited partner or a stockholder) to a determinable fixed amount. Thus, the working interest exception may apply even if the taxpayer is protected against loss by an indemnification agreement, a stop loss arrangement, insurance, any similar arrangement, or any combination of such devices.

In addition, a partnership in which a taxpayer is a general partner is treated as an entity that does not limit the taxpayer's liability, and any working interest that the taxpayer holds through such a partnership is treated as an interest in an activity that is not a passive activity. Thus, deductions from the working interest (including deductions allocable to a limited partnership interest of the taxpayer) will not be subject to the passive loss limitation.

Taxpayers should draw no inferences from these rules concerning the application of section 465(b)(4). If deductions and losses from a working interest are subject to limitation under section 465, then the provisions of section 465(b)(4) apply without regard to the treatment of such deductions and losses under section 469. As explained below, the regulations include rules coordinating the limitations under sections 465 and 469.

3. Effect of limited liability at the time economic performance occurs. Under § 1.469-1T(e)(4)(i), the working interest exception applies for a taxable year to an interest in an oil or gas well drilled or operated pursuant to a working interest that the taxpayer holds at any time during such year either directly or through an entity that does not limit the liability of the taxpayer with respect to such well. Section 1.469-1T(e)(4)(ii) provides that notwithstanding the working interest exception a portion of the taxpayer's deductions from an oil or gas well will be treated as passive activity deductions (and a corresponding portion of any gross income from the well will be treated as passive activity gross income) if the taxpayer has a net loss from the well, and economic performance occurs with respect to expenses deducted for the taxable year in connection with the drilling or operation of the well at a time when the taxpayer holds the interest in the well through an entity that limits the taxpayer's liability with respect to such drilling or operation. For this purpose, the term "economic performance" has the same meaning as in section 461(h), without regard to the exceptions for recurring items or the spudding of oil and gas wells.

Under this rule, the working interest exception may apply for a taxable year to a well drilled by a partnership in which the taxpayer owns a general partnership interest that is convertible at the taxpayer's option into a limited partnership interest. If, however, the interest is converted before economic performance has occurred with respect to all items of deduction taken into account by the taxpayer for the taxable year in connection with the drilling or operation of the well, the working interest exception will not apply for the taxable year to that portion of the taxpayer's net loss for the year that is attributable to deductions for expenses with respect to which economic performance occurred after the conversion.

4. Income recharacterization rule. If any loss for a taxable year from an interest in an oil or gas property is treated under the working interest exception as a loss that is not from a passive activity, then any net income from the property for any subsequent taxable year is treated as income that is not from a passive activity. This rule is explained more fully below under the heading "Income from oil or gas properties with respect to which the taxpayer benefited from the working interest exception."

B. Trading Personal Property

In some circumstances, the activity of trading personal property (such as securities or commodities or other property of a type that is actively traded) for one's own account has been treated as a trade or business. Even in those circumstances, however, the income or loss from the activity resembles portfolio income or loss in that it results entirely from the holding and sale of personal property. Accordingly, § 1.469-1T(e)(6) provides that an activity of trading personal property of a type that is actively traded for the account of owners of interests in the activity is not a passive activity even if the activity is treated as a trade or business.

IV. Identification of Items of Deduction and Credit That Are Disallowed Under Section 469

Section 1.469-1T(f) provides rules identifying the items of deduction and credit that are disallowed when any part of the taxpayer's passive activity loss or passive activity credit is disallowed for the taxable year. In the case of losses, the regulations generally provide that the amount of the disallowed loss is first allocated ratably among all of the taxpayer's passive activities that have net losses for the year. Any loss allocated to an activity is then generally allocated ratably among all passive activity deductions from the activity for the year. In the case of credits, the first step is omitted; the disallowed passive activity credit is allocated ratably among all of the taxpayer's credits from passive activities.

Taxpayers generally need not account separately for each item of deduction or credit disallowed under section 469. The regulations provide that separate accounting is required if and only if separate identification of an item of deduction or credit may affect the taxpayer's tax liability for any taxable year. For example, if 40 percent of the loss from a passive activity is disallowed for the taxable year, and one of the deductions from the activity is a loss from the sale of a capital asset, the taxpayer must separately identify 40 percent of that deduction as a deduction that is disallowed for the taxable year. Separate identification of the capital loss is required because the limitation on capital losses under section 1211 applies after section 469 and, thus, the disallowance of a capital loss (rather than an ordinary deduction) may affect the taxpayer's tax liability for one or more taxable years.

V. Application of Section 469 to C Corporations

A. Definition of "Personal Service Corporation"

For purposes of section 469, § 1.469-1T(g)(2)(i) defines the term "personal service corporation" by cross reference to the definition of such a corporation in § 1.441-4T(d). Those regulations generally provide that a corporation is not a personal service corporation unless it is a C corporation and its principal activity is the performance of services in the fields of health, law, engineering, architecture, accounting, actuarial science, performing arts, or consulting.

B. Effect of Net Active Income of a Closely Held Corporation

Section 469(e)(2)(A) provides that the passive activity loss of a closely held corporation shall be allowable as a deduction against the net active income of such a corporation, and that a similar rule shall apply in the case of any passive activity credit of such a taxpayer. Section 1.469-1T(g)(4) provides that a closely held corporation's passive activity loss for the taxable year is decreased by the corporation's net active income for the year.

Section 1.469-1T(g)(5) provides that a closely held corporation's passive activity credit for the taxable year is decreased by the corporation's net active income tax liability for the year. For purposes of this rule, a closely-held corporation's net active income tax liability is the regular tax liability that is allocable to the corporation's net active income, reduced by all credits other than credits from passive activities.

Since net active income is computed by modifying taxable income, net operating loss carrybacks and carryforwards to the taxable year must be taken into account. Therefore, a net operating loss carryback which requires a closely held corporation to recompute its net active income and net active income tax liability for one or more years may also require a recomputation of the corporation's passive activity loss and passive activity credit for one or more years.

C. Treatment of Affiliated Groups of Corporations Filing Consolidated Returns

Section 1.469-1T(h) contains special rules for applying section 469 and the regulations thereunder to an affiliated group of corporations filing a consolidated return for the taxable year (a "consolidated group"). Under these rules, a consolidated group generally is treated as a single corporation for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder. Thus, a single passive activity loss and passive activity credit are computed for such a group. In addition, the status of each member of an affiliated group as a personal service corporation or closely held corporation is the same as the status of the entire consolidated group, determined as though the group were a single corporation. In making this determination, and in applying the participation tests set forth in § 1.469-1T(g)(3), only stockholders of the group's common parent are treated as stockholders of the hypothetical single corporation.

Section 1.469-1T(h)(5) contains rules for allocating a consolidated group's disallowed passive activity loss and credit among the group's members. Under these rules, the disallowed loss or credit is first allocated among the members of the group and is then allocated among the activities of the members under the general rules in § 1.469-1T(f).

Section 1.469-1T(h)(6) contains rules relating to intercompany transactions (within the meaning of § 1.1502-13(a)(1)). These rules generally are intended to attribute all items of income and deduction of all members that are attributable to an intercompany transaction to the activities of the purchasing member (within the meaning of § 1.1502-13(a)).

The Service invites comment on all aspects of the rules in § 1.469-1T(h).

D. Coordination With Other Provisions

The Service recognizes that further rules are needed to coordinate section 469 with certain other provisions applicable to corporations (e.g., sections 381, 382, and 1502) and invites comment on these rules.

VI. Treatment of Spouses Filing a Joint Return

Section 469(h)(5) provides that in determining whether a taxpayer materially participates in an activity, the participation of the taxpayer's spouse shall be taken into account. Section 469(i)(6)(D) provides a parallel rule for active participation. Section 469(1)(5) provides that the Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out provisions of section 469, including regulations relating to changes in marital status and changes between joint returns and separate returns.

The Service believes that treating married persons filing a joint return as separate taxpayers for purposes of section 469 would present undesirable administrative difficulties, and that it is generally preferable to treat such persons as one taxpayer. In some situations, however, this treatment would frustrate the purposes of the passive loss and credit limitations. For example, the fact that one spouse holds a working interest in an oil or gas well through an entity that does not limit the spouse's liability should not be taken into account in determining whether the working interest exception applies to any portion of the working interest that is held by the other spouse. In addition, if two individuals cease filing a joint return, it is necessary for each individual to account for the deductions and credits treated under section 469(b) as allocable to his or her passive activities.

Accordingly, § 1.469-1T(j) provides that spouses filing a joint return for a taxable year generally are treated for such year as one taxpayer for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder. For purposes of the working interest exception, however, married persons are treated as separate taxpayers. In addition, if any deductions or credits are disallowed under section 469, the disallowed deductions and credits attributable to each spouse's activities must be separately identified.

The Service invites comment on the treatment of married persons.

VII. Definition of Passive Activity Loss

Section 469(d)(1) defines the term "passive activity loss" as the amount (if any) by which the aggregate losses from all passive activities for the taxable year exceed the aggregate income from all passive activities for such year. In the interest of clarity, § 1.469-2T(b) defines the passive activity loss for the taxable year as the amount, if any, by which the passive activity deductions for the taxable year exceed the passive activity gross income for the taxable year. The rules in § 1.469-2T (c) and (d) identify the items treated as passive activity gross income and passive activity deductions, respectively, for the taxable year.

VIII. Identification of Items of Gross Income and Deductions From Passive Activities

The regulations state that, except as otherwise provided, all items of gross income from a passive activity are included in passive activity gross income, and all deductions arising in connection with a passive activity are passive activity deductions. The regulations do not require that any particular method be employed in determining (a) whether items of income are derived from an activity, (b) whether deductions arise in connection with an activity, or (c) how shared costs should be allocated among activities. The regulations contemplate the use of reasonable methods in making these determinations, and the Service will disregard unreasonable determinations. The Service invites public comment regarding the desirability of detailed rules relating to these issues.

IX. Treatment of Gain From the Disposition of an Interest in an Activity or Property Used in an Activity

A. General Rule: Characterization of Gain at the Time of the Disposition

Gain from a disposition of property used in an activity or of an interest in an activity held through a partnership or S corporation generally is treated as gross income from that activity. Except in the case of gain from a disposition of substantially appreciated property formerly used in a nonpassive activity and gain attributable to such property from a disposition of an interest in a partnership or S corporation, such gain is passive activity gross income if the activity is a passive activity for the taxable year of the disposition.

For purposes of this rule, the gain recognized upon the disposition of a partnership interest or S corporation stock is treated as gain from the disposition of an interest in the activities in which the partnership or S corporation has an interest. Rules relating to the allocation of gain among the activities of a partnership or S corporation and the treatment of gain allocated to an activity that includes substantially appreciated property formerly used in a nonpassive activity are discussed under the heading "Dispostions of interests in partnerships and S corporations".

The Service recognizes that an approach that focuses on the character of the activity at the time of a disposition may in many circumstances appear arbitrary, and considered various other approaches. These approaches, including approaches taking into account the nature of the activity or the use of the property during the taxpayer's entire holding period, were rejected because they are found to be equally arbitrary and substantially more difficult to administer.

The Service invites comment on the rules relating to the treatment of gain from dispositions of interests in activities and interests in property used in activities.

B. Disposition of Property Used in More Than One Activity in the 12 Months Preceding the Disposition

To ensure that the character of gain realized on the disposition of property reflects the use of the property for a reasonable period preceding the disposition, § 1.469-2T(c)(2)(ii) requires the taxpayer to allocate the amount realized on the disposition and the adjusted basis of the property among the activities in which the property was used during the 12-month period preceding the disposition. For purposes of this rule, the term "activity" includes, e.g., personal use and holding for investment.

The regulations provide only that the allocation of amount realized and adjusted basis must be reasonable. Examples illustrate that an allocation among activities is considered reasonable if it is based on the period for which the property is used in each such activity during the 12-month period. These examples are not intended to foreclose the use of other reasonable allocation methods.

In recognition of the recordkeeping burden that this allocation rule may impose, § 1.469-2T(c)(2)(ii) also provides a de minimis exception under which the amount realized and adjusted basis of property that was predominantly used in one activity during the 12-month period preceding its disposition may be allocated solely to that activity if the value of the property does not exceed the lesser of (a) $10,000 and (b) 10 percent of the value of all property used in the activity at the time of the disposition.

The Service invites comment on the feasibility of the allocation requirement generally, including comment on allocation rules that may be helpful to taxpayers.

C. Disposition of Substantially Appreciated Property Formerly Used in a Nonpassive Activity

The general rule characterizing gain by reference to the character of the activity in which property is used at the time of disposition could, if not limited, encourage taxpayers to structure dispositions in a manner that generates passive activity gross income in inappropriate situations. Accordingly, § 1.469-2T(c)(2)(iii) provides that any gain from a disposition of substantially appreciated property is treated as not from a passive activity unless the property was used in a passive activity for either (a) 20 percent of the taxpayer's holding period for the property or (b) the entire 24-month period ending on the date of the disposition. For purposes of this rule, property is substantially appreciated if its fair market value is more than 120 percent of its adjusted basis.

D. Pre-1987 Installment Sales

In Notice 87-8, 1987-1 C.B. 421, the Service announced that, under these regulations, gain recognized on the installment method would be treated as not from a passive activity if, but for the use of the installment method, the taxpayer would have taken the gain into account for a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987. This rule is inconsistent with a proposed technical correction to section 469, and is not included in these regulations. Moreover, the Service will not enforce the rule announced in Notice 87-8 unless and until it is adopted in regulations under section 469.

X. Portfolio Income Excluded From Passive Activity Gross Income

A. General Rule

Section 1.469-2T(c)(3) provides that passive activity gross income does not include portfolio income, which is defined as gross income that is derived from specified sources (including interest, dividends, annuities, and royalties) and is not derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business. Section 1.469-2T(c)(3)(ii) provides that, for purposes of this rule, gross income is treated as derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business only to the extent specifically provided in the regulations. That provision also specifically identifies certain types of income as derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business and provides that the Commissioner may similarly treat additional types of income as similarly derived. The Service invites comment on and ruling requests relating to the treatment of interest, dividends, annuities, and royalties as derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business.

B. Characterization of Royalties From Licensing Intangible Property

Section 1.469-2T(c)(3)(iii)(B) provides that royalties from licensing intangible property may be treated as derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business only if the person receiving such royalties either created the property or performed substantial services or incurred substantial costs with respect to the development or marketing of the property. Although the determinations under this rule are generally based on all of the facts and circumstances, a person will be treated as deriving royalties in the ordinary course of a trade or business if either of two quantitative tests are satisfied. The Service invites public comment on the appropriateness of this rule and the need for additional guidance. In particular, the Service seeks comment on the quantitative tests.

C. Mineral Royalties

The regulations do not include special rules for determining whether mineral royalties are derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business because the Service is continuing to develop criteria for making this determination. The regulations include only one example illustrating the treatment of mineral royalties. This example, which follows from § 1.469-2T(c)(3)(ii)(D), indicates that royalty income derived from royalty interests held in a trade or business activity of trading or dealing in such interests is treated as derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business.

Under § 1.469-2T(c)(3)(ii), the only other mineral royalties treated as income derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business are those identified by the Commissioner. Therefore, unless and until these regulations are amended, taxpayers may not treat mineral royalties (other than royalties derived from a trade or business of trading or dealing in royalty interests) as derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business without obtaining a ruling.

Nonetheless, the Service believes that it may be appropriate to treat a portion of a mineral royalty payment as derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business in some cases not involving a trade or business of trading or dealing in royalty interests. Assume, for example, that royalty income is derived from an overriding royalty interest created on the transfer of a working interest by a partnership engaged in the trade or business of oil and gas development, and that the partnership is not taxed upon receipt of the royalty interest. In such a case, it may be appropriate to treat the royalty payments, by analogy to sections 483 and 1274, as deferred payments with respect to the sale of the working interest. Under this approach, the portion of each royalty payment that represents consideration paid to the partnership for the working interest would be treated as income derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business, and only the interest element in the payments would be treated as portfolio income. The Service invites public comment on whether and how such distinctions should be made, and how depletion deductions should be allocated between portfolio and nonportfolio components of royalty payments.

XI. Personal Service Income Excluded From Passive Activity Gross Income

A. Payments to Partners for the Performance of Services

Section 469(e)(3) provides that earned income (within the meaning of section 911(d)(2)(A)) shall not be taken into account in computing the income or loss from a passive activity for [illegible] taxable year. Section 911(d)(2)(A) defines earned income in a manner that includes all payments to partners for the performance of services. Accordingly, the regulations provide, in § 1.469-2T (c)(4)(i)(A) and (e)(2), that any payments to a partner that are described in section 707 (a) or (c) and represent compensation for the performance of services are excluded from passive activity gross income.

The regulations do not, however, adopt the suggestion of some commentators to treat as personal service income the portion of a partner's distributive share of partnership income that represents the value of the partner's services performed on behalf of the partnership.

B. Income From Retirement Plans

Taxable distributions from pension, profit-sharing, and other retirement plans generally are comprised of compensation for past services and investment income. Both of these components generally are excluded from passive activity gross income. Therefore, § 1.469-2T(c)(4) provides that personal service income includes all income from such distributions

XII. Income From Section 481 Adjustments

If a change in accounting method results in an increase in taxable income under section 481 (a "positive section 481 adjustment"), the portion of the adjustment attributable to activities that were passive activities in the year of change is treated, under § 1.469-2T(c)(5), as passive activity gross income. The portion of the adjustment attributable to an activity is determined by allocating the adjustment among the activities that would have given rise to a positive section 481 adjustment if a separate section 481 adjustment were computed with respect to each activity, in proportion to such hypothetical positive adjustments.

XIII. Income From Oil or Gas Properties With Respect to Which the Taxpayer Benefited From the Working Interest Exception

Section 469(c)(3)(B) provides that, if a taxpayer has a loss for a taxable year from a working interest in an oil or gas property that is treated as not from a passive activity, any net income from such property for any succeeding taxable year shall be treated as not from a passive activity.

A. Pre-1987 Losses and Losses From Material Participation Activities

Section 1.469-2T(c)(6)(i) provides that section 469(c)(3)(B) applies only where a loss from a working interest arises in a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, and is treated as not from a passive activity solely by reason of the special working interest exception in section 469(c)(3)(A). Thus, the fact that a loss for a taxable year from an oil or gas well drilled or operated pursuant to a working interest was not subject to limitation under section 469 will not cause income for any succeeding year to be treated as not from a passive activity if either (a) the loss was taken into account for a taxable year beginning prior to January 1, 1987, or (b) the loss was not subject to limitation because the taxpayer materially participated in the activity in which the loss arose.

B. Definition of "Property"

Neither section 469(c)(3)(B) nor the legislative history defines the term "oil or gas property." Section 1.469-2T(c)(6)(iii) provides that, for purposes of applying section 469(c)(3)(B) with respect to a working interest, the term "oil or gas property" means any oil or gas property the value of which is directly enhanced by activities the costs of which are borne by the taxpayer as a result of drilling an oil or gas well with respect to the working interest. Thus, the definition of "property" in section 614(a) and the regulations thereunder is not relevant for this purpose.

The definition of the term "oil or gas property" for purposes of section 469(c)(3)(B) is illustrated by three examples. The first example indicates that if the drilling of a well on one tract reveals that a single reservoir underlies that tract and another tract in which the taxpayer owns an interest, the taxpayer's interests in both tracts are treated as part of the same oil or gas property. The second example indicates that if a well is drilled through two formations, both formations are treated as part of the same oil or gas property. The third example indicates that the mere fact that drilling activities generate information indicating the presence of oil or gas in a general geographical area is insufficient to establish that the value of oil or gas properties in such area is "directly" enhanced by the activities generating the information.

XIV. Passive Activity Deductions

A. General Rule

Section 1.469-2T(d)(1) provides that a deduction is a "passive activity deduction" for a taxable year if the deduction (a) arises in connection with the conduct of an activity that is a passive activity for the taxable year or (b) is carried over from the preceding taxable year under section 469(b). For purposes of this rule, a deduction is treated as arising in the taxable year in which the deduction would be allowable if taxable income for all taxable years were determined without regard to sections 469 and 1211. Thus, for example, if a partner's distributive share of a partnership deduction is disallowed under section 704(d) in 1987, but is not disallowed under section 704(d) (or any other provision other than section 469 or 1211) in 1988, the deduction is treated as arising in 1988.

This rule has two significant effects. First, a deduction is not taken into account in computing the passive activity loss and credit until the first taxable year in which the deduction is not disallowed by any applicable limitation other than those contained in sections 469 and 1211. Second, the determination of whether a deduction from an activity is a passive activity deduction does not depend on the character of the activity in taxable years in which the deduction is disallowed under limitations other than section 469. Thus, in the example in the preceding paragraph, the determination of whether the partner's deduction is a passive activity deduction in 1988 depends solely on whether the activity in which it arises is a passive activity of the partner in 1988.

Section 501(c)(2) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 provides that section 469 shall not apply to any loss, deduction, or credit carried to a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987. Consistent with the rule, § 1.469-2T(d)(2)(x) provides that an item of loss or deduction that would have been allowed for a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987, but for section 465, 704(d), or 1366(d), is not treated as passive activity deduction.

B. Losses From Dispositions

Section 1.469-2T(d)(5) generally treats any loss recognized upon the disposition of property used in an activity or of an interest in an activity held through a partnership or S corporation as a deduction from such activity. Rules relating to the allocation of loss among activities of a partnership or S corporation are discussed under the heading "Dispositions of interests in partnerships and S corporations." Under section 469(g)(1), the loss from a disposition may be treated in whole or in part as a loss that is not from a passive activity. Future regulations will provide rules for determining when a loss is treated under section 469(g)(1) as not from a passive activity.

C. Coordination With Sections 465, 704 (d), and 1366(d)

Since, for purposes of section 469, a deduction is not treated as arising in a taxable year in which it is disallowed under section 465, 704(d), or 1366(d), rules are needed to determine which deductions are disallowed for the taxable year under such sections. Section 1.469-2T(d)(6) provides such rules.

Under § 1.469-2T(d)(6), if section 465, 704(d), or 1366(d) disallows all or any part of the taxpayer's loss attributable to an activity (within the meaning of section 465), or to an interest in a partnership or S corporation, as the case may be, a portion of each deduction taken into account in computing such loss is disallowed. To the extent the regulations under those provisions are not consistent with the rules in § 1.469-2T(d)(6), the Service expects that such regulations will be amended.

The regulations do not include any other rules coordinating section 469 with other limitations on losses and deductions. The Service invites comment on the the need for additional coordination rules.

XV. Special Rules for Partners and S Corporation Shareholders

A. In General

The determination of whether an item of income or deduction from a partnership or S corporation is an item of passive activity gross income or a passive activity deduction, respectively, is made by reference to the taxpayer's participation in the activity that generated the item of income or deduction. Section 1.469-2T(e)(1) provides that, in the case of items of income, gain, loss, and deduction from an activity conducted through a fiscal year partnership or S corporation, the taxpayer's participation is determined for the entity's taxable year. The Service invites comment on the application of this rule.

B. Certain Payments to Partners

Section 1.469-2T(e)(2)(i) provides that items of gross income and deduction attributable to a transaction between a partner and a partnership shall be characterized for purposes of section 469 in a manner consistent with the treatment of such transaction under section 707(a). Section 1.469-2T(e)(2)(ii) provides that a payment to a partner for the performance of services or the use of capital, if described in section 707(c) or section 736(a)(2), is generally characterized for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder as a payment of compensation for services or interest, as the case may be, and not as a distributive share of partnership income. The Service expects that a conforming amendment will be made to § 1.707-1.

In addition, § 1.469-2T(e)(2)(iii) provides that any gain or loss taken into account by a retiring partner or a deceased partner's successor in interest as a result or a deceased partner's successor in interest as a result of a payment under section 736(b) is treated a passive activity gross income or a passive activity deduction only to the extent that the gain or loss would have been treated as passive activity gross income or a passive activity deduction if it had been recognized at the time that the liquidation of the retiring or deceased partner's interest commenced.

C. Dispositions of Interests in Partnerships and S Corporations

In general, for Federal income tax purposes, a disposition of an interest in a partnership or S corporation (a "passthrough entity") is treated as a disposition of such interest, rather than as a disposition of an interest in each of the entity's assets. The Service believes that the accurate measurement of passive activity gross income and deductions would be furthered by requiring such a disposition to be treated as a disposition of an interest in the passthrough entity's assets. The regulations nonetheless have not adopted this approach as the general rule because a reasonably accurate measurement of passive activity gross income and deductions generally may be accomplished by allocating the gain or loss from the disposition of an interest in a passthrough entity among the entity's activities.

Section 1.469-2T(e)(3) contains rules governing the treatment, for purposes of the passive loss and credit limitations, of a disposition of an interest in a passthrough entity by a holder of such an interest (the "holder"). A transitional rule also is provided.

The general rule, contained in § 1.469-2T(e)(3)(ii), requires a holder's gain or loss from a disposition of an interest in a passthrough entity (including gain or loss recognized under section 731(a)) to be allocated among the activities of the passthrough entity in proportion to the amounts of gain or loss, respectively, that would have been allocated to the holder by the passthrough entity with respect to each of the entity's activities if the entity had sold its interests in such activities on the applicable valuation date. Generally, the passthrough entity may select either the beginning of the taxable year of the passthrough entity in which the holder's disposition occurs or the date of such disposition as the applicable valuation date. The date of the holder's disposition of an interest in the passthrough entity must be used as the applicable valuation date, however, if since the beginning of the entity's taxable year the entity has sold a significant amount of the property used in any activity or the holder has contributed a significant amount of substantially appreciated or substantially depreciated property to the passthrough entity. For purposes of this rule, property is substantially appreciated if its fair market value exceeds 120 percent of its adjusted basis, and property is substantially depreciated if its adjusted basis exceeds 120 percent of its fair market value.

Under § 1.469-2T(e)(3)(iii), gain from a holder's disposition of an interest in a passthrough entity that is allocated to a passive activity under the general rule will nonetheless be treated as gain that is not from a passive activity if (a) gain that would be treated as gain that is not from a passive activity under § 1.469-2T(c)(2)(iii) would have been allocated to the holder if all of the property used in the activity had been sold, and (b) the amount of that gain exceeds 10 percent of the holder's gain from the disposition that is allocated to the activity under the general rule. This rule is designed to prevent taxpayers from using passthrough entities to structure dispositions of property in a manner that generates passive income in situations where such income would otherwise be treated as not from a passive activity under § 1.469-2I(c)(2)(iii).

Section 1.469-2T(c)(3)(iv) provides a transitional rule for dispositions of interests in a passthrough entity that occur during any taxable year of the entity beginning prior to February 19, 1988. Under this transitional rule, gain or loss from a qualifying disposition of an interest in the entity may be allocated among the activities of the entity under any reasonable method that the selects. This transitional rule does not apply to any sale of an interest in a passthrough entity that occurs after February 19, 1988, if the holder contributes certain substantially appreciated property (as defined above) to the entity after that date.

The Service continues to study the issues presented by dispositions of interests in passthrough entities and invites comment on the treatment accorded these dispositions under § 1.469-2T(e)(3).

XVI. Recharacterization of Certain Passive Activity Gross Income

A. In General

Section 469 was intended to prevent taxpayers from using losses from rental activities and passive business activities to shelter any of three types of income: (a) Personal service income, (b) active business income, and (c) Portfolio investment income. Congress recognized the difficulty of writing statutory rules that would clearly distinguish income in these classes from income properly falling in the rental or passive business income category, and anticipated the need for additional rules to address transactions structured in order to maximize the amount of income treated as rental or passive business income. Consequently, Congress enacted section 469 (1), (2), and (3), granting to the Secretary the authority to prescribe regulations that eliminate certain items of gross income, or the net income from certain activities, from the computation of the passive activity loss and credit.

The Conference Report accompanying the Act states that the Secretary's regulatory authority is intended to be "exercised to protect the underlying purpose of the passive loss provision, i.e., preventing the sheltering of positive income sources through the use of tax losses derived from passive business activities." H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 99-841, 99th Cong., 2nd Sess., vol. II, at 147 (1986).

In the absence of regulations, taxpayers would be encouraged to generate passive activity gross income by (a) changing their participation in, and the ownership structure of, their active businesses, and (b) replacing their portfolio investments with investments in rental or passive business activities that share many of the investment characteristics of traditional portfolio investments. Although attempts to derive capital income from rental or passive business sources are not generally abusive, they could, if undeterred, frustrate Congress' intent that the passive loss provision prevent "the sheltering of positive income sources." Thus, § 1.469-2T(f) requires that income from certain activities be treated as income that is not from a passive activity.

Since taxpayers could not clearly foresee the particular recharacterization rules that these regulations would adopt, the provisions in § 1.469-2T(f) that recharacterize income from activities based on factors other than the taxpayer's participation in such activities do not apply to gross income taken into account for any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1983. In addition, the rule recharacterizing income from self-rented property does not apply to income that is attributable to the rental of property pursuant to a written binding contract entered into before February 19, 1988.

The rules contained in § 1.469-2T(f) apply only to gross income that, in the absence of such rules, would be treated as passive activity gross income. Thus, if an activity is not a passive activity, the rules in § 1.469-2T(f) do not apply to gross income from the activity. Moreover, except as specifically provided by regulation, the fact that an amount of gross income from an activity is recharacterized under § 1.469-2T(f) does not cause that activity to be treated as other than a passive activity for purposes of section 469 or these regulations.

B. Rules Preventing Conversion of Active Business Income Into Passive Activity Gross Income

1. Passive activities in which the taxpayer's participation is significant. The Service recognizes that, in the case of an activity that is not the full-time occupation of the taxpayer, the rules regarding material participation set forth in § 1.469-5T are stringent. As a result, a taxpayer spending relatively small amounts of time in unrelated activities could, in the absence of regulations, treat the gross income from such activities as passive activity gross income even though the taxpayer's participation and services are significant factors in generating the income from the activities.

In view of this concern, § 1.469-2T(f)(2) provides that an amount of the taxpayer's gross income from a significant participation passive activity equal to the taxpayer's net passive income from the activity is treated as not from a passive activity. For purposes of this rule, a significant participation passive activity is an activity (other than a rental activity) in which the taxpayer participates for more than 100 hours, but does not materially participate, for the taxable year.

The Service does not believe it appropriate to treat the taxpayer's net income, but not the taxpayer's net losses, from activities as nonpassive if the taxpayer's involvement in such activities is substantial. Accordingly, § 1.469-5T(a)(4) provides that a taxpayer materially participates in activities that would otherwise be significant participation passive activities for purposes of § 1.469-2T(f)(2) if the taxpayer's participation in all such activities exceeds 500 hours for the taxable year.

2. Activities involving the rental of property developed by the taxpayer. In general, an activity involving the rental of property is a passive activity. Under § 1.469-2T(c)(2), gain from the disposition of property used in a passive activity generally is treated as passive activity gross income. It is not appropriate, however, to treat a taxpayer's gain from the sale of a rental property as passive activity gross income if the taxpayer materially or significantly participated in the development of the property and the gain is predominantly attributable to the development of the property rather than to appreciation during the rental period.

Accordingly, § 1.469-2T(f)(5) provides that, in certain situations, an amount of a taxpayer's gross income from renting and selling an item of property equal to the taxpayer's net passive income from such rental and sale is treated as not from a passive activity. This rule applies if (a) any gain from the sale, exchange, or other disposition of the property is included in the taxpayer's income for the taxable year, (b) during any taxable year the taxpayer materially or significantly participated in a trade or business activity involving the performance of services for the purpose of enhancing the value of the property, and (c) a binding contract for the sale or exchange was entered into less than 24 months after the rental of the property commenced.

In general, the effect of this rule is that property developed by the taxpayer must be rented for at least 24 months prior to selling the property or contracting for its sale or the taxpayer's gain from the sale will not be treated as passive activity gross income.

3. Self-rented property. As indicated above, section 469 is intended, in part, to prevent taxpayers from sheltering active business income with losses from rental activities and passive business activities. Income from an active business consists of both income from services and income from capital invested in the business. In the absence of regulations, a taxpayer could derive passive activity gross income from an active business in which tangible property is used by renting the property to an entity conducting the activity (or by causing an entity holding the property to rent the property to the taxpayer). It would be inconsistent with the purposes of section 469 to treat rental income as passive activity gross income in such cases, and the Conference Report accompanying the Act states that it would be appropriate for the Service to exercise its regulatory authority under section 469(1)(3) in the case of "related party leases or sub-leases, with respect to property used in a business activity, that have the effect of reducing active business income and creating passive income." H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 99-841, 99th Cong., 2nd Sess., vol. II, at 147 (1986).

Accordingly, § 1.469-2T(f)(6) provides that an amount of the taxpayer's gross income from renting an item of property equal to the taxpayer's net passive income from such rental is treated as not from a passive activity if the property is rented for use in a trade or business activity in which the taxpayer materially participates for the taxable year. The Service recognizes that it has the authority to treat part or all of the taxpayer's rental expense in such cases as a self-charged item, and that the amount of rental income that is recharacterized under § 1.469-2T(f)(6) may exceed the amount of income that it would be appropriate to recharacterize as a self-charged item. The Service invites comments on the relationship between this rule and the rules to be provided under § 1.469-7T (relating to the treatment of self-charged items of income and expense).

C. Rules Preventing Conversion of Portfolio Income Into Passive Activity Gross Income

1. Activities involving the rental of nondepreciable property. The Conference Report accompanying the Act states that it may be appropriate for the Service to treat "ground rents that produce income without significant expenses" as not from a passive activity. Consistently with this suggestion, § 1.469-2T(f)(3) provides that an amount of the taxpayer's gross income from an activity of renting nondepreciable property equal to the taxpayer's net passive income from the activity is treated as not from a passive activity. Since nondepreciable property may be rented together with incidental depreciable property (e.g., land with minor improvements), raising a factual issue as to whether an activity in which nondepreciable property is leased consists primarily of renting such property, § 1.469-2T(f)(3) provides a bright line for distinguishing activities involving the rental of nondepreciable property from other rental activities. Under the regulations, income from a rental activity is subject to this recharacterization rule if the unadjusted basis of the depreciable property rented in the activity is less than 30 percent of the unadjusted basis of all property rented in the activity. The Service invites comment regarding the appropriateness of this objective standard.

2. Equity-financed lending activities. Under § 1.469-2T(c)(3)(ii)(A), interest income from loans made in the ordinary course of a trade or business of lending money is not portfolio income. Absent a regulation expressly treating income from such an activity as nonpassive income, taxpayers could derive passive income from investments substantially similar to mutual fund investments by becoming passive investors in partnerships or S corporations that engage in a trade or business of lending equity funds contributed by the taxpayers. Permitting such income to be treated as passive income would be inconsistent with the purpose of section 469 to prevent the sheltering of portfolio income with losses from rental and passive business activities. On the other hand, income derived from borrowing money and lending the proceeds at a higher interest rate does not resemble the kind of portfolio income which Congress intended to protect from sheltering by passive losses.

Accordingly, § 1.469-2T(f)(4) treats as nonpassive income an amount of the taxpayer's gross income from an equity-financed lending activity equal to the lesser of (a) the taxpayer's equity-financed interest income from the activity or (b) the taxpayer's net passive income from the activity. This rule applies to the lending activities in which the average balance of debt incurred in the activity (determined at the entity level) does not exceed 80 percent of the average balance of interest-bearing assets held in the activity. In general, the taxpayer's equity-financed interest income from the activity is equal to the taxpayer's interest income from the activity multiplied by the activity's ratio of equity to interest-bearing assets. This rule is designed to treat as nonpassive income only that portion of the taxpayer's income from the activity that approximates the product of (a) the average interest rate of the activity's interest-bearing assets and (b) the taxpayer's equity contribution to the activity.

3. Passthrough entities licensing intangible property. Section § 1.469-2T(c)(3)(iii)(B) provides that royalty income received by a passthrough entity from the licensing of intangible property may be treated as income derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business if the entity (a) created the property or (b) performed substantial services or incurred substantial costs with respect to the development or marketing of the property. This treatment is appropriate in the case of a taxpayer who owns an interest in such an entity at the time that the entity creates such property, performs such services, or incurs such costs. If, however, a taxpayer acquires an interest in such an entity after the entity creates such property, performs such services, or incurs such costs, the taxpayer's royalty income resembles portfolio income rather than income derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business. Accordingly, § 1.469-2T(f)(7) provides that an amount of the taxpayer's gross income from such property equal to the taxpayer's net passive income from such property is generally treated as not from a passive activity. The Service invites comment on the rules employed in § 1.469-2T(f)(7) to determine when taxpayers are subject to this rule.

D. Limitation on Recharacterized Income

The rules contained in § 1.469-2T(f)(2) (relating to significant participation activities), § 1.469-2T(f)(3) (relating to the rental of nondepreciable property), and § 1.469-2T(f)(4) (relating to equity-financed lending activities) treat as nonpassive income an amount of the taxpayer's gross income from an activity equal to the taxpayer's net passive income from the activity. Under § 1.469-2T(f)(9)(i), the taxpayer's "net passive income" from an activity for a taxable year is the excess of the taxpayer's passive activity gross income from the activity for the year (determined without regard to these recharacterization rules) over the taxpayer's passive activity deductions from the activity for the year. The rules contained in § 1.469-2T(f)(5) (relating to the rental of property developed by the taxpayer), § 1.469-2T(f)(6) (relating to self-rented property), and § 1.469-2T(f)(7) (relating to passthrough entities licensing intangible property) are similar, but apply on a property-by-property basis.

Taxpayers should note that, under § 1.469-2T(d)(1)(ii), a deduction from an activity that is disallowed under section 469 for a taxable year is treated as a passive activity deduction from the activity for the succeeding taxable year and that, under § 1.469-2T(f)(7)(ii)(B) and (9)(iv), a similar rule applies when deductions reasonably allocable to an item of property are disallowed. Thus, if a taxpayer's loss from an activity or an item of property is disallowed for a taxable year, the taxpayer's net passive income from the activity or property for the succeeding year is reduced by the amount of such disallowed loss. As a result, the regulations do not treat income from an activity or an item of property as nonpassive income while, at the same time, prohibiting the deduction of previously disallowed losses from such activity or property.

Although prior-year losses from an activity or an item of property subject to the rules contained in § 1.469-2T(f) generally carry forward and reduce the amount of gross income that is treated as nonpassive income under those rules, this is not the case to the extent any such loss for the prior taxable year exceeds the disallowed loss allocated to such activity or property for such year under the rules of § 1.469-1T(f). In that event, the excess loss has in effect absorbed passive income, thereby resulting in the disallowance of passive losses from other activities. The Service is studying the interaction between the rules for allocating disallowed losses and rules, such as those contained in § 1.469-2T(f) and those to be provided with respect to former passive activities, under which a carryover loss may be allowed to the extent of income that would otherwise be treated as nonpassive income. The Service invites suggestions for the coordination of those rules.

E. Possible Recharacterization Rules to be Contained in Future Regulations

The Service recognizes that the rules in these regulations are not exhaustive and that taxpayers may structure additional investments that have economic characteristics similar to those of portfolio investments so as to derive passive activity gross income from such investments. The Service intends to monitor developments in this area closely, and anticipates prescribing additional regulations to the extent necessary to prevent portfolio-type income from being treated as passive activity gross income. In general, any such additional regulations would apply prospectively only. In appropriate circumstances, however, the regulations might apply to income, derived after the date the regulations are published, from investments made prior to such date, but in such cases the rules would be issued in proposed form (rather than as temporary regulations), with a period for public comment before the regulations become final.

During the preparation of these regulations, the Service considered an approach to recharacterizing certain passive activity gross income that is illustrative of the kinds of additional regulations the Service may prescribe in the future. Under this approach, gross income attributable to a preferred or guaranteed return from an investment (i.e., a return that through preferences or other arrangements is derived from sources other than the taxpayer's own invested capital) would be treated as portfolio income.

Some commentators have suggested that such a rule should address the following situation:

> A limited partnership is formed to acquire a rental property for $10 million. The general partner contributes $5 million to the partnership and the remaining $5 million of partnership capital is raised through a private placement of limited partnership interests to five individuals. The partnership agreement allocates 99 percent of partnership taxable income to the limited partners until the income allocated to them equals a 10 percent cumulative annual return on their invested capital, with any remaining taxable income allocated 15 percent to the limited partners and 85 percent to the general partner. Thus, the income earned on the general partner's invested capital will be applied, if necessary, to satisfy the limited partners' right to a 10 percent cumulative return.

Because of the limited partners' preferential right to income, their interests, depending on circumstances such as the nature of the partnership's investment, may have the characteristics of a portfolio investment. The Service considered an approach under which a limited partner's gross income attributable to a preferred return would in certain circumstances be treated as portfolio income. The Service continues to study this approach and invites comment on the circumstances in which a "preferred" or "guaranteed" return should be treated as portfolio income.

XVII. Passive Activity Credit

A. Credits Subject to Section 469

A credit may be limited under section 469 if it is from a passive activity and is described in section 38 (b) (1) through (5) (relating to general business credits), section 27(b) (relating to section 936 corporations), section 28 (relating to clinical testing of certain drugs), or section 29 (relating to fuel from nonconventional sources).

Section 1.469-3T(b) provides that a credit is treated as from a passive activity if (a) it arises in connection with a passive activity (i.e., an activity that is passive for the taxable year in which the credit would be allowed if section 469 and other specified limitations did not apply) or (b) in the case of a credit attributable to qualified progress expenditures (within the meaning of section 46(d)), it is reasonable to believe that the progress expenditure property (within the meaning of section 46(d)(2)) will be used in a passive activity when it is placed in service. Thus, for example, a credit attributable to qualified rehabilitation expenditures (within the meaning of section 48(g)(2)) which is allowed for the taxable year under section 46(d), is treated as a credit from a passive activity of the taxpayer if either (a) the activity in which the qualified rehabilitation expenditures are paid or incurred is a passive activity of the taxpayer for the taxable year in which such expenditures are paid or incurred, or (b) it is reasonable to believe that the rehabilitated property will be used in a passive activity of the taxpayer when it is placed in service.

B. Determination of Regular Tax Liability Allocable to Passive Activities

Under section 469(d)(2), the passive activity credit is the amount by which the sum of the taxpayer's credits that are subject to section 469 for the taxable year exceeds the taxpayer's regular tax liability allocable to all passive activities for such year. Section 469(j)(3) provides that the term "regular tax liability" has the meaning given such term by section 26(b). Section 1.469-3T(d)(1) provides that the taxpayer's regular tax liability for the taxable year that is allocable to all passive activities is the regular tax liability on the excess of the taxpayer's taxable income for the year over the amount by which the taxpayer's passive activity gross income exceeds the taxpayer's passive activity deductions for the taxable year.

C. Coordination With Other Limitations on Credits

In general, the limitation on the passive activity credit applies before all other limitations that may apply to credits from passive activities (other than the limitation in section 41(g) (relating to research credits of certain individuals)). If a credit is subject to section 469 for a taxable year but is not disallowed by section 469, the credit becomes subject to other limitations in the same manner as credits from activities that are not passive activities. In determining the years to which a general business credit may be carried, the credit is treated for purposes of section 39 as a current year business credit in the first taxable year in which the credit is subject to section 469 but is not disallowed thereby.

XVIII. Material Participation

A. In General

Under § 1.469-5T(a), an individual is treated as materially participating in an activity for a taxable year if and only if the individual meets one of seven tests. The first four tests (contained in § 1.469-5T(a) (1) through (4)) are quantitative in nature, and are based on the number of hours spent participating in the activity during the year. The fifth and sixth tests (contained in § 1.469-5T(a) (5)) and (6)) are based on material participation by the taxpayer in prior years. The seventh test (contained in § 1.469-5T (a)(7)) is a facts-and-circumstances test.

B. Quantitative tests

Under § 1.469-5T(a)(1), an individual is treated as materially participating in an activity for a taxable year if the individual participates in the activity for more than 500 hours during the year.

The Service believes that the 500-hour test will have the effect of restricting deductions from the types of trade or business activities that Congress intended to treat as passive activities, since few investors in traditional tax shelters devote more than 500 hours during a taxable year to any such investment. In addition, the Service believes that income from an activity in which an individual participates for more than 500 hours during a taxable year is not properly classified as income from a passive activity.

Under § 1.469-5T(a)(2), an individual is treated as materially participating in an activity for a taxable year if the individual's participation in the activity for the year constitutes substantially all of the participation in the activity for the taxable year. Section 1.469-5T(a)(3) treats an individual as materially participating in an activity for a taxable year if the individual participates in the activity for more than 100 hours during the taxable year, and the individual's participation in the activity for the year is not less than that of any other individual. These rules are included because the service recognizes that the operation of some activities may not require more than 500 hours of participation, or may not require more than 500 hours of participation by any one individual during a taxable year.

Under § 1.469-5T(a)(4), an individual is treated as materially participating in all of the individual's significant participation activities for a taxable year if the individual's aggregate participation is significant participation activities for the year exceeds 500 hours. For purposes of this rule, a significant participation activity is a trade or business activity in which the individual participates for more than 100 hours during the taxable year but in which the individual does not materially participate for the year (without regard to this rule). This rule is included because the Service believes that an individual who devotes more than 500 hours during a taxable year to several activities, each of which is significant activity of such individual, should be treated similarly to an individual who devotes an equivalent amount of time to a single activity.

C. Tests Based on Material Participation in Prior Years

Under § 1.469-5T(a)(5), an individual is treated as materially participating in an activity for a taxable year if the individual materially participated in such activity for any five of the ten taxable years that immediately precede the taxable year.

Under § 1.469-5T(a)(6), an individual is treated as materially participating in a personal service activity for a taxable year if the taxpayer materially participated in the activity for any three taxable years that precede the taxable year. For purposes of this rule, an activity is a personal service activity if it principally involves the performance of personal services in (a) the fields of health, law, engineering, architecture, accounting, actuarial science, performing arts, or consulting, or (b) any other trade or business in which capital is not a material income-producing factor.

These rules are included because the Service believes that an activity in which an individual has materially participated over a long period of time or a personal service activity in which an individual has participated for a substantial period of time is likely to represent the individual's principal livelihood rather than a passive investment. In particular, the Service does not believe that withdrawal from a longstanding active business or from a personal service business that has been active for a substantial period should convert an individual's earnings from the business to passive income. Thus, the Service believes the income from such businesses generally is part of the earned income base that section 469 was intended to protect. In the case of a longstanding active business (other than a personal service business), however, the Service believes that a continuing interest in such an activity is more appropriately viewed as an investment in a passive activity if the individual has not materially participated in the activity for a significant period of time during the 10-year period immediately preceding the taxable year.

D. Facts-and-Circumstances Test

Section 1.469-5T(a)(7) provides that an individual may be treated as materially participating in an activity for a taxable year based on all of the facts and circumstances. The general principles to be followed in applying the facts-and-circumstances test are not addressed in these regulations, and will be included in future regulations. Section 1.469-5T(b), however, provides that certain participation is insufficient to constitute material participation, or is not taken into account, under this test. Thus, except as provided in section 469(h)(3), the fact that an individual satisfies participation standards in other provisions of the Code and the regulations (such as the "material participation" standards in sections 1402 and 2032A) is not taken into account in determining whether the individual materially participates in an activity for purposes of section 469. In addition, an individual's participation in management of an activity is not taken into account in applying the facts-and-circumstances test to the individual if a paid manager participates in the activity or if the management services performed by such individual are exceeded by those performed by any other individual. Finally, an individual who does not participate in an activity for more than 100 hours during the taxable year cannot satisfy the facts-and-circumstances test for the year.

E. Treatment of Limited Partners

Section 469(h)(2) provides that, except as provided in regulations, no interest in a limited partnership shall be treated as an interest with respect to which a taxpayer materially participates. Section 1.469-5T(d) provides two exceptions to this general rule. First, the general rule does not apply to an activity for a taxable year if (a) the taxpayer participates in the activity for more than 500 hours during the taxable year, or (b) the taxpayer is treated as materially participating in the activity for the taxable year under either the longstanding material participant test or the personal-service-activity test. Second, the general rule does not apply with respect to a limited partnership interest in a partnership in which the taxpayer is also a general partner.

F. Trusts and Estates

Material participation rules for trusts and estates will be included in future regulations providing rules for the application of section 469 to trusts, estates, and their beneficiaries.

G. Meaning of "Participation"

Section 1.469-5T(f) generally provides that all work done in an activity by an individual who owns an interest in the activity (other than an interest owned through a C corporation) is taken into account as participation by the individual in the activity, without regard to the capacity in which the individual does such work. Thus, work performed by an individual as an employee of a C corporation in connection with an activity in which the individual owns an interest (other than an interest owned through a C corporation) is taken into account as participation by the individual in the activity.

Section 1.469-5T(f) includes two exceptions to this general rule. First, under § 1.469-5T(f)(2)(i), work that is not customarily done by an owner is not taken into account if a principal purpose for the performance of such work is to avoid the disallowance of a passive activity loss or credit. Second, under § 1.469-5T(f)(2)(ii), work done by an individual in connection with an activity in the individual's capacity as an investor in the activity is not taken into account.

In the case of a married individual, § 1.469-5T(f)(3) provides that the participation of the individual's spouse is treated as participation by such individual for purposes of the passive loss and credit limitations, without regard to whether the participation of the spouse is material participation in its own right, whether the spouse owns an interest in the activity, or whether the individual and the individual's spouse file a joint return for the taxable year.

H. No Recordkeeping Requirements

Notwithstanding the quantitative tests set forth in the regulations, § 1.469-5T(f)(4) expressly provides that taxpayers need not keep contemporaneous records of their hours of participation in each activity. The Service recognizes that, while lawyers and certain other professionals are accustomed to maintaining detailed records of how they spend their work days, most individuals do not customarily maintain such records. Accordingly, under the regulations, taxpayers will be allowed to prove the requisite number of hours by any reasonable means, including, but not limited to, appointment books, calenders, and narrative summaries.

I. Material Participation for Taxable Years Beginning Before January 1, 1987

A taxpayer's participation in an activity for a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987, may be relevant under rules such as those relating to longstanding material participants and personal service activities. Section 1.469-5T(j) provides that in any case in which it is necessary to determine whether an individual materially participated in an activity for any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987 (other than a taxable year of a partnership, S corporation, estate, or trust ending after December 31, 1986), the individual is treated as materially participating in the activity for such year only if the individual participated in the activity for more than 500 hours during the year. The Service believes that the 500-hour test represents the only administrable rule for dealing with the determination of material participation for taxable years beginning before 1987.

XIX. Effective date and transition rules.

A. In General

Section 469 and the regulations thereunder generally apply for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986. However, under § 1.469-11T(a)(2), specified rules in § 1.469-2T(f) treating certain income as not from a passive activity apply only for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987. These provisions are § 1.469-2T(f)(3) (relating to the rental of nondepreciable property), § 1.469-2T(f)(4) (relating to equity-financed lending activities), § 1.469-2T(f)(5) (relating to the rental of property developed by the taxpayer), § 1.469-2T(f)(6) (relating to self-rented property), and § 1.469-2T(f)(7) (relating to passthrough entities licensing intangible property). In addition, § 1.469-2T(f)(6) does not apply to income attributable to the rental of property pursuant to a written binding contract entered into before February 19, 1988.

If a taxpayer is a partner, shareholder, or beneficiary of a partnership, S corporation, estate, or trust with a taxable year ending within the taxpayer's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, passive items from such partnership, S corporation, estate, or trust are taken into account in computing the taxpayer's passive activity loss or credit even if such items are attributable to taxable years of such entities beginning before January 1, 1987, or are attributable to amounts paid or incurred prior to January 1, 1987. Under § 1.469-2T(e)(1), the treatment of an item of gross income, deduction, or credit from a fiscal year partnership or S corporation as passive activity gross income, as a passive activity deduction, or as a credit from a passive activity, respectively, is determined by reference to the taxpayer's participation in the activity to which such item relates for the partnership's or S corporation's taxable year in which the item arose. Future regulations relating to the treatment of beneficiaries of estates and trusts will provide guidance on this issue with respect to such taxpayers.

B. Effect of Events Occurring in Years Beginning Prior to 1987

Because in certain instances the treatment under the regulations of an item of gross income, deduction, or credit for the taxable year is determined in part by reference to events in prior taxable years, § 1.469-11T(a)(4) provides that events in prior taxable years generally are taken into account in making such determinations. For example, under § 1.469-5T(a)(5), an individual is treated as materially participating in an activity for the taxable year if the individual materially participated in the activity for any five of the ten taxable years that immediately precede the taxable year. Under § 1.469-11T(a)(4), a taxable year beginning prior to January 1, 1987, is taken into account for this purpose, but only if the individual participated in the activity for more than 500 hours during such taxable year.

C. Transitional Rule for Losses From Pre-Enactment Interest

1. In general. Section 469(m) provides a transitional rule for losses and credits attributable to pre-enactment interests in passive activities. Under that rule, which applies for taxable years beginning prior to 1991, the amount of the taxpayer's passive activity loss or passive activity credit that would be disallowed in the absence of the transitional rule is reduced by an amount equal to the product of a percentage and the lesser of (a) the amount of the passive activity loss or passive activity credit that would be disallowed in the absence of the transitional rule, or (b) the amount of the passive activity loss or passive activity credit that would be disallowed in the absence of the transitional rule (determined without taking into account previously disallowed passive items or passive items that are not attributable to the taxpayer's pre-enactment interests in passive activities). The percentage is 65 percent for taxable years beginning in 1987, 40 percent for taxable years beginning in 1988, 20 percent for taxable years beginning in 1989, and 10 percent for taxable years beginning in 1990.

Paragraphs (b) and (c) of § 1.469-11T (b) contain rules relating to the identification of pre-enactment interests in passive activities and the computation of the amount of the passive activity loss and credit that would be disallowed if passive items that are not attributable to the taxpayer's pre-enactment interests in passive activities were not taken into account.

2. Indentification of pre-enactment interests. Under section 469(m), a taxpayer's pre-enactment interests must be identified for each taxable year during the transition period. Thus, for each such taxable year, the taxpayer must determine which of the taxpayer's interests in activities that are passive activities for the taxable year are pre-enactment interests. Under § 1.469-11T (c)(1), a pre-enactment interest is a "qualified interest" in a "pre-enactment activity."

Section 1.469-11T(c)(3) provides that an activity is a "pre-enactment activity" if the activity was being conducted by any person on October 22, 1986, or if at least 50 percent (by value) of the property used in the activity during the taxable year was in existence or under construction on August 16, 1986, or was acquired or constructed at any time pursuant to a written binding contract in effect on August 16, 1986 (without regard to whether the taxpayer or any person related to the taxpayer was a party to such contract). Thus, for example, in the case of an activity of renting a building, the activity is a pre-enactment activity if the building was in existence or under construction on August 16, 1986.

Section 1.469-11T(c)(2) provides that an interest in an activity is a "qualified interest" if the interest was held by the taxpayer on October 22, 1986, and at all times thereafter, or was acquired by the taxpayer pursuant to written binding contracts to which the taxpayer was a party on October 22, 1986. Section 1.469-11T(c)(7) provides rules for determining whether a taxpayer was a party to a written binding contract on October 22, 1986. Under those rules, for example, if on October 22, 1986, a taxpayer was a party to a written binding contract to acquire a partnership interest, and the partnership was a party to a written bining contract to acquire an interest in an activity, the taxpayer is treated as a party to the partnership's contract.

3. Computation of pre-enactment loss and credit. Section 1.469-11T(b)(3) and (4) contains rules relating to the computation of the amount of the passive activity loss and credit that would be disallowed if the passive items that are not attributable to the taxpayer's pre-enactment interests in passive activities were not taken into account. The amounts determined under § 1.469-11T(b)(3) (relating to the pre-enactment loss) and § 1.469-11T(b)(4) (relating to the pre-enactment credit) are the amounts of the passive activity loss and the passive activity credit, respectively, that would be disallowed under § 1.469-1T(a)(1) taking into account all of the provisions of section 469 and the regulations thereunder, but applying such provisions as though the taxpayer had no interests in passive activities other than the taxpayer's pre-enactment interests. Under these rules, deductions and credits disallowed in a prior year and taken into account for the taxable year under section 469(b) (including deductions and credits attributable to pre-enactment interests) also are not taken into account.

Special Analyses

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis therefore is not required. A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the temporary regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

§ 1.469–1T General rules (temporary).

(a) Passive activity loss and credit disallowed—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (a)(2) of this section—

(i) The passive activity loss for the taxable year shall not be allowed as a deduction; and

(ii) The passive activity credit for the taxable year shall not be allowed.

(2) Exceptions. Paragraph (a)(1) of this section shall not apply to the passive activity loss or the passive activity credit for the taxable year to the extent provided in—

(i) Section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469–9T (relating to losses and credits attributable to certain rental real estate activities); and

(ii) Section 1.469–11T (relating to losses and credits attributable to certain pre-enactment interests in activities).

(b) Taxpayers to whom these rules apply. The rules of section 469 and the regulations thereunder generally apply to—

(1) Individuals;

(2) Trusts (other than trusts (or portions of trusts) described in section 671);

(3) Estates;

(4) Personal service corporations (within the meaning of paragraph (g)(2)(i) of this section); and

(5) Closely held corporations (within the meaning of paragraph (g)(2)(ii) of this section).

(c) Cross references—(1) Definition of "passive activity." Rules relating to the definition of the term "passive activity" are contained in paragraph (e) of this section.

(2) Passive activity loss. Rules relating to the computation of the passive activity loss for the taxable year are contained in § 1.469–2T.

(3) Passive activity credit. Rules relating to the computation of the passive activity credit for the taxable year are contained in § 1.469–3T.

(4) Effect of rules for other purposes. Rules relating to the effect of section 469 and the regulations thereunder for other purposes under the Code are contained in paragraph (d) of this section.

(5) Special rule for oil and gas working interests. Rules relating to the treatment of losses and credits from certain interests in oil and gas wells are contained in paragraph (e)(4) of this section

(6) Treatment of disallowed losses and credits. Paragraph (f) of this section contains rules relating to—

(i) The treatment of deductions from passive activities in taxable years in which the passive activity loss is disallowed in whole or in part under paragraph (a)(1)(i) of this section; and

(ii) The treatment of credits from passive activities in taxable years in which the passive activity credit is disallowed in whole or in part under paragraph (a)(1)(ii) of this section.

(7) Corporation subject to section 469. Rules relating to the application of section 469 and regulations thereunder to C corporations are contained in paragraph (g) of this section.

(8) Consolidated groups. Rules relating to the application of section 469 and the regulations thereunder to affiliated groups of corporations filing a consolidated return for the taxable year are contained in paragraph (h) of this section.

(9) Joint returns. Rules relating to the application of section 469 and the regulations thereunder to spouses filing a joint return for the taxable year are contained in paragraph (j) of this section.

(10) Material participation. Rules defining the term "material participation" are contained in § 1.469–5T.

(11) Effective date and transition rules. Rules relating to the effective date of section 469 and the regulations thereunder and transition rules applicable to pre-enactment interests in activities are contained in § 1.469–11T.

(12) Future regulations. (i) Rules relating to former passive activities and changes in corporate status will be contained in paragraph (k) of this section.

(ii) Rules relating to the definition of "activity" will be contained in § 1.469–4T.

(iii) Rules relating to the treatment of deductions from activities that are disposed of in certain transactions will be contained in § 1.469–6T.

(iv) Rules relating to the treatment of self-charged items of income and expense will be contained in § 1.469–7T.

(v) Rules relating to the application of section 469 and the regulations thereunder to trusts, estates, and their beneficiaries will be contained in § 1.469–8T.

(vi) Rules relating to the treatment of income, deductions, and credits from certain rental real estate activities of individuals and certain estates will be contained in § 1.469–9T.

(vii) Rules relating to the application of section 469 to publicly traded partnerships will be contained in § 1.469–10T.

(d) Effect of section 469 and the regulations thereunder for other purposes—(1) Treatment of items of passive activity income and gain. Neither the provisions of section 469 (a) (1) and paragraph (a)(1) of this section nor the characterization of items of income or deduction as passive activity gross income (within the meaning of § 1.469–2T (c)) or passive activity deductions (within the meaning of § 1.469–2T (d)) affects the treatment of any item of income or gain under any provision of the Internal Revenue Code other than section 469. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (d)(1):

Example. (i) In 1991, an individual's only income and loss from passive activities are a $10,000 capital gain from passive activity ª and a $12,000 ordinary loss from passive activity Y. The taxpayer also has a $10,000 capital loss that is not derived from a passive activity.

(ii) Under § 1.469–2T (b), the taxpayer has a $2,000 passive activity loss for the taxable year. The only effect of section 469 and the regulations thereunder is to disallow a deduction for the taxpayer's $2,000 passive activity loss for the taxable year. Thus, the taxpayer's capital loss for the taxable year is allowed because the $10,000 capital gain from passive activity ª is taken into account under section 1211 (b) in computing the taxpayer's allowable capital loss for the year.

(2) Coordination with section 1211. A passive activity deduction that is not disallowed for the taxable year under section 469 and the regulations thereunder may nonetheless be disallowed for the taxable year under section 1211. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (d)(2):

Example. In 1987, an individual derives $10,000 of ordinary income from passive activity X, no gains from the sale or exchange of captial assets or assets used in a trade or business, $12,000 of capital loss from passive activity Y, and no income, gain, deductions, or losses from any other passive activity. The capital loss from activity Y is a passive activity deduction (within the meaning of § 1.469–2T(d)). Under section 469 and the regulations thereunder, the taxpayer is allowed $10,000 of the $12,000 passive activity deduction and has a $2,000 passive activity loss for the taxable year. Since the $10,000 passive activity deduction allowed under section 469 is a capital loss, such deduction is allowable for the taxable year only to the extent provided under section 1211.

Therefore, the taxpayer is allowed $3,000 of the $10,000 capital loss under section 1211 and has a $7,000 capital loss carryover (within the meaning of section 1212 (b)) to the succeeding taxable year.

(3) Treatment of passive activity losses. Except as otherwise provided by regulations, a deduction that is disallowed for a taxable year under section 469 and the regulations thereunder is not taken into account as a deduction that is allowed for the taxable year in computing the amount subject to any tax imposed by subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (d)(3):

Example. An individual has a $5,000 passive activity loss for a taxable year, all of which is disallowed under paragraph (a)(1) of this section. All of the disallowed loss is allocated under paragraph (f) of this section to activities that are trades or businesses (within the meaning of section 1402(c)). Such loss is not taken into account for the taxable year in computing the taxpayer's taxable income subject to tax under section 1. In addition, under this paragraph (d)(3), such loss is not taken into account for the taxable year in computing the taxpayer's net earnings from self-employment subject to tax under section 1401.

(e) Definition of "passive activity"—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph (e), an activity is a passive activity of the taxpayer for a taxable year if and only if the activity—

(i) Is a trade or business activity (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(2) of this section) in which the taxpayer does not materially participate for such taxable year; or

(ii) Is a rental activity (within the meaning of paragraph (e) (3) of this section), without regard to whether or to what extent the taxpayer participates in such activity.

(2) Trade or business activity—(i) In general. An activity is a trade or business activity for a taxable year if for such year—

(A) (1) The activity involves the conduct of a trade or business (within the meaning of section 162);

(2) Research or experimental expenditures paid or incurred with respect to the activity are deductible under section 174 (or would be deductible if the taxpayer adopted the method described in section 174(a)); or

(3) The activity is described in paragraph (e)(2)(ii) of this section; and

(B) The activity is not a rental activity or an activity involving the rental of property described in paragraph (e)(3) (vi)(B) of this section.

(ii) Certain activities not involving the conduct of a trade or business treated as trade or business activities. [Reserved]

(3) Rental activity—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph (e)(3), an activity is a rental activity for a taxable year if—

(A) During such taxable year, tangible property held in connection with the activity is used by customers or held for use by customers; and

(B) The gross income attributable to the conduct of the activity during such taxable year represents (or, in the case of an activity in which property is held for use by customers, the expected gross income from the conduct of the activity will represent) amounts paid or to be paid principally for the use of such tangible property (without regard to whether the use of the property by customers is pursuant to a lease or pursuant to a service contract or other arrangement that is not denominated a lease).

(ii) Exceptions. For purposes of this paragraph (e)(3), an activity involving the use of tangible property is not a rental activity for a taxable year if for such taxable year—

(A) The average period of customer use for such property is seven days or less;

(B) The average period of customer use for such property is 30 days or less, and significant personal services (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(iv) of this section) are provided by or on behalf of the owner of the property in connection with making the property available for use by customers;

(C) Extraordinary personal services (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(v) of this section) are provided by or on behalf of the owner of the property in connection with making such property available for use by customers (without regard to the average period of customer use);

(D) The rental of such property is treated as incidental to a nonrental activity of the taxpayer under paragraph (e)(3)(vi) of this section;

(E) The taxpayer customarily makes the property available during defined business hours for nonexclusive use by various customers; or

(F) The provision of the property for use in an activity conducted by a partnership, S corporation, or joint venture in which the taxpayer owns an interest is not a rental activity under paragraph (e)(3)(vii) of this section.

(iii) Average period of customer use. For purposes of this paragraph (e)(3), the average period of customer use for property held in connection with an activity is determined for a taxable year by dividing—

(A) The aggregate number of days in all periods of customer use for such property ending during the taxable year; by

(B) The number of such periods of customer use.

For this purpose, each period during which a customer has a continuous or recurring right to use an item of property held in connection with the activity (without regard to whether the customer uses the property for the entire period or whether such right to use the property is pursuant to a single agreement or to renewals thereof) is treated as a separate period of customer use.

(iv) Significant personal services—(A) In general. For purposes of paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(B) of this section, personal services include only services performed by individuals, and do not include excluded services (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(iv)(B) of this section). In determining whether personal services provided in connection with making property available for use by customers are significant, all of the relevant facts and circumstances shall be taken into account. Relevant facts and circumstances include the frequency with which such services are provided, the type and amount of labor required to perform such services, and the value of such services relative to the amount charged for the use of the property.

(B) Excluded services. For purposes of paragraph (e)(3)(iv)(A) of this section, the term "excluded services" means, with respect to any property made available for use by customers—

(1) Services necessary to permit the lawful use of the property;

(2) Services performed in connection with the construction of improvements to the property, or in connection with the performance of repairs that extend the property's useful life for a period substantially longer than the average period for which such property is used by customers; and

(3) Services, provided in connection with the use of any improved real property, that are similar to those commonly provided in connection with long-term rentals of high-grade commercial or residential real property (e.g., cleaning and maintenance of common areas, routine repairs, trash collection, elevator service, and security at entrances or perimeters).

(v) Extraordinary personal services. For purposes of paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(C) of this section, extraordinary personal services are provided in connection with making property available for use by customers only if the services provided in connection with the use of the property are performed by individuals, and the use by customers of the property is incidental to their receipt of such services. For example, the use by patients of a hospital's boarding facilities generally is incidental to their receipt of the personal services provided by the hospital's medical and nursing staff. Similarly, the use by students of a boarding school's dormitories generally is incidental to their receipt of the personal services provided by the school's teaching staff.

(vi) Rental of property incidental to a nonrental activity of the taxpayer—(A) In general. For purposes of paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(D) of this section, the rental of property shall be treated as incidental to a nonrental activity of the taxpayer only to the extent provided in this paragraph (e)(3)(vi).

(B) Property held for investment. The rental of property during a taxable year shall be treated as incidental to an activity of holding such property for investment if and only if—

(1) The principal purpose for holding the property during such taxable year is to realize gain from the appreciation of the property (without regard to whether it is expected that such gain will be realized from the sale or exchange of the property in its current state of development); and

(2) The gross rental income from the property for such taxable year is less than two percent of the lesser of—

(i) The unadjusted basis of such property; and

(ii) The fair market value of such property.

(C) Property used in a trade or business. The rental of property during a taxable year shall be treated as incidental to a trade or business activity (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(2) of this section) if and only if—

(1) The taxpayer owns an interest in such trade or business activity during the taxable year;

(2) The property was predominantly used in such trade or business activity during the taxable year or during at least two of the five taxable years that immediately precede the taxable year; and

(3) The gross rental income from such property for the taxable year is less than two percent of the lesser of—

(i) The unadjusted basis of such property; and

(ii) The fair market value of such property.

(D) Property held for sale to customers. The rental of property during the taxable year in which the property is sold or exchanged (in a transaction in which gain or loss is recognized) shall be treated as incidental to an activity of dealing in such property if at the time of the sale or exchange the property is held by the taxpayer primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of a trade or business of the taxpayer (within the meaning of section 1221(1)).

(E) Lodging rented for convenience of employer. The provision of lodging to an employee or to an employee's spouse or dependents shall be treated as incidental to the activity (or activities) of the taxpayer in which the employee performs services if such lodging is furnished for the taxpayer's convenience (within the meaning of section 119).

(F) Unadjusted basis. For purposes of this paragraph (e)(3)(vi), the term "unadjusted basis" means adjusted basis determined without regard to any adjustment described in section 1016 that decreases basis.

(vii) Property made available for use in a nonrental activity conducted by a partnership, S corporation, or joint venture in which the taxpayer owns an interest. If the taxpayer owns an interest in a partnership, S corporation, or joint venture conducting an activity other than a rental activity, and the taxpayer provides property for use in the activity in the taxpayer's capacity as an owner of an interest in such partnership, S corporation, or joint venture, the provision of such property is not a rental activity. Thus, if a partner contributes the use of property to a partnership, none of the partner's distributive share of partnership income is income from a rental activity unless the partnership is engaged in a rental activity. In addition, a partner's gross income attributable to a payment described in section 707(c) is not income from a rental activity under any circumstances (see § 1.469-2T (e)(2)). The determination of whether property used in an activity is provided by the taxpayer in the taxpayer's capacity as an owner of an interest in a partnership, S corporation, or joint venture shall be made on the basis of all of the facts and circumstances.

(viii) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (e)(3):

Example (1). The taxpayer is engaged in an activity of leasing photocopying equipment. The average period of customer use for the equipment exceeds 30 days. Pursuant to the lease agreements, skilled technicians employed by the taxpayer maintain the equipment and service malfunctioning equipment for no additional charge. Service calls occur frequently (three times per week on average) and require substantial labor. The value of the maintenance and repair services (measured by the cost to the taxpayer of employees performing these services) exceeds 50 percent of the amount charged for the use of the equipment. Under these facts, services performed by individuals are provided in connection with the use of the photocopying equipment, but the customers' use of the photocopying equipment is not incidental to their receipt of the services. Therefore, extraordinary personal services (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(v) of this section) are not provided in connection with making the photocopying equipment available for use by customers, and the activity is a rental activity.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that the average period of customer use for the photocopying equipment exceeds seven days but does not exceed 30 days. Under these facts, significant personal services (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(iv) of this section) are provided in connection with making the photocopying equipment available for use by customers and, under paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(B) of this section, the activity is not a rental activity.

Example (3). The taxpayer is engaged in an activity of transporting goods for customers. In conducting the activity, the taxpayer provides tractor-trailers to transport goods for customers pursuant to arrangements under which the tractor-trailers are selected by the taxpayer, may be replaced at the sole option of the taxpayer, and are operated and maintained by drivers and mechanics employed by the taxpayer. The average period of customer use for the tractor-trailers exceeds 30 days. Under these facts, the use of tractor-trailers by the taxpayer's customers is incidental to their receipt of personal services provided by the taxpayer. Accordingly, the services performed in the activity are extraordinary personal services (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(v) of this section) and, under paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(C) of this section, the activity is not a rental activity.

Example (4). The taxpayer is engaged in an activity of owning and operating a residential apartment hotel. For the taxable year, the average period of customer use for apartments exceeds seven days but does not exceed 30 days. In addition to cleaning public entrances, exists, stairways, and lobbies, and collecting and removing trash, the taxpayer provides a daily maid and linen service at no additional charge. All of the services other than maid and linen service are excluded services (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(iv)(B) of this section), because such services are similar to those commonly provided in connection with long-term rentals of high-grade residential real property. The value of the maid and linen services (measured by the cost to the taxpayer of employees performing such services) is less than 10 percent of the amount charged to tenants for occupancy of apartments. Under these facts, neither significant personal services (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(iv) of this section) nor extraordinary personal services (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(v) of this section) are provided in connection with making apartments available for use by customers. Accordingly, the activity is a rental activity.

Example (5). The taxpayer owns 1,000 acres of unimproved land with a fair market value of $350,000 and an unadjusted basis of $210,000. The taxpayer holds the land for the principal purpose of realizing gain from appreciation. In order to defray the cost of carrying the land, the taxpayer leases the land to a rancher, who uses the land to graze cattle and pays rent of $4,000 per year. Thus, the gross rental income from the land is less than two percent of the lesser of the fair market value and the unadjusted basis of the land (.02x$210,000=$4,200). Accordingly, under paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(D) of this section, the rental of the land is not a rental activity because the rental is treated under paragraph (e)(3)(vi)(B) of this section as incidental to an activity of holding the property for investment.

Example (6). (i) A calendar year taxpayer owns an interest in a farming activity which is a trade or business activity (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(2) of this section) and owns farmland which was used in the farming activity in 1985 and 1986. The fair market value of the farmland is $350,000 and its unadjusted basis is $210,000. In 1987, 1988, and 1989, the taxpayer continues to own an interest in the farming activity but does not use the land in the activity. In 1987, the taxpayer leases the land for $4,000 to a rancher, who uses the land to graze cattle. In 1988, the taxpayer leases the land for $10,000 to a film production company, which uses the land to film scenes for a movie. In 1989, the taxpayer again leases the land for $4,000 to the rancher.

(ii) For 1987 and 1989, the taxpayer owns an interest in a trade or business activity, and the farmland which the taxpayer leases to the rancher was used in such activity for two out of the five immediately preceding taxable years. In addition, the gross rental income from the land ($4,000) is less than two percent of the lesser of the fair market value and the unadjusted basis of the land (.02x$210,000=$4,200). Accordingly, the taxpayer's rental of the land is treated under paragraph (e)(3)(vi)(C) of this section as incidental to the taxpayer's farming activity, and is not a rental activity.

(iii) Because the taxpayer's gross rental income from the land for 1988 ($10,000) is not less than two percent of the lesser of the fair market value and the unadjusted basis of the land, the requirement of paragraph (e)(3)(vi)(C)(3) of this section is not met. Therefore, the taxpayer's rental of the land in 1988 is not treated as incidental to the taxpayer's farming activity and is a rental activity.

Example (7). (i) In 1988, the taxpayer acquires vacant land for the purpose of constructing a shopping mall. Before commencing construction, the taxpayer leases the land under a one-year lease to an automobile dealer, who uses the land to park cars held in its inventory. The taxpayer commences construction of the shopping mall in 1989.

(ii) The taxpayer acquired the land for the principal purpose of constructing the shopping mall, not for the principal purpose or realizing gain from the appreciation of the property. Therefore, the rental of the property in 1988 is not treated under paragraph (e)(3)(vi)(B) of this section as incidental to an activity of holding the property for investment.

(iii) The land has not been used in any taxable year in any trade or business of the taxpayer. Therefore, the rental of the property in 1988 is not treated under paragraph (e)(3)(vi)(C) of this section as incidental to a trade or business activity.

(iv) Since the rental of the land in 1988 is not treated under paragraph (e)(3)(vi) of this section as incidental to a nonrental activity of the taxpayer, the rental of the land in 1988 is a rental activity. See § 1.469-2T(f)(3) for a special rule relating to the treatment of gross income from the rental of nondepreciable property.

Example (8). The taxpayer makes farmland available to a tenant farmer pursuant to an arrangement designated a "crop-share lease." Under the arrangement, the tenant is required to use the tenant's best efforts to farm the land and produce marketable crops. The taxpayer is obligated to pay 50 percent of the costs incurred in the activity (without regard to whether any crops are successfully produced or marketed), and is entitled to 50 percent of the crops produced (or 50 percent of the proceeds from marketing the crops). For purposes of paragraph (e)(3)(vii) of this section, the taxpayer is treated as providing the farmland for use in a farming activity conducted by a joint venture in the taxpayer's capacity as an owner of an interest in the joint venture. Accordingly, under paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(F) of this section, the taxpayer is not engaged in a rental activity, without regard to whether the taxpayer performs any services in the farming activity.

Example (9). The taxpayer owns a taxicab which the taxpayer operates during the day and leases to another driver for use at night under a one-year lease. Under the terms of the lease, the other driver is charged a fixed rental for use of the taxicab. Assume that, under the rules to be contained in § 1.469-4T, the taxpayer is engaged in two separate activities, an activity of operating the taxicab and an activity of making the taxicab available for use by the other driver. Under these facts, the period for which the other driver uses the taxicab exceeds 30 days, and the taxpayer does not provide extraordinary personal services in connection with making the taxicab available to the other driver. Accordingly, the lease of the taxicab is a rental activity.

Example (10). The taxpayer operates a golf course. Some customers of the golf course pay green fees upon each use of the golf course, while other customers purchase weekly, monthly, or annual passes. The golf course is open to all customers from sunrise to sunset every day of the year except certain holidays and days on which the taxpayer determines that the course is to wet for play. The taxpayer thus makes the golf course available during prescribed hours for nonexclusive use by various customers. Accordingly, under paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(E) of this section, the taxpayer is not engaged in a rental activity, without regard to the average period of customer use for the golf course.

(4) Special rule for oil and gas working interests—(i) In general. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (e)(4)(ii) of this section, an interest in an oil or gas well drilled or operated pursuant to a working interest (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(4)(iv) of this section) of a taxpayer is not an interest in a passive activity for the taxpayer's taxable year (without regard to whether the taxpayer materially participates in such activity) if at any time during such taxable year the taxpayer holds such working interest either—

(A) Directly; or

(B) Through an entity that does not limit the liability of the taxpayer with respect to the drilling or operation of such well pursuant to such working interest.

(ii) Exception for deductions attributable to a period during which liability is limited—(A) In general. If paragraph (e)(4)(i) of this section applies for a taxable year to the taxpayer's interest in an oil or gas well that would, but for the application of paragraph (e)(4)(i) of this section, by an interest in a passive activity for the taxable year, and the taxpayer has a net loss (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(4)(ii)(C)(3) of this section) from the well for the taxable year—

(1) The taxpayer's disqualified deductions (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(4)(ii)(C)(2) of this section) from such oil or gas well for such year shall be treated as passive activity deductions for such year (within the meaning of § 1.469-2T(d)); and

(2) A ratable portion (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(4)(ii)(C)(4) of this section) of the taxpayer's gross income from such oil or gas well for such year shall be treated as passive activity gross income for such year (within the meaning of § 1.469-2T(c)).

(B) Coordination with rules governing the identification of disallowed passive activity deductions. If gross income and deductions from an activity for a taxable year are treated as passive activity gross income and passive activity deductions under paragraph (e)(4)(ii)(A) of this section, such activity shall be treated as a passive activity for such year for purposes of applying paragraph (f) (2) and (4) of this section.

(C) Meaning of certain terms. For purposes of this paragraph (e)(4)(ii), the following terms shall have the meanings set forth below:

(1) Allocable deductions. The deductions allocable to a taxable year are any deductions that arise in such year (within the meaning of § 1.469-2T (d)(8)) and any deductions that are treated as deductions for such year under paragraph (f)(4) of this section.

(2) Disqualified deductions. The taxpayer's "disqualified deductions" from an oil or gas well for a taxable year are the taxpayer's deductions—

(i) That are attributable to such well and allocable to the taxable year; and

(ii) With respect to which economic performance (within the meaning of section 461(h), without regard to section 461 (h)(3) or (i)(2)) occurs at a time during which the taxpayer's only interest in the working interest is held through an entity that limits the taxpayer's liability with respect to the drilling or operation of such well.

(3) Net loss. The "net loss" of a taxpayer from an oil or gas well for a taxable year equals the amount by which the taxpayer's deductions that are attributable to such oil or gas well and allocable to such year exceeds the gross income of the taxpayer from such well for such year.

(4) Ratable portion. The "ratable portion" of the taxpayer's gross income from an oil or gas well for a taxable year equals the total amount of such gross income multiplied by the fraction obtained by dividing—

(i) The disqualified deductions from such oil or gas well for the taxable year; by

(ii) The total amount of the deductions that are attributable to such oil or gas well and allocable to the taxable year.

(iii) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of paragraphs (e)(4) (i) and (ii) of this section:

Example (1). (i) A, a calendar year individual, acquires on January 1, 1987, a general partnership interest in P, a calendar year partnership that holds a working interest in an oil or gas property. Pursuant to the partnership agreement, A is entitled to convert the general partnership interest into a limited partnership interest at any time. On December 1, 1987, pursuant to a contract with D, an independent drilling contractor, P commences drilling a single well pursuant to the working interest. Under the drilling contract, P pays D for the drilling only as the work is performed. All drilling costs are deducted by P in the year in which they are paid. At the end of 1987, A converts the general partnership interest into a limited partnership interest, effective immediately. The drilling of the well is completed on February 28, 1988. A's interest in the well would but for this paragraph (e)(4) be an interest in a passive activity.

(ii) Throughout 1987, A holds the working interest through an entity that does not limit A's liability with respect to the drilling of the well pursuant to the working interest. In 1988, however, A holds the working interest through an entity that limits A's liability with respect to the drilling and operation of the well throughout such year. Accordingly, under paragraph (e)(4)(i) of this section, A's interest in P's well is not an interest in a passive activity for 1987 but is an interest in a passive activity for 1988. Moreover, since economic performance occurs in 1987 with respect to all items of deduction for drilling costs that are allocable to 1987, A has no disqualified deductions for 1987.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that all costs of drilling under the contract with D (including costs of drilling performed after 1987) are paid before the end of 1987 and A has a net loss for 1987. In addition, A has $15,000 of total deductions that are attributable to the well and allocable to 1987, but economic performance (as that term is used in paragraph (e)(4)(ii)(C)(2)(ii) of this section) does not occur with respect to $5,000 of those deductions until 1988. Under paragraph (e)(4)(ii) of this section, the $5,000 of deductions with respect to which economic performance occurs in 1988 are disqualified deductions and are treated as passive activity deductions for 1987. In addition, one-third ($5,000/$15,000) of A's gross income from the well for 1987 is treated as passive activity gross income.

(iv) Definition of "working interest." For purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder, the term "working interest" means an operating mineral interest (within the meaning of section 614(d) and the regulations thereunder).

(v) Entities that limit liability—(A) General rule. For purposes of paragraph (e)(4)(i)(B) of this section, an entity limits the liability of the taxpayer with respect to the drilling or operation of a well pursuant to a working interest held through such entity if the taxpayer's interest in the entity is in the form of—

(1) A limited partnership interest in a partnership in which the taxpayer is not a general partner;

(2) Stock in a corporation; or

(3) An interest in any entity (other than a limited partnership or corporation) that, under applicable State law, limits the potential liability of a holder of such an interest for all obligations of the entity to a determinable fixed amount (for example, the sum of the taxpayer's capital contributions).

(B) Other limitations disregarded. For purposes of this paragraph (e)(4), protection against loss through any of the following is not taken into account in determining whether a taxpayer holds a working interest through an entity that limits the taxpayer's liability:

(1) An indemnification agreement;

(2) A stop loss arrangement;

(3) Insurance;

(4) Any similar arrangement; or

(5) Any combination of the foregoing.

(C) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (e)(4)(v):

Example (1). A owns a 20 percent interest as a general partner in the capital and profits of P, a partnership which owns oil or gas working interests. The other partners of P agree to indemnify A against liability in excess of A's capital contribution for any of P's costs and expenses with respect to P's working interests. As a general partner, however, A is jointly and severally liable for all of P's liabilities and, under paragraph (e)(4)(v)(B)(1) of this section, the indemnification agreement is not taken into account in determining whether A holds the working interests through an entity that limits A's liability. Accordingly, the partnership does not limit A's liability with respect to the drilling or operation of wells pursuant to the working interests.

Example (2). B owns a 10 percent interest in X, an entity (other than a limited partnership or corporation) created under applicable State law to hold working interests in oil or gas properties. Under applicable State law, B is liable without limitation for 10 percent of X's costs and expenses with respect to X's working interests but is not liable for the remaining 90 percent of such costs and expenses. Since B's liability for the obligations of X is not limited to a determinable fixed amount (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(4)(v)(A)(3) of this section), the entity does not limit B's liability with respect to the drilling or operation of wells pursuant to the working interests.

Example (3). C is both a general partner and a limited partner in a partnership that owns a working interest in oil or gas property. Because C owns an interest as a general partner in each well drilled pursuant to the working interest, C's entire interest in each well drilled pursuant to the working interest is treated under paragraph(e)(4)(i) of this section as an interest in an activity that is not a passive activity (without regard to whether C materially participates in such activity).

(vi) Cross reference to special rule for income from certain oil or gas properties. A special rule relating to the treatment of income from certain interests in oil or gas properties is contained in § 1.469-2T(c)(6).

(5) Rental of dwelling unit. An activity involving the rental of a dwelling unit that is used as a residence by the taxpayer during the taxable year (within the meaning of section 280A(c)(5)) is not a passive activity of the taxpayer for such year.

(6) Activity of trading personal property—(i) In general. An activity of trading personal property for the account of owners of interests in the activity is not a passive activity (without regard to whether such activity is a trade or business activity (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(2) of this section)).

(ii) Personal property. For purposes of this paragraph (e)(6), the term "personal property" means personal property (within the meaning of section 1092(d), without regard to paragraph (3) thereof).

(iii) Example. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (e)(6):

Example. A partnership is a trader of stocks, bonds, and other securities (within the meaning of section 1236(c)). The capital employed by the partnership in the trading activity consists of amounts contributed by the partners in exchange for their partnership interests, and funds borrowed by the partnership. The partnership derives gross income from the activity in the form of interest, dividends, and capital gains. Under these facts, the partnership is treated as conducting an activity of trading personal property for the account of its partners. Accordingly, under this paragraph (e)(6), the activity is not a passive activity.

(f) Treatment of disallowed passive activity losses and credits—(1) Scope of this paragraph. The rules in this paragraph (f)—

(i) Identify the passive activity deductions that are disallowed for any taxable year in which all or a portion of the taxpayer's passive activity loss is disallowed under paragraph (a)(1)(i) of this section;

(ii) Identify the credits from passive activities that are disallowed for any taxable year in which all or a portion of the taxpayer's passive activity credit is disallowed under paragraph (a)(1)(i) of this section; and

(iii) Provide for the carryover of disallowed deductions and credits.

(2) Identification of disallowed passive activity deductions—(i) Allocation of disallowed passive activity loss among activities—(A) General rule. If all or any portion of the taxpayer's passive activity loss is disallowed for the taxable year under paragraph (a)(1)(i) of this section, a ratable portion of the loss (if any) from each passive activity of the taxpayer is disallowed. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the ratable portion of a loss from an activity is computed by multiplying the passive activity loss that is disallowed for the taxable year by the fraction obtained by dividing—

(1) The loss from the activity for the taxable year; by

(2) The sum of the losses for the taxable year from all activities having losses for such year.

(B) Loss from an activity. For purposes of this paragraph (f)(2)(i), the term "loss from an activity" means—

(1) The amount by which the passive activity deductions from the activity for the taxable year (within the meaning of § 1.469-2T(d)) exceed the passive activity gross income from the activity for the taxable year (within the meaning of § 1.469-2T(c)); reduced by

(2) Any part of such amount that is allowed under section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T (relating to the $25,000 allowance for certain rental real estate activities).

(C) Significant participation passive activities. If the taxpayer's passive activity gross income from significant participation passive activities (within the meaning of § 1.469-2T(f) (2)(ii)) for the taxable year (determined without regard to § 1.469-2T(f)(2) through (4)) exceeds the taxpayer's passive activity deductions from such activities for the taxable year, such activities shall be treated, solely for purposes of applying this paragraph (f)(2)(i) for the taxable year, as a single activity that does not have a loss for such taxable year.

(D) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (f)(2)(i):

Example (1). An individual holds interests in three passive activities, A, B, and C. The gross income and deductions from these activities for the taxable year are as follows:

	A	B	C	Total
Gross income	$7,000	$4,000	$12,000	$23,000
Deductions	(16,000)	(20,000)	(8,000)	(44,000)

	A	B	C	Total
Net income (loss)	($9,000)	($16,000)	$4,000	($21,000)

The taxpayer's $21,000 passive activity loss for the taxable year is disallowed under paragraph (a)(1)(i) of this section. Therefore, a ratable portion of the losses from activities A and B is disallowed. The disallowed portion of each loss is determined as follows:

A: $21,000 × $9,000/$25,000	$7,560
B: $21,000 × $16,000/$25,000	$13,440
Total	$21,000

Example (2). An individual holds interests in four passive activities, A, B, C, and D. The results of operations of these activities for the taxable year are as follows:

	A	B	C	D	Total
Gross income	15,000	5,000	10,000	10,000	40,000
Deductions	(5,000)	(10,000)	(20,000)	(8,000)	(43,000)
Net income (loss)	10,000	(5,000)	(10,000)	2,000	(3,000)

Activities A and B are significant participation passive activities (within the meaning of § 1.469-2T(f)(2)(ii)). The gross income from these activities for the taxable year ($20,000) exceeds the passive activity deductions from those activities for the taxable year ($15,000) by $5,000 and, under § 1.469-2T(f)(2), $5,000 of gross income from those activities is treated as not from a passive activity. Therefore, solely for purposes of applying this paragraph (f)(2)(i) for the taxable year, activities A and B are treated as a single activity that does not have a loss for the taxable year. Under § 1.469-2T(b), the taxpayer's passive activity loss for the taxable year is $8,000 ($43,000 of passive activity deductions minus $35,000 of passive activity gross income). The results of treating activities A and B as a single activity that does not have a loss for the taxable year is that none of the $8,000 passive activity loss is allocated under this paragraph (f)(2)(i) to activity B for the taxable year, even though the taxpayer incurred a loss in that activity for the taxable year.

(ii) Allocation within loss activities—(A) In general. If all or any portion of a taxpayer's loss from an activity is disallowed under paragraph (f)(2)(i) of this section for the taxable year, a ratable portion of each passive activity deduction (other than an excluded deduction (within the meaning of paragraph (f)(2)(ii)(B) of this section)) of the taxpayer from such activity is disallowed. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the ratable portion of a passive activity deduction of a taxpayer is the amount of the disallowed portion of the taxpayer's loss from the activity (within the meaning of paragraph (f)(2)(i)(B) of this section) for the taxable year multiplied by the fraction obtained by dividing—

(1) The amount of such deduction; by

(2) The sum of all passive activity deductions (other than excluded deductions (within the meaning of paragraph (f)(2)(ii)(B) of this section)) of the taxpayer from such activity from the taxable year.

(B) Excluded deductions. The term "excluded deduction" means any passive activity deduction of a taxpayer that is taken into account in computing the taxpayer's net income from an item of property for a taxable year in which an amount of the taxpayer's gross income from such item of property is treated as not from a passive activity under § 1.469-2T(c)(6) or § 1.469-2T(f) (5), (6), or (7).

(iii) Separately identified deductions. In identifying the deductions from an activity that are disallowed under this paragraph (f)(2), the taxpayer need not account separately for a deduction unless such deduction may, if separately taken into account, result in an income tax liability for any taxable year different from that which would result were such deduction not taken into account separately. For related rules applicable to partnerships and S corporations, see § 1.702-1(a)(8)(ii) and section 1366(a)(1)(A), respectively. Deductions that must be accounted for separately include (but are not limited to) deductions that—

(A) Arise in a rental real estate activity (within the meaning of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T) in taxable years in which the taxpayer actively participates (within the meaning of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T) in such activity;

(B) Arise in a rental real estate activity (within the meaning of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T) in taxable years in which the taxpayer does not actively participate (within the meaning of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T) in such activity; or

(C) Are taken into account under section 1211 (relating to the limitation on capital losses) or section 1231 (relating to property used in a trade or business and involuntary conversions).

(3) Identification of disallowed credits from passive activities—(i) General rule. If all or any portion of the taxpayer's passive activity credit is disallowed for the taxable year under paragraph (a)(1)(ii) of this section, a ratable portion of each credit from each passive activity of the taxpayer is disallowed. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the ratable portion of a credit of a taxpayer is computed by multiplying the portion of the taxpayer's passive activity credit that is disallowed for the taxable year by the fraction obtained by dividing—

(A) The amount of the credit; by

(B) The sum of all of the taxpayer's credits from passive activities for the taxable year.

(ii) Coordination rule. For purposes of paragraph (f)(3)(i) of this section, the credits from a passive activity do not include any credit or portion of a credit that—

(A) Is allowed for the taxable year under section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T (relating to the $25,000 allowance for certain rental real estate activities); or

(B) Increases the basis of property during the taxable year under section 469(j)(9) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-6T (relating to the election to increase the basis of certain property by disallowed credits).

(iii) Separately identified credits. In identifying the credits from an activity that are disallowed under this paragraph (f)(3), the taxpayer need not account separately for any credit unless such credit may, if separately taken into account, result in an income tax liability for any taxable year different from that which would result were such credit not taken into account separately. For related rules applicable to partnerships and S corporations, see § 1.702-1(a)(8)(ii) and section 1366(a)(1)(A), respectively. Credits that must be accounted for separately include (but are not limited to)—

(A) Credits (other than the low-income housing and rehabilitation investment credits) from a rental real estate activity (within the meaning of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T) that arise in a taxable year in which the taxpayer actively participates (within the meaning of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T) in such activity;

(B) Credits (other than the low-income housing and rehabilitation investment credits) from a rental real estate activity (within the meaning of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T) that arise in a taxable year in which the taxpayer does not actively participate (within the meaning of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T) in such activity;

(C) Low-income housing and rehabilitation investment credits from a rental real estate activity (within the meaning of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T); and

(D) Any credit that is subject to the limitations of sections 26(a), 28(d)(2), 29(b)(5), or 38(c) in a manner that differs from the manner in which any other credit is subject to such limitations.

(4) Carryover of disallowed deductions and credits. Any deduction or credit from an activity of the taxpayer that is disallowed for a taxable year under paragraph (f)(2) or (3) of this section, respectively, shall be treated for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder as a deduction or credit, as the case may be, from such activity for the taxpayer's immediately succeeding taxable year. The following example illustrates the application of this pragraph (f)(4):

Example. The facts are the same as in example (1) in paragraph (f)(2)(i)(D) of this section. The $7,560 of loss from activity A and the $13,440 of loss from activity B that are disallowed for the taxable year under paragraph (f)(2) of this section are allocated among the passive activity deductions from those activities for such year under paragraph (f)(2)(ii) of this section and are treated under this paragraph (f)(4) as deductions from activities A and B, respectively, for the succeeding taxable year.

(g) Application of these rules to C corporations—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in the rules to be contained in paragraph (k) of this section, section 469 and the regulations thereunder do not apply to any corporation that is not a personal service corporation or a closely held corporation for the taxable year. See paragraphs (g) (4) and (5) of this section for special rules for computing the passive activity loss and passive activity credit, respectively, of a closely held corporation.

(2) Definitions. For purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder—

(i) The term "personal service corporation" means a C corporation that is a personal service corporation for the taxable year (within the meaning of § 1.441-4T(d)); and

(ii) The term "closely held corporation" means a C corporation that meets the stock ownership requirements of section 542(a)(2) (taking into account the modifications in section 465(a)(3)) for the taxable year and is not a personal service corporation for such year.

(3) Participation of corporations—(i) Material participation. For purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder, a corporation described in paragraph (g)(2) of this section shall be treated as materially participating in an activity for a taxable year if and only if—

(A) One or more individuals, each of whom is treated under paragraph (g)(3)(iii) of this section as materially participating in such activity for the taxable year, directly or indirectly hold (in the aggregate) more than 50 percent (by value) of the outstanding stock of such corporation; or

(B) In the case of a closely held corporation (within the meaning of paragraph (g)(2)(ii) of this section), the requirements of section 465(c)(7)(C) (without regard to clause (iv) thereof and taking into account section 465(c)(7)(D)) are met with respect to such activity.

(ii) Significant participation. For purposes of § 1.469-2T(f)(2), an activity of a corporation described in paragraph (g)(2) of this section shall be treated as a significant participation passive activity for a taxable year if and only if—

(A) The corporation is not treated as materially participating in such activity for the taxable year; and

(B) One or more individuals, each of whom is treated under paragraph (g)(3)(iii) of this section as significantly participating in such activity, directly or indirectly hold (in the aggregate) more than 50 percent (by value) of the outstanding stock of such corporation.

(iii) Participation of individual. Whether an individual is treated for purposes of this paragraph (g)(3) as materially participating or significantly participating in an activity of a corporation shall be determined under the rules of § 1.469-5T, except that in applying such rules—

(A) All activities of the corporation shall be treated as activities in which the individual holds an interest in determining whether the individual participates (within the meaning of § 1.469-5T(f)) in an activity of the corporation; and

(B) The individual's participation in all activities other than activities of the corporation shall be disregarded in determining whether the individual's participation in an activity of the corporation is treated as material participation under § 1.469-5T(a)(4) (relating to material participation in significant participation activities).

(4) Modified computation of passive activity loss in the case of closely held corporations.—(i) In general. A closely held corporation's passive activity loss for the taxable year is the amount, if any, by which the corporation's passive activity deductions for the taxable year (within the meaning of § 1.469-2T(d)) exceed the sum of—

(A) The corporation's passive activity gross income for the taxable year (within the meaning of § 1.469-2T(c)); and

(B) The corporation's net active income for the taxable year.

(ii) Net active income. For purposes of this paragraph (g)(4), a corporation's net active income for the taxable year is such corporation's taxable income for the taxable year, determined without regard to the following items for the year:

(A) Passive activity gross income;

(B) Passive activity deductions;

(C) Portfolio income (within the meaning of § 1.469-2T(c)(3)(i)), including any gross income that is treated as portfolio income under any other provision of the regulations (see, e.g., § 1.469-2T(c)(2)(iii)(E) (relating to gain from the disposition of substantially appreciated property formerly held for investment) and § 1.469-2T(f)(10) (relating to certain recharacterized passive activity gross income);

(D) Gross income that is treated under § 1.469-2T(c)(6) (relating to gross income from certain oil or gas properties) as not from a passive activity;

(E) Gross income and deductions from any trade or business activity (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(2) of this section) that is described in paragraph (e)(6) of this section (relating to certain activities of trading personal property) but only if the corporation did not materially participate in such activity for the taxable year;

(F) Deductions described in § 1.469-2T(d)(2)(i), (ii), and (iv) (relating to certain deductions attributable to portfolio income); and

(G) Interest expense allocated under § 1.163-8T to a portfolio expenditure (within the meaning of § 1.163-8T(b)(6)).

(iii) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (g)(4):

Example (1). (i) For 1987, X, a closely held corporation, is engaged in two activities, a trade or business activity in which X materially participates for 1987 and a rental activity. X also holds portfolio investments. For 1987, X has the following gross income and deductions:

Gross income:
Rents	$60,000
Gross income from business	100,000
Portfolio income	35,000
Total	$195,000
Deductions:
Rental deductions	($100,000)
Business deductions (80,000)
Interest expense allocable to portfolio expenditures under § 1.163-8T	(10,000)
Deductions (other than interest expense) clearly and directly allocable to portfolio income	(5,000)
Total	($195,000)

(ii) The corporation's net active income for 1987 is $20,000, computed as follows:

Gross income		$195,000
Amounts not taken into account in computing net active income:
Rents (see paragraph (g)(4)(ii)(A) of this section)	$60,000
Portfolio income (see paragraph (g)(4)(ii)(C) of this section)	$35,000
	$95,000	($95,000)
Gross income taken into account in computing net active income		$100,000	$100,000
Deductions		($195,000)
Amounts not taken into account in computing net active income:
Rental deductions (see paragraph (g)(4)(ii)(B) of this section)	($100,000)
Interest expense allocated to portfolio expenditures (see paragraph (g)(4)(ii)(G) of this section)	($10,000)
Other deductions clearly and directly allocable to portfolio income (see paragraph (g)(4)(ii)(F) of this section)	($5,000)
	($115,000)	$115,000
Deductions taken into account in computing net active income		($80,000)	($80,000)
Net active income			$20,000

(iii) Under paragraph(g)(4)(i) of this section, X's passive activity loss for 1987 is $20,000, the amount by which the passive activity deductions for the taxable year ($100,000) exceed the sum of (a) the passive activity gross income for the taxable year ($60,000) and (b) the net active income for the taxable year ($20,000). Under paragraph (f)(4) of this section, the $20,000 of deductions from X's rental activity that are disallowed for 1987 are treated as deductions from the rental activity for 1988. If computed without regard to the net active income for the taxable year, X's passive activity loss would be $40,000 ($100,000 of rental deductions minus $60,000 of rental income). Thus, the effect of the rule in paragraph (g)(4)(i) of this section is to reduce the corporation's passive activity loss for the taxable year by the amount of the corporation's net active income for such year.

(iv) Under these facts, X's taxable income for 1987 is $20,000, computed as follows:

Gross income		$195,000
Deductions:
Total deductions	($195,000)
Passive activity loss	$20,000
Allowable deductions	($175,000)	($175,000)
Taxable income		$20,000

Example (2). (i) The facts are the same as in example (1), except that, in 1988, X has a loss from the trade or business activity, and a net operating loss ("NOL") of $15,000 that is carried back under section 172(b) to 1987. Since NOL carrybacks are taken into account in computing net active income, X's net active income for 1987 must be recomputed as follows:

Net active income before NOL carryback	$20,000
NOL carryback	($15,000)
Net active income	$5,000

(ii) Under these facts, X's disallowed passive activity loss for 1987 is $35,000, the amount by which the passive activity deductions for the taxable year ($100,000) exceed the sum of (a) the passive activity gross income for the taxable year ($60,000) and (b) the net active income for the taxable year ($5,000).

(iii) Under paragraph (f)(4) of this section, the $35,000 of deductions from X's rental activity that are disallowed for 1987 are treated as deductions from the rental activity for 1988. X's taxable income for 1987 is $20,000, computed as follows:

Gross income		$195,000
Deductions:
Total deductions	($210,000
Passive activity loss	$35,000
Allowable deductions	($175,000)	($175,000)
Taxable income		$20,000

Thus, taking the NOL carryback into account in computing net active income for 1987 does not affect X's taxable income for 1987, but increases the deductions treated under paragraph (f)(4) as deductions from X's rental activity for 1988 and decreases X's NOL carryover to years other than 1987.

(5) Allowance of passive activity credit of closely held corporations to extent of net active income tax liability—(i) In general. Solely for purposes of determining the amount disallowed under paragraph (a)(1)(ii) of this section, a closely held corporation's passive activity credit for the taxable year shall be reduced by such corporation's net active income tax liability for such year.

(ii) Net active income tax liability. For purposes of paragraph (g)(5)(i) of this section, a corporation's net active income tax liability for a taxable year is the amount (if any) by which—

(A) The corporation's regular tax liability (within the meaning of section 26(b)) for the taxable year, determined by reducing the corporation's taxable income for such year by an amount equal to the excess (if any) of the corporation's passive activity gross income for such year over the corporation's passive activity deductions for such year; exceeds

(B) The sum of—

(1) The corporation's regular tax liability for the taxable year, determined by reducing the corporation's taxable income for such year by an amount equal to the excess (if any) of the sum of the corporation's net active income (within the meaning of paragraph (g)(4)(ii) of this section) and passive activity gross income for such year over the corporation's passive activity deductions for such year; and

(2) The corporation's credits (other than credits from passive activities) that are allowable for the taxable year (without regard to the limitations contained in sections 26(a), 28(d)(2), 29(b)(5), 38(c), and 469).

(h) Special rules for affiliated group filing consolidated return—(1) In general. For purposes of computing the consolidated taxable income and tax liability of an affiliated group of corporations filing a consolidated return for the taxable year, and the separate taxable income (within the meaning of § 1.1502-12) of each member of such group, section 469 and the regulations thereunder shall be applied in the manner provided in this paragraph (h).

(2) Definitions. For purposes of this paragraph (h)—

(i) The terms "group," "member," "subsidiary," and "consolidated return year" shall have the meanings set forth in § 1.1502–1;

(ii) The term "consolidated group" means a group filing a consolidated return for the taxable year; and

(iii) The term "consolidated taxable income" shall have the meaning set forth in § 1.1502–11.

(3) Disallowance of consolidated group's passive activity loss or credit. A consolidated group's passive activity loss or passive activity credit for the taxable year shall be disallowed to the extent provided in paragraph (a) of this section. For purposes of the preceding sentence, a consolidated group's passive activity loss and passive activity credit shall be determined by taking into account the following items of each member of such group:

(i) Passive activity gross income;

(ii) Passive activity deductions;

(iii) Net active income (in the case of a consolidated group treated as a closely held corporation under paragraph (h)(4)(ii) of this section); and

(iv) Credits from passive activities.

(4) Status and material participation of members—(i) Determination by reference to status and participation of group. For purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder—

(A) Each member of a consolidated group shall be treated as a closely held corporation or personal service corporation, respectively, for the taxable year, if and only if the consolidated group is treated (under the rules of paragraph (h)(4)(ii) of this section) as a closely held corporation or personal service corporation for such year; and

(B) The determination of whether a trade or business activity (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(2) of this section) conducted by one or more members of a consolidated group is a passive activity of such members shall be made by reference to the consolidated group's participation in such activity.

(ii) Determination of status and material participation of consolidated group. For purposes of determining under paragraph (g)(2) of this section whether a consolidated group is treated as a closely held corporation or a personal service corporation, and determining under paragraph (g)(3) of this section whether the consolidated group materially participates in any activity conducted by one or more members of such group—

(A) The members of such consolidated group shall be treated as one corporation;

(B) Only the outstanding stock of the common parent shall be treated as outstanding stock of such corporation;

(C) An employee of any member of such group shall be treated as an employee of such corporation; and

(D) An activity is treated as the principal activity of such corporation if and only if it is the principal activity (within the meaning of § 1.44–4T(f)) of the consolidated group.

(5) Modification of rules for identifying disallowed passive activity deductions and credits—(i) Identification of disallowed deductions. In applying paragraphs (f) (2) and (4) of this section to a consolidated group for purposes of identifying the passive activity deductions of such consolidated group and of each member of such consolidated group that are disallowed for the taxable year and treated as deductions from activities for the succeeding taxable year, the following rules shall apply:

(A) A ratable portion (within the meaning of paragraph (h)(5)(ii) of this section) of the passive activity loss of the consolidated group that is disallowed for the taxable year shall be allocated to each member of the group;

(B) Pararaph (f)(2) of this section shall then be applied to each member of the group as if—

(1) Such member were a separate taxpayer; and

(2) The amount allocated to such member under paragraph (h)(5)(i)(A) of this section were the amount of such member's passive activity loss that is disallowed for the taxable year; and

(C) Paragraph (f)(4) of this section shall be applied to each member of the group as if it were a separate taxpayer.

(ii) Ratable portion of disallowed passive activity loss. For purposes of paragraph (h)(5)(i)(A) of this section, a member's ratable portion of the disallowed passive activity loss of the consolidated group is the amount of such disallowed loss multiplied by the fraction obtained by dividing—

(A) The amount of the passive activity loss of such member of the consolidated group that would be disallowed for the taxable year if the items of gross income and deduction of such member were the only items of the group for such year; by

(B) The sum of the amounts described in paragraph (h)(5)(ii)(A) of this section for all members of the group.

(iii) Identification of disallowed credits. In applying paragraph (f)(3) of this section to a consolidated group for purposes of identifying the credits from passive activities of members of such consolidated group that are disallowed for the taxable year, the consolidated group shall be treated as one taxpayer. Thus, a ratable portion of each of the group's credits from passive activities is disallowed.

(6) Transactions between members of a consolidated group—(i) Scope. This paragraph (h)(6) provides rules regarding the treatment, for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder, of items of income and deduction attributable to intercompany transactions. See paragraph (h)(6)(iv) of this section for the definition of "intercompany transaction" and certain other terms used in this paragraph (h)(6).

(ii) Recharacterization of gain or loss from intercompany transactions other than deferred intercompany transactions—(A) In general. If the selling member in an intercompany transaction (other than a deferred intercompany transaction) recognizes an item of gain or loss described in § 1.1502–13(b) that is directly related to an item of deduction of the purchasing member, and both the gain or loss and the directly related item of deduction are taken into account in computing consolidated taxable income for the same taxable year, the items of income or deduction that are taken into account by the selling member in computing such gain or loss shall be taken into account in computing consolidated taxable income for such taxable year as items of income or deduction of the selling member from the activity to which the directly related deduction of the purchasing member is attributable.

(B) Recharacterization of gain or loss as portfolio items. Any item of income or deduction of a selling member that is recharacterized under this paragraph (h)(6)(ii) shall be treated as an item of income or deduction described in § 1.469–2T(c)(3)(i) (relating to portfolio income) or § 1.469–2T(d)(2)(i) (relating to expenses clearly and directly allocable to portfolio income), as the case may be, if and only if the directly related item of deduction is a deduction described in § 1.469-2T (d)(2)(i) or a deduction for interest expense that is allocated under § 1.163-8T to a portfolio expenditure (within the meaning of § 1.163-8T (b)(6)).

(iii) Deferred intercompany transactions—(A) In general. For purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder, the treatment of deferred gain or loss on a deferred intercompany transaction between members of a group shall be determined in accordance with this paragraph (h)(6)(iii).

(B) Deferred intercompany transactions involving property subject to depreciation, amortization, or depletion. If, for any consolidated return year, the selling member in a deferred intercompany transaction is required to take into account deferred gain or loss under § 1.1502-13(d) as a result of depreciation, amortization, or depletion of a member of the group, then for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder such deferred gain or loss shall be taken into account for such year as gain or loss of the selling member from the activity (or activities) to which such depreciation, amortization, or depletion deductions are attributable.

(C) Restoration of deferred gain or loss on dispositions. If, for any consolidated return year, the selling member in a deferred intercompany transaction (other than a deferred intercomapny transaction described in § 1.1502-13(e)(1)) is required to take deferred gain or loss into account under § 1.1502-13(e)(2) or (f), then for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder—

(1) Such deferred gain or loss shall be treated as gain or loss of the selling member from a disposition of the property involved in such deferred intercompany transaction at the time of (i) the event that requires such gain or loss to be taken into account or (ii) in the case of a transaction described in § 1.1502-13(e)(2), the disposition of such property outside the consolidated group; and

(2) Such deferred gain or loss shall, except as otherwise provided in § 1.1502-2T (c)(2) or (d)(5), be taken into account for such year as gain or loss of the selling member from the activity (or activities) of the affiliated group in which the property involved in such deferred intercompany transaction is used immediately preceding the time specified in paragraph (h)(6)(iii)(C)(1) of this section.

See paragraph (h)(8) of this section, relating to dispositions by a member of substantially appreciated property formerly used in a nonpassive activity.

(D) Certain recharacterized items treated as portfolio items. Any deferred gain or loss or a selling member that is recharacterized under this paragraph (h)(6)(iii) shall be treated as an item of income or deduction described in § 1.469-2T(c)(3)(i) (relating to portfolio income) or § 1.469-2T(d)(2)(i) (relating to expenses clearly and directly allocable to portfolio income), as the case may be, if and only if the property involved in the transaction is property that produces portfolio income (within the meaning of § 1.469-2T(c)(3)((i)).

(E) Property involved in deferred intercompany transaction. For purposes of this paragraph (h)(6)(iii), the property involved in a deferred intercompany transaction is the property sold or exchanged in such transaction or the property with respect to which expenditures incurred in such transaction are capitalized.

(iv) Definitions. For purposes of this paragraph (h)(6), the terms set forth below shall have the following meanings:

(A) Deferred intercompany transaction. The term "deferred intercompany transaction" shall have the meaning set forth in § 1.1502-13(a)(2).

(B) Directly related. An item of gross income and an item of deduction are "directly related" if and to the extent that the same amount paid or accrued generates both the income and the deduction, without regard to whether the income and the deduction are taken into account by the taxpayer in the same taxable year.

(C) Intercompany transaction. The term "intercompany transaction" shall have the meaning set forth in § 1.1502-13(a)(1).

(D) Purchasing member. The term "purchasing member" shall have the meaning set forth in § 1.1502-13(a).

(E) Selling member. The term "selling member" shall have the meaning set forth in § 1.502-13(a).

(7) Disposition of stock of a member of an affiliated group. Any gain recognized by a member on the disposition of stock of a subsidiary (including income resulting from the recognition of an excess loss account under § 1.1502-19 (a)) shall be treated as portfolio income (within the meaning of § 1.469-2T (c)(3)(i)).

(8) Dispositions of property used in multiple activities. The determination of whether § 1.469-2T(c)(2)(ii) or (iii) or (d)(5)(ii) applies to a disposition (including a deemed disposition described in paragraph (h)(6)(iii)(C)(1) of this section) of property by a member of a consolidated group shall be made by treating such member as having held the property for the entire period that the group has owned such property and as having used the property in all of the activities in which the group has used such property

(i) [Reserved]

(j) Spouses filing joint return—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in the regulations under section 469, spouses filing a joint return for a taxable year shall be treated for such year as one taxpayer for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder Thus, for example, spouses filing a joint return are treated as one taxpayer for purposes of—

(i) Section 1.469-2T (relating generally to the computation of such taxpayer's passive activity loss); and

(ii) Paragraph (f) of this section (relating to the allocation of such taxpayer's disallowed passive activity loss and passive activity credit among activities and the identification of disallowed passive activity deductions and credits from passive activities).

(2) Exceptions to treatment as one taxpayer—(i) Identification of disallowed deductions and credits. For purposes of paragraphs (f)(2)(iii) and (3) (iii) of this section, spouses filing a joint return for the taxable year must account separately for the deductions and credits attributable to the interests of each spouse in any activity.

(ii) Treatment of deductions disallowed under sections 704(d), 1366(d), and 465. Notwithstanding any other provision of this section or § 1.469-2T, this paragraph (j) shall not affect the application of section 704(d), section 1366(d), or section 465 to taxpayers filing a joint return for the taxable year.

(iii) Treatment of losses from working interests. Paragraph (e)(4) of this section (relating to losses and credits from certain interests in oil and gas wells) shall be applied by treating a husband and wife (whether or not filing a joint return) as separate taxpayers.

(3) Joint return no longer filed. If an individual—

(A) Does not file a joint return for the taxable years; and then the passive activity deductions and credits allocable to such individual's activities for the taxable year under paragraph (f)(4) of this section shall be determined by taking into account the items of deduction and credit attributable to such individual's interests in passive activities for the immediately preceding taxable year. See paragraph (j)(2)(i) of this section.

(B) Filed a joint return for the immediately preceding taxable year;

(4) Participation of spouses. Rules treating an individual's participation in an activity as participation of such individual's spouse in such activity (without regard to whether the spouses file a joint return) are contained in § 1.469-5T(f)(3).

(k) Former passive activities and changes in status of corporations. [Reserved]

§ 1.469-2T Passive activity loss (temporary).

(a) Scope of this section. This section contains rules for determining the amount of the taxpayer's passive activity loss for the taxable year for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder. The rules contained in this section—

(1) Provide general guidance for identifying items of income and deduction that are taken into account in determining the amount of the passive activity loss for the taxable year;

(2) Specify particular items of income and deduction that are not taken into account in determining the amount of the passive activity loss for the taxable year; and

(3) Specify the manner in which provisions of the Internal Revenue Code and the regulations, other than section 469 and the regulations thereunder, are applied for purposes of determining the extent to which items of deduction are taken into account for a taxable year in computing the amount of the passive activity loss for such year.

(b) Definition of passive activity loss—(1) In general. In the case of a taxpayer other than a closely held corporation (within the meaning of § 1.469-1T(g)(2)(ii)), the passive activity loss for the taxable year is the amount, if any, by which the passive activity deductions for the taxable year exceed the passive activity gross income for the taxable year.

(2) Cross references. See paragraph (c) of this section for the definition of "passive activity gross income," paragraph (d) of this section for the definition of "passive activity deduction," and § 1.469-1T(g)(4) for the computation of the passive activity loss of a closely held corporation.

(c) Passive activity gross income—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in the regulations under section 469, passive activity gross income for a taxable year includes an item of gross income if and only if such income is from a passive activity.

(2) Treatment of gain from disposition of an interest in an activity or an interest in property used in an activity—(i) In general—(A) Treatment of gain. Except as otherwise provided in the regulations under section 469, any gain recognized upon the sale, exchange or other disposition (a "disposition") of an interest in property used in an activity at the time of the disposition or of an interest in an activity held through a partnership or S corporation is treated in the following manner:

(1) The gain is treated as gross income from such activity for the taxable year or years in which it is recognized;

(2) If the activity is a passive activity of the taxpayer for the taxable year of the disposition, the gain is treated as passive activity gross income for the taxable year or years in which it is recognized; and

(3) If the activity is not a passive activity of the taxpayer for the taxable year of the disposition, the gain is treated as not from a passive activity.

(B) Dispositions of partnership interests and S corporation stock. A partnership interest or S corporation stock is not property used in an activity for purposes of this paragraph (c)(2). See paragraph (e)(3) of this section for rules treating the gain recognized upon the disposition of a partnership interest or S corporation stock as gain from the disposition of interests in the activities in which the partnership or S corporation has an interest.

(C) Interest in property. For purposes of applying this paragraph (c)(2) to a disposition of property—

(1) Any material portion of the property that was used, at any time before the disposition, in any activity at a time when the remainder of the property was not used in such activity shall be treated as a separate interest in property; and

(2) The amount realized from the disposition and the adjusted basis of the property must be allocated among the separate interests in a reasonable manner.

(D) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (c)(2)(i):

Example (1). A owns an interest in a trade or business activity in which A has never materially partcipated. In 1987, A sells equipment that was used exclusively in the activity and realizes a gain on the sale. Under paragraph (c)(2)(i)(A)(2) of this section, the gain is passive activity gross income.

Example (2). B owns an interest in a trade or business activity in which B materially participates for 1987. In 1987, B sells a building used in the activity in an installment sale and realizes a gain on the sale. B does not materially participate in the activity for 1988 or any subsequent year. Under paragraph (c)(2)(i)(A)(3) of this section, none of B's gain from the sale (including gain taken into account after 1987) is passive activity gross income.

Example (3). C enters into a contract to acquire property used by the seller in a rental activity. Before acquiring the property pursuant to the contract, C sells all rights under the contract and realizes a gain on the sale. Since C's rights under the contract are not property used in a rental activity, the gain is not income from a rental activity. The result would be the same if C owned an option to acquire the property and sold the option.

Example (4). D sells a ten-floor office building. D owned the building for three years preceding the sale and at all times during that period used seven floors of the building in a trade or business activity and three floors in a rental activity. The fair market value per square foot is substantially the same throughout the building, and D did not maintain a separate adjusted basis for any part of the building. Under paragraph (c)(2)(i)(C)(1) of this section, the seven floors used in the trade or business activity and the three floors used in the rental activity are treated as separate interests in property. Under paragraph (c)(2)(i)(C)(2) of this section, the amount realized and the adjusted basis of the building must be allocated between the separate interests in a reasonable manner. Under these facts, an allocation based on the square footage of the parts of the building used in each activity would be reasonable.

Example (5). The facts are the same as in example (4), except that two of the seven floors used in the trade or business activity were used in the rental activity until five months before the sale. Under paragraph (c)(2)(i)(C)(1) of this section, the five floors used exclusively in the trade or business activity and the two floors used first in the rental activity and then in the trade or business activity are treated as separate interests in property. See paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section for rules for allocating amount realized and adjusted basis upon a disposition of an interest in property used in more than one activity during the 12-month period ending on the date of the disposition.

(ii) Disposition of property used in more than one activity in 12-month period preceding disposition. In the case of a disposition of an interest in property that is used in more than one activity during the 12-month period ending on the date of the disposition, the amount realized from the disposition and the adjusted basis of such interest must be allocated among such activities on a basis that reasonably reflects the use of such interest in property during such 12-month period. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(2)(ii), an allocation of the amount realized and adjusted basis solely to the activity in which an iterest in property is predominantly used during the 12-month period ending on the date of the disposition reasonably reflects the use of such interest in property if the fair market value of such interest does not exceed the lesser of—

(A) $10,000; and

(B) 10 percent of the sum of the fair market value of such interest and the fair market value of all other property used in such activity immediately before the disposition.

The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (c)(2)(ii):

Example (1). The facts are the same as in example (5) of paragraph (c)(2)(i)(D) of this section. Under paragraph (c)(2)(i)(C)(2) of this section, D allocates the amount realized and adjusted basis of the building 30 percent to the three floors used exclusively in the rental activity, 50 percent to the five floors used exclusively in the trade or business activity, and 20 percent to the two floors used first in the rental activity and then in the trade or business activity. Under this paragraph (c)(2)(ii), the amount realized and adjusted basis allocated to the two floors that were used in both activities during the 12-month period ending on the date of the disposition must also be allocated between such activities. Under these facts, an allocation of 7/12 of such amounts to the rental activity and 5/12 of such amounts to the trade or business activity would reasonably reflect the use of the two floors during the 12-month period ending on the date of the disposition.

Example (2). B is a limited partner in a partnership that sells a tractor-trailer. During the 12-month period ending on the date of the sale, the tractor-trailer was used in several activities, and the partnership allocates the amount realized from the disposition and the adjusted basis of the tractor-trailer among the activities based on the number of days during the 12-month period that the partnership used the tractor-trailer in each activity. Under these facts, the partnership's allocation reasonably reflects the use of the tractor-trailer during the 12-month period ending on the date of the sale.

Example (3). C sells a personal computer for $8,000. During the 12-month period ending on the date of the sale, 70 percent of C's use of the computer was in a passive activity. Immediately before the sale, the fair market value of all property used in the passive activity (including the personal computer) was $200,000. Under these facts, the computer was predominatly used in the passive activity during the 12-month period ending on the date of the sale, and the value of the computer, as measured by its sale price ($8,000), does not exceed the lesser of (a) $10,000, and (b) 10 percent of the value of all property used in the activity immediately before the sale ($20,000). C allocates the amount realized and the adjusted basis solely to the passive activity. Under this paragraph (c)(2)(ii), C's allocation reasonably reflects the use of the computer during the 12-month period ending on the date of the sale.

(iii) Disposition of substantially appreciated property formerly used in nonpassive activity—(A) In general. If an interest in property used in an activity is substantially appreciated at the time of its disposition, any gain from the disposition shall be treated as not from a passive activity unless such interest in property was used in a passive activity for either—

(1) 20 percent of the period during which the taxpayer held such interest in property; or

(2) The entire 24-month period ending on the date of the disposition.

(B) Date of disposition. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(2)(iii), a disposition of an interest in property shall be deemed to occur on the date that such interest in property becomes subject to an oral or written agreement that either requires the owner or gives the owner an option to transfer such interest in property for consideration that is fixed or otherwise determinable on such date.

(C) Substantially appreciated property. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(2)(iii), an interest in property is substantially appreciated if the fair market value of such interest in property exceeds 120 percent of the adjusted basis of such interest.

(D) Coordination with paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section. If paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section applies to the disposition of an interest in property, this paragraph (c)(2)(iii) shall apply only to that portion of the gain from the disposition of such interest in property that is characterized as gain from a passive activity after the application of paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section.

(E) Coordination with section 163(d). Gain that is treated as not from a passive activity under this paragraph (c)(2)(iii) shall be treated as income described in section 469(e)(1)(A) and paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section if and only if such gain is from the disposition of an interest in property that was held for investment for more than 50 percent of the period during which the taxpayer held such interest in property in activities other than passive activities.

(F) Example. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (c)(2)(iii):

Example. A acquires a building on January 1, 1987, and uses the building in a trade or business activity in which A materially participates until March 31, 1997. On April 1, 1998, A leases the building to B. On December 31, 1999, A sells the building. Assuming A's lease of the building to B constitutes a rental activity (within the meaning of § 1.469–1T(e)(3)), the building is used in a passive activity for 21 months (April 1, 1998, through December 31, 1999). Thus, the building was not used in a passive activity for the entire 24-month period ending on the date of the sale. In addition, the 21-month period during which the building was used in a passive activity is less than 20 percent of A's holding period for the property (13 years). Therefore, the gain from the sale is treated under this paragraph (c)(2)(iii) as not from a pasive activity.

(3) Items of portfolio income specifically excluded—(i) In general. Passive activity gross income does not include portfolio income. For purposes of the preceding sentence, portfolio income includes all gross income, other than income derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section), that is attributable to—

(A) Interest (including amounts treated as interest under paragraph (e)(2)(ii) of this section, relating to certain payments to partners for the use of capital); annuities; royalties (including fees and other payments for the use of intangible property); dividends on C corporation stock; and income (including dividends) from a real estate investment trust (within the meaning of section 856), regulated investment company (within the meaning of section 851), real estate mortgage investment conduit (within the meaning of section 860D), common trust fund (within the meaning of section 584), controlled foreign corporation (within the meaning of section 957), qualified electing fund (within the meaning of section 1295(a)), or cooperative (within the meaning of section 1381(a));

(B) Dividends on S corporation stock (within the meaning of section 1368(c)(2);

(C) The disposition of property that produces income of a type described in paragraph (c)(3)(i)(A) of this section; and

(D) The disposition of property held for investment (within the meaning of section 163 (d)).

(ii) Gross income derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business. Solely for purposes of paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section, gross income derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business includes only—

(A) Interest income on loans and investments made in the ordinary course of a trade or business of lending money;

(B) Interest on accounts receivable arising from the performance of services or the sale of property in the ordinary course of a trade or business of performing such services or selling such property, but only if credit is customarily offered to customers of the business;

(C) Income from investments made in the ordinary course of a trade or business of furnishing insurance or annuity contracts or reinsuring risks underwritten by insurance companies;

(D) Income or gain derived in the ordinary course of an activity of trading or dealing in any property if such activity constitutes a trade or business (but see paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(A) of this section);

(E) Royalties derived by the taxpayer in the ordinary course of a trade or business of licensing intangible property (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B) of this section);

(F) Amount included in the gross income of a patron of a cooperative (within the meaning of section 1381(a), without regard to paragraph (2)(A) or (C) thereof) by reason of any payment or allocation to the patron based on patronage occurring with respect to a trade or business of the patron; and

(G) Other income identified by the Commissioner as income derived by the taxpayer in the ordinary course of a trade or business.

(iii) Special rules—(A) Income from property held for investment by dealer. For purposes of paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section, a dealer's income or gain from an item of property is not dervied by the dealer in the ordinary course of a trade or business of dealing in such property if the dealer held the property for investment at any time before such income or gain is recognized.

(B) Royalties derived in the ordinary course of the trade or business of licensing intangible property—(1) In general. Royalties received by any person with respect to a license or other transfer of any rights in intangible property shall be considered to be derived in the ordinary course of the trade or business of licensing such property only if such person—

(i) Created such property; or

(ii) Performed substantial services or incurred substantial costs with respect to the development or marketing of such property.

(2) Substantial services or costs—(i) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B)(2)(ii) of this section, the determination of whether a person has performed substantial services or incurred substantial costs with respect to the development or marketing of an item of intangible property shall be made on the basis of all the facts and circumstances.

(ii) Exception. A person has performed substantial services or incurred substantial costs for a taxable year with respect to the development or marketing of an item of intangible property if—

(a) The expenditures reasonably incurred by such person in such taxable year with respect to the development or marketing of the property exceed 50 percent of the gross royalties from licensing such property that are includible in such person's gross income for the taxable year; or

(b) The expenditures reasonably incurred by such person in such taxable year and all prior taxable years with respect to the development or marketing of the property exceed 25 percent of the aggregate capital expenditures (without any adjustment of amortization) made by such person with respect to the property in all such taxable years.

(iii) Expenditures taken into account. For purposes of paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B)(2)(ii) of this section, expenditures in a taxable year include amounts chargeable to capital account for such year without regard to the year or years (if any) in which any deduction for such expenditure is allowed.

(3) Passthrough entities. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B), in the case of any intangible property held by a partnership, S corporation, estate, or trust, the determination of whether royalties from such property are derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business shall be made by applying the rules of this paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B) to such entity and not to any holder of an interest in such entity.

(4) Cross reference. For special rules applicable to certain gross income from a trade or business of licensing intangible property, see paragraph (f)(7) of this section.

(C) Mineral production payments. For purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder—

(1) If a mineral production payment is treated as a loan under section 636, the portion of any payment in discharge of the production payment that is the equivalent of interest shall be treated as interest; and

(2) If a mineral production payment is not treated as a loan under section 636, payments in discharge of the production payment shall be treated as royalties.

(iv) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (c)(3):

Example (1). A, an individual engaged in the trade or business of farming, disposes of farmland in an installment sale. A is not engaged in a trade or business of selling farmland. Therefore, A's interest income from the installment note is not gross income derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business.

Example (2). P, a partnership, operates a rental apartment building for low-income tenants in City Y. Under Y's laws relating to the operation of low-income housing, P is required to maintain a reserve fund to pay for the maintenance and repair of the building. P invests the reserve fund in short-term interest-bearing deposits. Because P's interest income from the investment of the reserve fund is not interest income described in paragraph (c)(3)(ii) of this section, such income is not treated as derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business. Accordingly, P's interest income from the deposits is portfolio income (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section).

Example (3). (i) B is a partner in a partnership that is engaged in an activity involving the conduct of a trade or business of dealing in securities. On February 1, the partnership acquires certain securities for investment (within the meaning of section 163(d)). On February 2, before recognizing any income with respect to the securities, the partnership determines that it would be advisable to hold the securities primarily for sale to customers and subsequently sells them to customers in the ordinary course of its business.

(ii) Under paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(A) of this section, income or gain from any security (including any security acquired pursuant to an investment of working capital) held by a dealer for investment at any time before such income or gain is recognized is not treated for purposes of paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section as derived by the dealer in the ordinary course of its trade or business of dealing in securities. Accordingly, B's distributive share of the partnership's interest, dividends, or gains from the securities acquired by the partnership for investment on February 1 is portfolio income of B, notwithstanding that such securities were held by the partnership, subsequent to February 1, primarily for sale to customers in the ordinary course of the partnership's trade or business of dealing in securities.

Example (4). C is a partner in a partnership that is engaged in an activity of trading or dealing in royalty interests in mineral properties. The partnership derives royalty income from royalty interests held in the activity. If the activity is a trade or business activity, C's distributive share of the partnership's royalty income from such royalty interests is treated under paragraph (c)(3)(ii)(D) of this section as derived in the ordinary course of the partnership's trade or business.

Example (5). (i) D, a calendar year individual, is a partner in a calendar year partnership that is engaged in an activity of developing and marketing a design for a system that reduces air pollution in office buildings. D has a 10 percent distributive share of all items of partnership income, gain, loss, deduction, and credit. In 1987, the partnership acquired the rights to the design for $100,000. In 1987, 1988, and 1989, the partnership incurs expenditures with respect to the development and marketing of the design, and derives gross royalties from licensing the design, in the amounts set forth in the table below. The expenditures incurred in 1987 and 1988 are currently deductible expenses. The expenditures incurred in 1989 are capitalized and may be deducted only in subsequent taxable years.

Year	Gross royalties	Expenditures	Cumulative capital expenditures
1987	$20,000	$8,000	$100,000
1988	20,000	12,000	100,000
1989	60,000	15,000	115,000
1990	120,000	0	115,000

(ii) Under paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B)(3) of this section, the determination of whether royalties from intangible property are derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business of a partnership is made by applying the rules of paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B) of this section to the partnership rather than the partners. The expenditures reasonably incurred by the partnership in 1987 with respect to the development or marketing of the design ($8,000) do not exceed 50 percent of the partnership's gross royalties for such year from licensing the design ($20,000). In addition, the sum of such expenditures incurred in 1987 and all prior taxable years ($8,000) does not exceed 25 percent of the aggregate capital expenditures made by the partnership in all such taxable years with respect to the design ($100,000). Accordingly, for 1987, the partnership is not treated under paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B)(2)(ii) of this section as performing substantial services or incurring substantial costs with respect to the development or marketing of the design. Therefore, unless all of the facts and circumstances indicate that the partnership performed substantial services or incurred substantial costs with respect to the development or marketing of the design, D's distributive share of the partnership's royalty income for 1987 is portfolio income.

(iii) As of the end of 1988, the sum of the expenditures reasonably incurred by the partnership during such taxable year and all prior taxable years with respect to the development or marketing of the design ($20,000) does not exceed 25 percent of the aggregate capital expenditures made by the partnership in all such years with respect to the design ($100,000). However, the amount of such expenditures incurred by the partnership in 1988 ($12,000) exceeds 50 percent of the partnership's gross royalties for such year from licensing the design ($20,000). Accordingly, for 1988, under paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B)(2)(ii)(a) of this section, the partnership is treated as performing substantial services or incurring substantial costs with respect to the development or marketing of the design, and D's distributive share of the partnership's royalty income for 1988 is considered for purposes of paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section to be derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business and therefore is not portfolio income.

(iv) The expenditures reasonably incurred by the partnership in 1989 with respect to the development or marketing of the design ($15,000) do not exceed 50 percent of the partnership's gross royalties for such year from licensing the design ($60,000). However, the sum of such expenditures incurred by the partnership in 1989 and all prior taxable years ($35,000) exceeds 25 percent of the partnership's aggregate capital expenditures made in all such years with respect to the design ($115,000). Accordingly, for 1989, under paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B)(2)(ii)(b) of this section, the partnership is treated as performing substantial services or incurring substantial costs with respect to the development or marketing of the design, and D's distributive share of the partnership's royalty income in 1989 is considered for purposes of paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section to be derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business and therefore is not portfolio income.

(v) The result for 1990 is the same as for 1989, notwithstanding that the partnership incurs no expenditures in 1990 with respect to the development or marketing of the design.

Example (6). The facts are the same as in example (5), except that, for 1987, D's distributive share of the partnership's development and marketing costs is 15 percent, while D's distributive share of the partnership's gross royalties is 10 percent. Although D's distributive share of the expenditures reasonably incurred by the partnership during 1987 with respect to the development and marketing of the design ($1,200) is more than 50 percent of D's distributive share of the partnership's gross royalties from licensing the design ($2,000), D is not treated as performing substantial services or incurring substantial costs with respect to the development or marketing of the design for 1987 under paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B)(2)(ii)(a) of this section. This is because, under paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B)(3) of this section, the determination of whether the royalties are derived in the ordinary course of a trade or business is made by applying paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B) of this section to the partnership, and not to D.

(4) Items of personal service income specifically excluded—(i) In general. Passive activity gross income does not include compensation paid to or on behalf of an individual for personal services performed or to be performed by such individual at any time. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(4), compensation for personal services includes only—

(A) Earned income (within the meaning of section 911(d)(2)(A)), including gross income from a payment described in paragraph (e)(2) of this section that represents compensation for the performance of services by a partner;

(B) Amounts includible in gross income under section 83;

(C) Amounts includible in gross income under sections 402 and 403;

(D) Amounts (other than amounts described in paragraph (c)(4)(i)(C) of this section) paid pursuant to retirement, pension, and other arrangements for deferred compensation for services;

(E) Social security benefits (within the meaning of section 86(d)) includible in gross income under section 86; and

(F) Other income identified by the Commissioner as income derived by the taxpayer from personal services; provided, however, that no portion of a partner's distributive share of partnership income (within the meaning of section 704(b)) or a shareholder's pro rata share of income from an S corporation (within the meaning of section 1377(a)) shall be treated as compensation for personal services.

(ii) Example. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (c)(4):

Example. C owns 50 percent of the stock of X, an S corporation. X owns rental real estate, which it manages. X pays C a salary for services performed by C on behalf of X in connection with the management of X's rental properties.

Under this paragraph (c)(4), although C's pro rata share of X's gross rental income is passive activity gross income (even if the salary paid to C is less than the fair market value of C's services), the salary paid to C does not constitute passive activity gross income.

(5) Income from section 481 adjustment—(i) In general. If a change in accounting method results in a positive section 481 adjustment with respect to an activity, a ratable portion (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(5)(iii) of this section) of the amount taken into account for a taxable year as a net positive section 481 adjustment by reason of such change shall be treated as gross income from the activity for such taxable year, and such gross income shall be treated as passive activity gross income if and only if such activity is a passive activity for the year of the change (within the meaning of section 481(a)).

(ii) Positive section 481 adjustments. For purposes of applying this paragraph (c)(5)—

(A) The term "net positive section 481 adjustment" means the increase (if any) in taxable income taken into account under section 481(a) to prevent amounts from being duplicated or omitted by reason of a change in accounting method; and

(B) The term "positive section 481 adjustment with respect to an activity" means the increase (if any) in taxable income that would be taken into account under section 481(a) to prevent only the duplication or omission of amounts from such activity by reason of the change in accounting method.

(iii) Ratable portion. The ratable portion of the amount taken into account as a net positive section 481 adjustment for a taxable year by reason of a change in accounting method is determined with respect to an activity by multiplying such amount by the fraction obtained by dividing—

(A) The positive section 481 adjustment with respect to the activity; by

(B) The sum of the positive section 481 adjustments with respect to all of the activities of the taxpayer.

(6) Gross income from certain oil or gas properties—(i) In general. Notwithstanding any other provision of the regulations under section 469, passive activity gross income for any taxable year does not include an amount of the taxpayer's gross income for such year from—

(A) An oil or gas property, if any loss from a working interest in such property for any prior taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, was treated by the taxpayer, solely by reason of § 1.469-1T(e)(4) (relating to a special rule for losses from oil and gas working interests), and not by reason of the taxpayer's material participation in the activity, as a loss that is not from a passive activity; or

(B) Any property the basis of which is determined in whole or in part by reference to the basis of property described in paragraph(c)(6)(i)(A) of this section; equal to the taxpayer's net income from such property for the taxable year. The preceding sentence applies without regard to whether the taxpayer's interest in the property is held through an entity that limits the taxpayer's liability (within the meaning of § 1.469-1T(e)(4)(v)).

(ii) Net income from the property. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(6), the taxpayer's net income for the taxable year from any property described in paragraph (c)(6)(i) of this section is the amount, if any, by which the taxpayer's gross income from such property exceeds the taxpayer's deductions for such taxable year (including any deduction treated as a deduction for such year under § 1.469-1T(f)(4)) that are reasonable allocable to such property.

(iii) Property. For purposes of paragraph (c)(6)(i)(A) of this section, the term "property" does not have the meaning given such term by section 614(a) or the regulations thereunder, but means any property the value of which is directly enhanced by any drilling, logging, seismic testing, or other activities any part of the costs of which were borne by the taxpayer as a result of holding the working interest described in such paragraph (c)(6)(i)(A).

(iv) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this (c)(6):

Example (1). A is a general partner in partnership P and a limited partner in partnership R. P and R own oil and gas working interests in two separate tracts of land acquired from two separate landowners. In 1987, P drills a well on its tract, and A's distributive share of P's losses from drilling the well are treated under § 1.469-1T(e)(4) as not from a passive activity. In the course of selecting the drilling site and drilling the well, P develops information indicating that the reservoir in which the well was drilled underlies R's tract as well as P's. Under these facts, P's and R's tracts are treated as one property for purposes of this paragraph (c)(6), even if A's interests in the mineral deposits in the tracts are treated as separate properties under section 614(a). Accordingly, in 1988 and subsequent years, A's distributive share of both P's and R's income and expenses from their respective tracts is taken into account in computing A's net income from the property for purposes of this paragraph (c)(6).

Example (2). B is a general partner in partnership S. S owns an oil and gas working interest in a single tract of land. In 1987, S drills a well, and B's distributive share of S's losses from drilling the well is treated under § 1.469-1T(e)(4) as not from a passive activity. In the course of drilling the well, S discovers two oil-bearing formations, one underlying the other. On December 1, 1987, S completes the well in the underlying formation. On January 1, 1988, B converts B's entire general partnership interest in S into a limited partnership interest. In 1988, S completes in, and commences production from, the shallow formation. Under these facts, the two mineral deposits in S's tract are treated as one property for purposes of this paragraph (c)(6), even if they are treated as separate properties under section, 614 (a). Accordingly, B's distributive share of S's income and expenses from both the underlying formation and from recompletion in and production from the shallow formation is taken into account in computing B's net income from the property for purposes of this paragraph (c)(6).

Example (3). C is a general partner in partnership T and a limited partner in partnership U. T and U both own oil and gas working interests in tracts of land in County X. In 1987, T drills a well, and C's distributive share of T's losses from drilling the well is treated under § 1.469-1T(e)(4) as not from a passive activity. In the course of selecting the drilling site and drilling the well, T develops information indicating a significant probability that substantial oil and gas reserves underlie most portions of County X. As a result, the value of all oil and gas properties in County X is enhanced. The information developed by T does not, however, indicate that the reservoir in which T's well is drilled underlies U's tract. Under these facts, T's and U's tracts are not treated as one property for purposes of this paragraph (c)(6), because the value of U's tract is not directly enhanced by T's activities.

(7) Other items specifically excluded. Notwithstanding any other provision of the regulations under section 469, passive activity gross income does not include the following:

(i) Gross income of an individual from intangible property, such as a patent, copyright, or literary, musical, or artistic composition, if the taxpayer's personal efforts significantly contributed to the creation of such property;

(ii) Gross income from a qualified low-income housing project (within the meaning of section 502 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986) for any taxable year in the relief period (within the meaning of section 502(b) of such Act;

(iii) Gross income attributable to a refund of any state, local, or foreign income, war profits, or excess profits tax;

(iv) Gross income of an individual from a covenant by such individual not to compete; and

(v) Gross income that is treated as not from a passive activity under any provision of the regulations under section 469, including but not limited to § 1.469-1T(h)(6) (relating to income from intercompany transactions of members of an affiliated group of corporations filing a consolidated return) and paragraph (f) of this section (relating to recharacterized passive income).

(d) Passive activity deductions—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in section 469 and the regulations thereunder, a deduction is a passive activity deduction for a taxable year if and only if such deduction—

(i) Arises (within the meaning of paragraph (d)(8) of this section) in connection with the conduct of a activity that is a passive activity for the taxable year; or

(ii) Is treated as a deduction from an activity under § 1.469-1T(f)(4) for the taxable year.

The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (d)(1):

Example. (i) In 1987, A, a calendar year individual, acquires a partnership interest in R, a calendar year partnership. R's only activity is a trade or business activity in which A materially participates for 1987. R incurs a loss in 1987. A's distributive share of R's 1987 loss is $1,000. However, A's basis in the partnership interest at the end of 1987 (without regard to A's distributive share of partnership loss) is $600; accordingly, section 704(d) disallows any deduction in 1987 for $400 of A's distributive share of R's loss. The remainder of A's distributive share of R's loss would be allowed as a deduction for 1987 if taxable income for all taxable years were determined without regard to sections 469 and 1211. See paragraph (d)(8) of this section.

(ii) A does not materially participate in R's activity for 1988. In 1988, R again incurs a loss, and A's distributive share of the loss is again $1,000. At the end of 1988, A's basis in the partnership interest (without regard to A's distributive share of partnership loss) is $2,000; accordingly, in 1988 section 704(d) does not limit A's deduction for either A's $1,000 distributive share of R's 1988 loss or the $400 loss carried over from 1987 under the second sentence of section 704(d). These losses would be allowed as a deduction for 1988 if taxable income for all taxable years were determined without regard to sections 469 and 1211. See paragraph (d)(8) of this section.

(iii) Under these facts, only $400 of A's distributive share of R's deductions from the activity are disallowed under section 704(d) in 1987. A's remaining deductions from the activity are treated as deductions that arise in connection with the activity for 1987 under paragraph (d)(8) of this section. Because A materially participates in the activity for 1987, the activity is not a passive activity (within the meaning of § 1.469-1T(e)(1)) of A for such year. Accordingly, the deductions that are not disallowed in 1987 are not passive activity deductions.

(iv) A does not materially participate in R's activity for 1988. Accordingly, the activity is a passive activity of A for such year. No portion of A's distributive share of R's deductions from the activity is disallowed under section 704(d) in 1988. Accordingly, A's distributive share of R's deductions for 1988 and the $400 of deductions carried over from 1987 are both treated under paragraph (d)(8) of this section as deductions that arise in 1988. Since the activity is a passive activity for 1988, such deductions are passive activity deductions.

(2) Exceptions. Passive activity deductions do not include—

(i) A deduction for an item of expense (other than interest) that is clearly and directly allocable (within the meaning of paragraph (d)(4) of this section) to portfolio income (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section);

(ii) A deduction allowed under section 243, 244, or 245 with respect to any dividend that is not included in passive activity gross income;

(iii) Interest expense (other than interest expense described in paragraph (d)(3) of this section);

(iv) A deduction for a loss from the disposition of property of a type that produces portfolio income (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section);

(v) A deduction that, under section 469(g) and § 1.469-6T (relating to the allowance of passive activity losses upon certain dispositions of interests in passive activities), is treated as a deduction that is not a passive activity deduction;

(vi) A deduction for any state, local, or foreign income, war profits, or excess profits tax;

(vii) A miscellaneous itemized deduction (within the meaning of section 67(b)) that is subject to disallowance in whole or in part under section 67(a) (without regard to whether any amount of such deduction is disallowed under section 67);

(viii) A deduction allowed under section 170 for a charitable contribution;

(ix) An item of loss or deduction that is carried to the taxable year under section 172(a), section 1212(a)(1)(B) (in the case of corporations), or section 1212(b) (in the case of taxpayers other than corporations); and

(x) An item of loss or deduction that would have been allowed for a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987, but for section 704(d), 1366, or 465.

(3) Interest expense. Except as otherwise provided in the regulations under section 469, interest expense is taken into account as a passive activity deduction if and only if such interest expense—

(i) Is allocated under § 1.163-8T to a passive activity expenditure (within the meaning of § 1.163-8T(b)(4)); and

(ii) Is not—

(A) Qualified residence interest (within the meaning of § 1.163-10T); or

(B) Capitalized pursuant to a capitalization provision (within the meaning of § 1.163-8T(m)(7)(i)).

(4) Clearly and directly allocable expenses. For purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder, an expense (other than interest expense) is clearly and directly allocable to portfolio income (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section) if and only if such expense is incurred as a result of, or incident to, an activity in which such gross income is derived or in connection with property from which such gross income is derived. For example, general and administrative expenses and compensation paid to officers attributable to the performance of services that do not directly benefit or are not incurred by reason of a particular activity or particular property are not clearly and directly allocable to portfolio income (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section).

(5) Treatment of loss from disposition—(i) In general. Except as otherwise provided in the regulations under section 469—

(A) Any loss recognized in any year upon the sale, exchange, or other disposition (a "disposition") of an interest in property used in an activity at the time of the disposition or of an interest in an activity held through a partnership or S corporation and any deduction allowed on account of the abandonment or worthlessness of such an interest is treated as a deduction from such activity; and

(B) Any such deduction is a passive activity deduction if and only if the activity is a passive activity of the taxpayer for the taxable year of the disposition (or other event giving rise to the deduction).

(ii) Disposition of property used in more than one activity in 12-month period preceding disposition. In the case of a disposition of an interest in property that is used in more than one activity during the 12-month period ending on the date of the disposition, the amount realized from the disposition and the adjusted basis of such interest must be allocated among such activities in the manner described in paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section.

(iii) Other applicable rules—(A) Interest in property. For purposes of this paragraph (d)(5), a taxpayer's interests in property used in an activity and the amounts allocated to such interests shall be determined under paragraph (c)(2)(i)(C) of this section.

(B) Dispositions of partnership interests and S corporation stock. A partnership interest or S corporation stock is not property used in an activity for purposes of this paragraph (d)(5). See paragraph (e)(3) of this section for rules treating the loss recognized upon the disposition of a partnership interest or S corporation stock as loss from the disposition of interests in the activities in which the partnership or S corporation has an interest.

(6) Coordination with other limitations on deductions that apply before section 469—(i) In general. An item of deduction from a passive activity that is disallowed for a taxable year under section 704(d), 1366(d), or 465 is not a passive activity deduction for the taxable year. Paragraphs (d)(6) (ii) and (iii) of this section provide rules for determining the extent to which items of deduction from a passive activity are disallowed for a taxable year under sections 704(d), 1366(d), and 465.

(ii) Proration of deductions disallowed under basis limitations—(A) Deductions disallowed under section 704(d). If any amount of a partner's distributive share of a partnership's loss for the taxable year is disallowed under section 704(d), a ratable portion of the partner's distributive share of each item of deduction or loss of the partnership is disallowed for the taxable year. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the ratable portion of an item of deduction or loss is the amount of such item multiplied by the fraction obtained by dividing—

(1) The amount of the partner's distributive share of partnership loss that is disallowed for the taxable year; by

(2) The sum of the partner's distributive shares of all items of deduction and loss of the partnership for the taxable year.

(B) Deductions disallowed under section 1366(d). If any amount of an S corporation shareholder's pro rata share of an S corporation's loss for the taxable year is disallowed under section 1366(d), a ratable portion of the taxpayer's pro rata share of each item of deduction or loss of the S corporation is disallowed for the taxable year. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the ratable portion of an item of deduction or loss is the amount of such item multiplied by the fraction obtained by dividing—

(1) The amount of the shareholder's pro rata share of S corporation loss that is disallowed for the taxable year; by

(2) The sum of the shareholder's pro rata shares of all items of deduction and loss of the corporation for the taxable year.

(iii) Proration of deductions disallowed under at-risk limitation. If any amount of the taxpayer's loss from an activity (within the meaning of section 465(c)) is disallowed under section 465 for the taxable year, a ratable portion of each item of deduction or loss from the activity is disallowed for the taxable year. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the ratable portion of an item of deduction or loss is the amount of such item multiplied by the fraction obtained by dividing—

(1) The amount of the loss from the activity that is disallowed for the taxable year; by

(2) The sum of all deductions from the activity for the taxable year.

(iv) Coordination of basis and at-risk limitations. The portion of any item of deduction or loss that is disallowed for the taxable year under section 704(d) or 1366(d) is not taken into account for the taxable year in determining the loss from an activity (within the meaning of section 465(c)) for purposes of applying section 465.

(v) Separately identified items of deduction and loss. In identifying the items of deduction and loss from an activity that are not disallowed under sections 704(d), 1366(d), and 465 (and that therefore may be treated as passive activity deductions), the taxpayer need not account separately for any item of deduction or loss unless such item may, if separately taken into account, result in an income tax liability different from that which would result were such item of deduction or loss taken into account separately. For related rules applicable to partnerships and S corporations, see § 1.702-1(a)(8)(ii) and section 1366(a)(1)(A), respectively. Items of deduction or loss that must be accounted for separately include (but are not limited to) items of deduction or loss that—

(A) Are attributable to separate activities (within the meaning of the rules to be contained in § 1.469-4T);

(B) Arise in a rental real estate activity (within the meaning of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T) in taxable years in which the taxpayer activity participates (within the meaning of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T) in such activity;

(C) Arise in a rental real estate activity (within the meaning of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T) in taxable years in which the taxpayer does not actively participate (within the meaning of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T) in such activity;

(D) Arose in a taxable year beginning before 1987 and were not allowed for such taxable year under section 704(d), 1366(d), or 465(a)(2);

(E) Are taken into account under section 1211 (relating to the limitation on capital losses) or section 1231 (relating to property used in a trade or business and involuntary conversions); or

(F) Are attributable to pre-enactment interests in activities (within the meaning of § 1.469-11T(c)).

(7) Deductions from section 481 adjustment—(i) In general. If a change in accounting method results in a negative section 481 adjustment with respect to an activity, a ratable portion (within the meaning of paragraph (d)(7)(iii) of this section) of the amount taken into account for a taxable year as a net negative section 481 adjustment by reason of such change shall be treated as a deduction from the activity for such taxable year, and such deduction shall be treated as a passive activity deduction if and only if such activity is a passive activity for the year of the change (within the meaning of section 481(a)). See the rules to be contained in § 1.469-1T(k) for the treatment of passive activity deductions from an activity in taxable years in which the activity is a former passive activity.

(ii) Negative section 481 adjustments. For purposes of applying this paragraph (d)(7)—

(A) The term "net negative section 481 adjustment" means the decrease (if any) in taxable income taken into account under section 481(a) to prevent amounts from being duplicated or omitted by reason of a change in accounting method; and

(B) The term "negative section 481 adjustment with respect to an activity" means the decrease (if any) in taxable income that would be taken into account under section 481(a) to prevent only the duplication or omission of amounts from such activity by reason of the change in accounting method.

(iii) Ratable portion. The ratable portion of the amount taken into account as a net negative section 481 adjustments for a taxable year by reason of a change in accounting method is determined with respect to an activity by multiplying such amount by the fraction obtained by dividing—

(A) The negative section 481 adjustment with respect to the activity; by

(B) The sum of the negative section 481 adjustments with respect to all of the activities of the taxpayer.

(8) Taxable year in which item arises. For purposes of this paragraph (d), an item of deduction arises in the taxable year in which such item would be allowable as a deduction under the taxpayer's method of accounting if taxable income for all taxable years were determined without regard to sections 469 and 1211.

(e) Special rules for partners and S corporation shareholders—(1) In general. For purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder, the character (as an item of passive activity gross income or passive activity deduction) of each item of gross income and deduction allocated to a taxpayer from a partnership or S corporation (a "passthrough entity") shall be determined, in any case in which participation is relevant, by reference to the participation of the taxpayer in the activity (or activities) that generated such item. Such participation is determined for the taxable year of the passthrough entity (and not the taxable year of the taxpayer). The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (e)(1):

Example. A, a calendar year individual, is a partner in a partnership that has a taxable year ending January 31. During its taxable year ending on January 31, 1988, the partnership engages in a single trade or business activity. For the period from February 1, 1987, through January 31, 1988, A does not materially participate in this activity. In A's calendar year 1988 return, A's distributive share of the partnership's gross income and deductions from the activity must be treated as passive activity gross income and passive activity deductions, without regard to A's participation in the activity from February 1, 1988, through December 31, 1988. See also § 1.469-11T(a)(4) (relating to the effective date of, and transition rules under, section 469 and the regulations thereunder).

(2) Payments under sections 707(a), 707(c), and 736(b). Items of gross income and deduction attributable to a transaction described in section 707(a), 707(c), or 736(b) shall be characterized for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder in accordance with the following rules:

(i) Section 707(a). Any item of gross income or deduction attributable to a transaction that is treated under section 707(a) as a transaction between a partnership and a partner acting in a capacity other than as a member of such partnership shall be characterized for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder in a manner that is consistent with the treatment of such transaction under section 707(a).

(ii) Section 707(c)—(A) In general. Except as provided in paragraph(e)(2)(ii)(B) of this section, any payment to a partner for services or the use of capital that is described in section 707(c) (including any payment described in section 736(a)(2) (relating to guaranteed payments made in liquidation of the interest of a retiring or deceased partner)) shall be characterized as the payment of compensation for services or as the payment of interest, respectively, and not as a distributive share of partnership income.

(B) Exception. (1) If section 736(a)(2) applies to a payment made in liquidation of a retiring or deceased partner's interest, any income that—

(i) Is taken into account by a retiring partner (or any other person that owns (directly or indirectly) an interest in such partner if such partner is a passthrough entity) or a deceased partner's successor in interest as a result of such payment; and

(ii) Is attributable to the portion (if any) of such payment that is allocable to the unrealized receivables (within the meaning of section 751(c)) and goodwill of an activity of the partnership; shall be treated as passive activity gross income if and only if the activity was a passive activity of such retiring or deceased partner (or such other person) for the taxable year of such retiring or deceased partner (or such other person) in which the liquidation of such partner's interest commenced.

(2) If section 736(a)(2) applies to a payment made in liquidation of a retiring or deceased partner's interest, the portion (if any) of such payment that is allocable to the unrealized receivables (within the meaning of section 751(c)) and goodwill of an activity of the partnership is determined, for purposes of this paragraph (e)(2)(ii)(B), by multiplying the amount of such payment by the fraction obtained by dividing—

(i) The amount to be paid under section 736(a)(2) in liquidation of such partner's interest in the unrealized receivables and goodwill of such activity of the partnership; by

(ii) The sum of all payments to be made under section 736(a)(2) in liquidation of such partner's interest.

(iii) Section 736(b). If any gain or loss is taken into account by a retiring partner (or any other person that owns (directly or indirectly) an interest in such partner if such partner is a passthrough entity) or a deceased partner's successor in interest as a result of a payment to which section 736(b) (relating to payments made in exchange for a retiring or deceased partner's interest in partnership property) applies, such gain or loss shall be treated as passive activity gross income or a passive activity deduction only to the extent that such gain or loss would have been passive activity gross income or a passive activity deduction of such retiring or deceased partner (or such other person) if it had been recognized at the time the liquidation of such partner's interest commenced.

(3) Sale or exchange of interest in passthrough entity—(i) Application of this paragraph (e)(3). In the case of the sale, exchange, or other disposition (a "disposition") of an interest in a passthrough entity, the amount of the seller's gain or loss from each activity in which such entity has an interest is determined, for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder, under this paragraph (e)(3). In the case of any such disposition, except as otherwise provided in paragraph (e)(3)(iii) or (iv) of this section, paragraph (e)(3)(ii) of this section shall apply. See paragraphs (c)(2) and (d)(5) of this section for rules for determining the character of gain or loss, respectively, recognized upon a disposition of an interest in an activity held through a passthrough entity.

(ii) General rule—(A) Allocation among activities. Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph (e)(3)(ii) or in paragraph (e)(3) (iii) or (iv) of this section, if a holder of an interest in a passthrough entity disposes of such interest, a ratable portion (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(B) of this section) of any gain or loss from such disposition shall be treated as gain or loss from the disposition of an interest in each trade or business, rental, or investment activity in which such passthrough entity owns an interest on the applicable valuation date.

(B) Ratable portion—(1) Dispositions on which gain is recognized. The ratable portion of any gain from the disposition of an interest in a passthrough entity that is allocable to an activity described in paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(A) of this section is determined by multiplying the amount of such gain by the fraction obtained by dividing—

(i) The amount of net gain (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(E)(3) of this section) that would have been allocated to the holder of such interest with respect thereto if the passthrough entity had sold its entire interest in such activity for its fair market value on the applicable valuation date; by

(ii) The sum of the amounts of net gain that would have been allocated to the holder of such interest with respect thereto if the passthrough entity had sold its entire interest in each appreciated activity (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(E)(1) of this section) described in paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(A) of this section for the fair market value of each such activity on the applicable valuation date.

(2) Dispositions on which loss is recognized. The ratable portion of any loss from the disposition of an interest in a passthrough entity that is allocable to an activity described in paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(A) of this section is determined by multiplying the amount of such loss by the fraction obtained by dividing—

(i) The amount of net loss (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(E)(4) of this section) that would have been allocated to the holder of such interest with respect thereto if the passthrough entity had sold its entire interest in such activity for its fair market value on the applicable valuation date; by

(ii) The sum of the amounts of net loss that would have been allocated to the holder of such interest with respect thereto if the passthrough entity had sold its entire interest in each depreciated activity (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(E)(2) of this section) described in paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(A) of this section for the fair market value of each such activity on the applicable valuation date.

(C) Default rule. If the gain or loss recognized upon the disposition of an interest in a passthrough entity cannot be allocated under paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(A) of this section, such gain or loss shall be allocated among the activities described in paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(A) of this section in proportion to the respective fair market values of the passthrough entity's interests in such activities at the applicable valuation date, and the gain or loss allocated to each activity of the passthrough entity shall be treated as gain or loss from the disposition of an interest in such activity.

(D) Special rules. For purposes of this paragraph (e)(3)(ii), the following rules shall apply:

(1) Applicable valuation date—(i) In general. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(D)(1)(ii) of this section, the applicable valuation date with respect to any disposition of an interest in a passthrough entity is whichever one of the following dates is selected by the passthrough entity:

(a) The beginning of the taxable year of the passthrough entity in which such disposition occurs; or

(b) The date on which such disposition occurs.

(ii) Exception. If, after the beginning of a passthrough entity's taxable year in which a holder's disposition of an interest in such passthrough entity occurs and before the time of such disposition—

(a) The passthrough entity disposes of more than 10 percent of its interest (by value as of the beginning of such taxable year) in any activity;

(b) More than 10 percent of the property (by value as of the beginning of such taxable year) used in any activity of the passthrough entity is disposed of; or

(c) The holder of such interest contributes to the passthrough entity substantially appreciated property or substantially depreciated property with a total fair market value or adjusted basis, respectively, which exceeds 10 percent of the total fair market value of the holder's interest in the passthrough entity as of the beginning of such taxable year;

then the applicable valuation date shall be the date immediately preceding the date on which such disposition occurs.

(2) Basis adjustments. Any adjustment to the basis of partnership property under section 743(b) made with respect to the holder of an interest in a partnership shall be taken into account in computing the net gain or net loss that would have been allocated to the holder with respect to such interest if the partnership had sold its entire interest in an activity.

(3) Tiered passthrough entities. In the case of a disposition of an interest in a passthrough entity (the "subsidiary passthrough entity") by a holder that is also a passthrough entity, any gain or loss from such disposition that is taken into account by any person that owns (directly or indirectly) an interest in such holder shall be allocated among the activities of the subsidiary passthrough entity by applying the rules of this paragraph (e)(3)(ii) to the person taking such gain or loss into account as if such person has been the holder of an interest in such subsidiary passthrough entity and had recognized such gain or loss as a result of a disposition of such interest.

(E) Meaning of certain terms. For purposes of this paragraph (e)(3)(ii)—

(1) An activity is an appreciated activity with respect to a holder that has disposed of an interest in a passthrough entity if a net gain would have been allocated to the holder with respect to such interest if the passthrough entity has sold its entire interest in such activity for its fair market value on the applicable valuation date;

(2) An activity is a depreciated activity with respect to a holder that has disposed of an interest in a passthrough entity if a net loss would have been allocated to the holder with respect to such interest if the passthrough entity had sold its entire interest in such activity for its fair market value on the applicable valuation date;

(3) The term "net gain" means, with respect to the sale of a passthrough entity's entire interest in an activity, the amount by which the gains from the sale of all of the property used by (or representing the interest of) the passthrough entity in such activity exceed the losses (if any) from such sale;

(4) The term "net loss" means, with respect to the sale of a passthrough entity's entire interest in an activity, the amount by which the losses from the sale of all of the property used by (or representing the interest of) the passthrough entity in such activity exceed the gains (if any) from such sale.

(iii) Treatment of gain allocated to certain passive activities as not from a passive activity. If, in the case of a disposition of an interest in a passthrough entity—

(A) An amount of gain recognized on account of such disposition by the holder of such interest (or any other person that owns (directly or indirectly) an interest in such holder if such holder is a passthrough entity) is allocated to a passive activity of such holder (or such other person) under paragraph (e)(3)(ii) of this section;

(B) An amount of gain that would have been treated as gain that is not from a passive activity under paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section (relating to substantially appreciated property formerly used in a nonpassive activity) would have been allocated to such holder (or such other person) with respect to such interest if all of the property used in such passive activity had been sold immediately prior to the disposition for its fair market value on the applicable valuation date (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(D)(1) of this section; and

(C) The amount of the gain of the holder (or such other person) described in paragraph (e)(3)(iii)(B) of this section exceeds 10 percent of the amount of the gain of the holder (or such other person) described in paragraph (e)(3)(iii)(A) of this section;

then the gain of the holder (or such other person) that is described in paragraph (e)(3)(iii)(A) of this section shall be treated as gain that is not from a passive activity to the extent that such gain does not exceed the amount of the gain of the holder (or such other person) described in paragraph (e)(3)(iii)(B) of this section. For purposes of applying the preceding sentence to the disposition of an interest in a partnership, the amount of gain that would have been allocated to the holder (or such other person) if all of the property used in an activity had been sold shall be determined by taking into account any adjustment to the basis of partnership property made with respect to such holder (or such other person) under section 743(b).

(iv) Dispositions occurring in taxable years beginning before February 19, 1988—(A) In general. Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph (e)(3)(iv), if the holder of an interest in a passthrough entity sells, exchanges, or otherwise disposes of all or part of such interest during a taxable year of such entity beginning prior to February 19, 1988, any gain or loss recognized from such disposition shall be allocated among the activities of the passthrough entity under any reasonable method selected by the passthrough entity, and the gain or loss allocated to each activity of the passthrough entity shall be treated as gain or loss from the disposition of an interest in such activity. For purposes of the preceding sentence, a reasonable method shall include the method prescribed by paragraph (e)(3)(ii) of this section. In addition, a method that allocates gain or loss among the passthrough entity's activities on the basis of the fair market value, cost, or adjusted basis of the property used in such activities shall generally be considered a reasonable method for purposes of this paragraph (e)(3)(iv).

(B) Exceptions. This paragraph (e)(3)(iv) shall not apply to any disposition of an interest in a passthrough entity occurring after February 19, 1988, if after such date, but before the holder's disposition of such interest, the holder (or any other person that owns (directly or indirectly) an interest in such holder if such holder is a passthrough entity) contributes to the passthrough entity substantially appreciated portfolio assets or any other substantially appreciated property that was used in any trade or business activity (within the meaning of § 1.469-1T(e)) of the holder (or such other person) during—

(1) The taxable year of such person in which such contribution occurs; or

(2) The immediately preceding taxable year of such person;

but only if such person materially participated (within the meaning of § 1.469-5T) in the activity for such year.

(v) Treatment of portfolio assets. For purposes of the paragraph (e)(3), all portfolio assets owned by a passthrough entity shall be treated as held in a single investment activity.

(vi) Definitions. For purposes of this paragraph (e)(3)—

(A) The term "portfolio asset" means any property of a type that produces portfolio income (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section);

(B) The term "substantially appreciated property" means property with a fair market value that exceeds 120 percent of its adjusted basis; and

(C) The term "substantially depreciated property" means property with an adjusted basis that exceeds 120 percent of its fair market value.

(vii) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (e)(3):

Example (1). (i) A owns a one-half interest in P, a calendar year partnership. In 1993, A sells 50 percent of such interest for $50.000. A's adjusted basis for the interest sold is $30,000. Thus, A recognizes $20,000 of gain from the sale. P is engaged in three trade or business activities, X, Y, and Z, and owns marketable securities that are portfolio assets. For 1993, A materially participates in activity Z, but does not participate in activities X and Y. Paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section would not have applied to any of the gain that A would have been allocated if, immediately before A's sale, P had disposed of all of the property used in its trade or business activities. During the portion of 1993 preceding A's sale, P did not sell any of the property used in its activities, and A did not contribute any property to P.

(ii) Under paragraph (e)(3)(ii) of this section, a ratable portion of A's $20,000 gain is allocated to each appreciated activity in which P owned an interest on the applicable valuation date (within the meaning of paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(D)(1) of this section). For this purpose, paragraph (e)(3)(v) of this section treats the marketable securities owned by P as a single investment activity.

(iii) P selects the beginning of 1993 as the applicable valuation date pursuant to paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(D)(1)(i) of this section. P is not required to use the date of A's sale as the applicable valuation date under paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(D)(1)(ii) of this section because during the portion of 1993 preceding A's sale, P did not sell any of its property and A did not contribute any property to P. At the beginning of 1993, the fair market value and adjusted basis of the property used in P's activities are as follows:

	Adjusted basis	Fair market value
X	$68,000	$48,000
Y	30,000	62,000
Z	20,000	80,000
Marketable securities	2,000	10,000
Total	120,000	200,000

(iv) Under paragraph (e)(3)(ii)(B) of this section, the portion of A's $20,000 gain that is allocated to an appreciated activity of P (i.e., activities Y and Z and the marketable securities) is the amount of such gain multiplied by the fraction obtained by dividing (a) the net gain that would have been allocated to A with respect to the interest sold by A if P had sold its entire interest in such activity at the beginning of 1993 by (b) the sum of the amounts of net gain that would have been allocated to A with respect to the interest sold by A if P had sold its entire interest in each appreciated activity at the beginning of 1993.

(v) If P had sold its entire interest in activities Y and Z and the marketable securities at the beginning of 1993, A would have been allocated the following amounts of net gain with respect to the interest in P that A sold in 1993:

Activity	Net gain
Y	$8,000
Z	15,000
Marketable securities	2,000
Total	25,000

(vi) Accordingly, under paragraph (e)(3)(ii) of this section, $6,400 of A's $20,000 gain ($20,000 × $8,000/$25,000) is allocated to activity Y, $12,000 of A's $20,000 gain ($20,000 × $15,000/$25,000) is allocated to activity Z, and $1,600 of A's $20,000 gain ($20,000 × $2,000/$25,000) is allocated to the marketable securities. The gain allocated to activity Y is passive activity gross income. None of that gain is treated as gain that is not from a passive activity under paragraph (e)(3)(iii) of this section because paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section would not have applied to any of the gain that A would have been allocated if P had sold all of the property used in activity Y immediately prior to A's sale.

Example (2). (i) B and C, calendar year individuals, are equal partners in calendar year partnership R, which they formed on January 1, 2005, with contributions of property and money. The only item of property (other than money) contributed by B was a building that B had used for 12 years preceding the contribution in an activity that was not a passive activity during such period. At the time of its contribution, the building had an adjusted basis of $40,000 and a fair market value of $66,000. R is engaged in a single activity: the sale of equipment to customers in the ordinary course of the business of dealing in such property. R uses the building contributed by B in the dealership activity. B did not materially participate in the dealership activity during 2005. On July 1, 2005, D purchases one-half of B's interest in R for $37,500 in cash. At the time of the sale, the balance sheet of R, which uses the accrual method of accounting, is as follows:

	Adjusted basis per books	Fair market value
Assets
Cash	$30,000	$30,000
Accounts receivable:
Dealership	20,000	18,000
Inventory:
Dealership	52,000	66,000
Building	40,000	66,000
Total	142,000	180,000
Liabilities and Capital
Liabilities	$30,000	$30,000
Capital:
B	47,000	75,000
C	65,000	75,000
Total	142,000	180,000

Thus, B's gain from the sale is $14,000 ($45,000 amount realized from the sale (consisting of $37,500 of cash and $7,500 of liabilities assumed by the purchaser) minus B's $31,000 adjusted basis for the interest sold (one-half of B's total adjusted basis of $62,000)).

(ii) Under paragraph (e)(3)(ii) of this section, all $14,000 of B's gain from the sale is allocated to R's dealership activity, which is a passive activity of B for 2005. If, however, R had sold its interest in the building immediately prior to B's sale for its fair market value on the applicable valuation date (the valuation date selected by R is irrelevant since the building had a fair market value of $66,000 at the beginning of 2005 and at the time of the sale), B would have been allocated $13,000 of gain under section 704(c) with respect to the interest in R that B sold to D. This gain would have been treated as gain that is not from a passive activity under paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section and would have exceeded 10 percent of the total amount of B's gain that is allocated to the dealership activity under paragraph (e)(3)(ii) of this section. Accordingly, under paragraph (e)(3)(iii) of this section, B's gain from the sale ($14,000) is treated as gain that is not from a passive activity to the extent that such gain does not exceed the amount of gain subject to paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of this section that B would have been allocated with respect to the interest sold to D if R had sold all of the property used in the dealership activity immediately prior to B's sale ($13,000). Thus, $13,000 of B's gain from the sale is treated as gain that is not from a passive activity.

(f) Recharacterization of passive income in certain situations—(1) In general. This paragraph (f) sets forth rules that require income from certain passive activities to be treated as income that is not from a passive activity (regardless of whether such income is treated as passive activity gross income under section 469 or any other provision of the regulations thereunder). For definitions of certain terms used in this paragraph (f), see paragraph (f)(9) of this section.

(2) Special rule for significant participation—(i) In general. An amount of the taxpayer's gross income from each significant participation passive activity for the taxable year equal to a ratable portion of the taxpayer's net passive income from such activity for the taxable year shall be treated as not from a passive activity if the taxpayer's passive activity gross income from all significant participation passive activities for the taxable year (determined without regard to paragraphs (f) (2) through (4) of this section) exceeds the taxpayer's passive activity deductions from all such activities for such year. For purposes of this paragraph (f)(2), the ratable portion of the net passive income from an activity is determined by multiplying the amount of such income by the fraction obtained by dividing—

(A) The amount of the excess described in the preceding sentence; by

(B) The amount of the excess described in the preceding sentence taking into account only significant participation passive activities from which the taxpayer has net passive income for the taxable year.

(ii) Significant participation passive activity. For purposes of this paragraph (f)(2), the term "significant participation passive activity" means any trade or business activity (within the meaning of § 1.469-1T(e)(2)) in which the taxpayer significantly participates (within the meaning of § 1.469-5T(c)(2)) for the taxable year but in which the taxpayer does not materially participate (within the meaning of § 1.469-5T) for such year.

(iii) Example. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (f)(2):

Example. (i) A owns interests in three trade or business activities, X, Y, and Z. A does not materially participate in any of these activities for the taxable year, but participates in activity X for 110 hours, in activity Y for 160 hours, and in activity Z for 125 hours. A owns no interest in any other trade or business activity in which A does not materially participate for the taxable year but in which A participates for more than 100 hours during the taxable year. A's net passive income (or loss) for the taxable year from activities X, Y, and Z is as follows:

	X	Y	Z
Passive activity gross income	$600	$700	$900
Passive activity deductions	(200)	(1,000)	(300)
Net passive income	400	(300)	600

(ii) Under paragraph (f)(2)(ii) of this section, activities X, Y, and Z are A's only significant participation passive activities for the taxable year. A's passive activity gross income from significant participation passive activities ($2,200) exceeds A's passive activity deductions from significant participation passive activities ($1,500) by $700 for such year. Therefore, under paragraph (f)(2)(i) of this section, a ratable portion of A's gross income from activities X and Z (A's significant participation passive activities with net passive income for the taxable year) is treated as gross income that is not from a passive activity. The ratable portion is determined by dividing (a) the amount by which A's passive activity gross income from significant participation passive activities exceeds A's passive activity deductions from significant participation passive activities for the taxable year ($700) by (b) such excess taking into account only A's significant participation passive activities having net passive income for the taxable year ($1,000). Accordingly, $280 of gross income from activity X ($400 x 700/1000) and $420 of gross income from activity Z ($600 x 700/1000) is treated as gross income that is not from a passive activity.

(3) Rental of nondepreciable property. If less than 30 percent of the unadjusted basis of the property used or held for use by customers in a rental activity (within the meaning of § 1.469-1T(e)(3)) during the taxable year is subject to the allowance for depreciation under section 167, an amount of the taxpayer's gross income from the activity equal to the taxpayer's net passive income from the activity shall be treated as not from a passive activity. For purposes of this paragraph (f)(3), the term "unadjusted basis" means adjusted basis determined without regard to any adjustment described in section 1016 that decreases basis. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (f)(3):

Example. C is a limited partner in a partnership. The partnership acquires vacant land for $300,000, constructs improvements on the land at a cost of $100,000, and leases the land and improvements to a tenant. The partnership then sells the land and improvements for $600,000, thereby realizing a gain on the disposition. The unadjusted basis of the improvements ($100,000) equals 25 percent of the unadjusted basis of all property ($400,000) used in the rental activity. Therefore, under this paragraph (f)(3), an amount of C's gross income from the activity equal to the net passive income from the activity (which is computed by taking into account the gain from the disposition, including gain allocable to the improvements) is treated as not from a passive activity.

(4) Net interest income from passive equity-financed lending activity—(i) In general. An amount of the taxpayer's gross income for the taxable year from any equity-financed lending activity equal to the lesser of—

(A) The taxpayer's equity-financed interest income from the activity for such year; and

(B) The taxpayer's net passive income from the activity for such year shall be treated as not from a passive activity.

(ii) Equity-financed lending activity—(A) In general. For purposes of this paragraph (f)(4), an activity is an equity-financed lending activity for a taxable year if—

(1) The activity involves a trade or business of lending money; and

(2) The average outstanding balance of the liabilities incurred in the activity for the taxable year does not exceed 80 percent of the average outstanding balance of the interest-bearing assets held in the activity for such year.

(B) Certain liabilities not taken into account. For purposes of paragraph (f)(4)(ii)(A)(2) of this section, liabilities incurred principally for the purpose of increasing the percentage described in paragraph (f)(4)(ii)(A)(2) of this section shall not be taken into account in computing such percentage.

(iii) Equity-financed interest income. For purposes of this paragraph (f)(4), the taxpayer's equity-financed interest income from an activity for a taxable year is the amount of the taxpayer's net interest income from the activity for such year multiplied by the fraction obtained by dividing—

(A) The excess of the average outstanding balance for such year of the interest-bearing assets held in the activity over the average outstanding balance for such year of the liabilities incurred in the activity; by

(B) The average outstanding balance for such year of the interest-bearing assets held in the activity.

(iv) Net interest income. For purposes of this paragraph (f)(4), the net interest income from an activity for a taxable year is—

(A) The gross interest income from the activity for such year; reduced by

(B) Expenses from the activity (other than interest on liabilities described in paragraph (f)(4)(vi) of this section) for such year that are reasonably allocable to such gross interest income.

(v) Interest-bearing assets. For purposes of this paragraph (f)(4), the interest-bearing assets held in an activity include all assets that produce interest income, including loans to customers.

(vi) Liabilities incurred in the activity. For purposes of this paragraph (f)(4), liabilities incurred in an activity include all fixed and determinable liabilities incurred in the activity that bear interest or are issued with original issue discount other than debts secured by tangible property used in the activity. In the case of an activity conducted by an entity in which the taxpayer owns a interest, liabilities incurred in an activity include only liabilities with respect to which the entity is the borrower.

(vii) Average outstanding balance. For purposes of this paragraph (f)(4), the average outstanding balance of liabilities incurred in an activity or of the interest-bearing assets held in an activity may be computed on a daily, monthly, or quarterly basis at the option of the taxpayer.

(viii) Example. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (f)(4):

Example: (i) A, a calendar year individual, acquires on January 1, 1988, a limited partnership interest in P, a calendar year partnership. Under the partnership agreement, A has a one percent share of each item of income, gain, loss, deduction, and credit of P. A acquires the partnership interest for $90,000, using $50,000 of unborrowed funds and $40,000 of proceeds of a loan bearing interest at an annual rate of 10 percent. A pays $4,000 of interest on the loan in 1988.

(ii) P's sole activity is a trade or business of lending money. A does not materially participate in the activity for 1988. During 1988, the average outstanding balance of P's interest-bearing assets (including loans to customers, temporary deposits with other lending institutions, and government and corporate securities) is $20 million. P incurs numerous interest-bearing liabilities in connection with its lending activity, including liabilities for deposits taken from customers, unsecured short-term and long-term loans from other lending institutions, and a mortgage loan secured by the building, owned by P, in which P conducts its business. For 1988, the average outstanding balance of all of these liabilities (other than the mortgage loan) is $11 million. None of these liabilities was incurred by P principally for the purpose of increasing the percentage described in paragraph (f)(4)(ii)(2) of this section.

(iii) The interest income derived by P for 1988 from its interest-bearing assets is $2.2 million. The interest expense paid by P for 1988 with respect to the liabilities incurred in connection with its lending activity (other than the mortgage loan) is $990,000. P's other expenses for 1988 that are reasonably allocable to P's gross interest income (including expenses for advertising, loan processing and servicing, and insurance, and depreciation on P's building) total $250,000. P's interest expense for 1988 on the mortgage loan secured by the building used in P's lending activity is $50,000. All of the interest expense paid or incurred by P for 1988 is allocated under § 1.63–8T to expeditures in connection with P's lending activity.

(iv) Under paragraph (f)(4)(ii) of this section, P's activity is an equity-financed lending activity for 1988, since, for 1988, the activity involves a trade or business of lending money and the average outstanding balance of the liabilities incurred in the activity ($11 million) does not exceed 80 percent of the average outstanding balance of the interest-bearing assets held in the activity ($20 million). Accordingly, under paragraph (f)(4)(i) of this section, an amount of A's gross income from the activity equal to the lesser of (a) A's equity-financed interest income from the activity for 1988, or (b) A's net passive income from the activity for 1988, is treated as income that is not from a passive activity.

(v) Under paragraph (f)(4)(iii) of this section, A's equity-financed interest income from the activity for 1988 is determined by multiplying A's net interest income from the activity for 1988 by the fraction obtained by dividing $9 million (the excess of the average interest-bearing assets for 1988 over the average interest-bearing liabilities for 1988) by $20 million (the average interest-bearing assets for 1988). Under paragraph (f)(4)(iv) of this section, A's net interest income from the activity for 1988 is $19,000 (A's distributive share of $2.2 million of gross interest income less A's distributive share of $300,000 of expenses described in paragraph (f)(4)(iv)(B) of this section, including interest expense on the mortgage loan). A's distributive share of P's other interest expense ($990,000) is not taken into account in computing A's net interest income for 1988. Accordingly, A's equity-financed interest income from the activity for 1988 is $8,550 ($19,000 x $9 million/$20 million).

(vi) Under paragraph (f)(9)(i) of this section, A's net passive income from the activity for 1988 is determined by taking into account A's distributive share of P's gross income and deductions from the activity for 1988, as well as any interest expense incurred by A individually that is taken into account under § 1.163–8T in determining A's income or loss from the activity for 1988. Assuming that for 1988 all $4,000 of interest expense on the loan that A used to finance the acquisition of A's interest in P is allocated under § 1.163–8T to expenditures of A in connection with the lending activity for 1988, A's net passive income from the activity for 1988 is $5,100, computed as set forth in the following table:

Gross income:
Interest income	$22,000
Deductions:
Distributive share of P's expenses from the activity	(12,900)
Interest expense on A's acquisition debt	(4,000)
Net passive income	5,100

(vii) A's net passive income from the activity for 1988 ($5,100) is less than A's equity-financed income form the activity for 1988 ($8,550). Accordingly, under this paragraph (f)(4), $5,100 of A's gross income from the activity for 1988 is treated as not from a passive activity.

(5) Net income from certain property rented incidental to development activity—(i) In general. An amount of the taxpayer's gross rental activity income for the taxable year from an item of property used in a rental activity for such year equal to the net rental activity income for the year from such item of property shall be treated as not from a passive activity if—

(A) Any gain from the sale, exchange, or other disposition of the item of property is included in the taxpayer's income for the taxable year;

(B) The use of the item of property in an activity involving the rental of such property commenced less than 24 months before the date of the disposition (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(2)(iii)(B) of this section) of such property; and

(C) The taxpayer materially participated (within the meaning of § 1.469–5T, but without regard to paragraph (e) thereof) or significantly participated (within the meaning of § 1.469–5T(c)(2)) for any taxable year in an activity that involved for such year the performance of services for the purpose of enhancing the value of such item of property (or any other item of property if the basis of the item of property that is sold, exchanged, or otherwise disposed of is determined in whole or in part by reference to the basis of such other item of property).

(ii) Commencement of use. For purposes of paragraph (f)(5)(i)(B) of this section, the use of an item of property in an activity involving the rental of such property commences when substantially all of the property is first held out for rent and is in a state of readiness for rental.

(iii) Services performed for the purpose of enhancing the value of property. For purposes of paragraph (f)(5)(i)(C) of this section, services that are treated as performed for the purpose of enhancing the value of an item of property include but are not limited to—

(A) Construction;

(B) Renovation; and

(C) Lease-up (but only if, as of the time the taxpayer commences using the property in the activity described in paragraph (f)(5)(i)(B), a substantial portion of the property is not leased).

(iv) Example. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (f)(5):

Example. (i) A, a calendar year individual, is a partner in calendar year partnership P, which is engaged in an activity of developing commercial real estate. In 1988, P acquires an interest in undeveloped land, and arranges for the financing and construction of an office building on the land. Beginning on March 1, 1990, substantially all of the building is held out for rent and is in a state of readiness for rental.

(ii) P holds the building for rent for the remainder of 1990 and all of 1991 and 1992, and sells the building on January 15, 1993, pursuant to a contract entered into on January 15, 1992. P did not hold the building for sale to customers in the ordinary course of P's trade or business (see § 1.469–1T (e)(3)(vi)(D)). A's distributive share of P's taxable losses from the rental of the building is $50,000, $30,000, and $30,000, respectively, for 1990, 1991, and 1992. All of A's losses from the rental of the building are disallowed under § 1.469–1T (a)(1)(i). A's distributive share of the gain recognized by P on the sale of the building is $150,000. A has no other gross income or deductions from the activity of renting the building.

(iii) For purposes of paragraph (f)(5)(i)(C), in 1988, 1989, and 1990, P's real estate development activity involves the performance of services for the purpose of enhancing the value of the building. In 1993, the building is sold, and the date on which the use of the building in the rental activity commenced (March 1, 1990) was less then 24 months before the date on which a binding contract for such sale was entered into (January 15, 1992). Accordingly, if A materially participated in P's real estate development activity in 1988, 1989, or 1990 (without regard to whether A materially participated in the activity in more than one of those years), an amount of A's gross rental activity income for 1993 from the building equal to A's net rental activity income for 1993 from such building ($150,000—$110,000 of previously disallowed deductions = $40,000) is treated under this paragraph (f)(5) as gross income that is not from a passive activity.

(6) Property rented to a nonpassive activity. An amount of the taxpayer's gross rental activity income for the taxable year from an item of property used in a rental activity for such year equal to the net rental activity income for the year from such item of property shall be treated as not from a passive activity if such property—

(i) Is rented for use in a trade or business activity (within the meaning of § 1.469-1T (e)(2)) in which the taxpayer materially participates (within the meaning of § 1.469-5T, but without regard to paragraph (e) thereof) for the taxable year; and

(ii) Is not described in paragraph (f)(5) of this section.

(7) Special rules applicable to the acquisition of an interest in a passthrough entity engaged in the trade or business of licensing intangible property—(i) In general. If a taxpayer acquires an interest in an entity described in paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B)(3) of this section (the "development entity") after the development entity has created an item of intangible property or performed substantial services or incurred substantial costs with respect to the development or marketing of an item of intangible property, an amount of the taxpayer's gross royalty income for the taxable year from such item of property equal to the taxpayer's net royalty income for the year from such item of property shall be treated as not from a passive activity.

(ii) Royalty income from property. For purposes of this paragraph (f)(7)—

(A) A taxpayer's gross royalty income for a taxable year from an item of property is the taxpayer's share of passive activity gross income for such year (determined without regard to paragraphs (f)(2) through (7) of this section) from the licensing or transfer of any right in such property; and

(B) A taxpayer's net royalty income for a taxable year from an item of property is the excess, if any, of—

(1) The taxpayer's gross royalty income for the taxable year from such item of property; over

(2) Any passive activity deductions for such taxable year (including any deduction treated as a deduction for such year under § 1.469-1T (f)(4)) that are reasonably allocable to such item of property.

(iii) Exceptions. Paragraph (f)(7)(i) of this section shall not apply to a taxpayer's gross royalty income for a taxable year from the licensing of an item of intangible property if—

(A) The expenditures reasonably incurred by the development entity for the taxable year of the entity ending with or within the taxpayer's taxable year with respect to the development or marketing of such property satisfy paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B)(2)(ii) (a) of this section; or

(B) The taxpayer's share of the expenditures reasonably incurred by the development entity with respect to the development or marketing of such property for all taxable years of the entity beginning with the taxable year of the entity in which the taxpayer acquired the interest in the entity and ending with the taxable year of the entity ending with or within the taxpayer's current taxable year exceeds 25 percent of the fair market value of the taxpayer's interest in such property at the time the taxpayer acquired the interest in the entity.

(iv) Capital expenditures. For purposes of paragraph (f)(7)(iii)(B) of this section, a capital expenditure shall be taken into account for the taxable year of the entity in which such expenditure is chargeable to capital account, and the taxpayer's share of such expenditure shall be determined as though such expenditure were allowed as a deduction for such year.

(v) Example. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (f)(7):

Example. (i) The facts are the same as in example (5) in paragraph (c)(3)(iv) of this section, except that, in 1988, D's 10 percent partnership interest is sold to F for $13,000, all of which is attributable to the design licensed by the partnership.

(ii) For 1988, the expenditures reasonably incurred by the partnership with respect to the development or marketing of the design satisfy paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B)(2)(ii)(a) of this section. Accordingly, under paragraph (f)(7)(iii)(A) of this section, paragraph (f)(7)(i) of this section does not apply to F's distributive share of the partnership's gross income from licensing the design.

(iii) For 1989, the expenditures reasonably incurred by the partnership with respect to the development or marketing of the design do not satisfy paragraph (c)(3)(iii)(B)(2)(ii)(a) of this section. Moreover, F's distributive share of such expenditures reasonably incurred by the partnership for 1988 and 1989 ($27,000 x .10 = $2,700) does not exceed 25 percent of the fair market value of F's interest in the design at the time F acquired the partnership interest ($13,000). Accordingly, neither of the exceptions provided in paragraph (f)(7)(iii) of this section applies for 1989 and, under paragraph (f)(7)(i) of this section, an amount of F's gross royalty income from the design equal to F's net royalty income from the design is treated as not from a passive activity.

(8) Limitation on recharacterized income. The amount of gross income from an activity that is treated as not from a passive activity for the taxable year under subparagraphs (f) (2) through (4) of this paragraph (f) shall not exceed the greatest amount of gross income treated as not from a passive activity under any one of such subparagraphs.

(9) Meaning of certain terms. For purposes of this paragraph (f), the terms set forth below shall have the following meanings:

(i) The net passive income from an activity for a taxable year is the amount by which the taxpayer's passive activity gross income from the activity for the taxable year (determined without regard to paragraphs (f) (2) through (4) of this section) exceeds the taxpayer's passive activity deductions from the activity for such year;

(ii) The net passive loss from an activity for a taxable year is the amount by which the taxpayer's passive activity deductions from the activity for the taxable year exceeds the taxpayer's passive activity gross income from the activity for such year (determined without regard to paragraphs (f) (2) through (4) of this section).

(iii) The gross rental activity income for a taxable year from an item of property used in a rental activity for such year is any passive activity gross income for such year (determined without regard to paragraphs (f) (2) through (6) of this section) from the rental or disposition of such item of property; and

(iv) The net rental activity income from an item of property for a taxable year is the excess, if any, of—

(A) The gross rental activity income from such item of property for the taxable year; over

(B) Any passive activity deductions for such taxable year (including any deduction treated as a deduction for such year under § 1.469-1T(f)(4)) that are reasonably allocable to the use of such item of property in the rental activity.

(10) Coordination with section 163(d). Gross income that is treated as not from a passive activity under paragraph (f) (3), (4), or (7) of this section shall be treated as income described in section 469 (e)(1)(A) and paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section except in determining whether—

(i) Any property is treated for purposes of section 469(e)(1)(A)(ii)(I) and paragraph (c)(3)(i)(C) of this section as property that produces income of a type described in paragraph (c)(3)(i)(A) of this section;

(ii) An expense (other than interest expense) is treated for purposes of section 469(e)(1)(A)(i)(II) and paragraph (d)(4) of this section as clearly and directly allocable to portfolio income (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section); and

(iii) Interest expense is allocated under § 1.163-8T to an investment expenditure (within the meaning of § 1.163-8T(b)(3)) or to a passive activity expenditure (within the meaning of § 1.163-8T(b)(4)).

(11) Effective date. For the effective date of the rules in this paragraph (f), see § 1.469-11T (relating to effective date and transition rules).

§ 1.469-3T Passive activity credit (temporary).

(a) Computation of passive activity credit. The taxpayer's passive activity credit for the taxable year is the amount (if any) by which—

(1) The sum of all of the taxpayer's credits that are subject to section 469 for such year; exceeds

(2) The taxpayer's regular tax liability allocable to all passive activities for such year.

(b) Credits subject to section 469—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph (b), a credit is subject to section 469 for a taxable year if and only if—

(i) Such credit—

(A) Is attributable to such taxable year and arises in connection with the conduct of an activity that is a passive activity for such taxable year; and

(B) Is decribed in—

(1) Section 38(b) (1) through (5) (relating to general business credits);

(2) Section 27(b) (relating to corporations described in section 936);

(3) Section 28 (relating to clinical testing of certain drugs); or

(4) Section 29 (relating to fuel from nonconventional sources); or

(ii) Such credit is allocable to an activity for such taxable year under § 1.469-1T(f)(4).

(2) Treatment of credits attributable to qualified progress expenditures. Any credit attributable to an increase in qualified investment under section 46(d)(1)(A) (relating to qualified progress expenditures) with respect to progress expenditure property (as defined in section 46(d)(2)) is subject to section 469 for a taxable year if—

(i) Such credit is attributable to such taxable year;

(ii) Such credit is described in paragraph (b)(1)(i)(B) of this section; and

(iii) It is reasonable to believe that such progress expenditure property will be used in a passive activity of the taxpayer when it is placed in service.

(3) Special rule for partners and S corporation shareholders. The character of a credit of a taxpayer arising in connection with an activity conducted by a partnership or S corporation (as a credit subject to section 469) shall be determined, in any case in which participation is relevant, by reference to the participation of the taxpayer in such activity. Such participation is determined for the taxable year of the partnership or S corporation (and not the taxable year of the taxpayer). See § 1.469-2T(e)(1).

(4) Exception for pre-1987 credits. A credit is not subject to section 469 if it is attributable to a taxable year of the taxpayer beginning prior to January 1, 1987.

(c) Taxable year to which credit is attributable. A credit is attributable to the taxable year in which such credit would be (or would have been) allowed if the credits regard to the limitations contained in sections 26(a), 28(d)(2), 29(b)(5), 38(c), and 469.

(d) Regular tax liability allocable to passive activities—(1) In general. For purposes of paragraph (a)(2) of this section, the taxpayer's regular tax liability allocable to all passive activities for the taxable year is the excess (if any) of—

(i) The taxpayer's regular tax liability for such taxable year; over

(ii) The amount of such regular tax liability determined by reducing the taxpayer's income for such year by the excess (if any) of the taxpayer's passive activity gross income for such year over the taxpayer's passive activity deductions for such year.

(2) Regular tax liability. For purposes of this section, the term "regulary tax liability" has the meaning given such term in section 26(b).

(e) Coordination with section 39. For purposes of section 39 (relating to the carryback and carryforward of unused business credits), any credit described in section 38(b) (1) through (5) is treated as a current year business credit for the first taxable year in which such credit is subject to section 469 and is not disallowed by section 469 and the regulations thereunder.

(f) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this section:

Example (1). (i) A, a calendar year individual, is a general partner in calendar year partnership P. P purchases a building in 1987 and, in 1987, 1988, and 1989, incurs rehabilitation costs with respect to the building. The building is placed in service in the rental activity in 1989. P's rehabilitation costs are qualified rehabilitation expenditures (within the meaning of section 48(g)(2)) and are taken into account in determining the amount of the investment credit for rehabilitation expenditures. P's qualified rehabilitation expenditures are not qualified progress expenditures (within the meaning of section 46(d)).

(ii) Because, under section 46(c)(1), the credit is allowable for the taxable year in which the rehabilitated property is placed in service, the credit allowable for P's qualified rehabilitation expenditures arises in connection with the activity in which the property is placed in service. In addition, the credit is attributable to 1989, the year in which the property is placed in service, because it would be allowed for such year if A's credits allowed for all taxable years were determined without regard to the limitations contained in sections 26(a), 28(d)(2), 29(b)(5), 38(c), and 469. Accordingly, under paragraph (b)(1) of this section, A's distributive share of the credit is subject to section 469 for 1989 because the credit arises in connection with a rental activity for such year.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that the rehabilitation costs are incurred in anticipation of placing the building in service in a rental activity, the qualified rehabilitation expenditures in 1987 and 1988 are qualified progress expenditures ("QPEs") (within the meaning of section 46(d)(3)), the improvements resulting from the expenditures are progress expenditure property (within the meaning of paragraph (d)(2) of this section), and it is reasonable to expect that such property will be transition property (within the meaning of section 49(e)) when the property is placed in service. Therefore, under section 46(d)(1)(A), the qualified investment for 1987 and 1988 is increased by an amount equal to the aggregate of the applicable percentage of the qualified rehabilitation expenditures incurred in such years. The credits that are based on these expenditures are attributable (under paragraph (c) of this section) to 1987 and 1988, respectively. It is reasonable to believe in 1987 and 1988 that the progress expenditure property will be used in a rental activity when it is placed in service. Accordingly, under paragraph (b)(2) of this section, A's distributive share of the credit for 1987 and 1988 is subject to section 469. Under paragraph (b)(1) of this section (as in example (1)), A's distributive share of the credit for 1989 is also subject to section 469.

Example (3). (i) B, a single individual, acquires an interest in a partnership that, in 1988, rehabilitates a building and places it in service in a trade or business activity in which B does not materially participate. For 1988, B has the following items of gross income, deduction, and credit:

Gross income:
Income other than passive activity gross income	$110,000
Passive activity gross income	20,000	$130,000
Deductions:
Deductions other than passive activity deductions	23,950
Passive activity deductions	18,000	(41,950)
Taxable income		88,050
Credits:
Rehabilitation credit from the passive activity		8,000

(ii) For 1988, the amount by which B's passive activity gross income exceeds B's passive activity deductions (B's net passive income) is $2,000. Under paragraph (d) of this section, B's regular tax liability allocable to passive activities for 1988 is determined as follows:

(A) Taxable income	$88,050
(B) Regular tax liability		$24,578.50
(C) Taxable income minus net passive income	86,050
(D) Regular tax liability for taxable income of $86,050.00		23,918.50
(E) Regular tax liability allocable to passive activities ((B) minus (D))		$660.00

(iii) Under paragraph (a) of this section, B's passive activity credit for 1988 is the amount by which B's credits that are subject to section 469 for 1988 ($8,000) exceed B's regular tax liability allocable to passive activities for 1988 ($660.00). Accordingly, B's passive activity credit for 1988 is $7,340.

Example (4). (i) The facts are the same as in example (3) except that, in 1988, B also has additional deductions of $100,000 from a trade or business activity in which B materially participates for 1988. Thus, B has a taxable loss for 1988 of $11,950, determined as follows:

Gross income:
Income other than passive activity gross income	$110,000
Passive activity gross income	20,000	$130,000
Deductions:
Deductions other than passive activity deductions	123,950
Passive activity deductions	18,000	(141,950)
Taxable income		(11,950)

(ii) Under section 26(b) and paragraph (d)(2) of this section, the regular tax liability for a taxable year cannot exceed the tax imposed by chapter 1 of subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code for the taxable year. Therefore, under paragraph (d)(1) of this section, B's regular tax liability allocable to passive activities for 1988 is zero. Although B's net operating loss for the taxable year is reduced by B's net passive income, and B's regular tax liability for other taxable years may increase as a result of the reduction, such an increase does not change B's regular tax liability allocable to passive activities for 1988. Accordingly, B's passive activity credit for 1988 is $8,000.

§ 1.469–4T Definition of activity (temporary). [Reserved]

§ 1.469–5T Material participation (temporary).

(a) In general. Except as provided in paragraphs (e) and (h)(2) of this section, an individual shall be treated, for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder, as materially participating in an activity for the taxable year if and only if—

(1) The individual participates in the activity for more than 500 hours during such year;

(2) The individual's participation in the activity for the taxable year constitutes substantially all of the participation in such activity of all individuals (including individuals who are not owners of interests in the activity) for such year;

(3) The individual participates in the activity for more than 100 hours during the taxable year, and such individual's participation in the activity for the taxable year is not less than the participation in the activity of any other individual (including individuals who are not owners of interests in the activity) for such year;

(4) The activity is a significant participation activity (within the meaning of paragraph (c) of this section) for the taxable year, and the individual's aggregate participation in all significant participation activities during such year exceeds 500 hours;

(5) The individual materially participated in the activity (determined without regard to this paragraph (a)(5)) for any five taxable years (whether or not consecutive) during the ten taxable years that immediately precede the taxable year;

(6) The activity is a personal service activity (within the meaning of paragraph (d) of this section), and the individual materially participated in the activity for any three taxable years (whether or not consecutive) preceding the taxable year; or

(7) Based on all of the facts and circumstances (taking into account the rules in paragraph (b) of this section), the individual participates in the activity on a regular, continuous, and substantial basis during such year.

(b) Facts and circumstances—(1) In general. [Reserved]

(2) Certain participation insufficient to constitute material participation under this paragraph (b) —(i) Participation satisfying standards not contained in section 469. Except as provided in section 469(h)(3) and paragraph (h)(2) of this section (relating to certain retired individuals and surviving spouses in the case of farming activities), the fact that an individual satisfies the requirements of any participation standard (whether or not referred to as "material participation") under any provision (including sections 1402 and 2032A and the regulations thereunder) other than section 469 and the regulations thereunder shall not be taken into account in determining whether such individual materially participates in any activity for any taxable year for purposes of section 469 and the regulations thereunder.

(ii) Certain management activities. An individual's services performed in the management of an activity shall not be taken into account in determining whether such individual is treated as materially participating in such activity for the taxable year under paragraph (a)(7) of this section unless, for such taxable year—

(A) No person (other than such individual) who performs services in connection with the management of the activity receives compensation described in section 911(d)(2)(A) in consideration for such services; and

(B) No individual performs services in connection with the management of the activity that exceed (by hours) the amount of such services performed by such individual.

(iii) Participation less than 100 hours. If an individual participates in an activity for 100 hours or less during the taxable year, such individual shall not be treated as materially participating in such activity for the taxable year under paragraph (a)(7) of this section.

(c) Significant participation activity —(1) In general. For purposes of paragraph (a)(4) of this section, an activity is a significant participation activity of an individual if and only if such activity—

(i) Is a trade or business activity (within the meaning of § 1.469–1T(e)(2)) in which the individual significantly participates for the taxable year; and

(ii) Would be an activity in which the individual does not materially participate for the taxable year if material participation for such year were determined without regard to paragraph (a)(4) of this section.

(2) Significant participation. An individual is treated as significantly participating in an activity for a taxable year if and only if the individual participates in the activity for more than 100 hours during such year.

(d) Personal service activity. An activity constitutes a personal service activity for purposes of paragraph (a)(6) of this section if such activity involves the performance of personal services in—

(A) The fields of health, law, engineering, architecture, accounting, actuarial science, performing arts, or consulting; or

(B) Any other trade or business in which capital is not a material income-producing factor.

(e) Treatment of limited partners—(1) General rule. Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph (e), an individual shall not be treated as materially participating in any activity of a limited partnership for purposes of applying section 469 and the regulations thereunder to—

(i) The individual's share of any income, gain, loss, deduction, or credit from such activity that is attributable to a limited partnership interest in the partnership; and

(ii) Any gain or loss from such activity recognized upon a sale or exchange of such an interest.

(2) Exceptions. Paragraph (e)(1) of this section shall not apply to an individual's share of income, gain, loss, deduction, and credit for a taxable year from any activity in which the individual would be treated as materially participating for the taxable year under paragraph (a)(1), (5), or (6) of this section if the individual were not a limited partner for such taxable year.

(3) Limited partnership interest—(i) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (e)(3)(ii) of this section, for purposes of section 469(h)(2) and this paragraph (e), a partnership interest shall be treated as a limited partnership interest if—

(A) Such interest is designated a limited partnership interest in the limited partnership agreement or the certificate of limited partnership, without regard to whether the liability of the holder of such interest for obligations of the partnership is limited under the applicable State law; or

(B) The liability of the holder of such interest for obligations of the partnership is limited, under the law of the State in which the partnership is organized, to a determinable fixed amount (for example, the sum of the holder's capital contributions to the partnership and contractural obligations to make additional capital contributions to the partnership).

(ii) Limited partner holding general partner interest. A partnership interest of an individual shall not be treated as a limited partnership interest for the individual's taxable year if the individual is a general partner in the partnership at all times during the partnership's taxable year ending with or within the individual's taxable year (or the portion of the partnership's taxable year during which the individual (directly or indirectly) owns such limited partnership interest).

(f) Participation—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph (f), any work done by an individual (without regard to the capacity in which the individual does such work) in connection with an activity in which the individual owns (directly or indirectly, other than through a C corporation) an interest at the time the work is done shall be treated for purposes of this section as participation of such individual in the activity.

(2) Exceptions—(i) Certain work not customarily done by owners. Work done in connection with an activity shall not be treated as participation in the activity for purposes of this section if—

(A) Such work is not of a type that is customarily done by an owner of such an activity; and

(B) One of the principal purposes for the performance of such work is to avoid the disallowance, under section 469 and the regulations thereunder, of any loss or credit from such activity.

(ii) Participation as an investor—(A) In general. Work done by an individual in the individual's capacity as an investor in an activity shall not be treated as participation in the activity for purposes of this section unless the individual is directly involved in the day-to-day management or operations of the activity.

(B) Work done in individual's capacity as an investor. For purposes of this paragraph (f)(2)(ii), work done by an individual in the individual's capacity as an investor in an activity includes—

(1) Studying and reviewing financial statements or reports on operations of the activity;

(2) Preparing or compiling summaries or analyses of the finances or operations of the activity for the individual's own use; and

(3) Monitoring the finances or operations of the activity in a non-managerial capacity.

(3) Participation of spouse. In the case of any person who is a married individual (within the meaning of section 7703) for the taxable year, any participation by such person's spouse in the activity during the taxable year (without regard to whether the spouse owns an interest in the activity and without regard to whether the spouses file a joint return for the taxable year) shall be treated, for purposes of applying section 469 and the regulations thereunder to such person, as participation by such person in the activity during the taxable year.

(4) Methods of proof. The extent of an individual's participation in an activity may be established by any reasonable means. Contemporaneous daily time reports, logs, or similar documents are not required if the extent of such participation may be established by other reasonable means. Reasonable means for purposes of this paragraph may include but are not limited to the identification of services performed over a period of time and the approximate number of hours spent performing such services during such period, based on appointment books, calendars, or narrative summaries.

(g) Material participation of trusts and estates. [Reserved]

(h) Miscellaneous rules—(1) Participation of corporations. For rules relating to the participation in an activity of a personal service corporation (within the meaning of § 1.468–1T(g)(2)(i)) or a closely held corporation (within the meaning of § 1.469–1T(g)(2)(ii)), see § 1.469–1T(g)(3).

(2) Treatment of certain retired farmers and surviving spouses of retired or disabled farmers. An individual shall be treated as materially participating for a taxable year in any trade or business activity of farming it paragraph (4) or (5) of section 2032A(b) would cause the requirements of section 2032A(b)(1)(C)(ii) to be met with respect to real property used in such activity had the individual died during such taxable year.

(i) [Reserved]

(j) Material participation for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1987. In any case in which it is necessary to determine whether an individual materially participated in any activity for a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987 (other than a taxable year of a partnership, S corporation, estate, or trust ending after December 31, 1986), such determination shall be made without regard to paragraphs (a)(2) through (7) of this section.

(k) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this section:

Example (1). A, a calendar year individual, owns all of the stock of X, a C corporation. X is the general partner, and A is the limited partner, in P, a calendar year partnership. P has a single activity, a restaurant, which is a trade or business activity (within the meaning of § 1.469–1T(e)(2)). During the taxable year, A works for an average of 30 hours per week in connection with P's restaurant activity. Under paragraphs (a)(1) and (e)(2) of this section, A is treated as materially participating in the activity for the taxable year because A participates in the restaurant activity during such year for more than 500 hours. In addition, under § 1.469–1T(g)(3)(i), A's participation will cause X to be treated as materially participating in the restaurant activity.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1), except that the partnership agreement provides that P's restaurant activity is to be managed by X, and A's work in the activity is performed pursuant to an employment contract between A and X. Under paragraph (f)(1) of this section, work done by A in connection with the activity in any capacity is treated as participation in the activity by A. Accordingly, the conclusion is the same as in example (1). The conclusion would be the same if A owned no stock in X at any time, although in that case A's participation would not be taken into account in determining whether X materially participates in the restaurant activity.

Example (3). B, an individual, is employed fulltime as a carpenter. B also owns an interest in a partnership which is engaged in a van conversion activity, which is a trade or business activity (within the meaning of § 1.469–1T(e)(2)). B and C, the other partner, are the only participants in the activity for the taxable year. The activity is conducted entirely on Saturdays. Each Saturday throughout the taxable year, B and C work for eight hours in the activity. Although B does not participate in the activity for more than 500 hours during the taxable year, under paragraph (a)(3) of this section, B is treated for such year as materially participating in the activity because B participates in the activity for more than 100 hours during the taxable year, and B's participation in the activity for such year is not less than the participation of any other person in the activity for such year.

Example (4). C, an individual, is employed full-time as an accountant. C also owns interests in a restaurant and a shoe store. The restaurant and shoe store are trade or business activities (within the meaning of § 1.469–1T(e)(2)) that are treated as separate activities under the rules to be contained in § 1.469–4T. Each activity has several full-time employees. During the taxable year, C works in the restaurant activity for 400 hours and in the shoe store activity for 150 hours. Under paragraph (c) of this section, both the restaurant and shoe store activities are significant participation activities of C for the taxable year. Accordingly, since C's aggregate participation in the restaurant and shoe store activities during the taxable year exceeds 500 hours, C is treated under paragraph (a)(4) of this section as materially participating in both activities.

Example (5). In 1990, D, an individual, acquires stock in an S corporation engaged in a trade or business activity (within the meaning of § 1.469–1T(e)(2)). For every taxable year from 1990 through 1994, D is treated as materially participating (without regard to paragraph (a)(5) of this section) in the activity. D retires from the activity at the beginning of 1995, and would not be treated as materially participating in the activity for 1995 and subsequent taxable years if material participation for such years were determined without regard to paragraph (a)(5) of this section. Under paragraph (a)(5) of this section, however, D is treated as materially participating in the activity for taxable years 1995 through 1999 because D materially participated in the activity (determined without regard to paragraph (a)(5) of this section) for five taxable years during the ten taxable years that immediately precede each of those years. D is not treated under paragraph (a)(5) of this section as materially participating in the activity for taxable years after 1999 because of such years D has not materially participated in the activity (determined without regard to paragraph (a)(5) of this section) for five of the ten immediately preceding taxable years.

Example (6). The facts are the same as in example (5), except that D does not acquire any stock in the S corporation until 1994. Under paragraph (f)(1) of this section, D is not treated as participating in the activity for any taxable year prior to 1994 because D does not own as interest in the activity for any such taxable year. Accordingly, D materially participates in the activity for only one taxable year prior to 1995, and D is not treated under paragraph (a)(5) of this section as materially participating in the activity for 1995 or subsequent taxable years.

Example (7). (i) E, a married individual filing a separate return for the taxable year, is employed full-time as an attorney. E also owns an interest in a professional football team that is a trade or business activity (within the meaning of § 1.469–1T(e)(2)). E does no work in connection with this activity. E anticipates that, for the taxable year, E's deductions from the activity will exceed E's gross income from the activity and that, if E does not materially participate in the activity for the taxable year, part or all of F's passive activity loss for the taxable year will be disallowed under § 1.469–1T(a)(1)(i). Accordingly, E pays E's spouse to work as an office for an average of 15 hours per week during the taxable year.

(ii) Under paragraph (f)(3) of this section any participation in the activity by E's spouse is treated as participation in the activity by E. However, under paragraph (f)(2)(i) of this section, the work done by E's spouse is not treated as participation in the activity because work as an office receptionist is not work of a type customarily done by an owner of a football team, and one of E's principal purposes for paying E's spouse to do this work is to avoid the disallowance under § 1.469–1T(a)(1)(i) of E's passive activity loss. Accordingly, E is not treated as participating in the activity for the taxable year.

Example (8). (i) F, an individual, owns an interest in a partnership that feeds and sells cattle. The general partner of the partnership periodically mails F a letter setting forth certain proposed actions and decisions with respect to the cattle-feeding operation. Such actions and decisions include, for example, what kind of feed to purchase, how much to purchase, and when to purchase it, how often to feed cattle, and when to sell cattle. The letters explain the proposed actions and decisions, emphasize that taking or not taking a particular action or decision is solely within the discretion of F and other partners, and ask F to indicate a decision with respect to each proposed action by answering certain questions. The general partner receives a fee that constitutes earned income (within the meaning of section 911(d)(2)(A)) for managing the cattle-feeding operation. F is not treated as materially participating in the cattle-feeding operation under paragraph (a) (1) through (6) of this section.

(ii) F's only participation in the cattle-feeding operation is to make certain managerial decisions. Under paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of this section, such management services are not taken into account in determining whether the taxpayer is treated as materially participating in the activity for a taxable year under paragraph (a)(7) of this section, if any other person performs services in connection with the management of the activity and receives compensation described in section 911(d)(2)(A) for such services. Therefore, F is not treated as materially participating for the taxable year in the cattle-feeding operation.

§ 1.469–6T Treatment of losses upon certain dispositions (temporary). [Reserved]

§ 1.469–7T Treatment of self-charged items of income and expense (temporary). [Reserved]

§ 1.469–8T Application of section 469 and the regulations thereunder to trusts, estates, and their beneficiaries (temporary). [Reserved]

§ 1.469–9T 189Treatment of income, deductions, and credits from certain rental real estate activities (temporary). [Reserved]

§ 1.469–10T Application of section 469 to publicly traded partnerships (temporary). [Reserved]

§ 1.469–11T Effective date and transition rules (temporary).

(a) Effective date—(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (a)(2) of this section, section 469 and the regulations thereunder apply for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

(2) Application of certain income recharacterization rules—(i) In general. No amount of gross income shall be treated under § 1.469–2T(f)(3) through (7) as income that is not from a passive activity for any taxable year of the taxpayer beginning before January 1, 1988.

(ii) Property rented to a nonpassive activity. In applying § 1.469–2T(f)(6) to a taxpayer's rental of an item of property, the taxpayer's net rental activity income (within the meaning of § 1.469–2T(f)(9)(iv)) from such property for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1987, shall not include the portion of such income (if any) that is attributable to the rental of such item of property pursuant to a written binding contract entered into before February 19, 1988.

(3) Qualified low-income housing projects. For a transitional rule concerning the application of section 469 to losses from qualified low-income housing projects, see section 502 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

(4) Effect of events occurring in years prior to 1987. The treatment for a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, of any item of income, gain, loss, deduction, or credit as an item of passive activity gross income, passive activity deduction, or credit from a passive activity, shall be determined as if section 469 and the regulations thereunder had been in effect for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1987, but without regard to any passive activity loss or passive activity credit that would have been disallowed for any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987, if section 469 and the regulations thereunder had been in effect for such year. For example, in determining whether a taxpayer materially participates in an activity under § 1.469–5T(a)(5) (relating to taxpayers who have materially participated in an activity for five of the ten immediately preceding taxable years) for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, the taxpayer's participation in the activity for all prior taxable years (including taxable years beginning before 1987) is taken into account. See § 1.469–5T(j) (relating to the determination of material participation for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1987).

(5) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (a):

Example (1). A, a calendar year individual, is a partner in a partnership with a taxable year ending on January 31. During its taxable year ending January 31, 1987, the partnership was engaged in a single activity involving the conduct of a trade or business. In applying section 469 and the regulations thereunder to A for calendar year 1987, A's distributive share of partnership items for the partnership's taxable year ending January 31, 1987, is taken into account. Therefore, under § 1.469–2T(e)(1) and paragraph (a)(4) of this section, A's participation in the activity throughout the partnership's taxable year beginning February 1, 1986, and ending January 31, 1987, is taken into account for purposes of determining the character under section 469 of the items of gross income, deduction, and credit allocated to A for the partnership's taxable year ending January 31, 1987.

Example (2). B, a calendar year individual, is a beneficiary of a trust described in section 651 that has a taxable year ending January 31. The trust conducts a rental activity (within the meaning of § 1.469–1T(e)(3)). Because the trust's taxable year ending January 31, 1987, began before January 1, 1987, section 469 and the regulations thereunder do not apply to the trust for such year. Section 469 and the regulations thereunder do apply, however, to B for B's calendar year 1987. Therefore, income of the trust from the rental activity for the trust's taxable year ending January 31, 1987, that is included in B's gross income for 1987 is taken into account in applying section 469 to B for 1987.

(b) Transitional rule for pre-enactment loss and pre-enactment credit—(1) In general. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, and before January 1, 1991, § 1.469–1T(a)(1) shall not apply to—

(i) An amount of the passive activity loss equal to the applicable percentage of the pre-enactment loss; and

(ii) An amount of the passive activity credit equal to the applicable percentage of the pre-enactment credit.

(2) Applicable percentage. For purposes of this paragraph (b), the applicable percentage of the pre-enactment loss or the pre-enactment credit for a taxable year shall be determined in accordance with the following table:

In the case of a taxable year beginning in:	The applicable percentage is:
1987	65
1988	40
1989	20
1990	10

(3) Pre-enactment loss. The pre-enactment loss for any taxable year is the lesser of—

(i) The amount of the passive activity loss that would be disallowed for the taxable year under § 1.469–1T(a)(1)(i) if this section were disregarded; and

(ii) The amount of the passive activity loss that would be disallowed for the taxable year under § 1.469–1T(a)(1)(i) if this section were disregarded and the following items were not taken into account:

(A) Any deduction treated as a deduction from an activity for the taxable year under § 1.469–1T(f)(4); and

(B) Any item from an interest (other than a pre-enactment interest) in any passive activity.

(4) Pre-enactment credit. The pre-enactment credit for any taxable year is the lesser of—

(i) The amount of the passive activity credit that would be disallowed for the taxable year under § 1.469–1T(a)(1)(ii) if this section were disregarded; and

(ii) The amount of the passive activity credit that would be disallowed for the taxable year under § 1.469–1T(a)(1)(ii) if this section were disregarded and the following items were not taken into account:

(A) Any deduction or credit treated as a deduction or credit from an activity for the taxable year under § 1.469–1T(f)(4); and

(B) Any item from an interest (other than a pre-enactment interest) in a passive activity.

(5) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (b):

Example (1). A, an individual, owns interest in two passive activities, X and Y. A's interest in activity X is a pre-enactment interest (within the meaning of paragraph (c) of this section), while A's interest in activity Y is not a pre-enactment interest. For 1987 A has a $10,000 loss from activity X and $9,000 of income from activity Y. The amount determined under paragraph (b)(3)(i) of this section is $1,000. The amount determined under paragraph (b)(3)(ii) of this section is $10,000. Therefore, A's pre-enactment loss for 1987 is $1,000. Accordingly, § 1.469-1T(a)(1)(i) does not apply to $650 ($1,000 × .65) of A's $1,000 passive activity loss for 1987.

Example (2). (i) B, an individual, owns an interest in one passive activity, and B's interest in the activity is a pre-enactment interest (within the meaning of paragraph (c) of this section). For 1987 and 1988, B has the following passive activity gross income and passive activity deductions from the activity:

	1987	1988
Gross income	$20,000	$20,000
Deductions	($50,000)	($40,000)

(ii) Under § 1.469-2T(b), B's passive activity loss for 1987 is $30,000 ($50,000 of passive activity deductions minus $20,000 of passive activity gross income). Under paragraph (b)(3) of this section, B's pre-enactment loss for 1987 is $30,000. Accordingly, under paragraphs (b) (1) and (2) of this section, § 1.469-1T(a)(1)(i) does not apply to $19,500 ($30,000 × .65) of B's $30,000 passive activity loss for 1987. Under § 1.469-1T(a)(1)(i), $10,500 of B's loss for 1987 ($30,000 × .35) is disallowed. Under § 1.469-1T(f) (2) and (4), the disallowed loss is allocated among deductions from the activity, and the disallowed deductions are treated as deductions from the activity for 1988.

(iii) For 1988, B's pre-enactment loss is computed as shown in the following table:

	(b)(3)(i)	(b)(3)(ii)
Gross income	$20,000	$20,000
Current deductions	(40,000)	(40,000)
§ 1.469-1T(f)(4)	(10,500)	-0-
Net loss	($30,500)	($20,000)

Therefore, B's pre-enactment loss for 1988 is $20,000.

(iv) Under paragraph (b)(2) of this section, the applicable percentage for 1988 is 40 percent. Therefore, under paragraph (b)(1) of this section § 1.469-1T(a)(1)(i) does not apply to $8,000 ($20,000 × .40) of B's $30,500 passive activity loss for 1988.

Example (3). (i) C, an individual, owns interests in three passive activities, R, S, and T. C's interest in each activity is a pre-enactment interest. For 1987 and 1988, C's gross income, deductions, and net income (loss) from each of the three activities are as follows:

Gross income	$8,000	$5,000	$2,000
Deductions	(9,000)	(7,000)	(1,400)
Net income (loss)	($1,000)	($2,000)	$600
1988:
Gross income	$7,000	$6,000	$2,000
Deductions	(8,000)	(4,500)	(3,000)
Net income (loss)	($1,000)	$1,500	($1,000)

(ii) Under § 1.469-2T(b), C's passive activity loss for 1987 is $2,400 ($17,400 of passive activity deductions less $15,000 of passive activity gross income). Under paragraph (b)(3) of this section, C's pre-enactment loss for 1987 is $2,400. Accordingly, under paragraph (b)(1) and (2) of this section, § 1.469-1T (a)(1)(i) does not apply to $1,560 ($2,400 × .65) of C's passive activity loss for 1987. Under § 1.469-1T (a)(1)(i), $840 of C's passive activity loss for 1987 ($2,400 x .35) is disallowed.

(iii) Under § 1.469-1T (f)(2)(i), since a portion of C's passive activity loss for 1987 is disallowed, a ratable portion of the loss from each of C's activities that has a loss for 1987 (activity R and activity S) is disallowed for 1987. Accordingly, $280 of the 1987 loss from activity R ($840 × $1,000/$3,000) and $560 of the 1987 loss from activity S ($840 × $2,000/$3,000) is disallowed for 1987. Under § 1.469-1T (f)(2) and (4), corresponding portions of the deductions from each activity are disallowed for 1987 and treated as deductions from activities R and S, respectively, for 1988. The deductions that are disallowed for 1987 and treated as deductions for 1988 are taken into account under paragraph (b)(3)(i) but not paragraph (b)(3)(ii) of this section. Thus, the amounts determined under paragraphs (b)(3)(i) and (b)(3)(ii) of this section for 1988 are as follows:

Activity	(b)(3)(i)	(b)(3)(ii)
R	($1,280)	($1,000)
S	940	1,500
T	(1,000)	(1,000)
Total	($1,340)	($500)

Therefore, C's pre-enactment loss for 1988 is $500.

(iv) Under paragraph (b)(2) of this section, the applicable percentage for 1988 is 40 percent. Therefore, under paragraph (b)(1) of this section, § 1.469-1T (a)(1)(i) does not apply to $200 ($500 × .40) of C's $1,340 passive activity loss for 1988.

Example (4). (i) D, an individual, has interests in there passive activities, X, Y, and Z. Activities X and Y are rental real estate activities (within the meaning of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T) in which D actively participates (within the meaning of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T) for the taxable year. D's interest in activity X is a pre-enactment interest, and D's interest in activity Y is not a pre-enactment interest. Activity Z is not a rental real estate activity, and D's interest in activity Z is not a pre-enactment interest. The amount of income (loss) from each activity for the taxable year is as follows:

Activity	Income (loss)
X (pre-enactment rental)	($40,000)
Y (other rental)	$30,000
Z (other non-rental)	($20,000)

(ii) The amount determined under paragraph (b)(3)(ii) of this section is computed by applying section 469 to D as if D's only interests in passive activities were D's pre-enactment interests in such activities. If D's only interests in passive activities were D's pre-enactment interests in such activities, the amount to which § 1.469-1T (a)(1)(i) would not apply, by reason of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T, would be $25,000. Taking into account all of D's interests in passive activities, the amount to which § 1.469-1T (a)(1)(i) would not apply, by reason of section 469(i) and the rules to be contained in § 1.469-9T, is $10,000. Accordingly, the amounts determined under paragraph (b)(3)(i) and (b)(3)(ii) of this section for the taxable year are as follows:

Activity	(b)(3)(i)	(b)(3)(ii)
X	($40,000)	($40,000)
Y	$30,000
Z	($20,000)
Subtotal	($30,000)	($40,000)
§ 469(i) allowance	$10,000	$25,000
Total	($20,000)	($15,000)

Therefore, D's pre-enactment loss for the taxable year is $15,000.

Example (5). E, an individual, has for the taxable year the following items of income, deduction, and credit from passive activities:

	Pre-enactment interests	Other interests	Total
Income (deductions)	$100	($1,00)	-0-
Credits	28	28	$56

For the taxable year, E is subject to tax at a marginal rate of 28 percent. Under § 1.469-3T (d), E's regular tax liability allocable to passive activities for the taxable year is zero. If, however, the only interests in passive activities taken into account were the pre-enactment interests (i.e., if the $100 loss were disregarded), E's regular tax liability allocable to passive activities for the taxable year would be $28. Thus, the amounts determined under paragraphs (b)(4)(i) and (b)(4)(ii) of this section are as follows:

(b)(4)(i)	(b)(4)(ii)
$56	-0-

Therefore, E's pre-enactment credit for the taxable year is zero, and § 1.469-1T (a)(1)(ii) applies to E's $56 passive activity credit for the taxable year.

(c) Definition of pre-enactment interest—(1)

Geneal rule. Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph (c), the term "pre-enactment interest" means a qualified interest in a pre-enactment activity.

(2) Qualified interest—(i) In general. For purposes of this paragraph (c), a qualified interest in an activity is any interest in an activity that was—

(A) Held by the taxpayer on October 22, 1986, and at all times thereafter (but only if the activity existed on October 22, 1986); or

(B) Acquired by the taxpayer after October 22, 1986, directly or indirectly, pursuant to one or more written binding contracts to which the taxpayer was a party on October 22, 1986, and held by the taxpayer at all times after such acquisistion.

See paragraph (c)(7) of this section for rules for determining whether a taxpayer was a party on October 22, 1986, to a written binding contract.

(ii) Stock in a C corporation. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(2), stock in a C corporation is not treated as an interest in any activity of the corporation. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (c)(2)(ii):

Example. On October 22, 1986, the taxpayer owned all of the stock of a C corporation that conducted a single activity. On December 31, 1986, the corporation liquidated and distributed to the taxpayer the assets used in the activity. Under this paragraph (c)(2)(ii), the taxpayer does not have a qualified interest in the corporation's activity as a result of the liquidation. The result would be the same if, on December 31, 1986, instead of liquidating, the corporation elected under section 1362*(a) to be an S corporation.*

(3) Pre-enactment activity—(i) In general. For purposes of this paragraph (c), an activity is a pre-enactment activity if—

(A) The activity was being conducted by any person on October 22, 1986; or

(B) At least 50 percent (by value) of the property used in the activity during the taxable year was—

(1) In existence or under construction on August 16, 1986; or

(2) Acquired or constructed by any person pursuant to a written binding contract (without regard to whether the taxpayer or any person related to the taxpayer was a party to such contract) in effect on August 16, 1986.

(ii) Character before 1987 irrelevant. For purposes of this paragraph (c), an activity may be treated as a pre-enactment activity without regard to whether such activity would have been a passive activity of the taxpayer for any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987, had section 469 and the regulations thereunder been in effect for such year.

(4) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of paragraphs (c) (1), (2), and (3) of this section:

Example (1). On October 22, 1986, the taxpayer owned an interest in property used as a personal residence. After October 22, 1986, the taxpayer ceased to use the property as a personal residence and began to use it in a rental activity. The rental activity is a pre-enactment activity (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(3) of this section) because the property used in the rental activity was in existence on August 16, 1986. The taxpayer did not hold any interest in the rental activity on October 22, 1986, however, because the activity did not exist on that date. In addition, the taxpayer did not acquire an interest in the activity after October 22, 1986, pursuant to a written binding contract to which the taxpayer was a party on such date. Accordingly, the taxpayer's interest in the rental activity is not a qualified interest (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(2) of this section), and the taxpayer does not have a pre-enactment interest in the rental activity.

Example (2). The taxpayer owns an interest in a partnership, which owns property used in a rental activity. The taxpayer acquired the partnership interest pursuant to a written binding contract to which the taxpayer was a party on October 22, 1986. The partnership acquired its interest in the rental property pursuant to written binding contracts to which the partnership was a party on October 22, 1986. Construction of the property used in the rental activity commenced prior to August 16, 1986. Under paragraph (c)(7)(ii) of this section, the taxpayer is treated as a party to the contracts to which the partnership was a party on October 22, 1986. Therefore, the taxpayer's interest in the partnership's rental activity is a qualified interest (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(2) of this section) because the taxpayer is treated as acquiring an interest in the partnership's rental activity pursuant to written binding contracts to which the taxpayer was party on October 22, 1986. Since the property used in the rental activity was under construction on August 16, 1986, the partnership's rental activity is a pre-enactment activity (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(3) of this section). Accordingly, the taxpayer's interest in the partnership's rental activity is a pre-enactment interest.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (2), except that the partnership acquired the property after October 22, 1986, pursuant to a contract entered into after October 22, 1986. The taxpayer's interest in the partnership's rental activity is not a pre-enactment interest because such interest was not acquired pursuant to written binding contracts to which the taxpayer was a party on October 22, 1986.

Example (4). The taxpayer owned a pre-enactment interest in an activity on October 22, 1986. After that date, the taxpayer died, and the decedent's interest in the activity passed to the decendent's estate. Since a decedent and the decedent's estate are not the same taxpayer, the estate must independently satisfy the requirements for a pre-enactment interest regardless of the fact that the decendent had a pre-enactment interest in the activity. Since the activity was being conducted by the decedent on October 22, 1986, the activity is a pre-enactment activity (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(3) of this section). Since, however, the estate did not hold any interest in the activity on October 22, 1986, the estate does not have a qualified interest in the activity (within the meaning of paragraph (c)(2) of this section). Accordingly, the estate does not have a pre-enactment interest in the activity.

(5) Effect of changes in a taxpayer's interest in a pre-enactment activity—(i) In general. If the taxpayer's share for a taxable year of an item of income, gain, loss, deduction, or credit from a pre-enactment activity was increased or decreased at any time after October 22, 1986, and prior to the end of such taxable year (other than pursuant to a written binding contract to which the taxpayer was a party on October 22, 1986), the share of such item that is attributable to the taxpayer's pre-enactment interest in such activity shall be determined by taking into account—

(A) The taxpayer's share for such taxable year of such item as of October 22, 1986; reduced by

(B) The greatest amount at any time subsequent to October 22, 1986, by which the sum of all the decreases in the taxpayer's share for such year of such item (other than decreases pursuant to a written binding contract to which the taxpayer was a party on October 22, 1986) exceeds the sum of all the increases in the taxpayer's share for such year of such item (other than increases pursuant to a written binding contract to which the taxpayer was a party on October 22, 1986).

For purposes of this paragraph (c)(5)(i), the taxpayer's share of an item as of October 22, 1986, is determined by taking into account any written binding contract to which the taxpayer was a party on October 22, 1986.

(ii) Partnership terminations under section 708(b)(1)(B). A taxpayer's share for a taxable year of an item of income, gain, loss, deduction, or credit from a pre-enactment activity conducted by a partnership shall not be treated as having increased or decreased at any time after October 22, 1986, solely because the partnership is treated as terminating at any time after such date under section 708(b)(1)(B).

(iii) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of this paragraph (c)(5):

Example (1). On October 22, 1986, an individual owned a 10 percent interest in a pre-enactment activity. After October 22, 1986, the taxpayer acquires an additional five percent interest in the activity pursuant to a contract entered into after October 22, 1986. Under this paragraph (c)(5), only the 10 percent interest in the activity the taxpayer owned on October 22, 1986, is a pre-enactment interest.

Example (2). On October 22, 1986, individuals A and B each owned a rental activity. After October 22, 1986, A and B contribute their rental activities to a partnership in exchange for which each receives a 50 percent interest in all items of income, gain, loss, deduction, and credit of the partnership. Under paragraph (c)(5)(i) of this section, A's 50 percent interest in each partnership item attributable to the rental activity contributed by A is attributable to a pre-enactment interest. None of A's interest in the partnership items attributable to the rental activity contributed by B is attributable to a pre-enactment interest.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (2), except that under the partnership agreement the items of income, gain, loss, deduction, and credit attributable to the rental activity A contributed to the partnership are allocated 80 percent to A and 20 percent to B. Under paragraph (c)(5)(i) of this section, A's 80 percent interest in each partnership item attributable to the rental activity contributed by A is attributable to a pre-enactment interest.

Example (4). The facts are the same as in example (3) except that on January 1, 1988, the partnership liquidates, distributing to A the rental activity contributed by A to the partnership. Under paragraph (c)(5)(i) of this section, only 80 percent of A's interest in the rental activity distributed to A is a pre-enactment interest.

Example (5). On October 22, 1986, an individual is the general partner in a limited partnership. Under the partnership agreement in effect on that date, the taxpayer is allocated one percent of each item of partnership income, gain, loss, deduction, and credit for 1987 and 10 percent of each such item for 1988. Since the increase was provided for in a written binding contract to which the taxpayer was a party on October 22, 1986, the increase in the taxpayer's share of each item of partnership income, gain, loss, deduction, and credit is taken into account, under paragraph (c)(5)(i) of this section, as income, gain, loss, deduction, and credit from a pre-enactment interest.

Example (6). The facts are the same as in example (5) except that the partnership agreement is amended on November 30, 1986. The amendment decreases the taxpayer's share of partnership depreciation for 1987 from 10 percent to five percent, but does not affect the partner's share of partnership depreciation for any other year. Since the taxpayer's share of partnership depreciation for 1988 is not decreased by the amendment, the result, for 1988, is the same as in example (5). For 1987, however, only five percent of the partnership depreciation is attributable to the taxpayer's pre-enactment interest even if, after November 30, 1986, another amendment to the partnership agreement restores the taxpayer's 10 percent share of partnership depreciation for 1987.

Example (7). (i) A and B, calendar year individuals, own all the stock of X, a calendar year S corporation. On October 22, 1986, A and B each own 50 shares of X stock. On July 1, 1987, X issues an additional 100 shares of stock to B (but does not issue any additional stock to A). On December 1, 1987, A purchases 70 shares of X stock from B. Thus, A and B have the following shares of items of income, gain, loss, deduction, and credit from activities of X:

Period	A's share	B's share
10/22/86–6/30/87	50%	50%
7/1/87–11/30/87	25%	75%
12/1/87–	60%	40%

(ii) Under paragraph (c)(5)(i) of this section, A and B each have a 50 percent share of each item of X as of October 22, 1986. Since there are no increases or decreases in their shares before June 30, 1987, their 50 percent shares of items of X assigned to the period from January 1, 1987, through June 30, 1987, are attributable to their pre-enactment interests.

(iii) As a result of the decrease in A's share on June 30, 1987, only a 25 percent share of the items of X assigned to the period from July 1, 1987, through November 30, 1987, is attributable to A's pre-enactment interest. In addition, notwithstanding the increase in B's share, only a 50 percent share of such items (B's share as of October 22, 1986) is attributable to B's pre-enactment interest.

(iv) As a result of the decrease in B's share on November 30, 1987, only a 40 percent share of the items of X assigned to the period from December 1, 1987, through December 31, 1987, is attributable to B's pre-enactment interest. In addition, notwithstanding the increase in A's share, only a 25 percent share of such items (A's share as of October 22, 1986, reduced by the amount of the decrease in A's share on June 30, 1987) is attributable to A's pre-enactment interest.

(6) Special rule for beneficiaries of trusts or estates—(i) In general. If a beneficial interest in a trust or estate was held by a taxpayer on October 22, 1986, and at all times thereafter, any income, directly allocable deductions, and credits taken into account by the taxpayer with respect to such interest shall be treated as income, deductions, and credits, respectively, from a pre-enactment interest of the beneficiary if and only if such income, deductions, and credits are from a pre-enactment interest of the trust or estate. For purposes of the preceding sentence, "directly allocable deductions" means—

(A) Depreciation allowable to the beneficiary under section 167(h);

(B) Depletion allowable to the beneficiary under section 611(b)(3); and

(C) Amortization apportioned to the beneficiary under section 642(f). The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (c)(6)(i):

Example. The taxpayer is a beneficiary of a trust that conducts a rental activity. The trust's interest in the activity is a pre-enactment interest of the trust. On October 22, 1986, under the trust agreement the trustee had discretion to allocate any amount of the depreciation deductions from the rental activity to the beneficiary. Under this paragraph (c)(6)(i), any depreciation deductions from the rental activity that are allocated to the beneficiary will be treated as deductions attributable to a pre-enactment interest of the beneficiary.

(ii) Interests distributed to beneficiaries. A beneficiary of a trust or estate to whom the trust or estate distributes an interest in an activity shall be treated as having a pre-enactment interest in the activity by reason of such distribution if and only if such interest was a pre-enactment interest of the trust or estate, and the beneficiary held a beneficial interest in the trust or estate on October 22, 1986, and at all times thereafter.

(7) Written binding contract—(i) In general. A contract shall be treated as a written binding contract of a person for purposes of this section if and only if the contract is enforceable against such person under the applicable State law and does not limit damages to a specified amount (e.g., by use of a liquidated damages provision). For purposes of the preceding sentence, a contractual provision that limits damages to an amount equal to five percent or more of the total contract price is not treated as limiting damages. In general, a contract is binding upon a person even if it is subject to a condition, as long as the condition is not within the control of such person. A contract is not binding on any date with respect to a person if the contract became enforceable against such person only by reason of an assignment occurring after such date. The following example illustrates the application of this paragraph (c)(7)(i):

Example. As of October 22, 1986, the taxpayer had signed a subscription agreement to acquire an interest in a partnership. The taxpayer's obligation to purchase an interest in the partnership was contingent on other persons signing subscription agreements by a particular date after October 22, 1986, to acquire a minimum number of the total interests offered for sale. If the taxpayer acquires an interest in the partnership, such interest will be treated as acquired pursuant to a written binding contract to which the taxpayer was a party on October 22, 1986. Although the taxpayer's obligation to acquire an interest in the partnership was subject to a contingency, the contingency was not within the taxpayer's control.

(ii) Special rule for contract of partnership or S corporation. For purposes of this section, a person shall be treated as a party to a contract on October 22, 1986, if on such date such person is a partner in a partnership or a shareholder in an S corporation (or is bound by a written contract to acquire an interest in such partnership or stock in such corporation) which itself is a party to such contract (or is treated under this paragraph (c)(7)(ii) as a party to such contract) on such date.

(iii) Application of rule to partnership agreements. A provision of a partnership agreement shall be treated as a binding contract with respect to a partner if the requirements of this paragraph (c)(7) are otherwise satisfied and such partner does not have the power to amend any provision of the partnership agreement without the consent of other partners.

There is need for immediate guidance with respect to the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason, it is found impractical to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

LIFO; price indexes; department stores. The November 1987 Bureau of Labor Statistics price indexes are accepted for use by department stores employing the retail inventory and last-in, first-out inventory methods for valuing inventories for tax years ended on, or with reference to, November 30, 1987.

Rev. Rul. 88-13

The following price indexes for November 1987 were issued by the Bureau of Labor Statistics on December 22, 1987, for use by department stores, and are accepted by the Internal Revenue Service, under section 1.472-1(k) of the Income Tax Regulations and Rev. Proc. 86-46, 1986-2 C.B. 739, for appropriate application to inventories of department stores employing the retail inventory and last-in, first-out inventory methods for tax years ended on, or with reference to, November 30, 1987.

Indexes are prepared on a national basis for the store total, for 23 major groups of departments, and for three special combinations—soft goods, durable goods and miscellaneous goods. The store total index covers all departments, including some not listed separately, with the following exceptions: candy, foods, liquor, tobacco, as well as contract departments.

LIFO; price indexes; department stores. The January 1988 Bureau of Labor Statistics price indexes are accepted for use by department stores employing the retail inventory and last-in, first-out inventory methods for valuing inventories for tax years ended on, or with reference to, January 31, 1988.

Rev. Rul. 88-26

The following price indexes for January 1988 were issued by the Bureau of Labor Statistics on March 1, 1988, for use by department stores, and are accepted by the Internal Revenue Service, under section 1.472-1(k) of the Income Tax Regulations and Rev. Proc. 86-46, 1986-2 C.B. 739, for appropriate application to inventories of department stores employing the retail inventory and last-in, first-out inventory methods for tax years ended on, or with reference to, January 31, 1988.

Indexes are prepared on a national basis for the store total, for 23 major groups of departments, and for three special combinations—soft goods, durable goods and miscellaneous goods. The store total index covers all departments, including some not listed separately, with the following exceptions: candy, foods, liquor, tobacco, as well as contract departments.

26 CFR 1.472-2: Requirements incident to adoption and use of LIFO inventory method.

Inventories; LIFO; financial conformity requirement. Rev. Ruls. 60-244, 73-66, 74-586, 75-50, 76-379, 76-475, 76-531, 77-50, 77-152, 77-408, 78-49, and 79-58, relating to the financial conformity requirement that applies to taxpayers using the LIFO inventory identification method of accounting, are obsolete.

Rev. Rul. 88-21

PURPOSE

This revenue ruling declares obsolete certain revenue rulings relating to the financial reporting conformity requirement that applies to taxpayers using the last-in, first-out (LIFO) inventory identification method of accounting.

LAW

Section 472(c) of the Internal Revenue Code requires a taxpayer using the LIFO method to use no procedure other than the LIFO method as specified in section 472(b)(1) and (3) in inventorying its goods to ascertain the income, profit, or loss of the first tax year for which the LIFO method is to be used, for the purpose of a report or statement covering such tax year to shareholders, partners, or other proprietors, or to beneficiaries, or for credit purposes. Section 472(e) extends this conformity requirement to subsequent tax years.

T.D. 7756, 1981-1 C.B. 316, published in the Federal Register on January 22, 1981, amended section 1.472-2(e) of the Income Tax Regulations and prescribed comprehensive new rules for complying with the LIFO conformity requirement set forth in section 472(c) and (e) of the Code. Generally, section 1.472-2(e) as amended by T.D. 7756 applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1953, and ending after August 16, 1954.

HOLDING AND EFFECT ON OTHER DOCUMENTS

Guidance is provided with respect to the transitional change in method of accounting under the 1986 Tax Reform Act which repealed section 466 of the Code (qualified discount coupons). See Rev. Rul. 88-30, page 187.

Section 482.—Allocation of Income and Deductions Among Taxpayers

26 CFR 1.482-1: Allocation of income and deductions among taxpayers.

Controlled corporations; allocation of income and deductions. The case of Foglesong v. Commissioner, 691 F.2d 848 (7th Cir. 1982), rev'g 77 T.C. 1102 (1981), will not be followed by the Service to the extent that the case held that the two trades or businesses requirement of section 482 of the Code is not satisfied when the controlling shareholder works exclusively as an employee of the controlled corporation.

Rev. Rul. 88-38

Foglesong v. Commissioner, 691 F.2d 848 (7th Cir. 1982), rev'g 77 T.C. 1102 (1981), concerns an individual who works exclusively for a corporation that is controlled by that individual. The Seventh Circuit considered whether, for purposes of section 482 of the Internal Revenue Code, the individual is engaged in a trade or business separate from the trade or business of the corporation. The case holds, in part, that if such an individual has no trade or business other than working for the corporation, the individual is not engaged in a trade or business separate from that of the corporation and therefore the "two or more organizations, trades, or businesses" requirement of section 482 is not met.

Section 482 of the Code provides that in any case of two or more organizations, trades, or businesses (whether or not incorporated, whether or not organized in the United States, and whether or not affiliated) owned or controlled directly or indirectly by the same interests, the Secretary may distribute, apportion, or allocate gross income, deductions, credits, or allowances between or among such organizations, trades, or businesses, if it is determined that such distribution, apportionment, or allocation is necessary in order to prevent evasion of taxes or clearly to reflect the income of any of such organizations, trades, or businesses.

The term "organizations, trades, or businesses" is to be construed broadly. H.R. Rep. No. 704, 73rd Cong., 2d Sess. 24 (1934), 1939-1 C.B. (Part 2) 554, 572. Section 482 of the Code contemplates any kind of entity or enterprise that has independent tax significance. Keller v. Commissioner, 77 T.C. 1014, 1022 (1981), aff'd, 723 F.2d 58 (10th Cir. 1983). The Tax Court in similar cases has consistently taken the position that a shareholder/employee who receives a salary for services rendered is engaged in a trade or business for purposes of section 482. See Keller; Haag v. Commissioner, 88 T.C. 604, 615 (1987); Dolese v. Commissioner, 82 T.C. 830, 839 (1984), aff'd, 811 F.2d 543 (10th Cir. 1987). The dual trade or business requirement of section 482 is satisfied because the corporation is in the business of providing goods or services to customers and the employee is in the business of providing services to the corporation. See Keller; Haag.

The purpose of section 482 of the Code is to place a controlled taxpayer on a tax parity with an uncontrolled taxpayer by determining, according to the standard of an uncontrolled taxpayer, the true taxable income from the property and business of a controlled taxpayer. Section 1.482-1(b)(1) of the Income Tax Regulations. Allocations under section 482 may be necessary to determine the true taxable incomes of a controlled corporation and its shareholder/employee, notwithstanding the fact that the shareholder/employee works exclusively for the controlled corporation.

In cases to which section 482 of the Code would otherwise be applicable, the Internal Revenue Service does not follow the decision in Foglesong to the extent it held that the two trades or businesses requirement of section 482 is not satisfied when the controlling shareholder works exclusively as an employee of the controlled corporation.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Safe-Haven Interest Rates and Rental Charges for Commonly Controlled Taxpayers

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains final regulations relating to safe-haven interest rates for certain loans and advances between commonly controlled taxpayers and the deletion of a safe-haven rental charge for the leasing of certain tangible property between controlled taxpayers.

EFFECTIVE DATES: The amendments to the safe-haven interest rates and the safe-haven lease rules are generally effective for loans or advances and for leases entered into after May 8, 1986. The amendments to the interest-free period for intercompany trade receivables (the six month rule) are effective for amounts arising after June 30, 1988.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

Proposed amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 482 of the Internal Revenue Code were published in the FEDERAL REGISTER on April 8, 1986 (51 FR 12022, 12035) [LR-189-84, 1986-1 C.B. 820]. The change from fixed to floating safe-haven interest rates under section 482 was proposed to make the safe-haven rates consistent with the interest rates applicable under sections 483 and 1274, as directed by Congress in the Tax Reform Act of 1984 (98 Stat. 494, 531). The proposed amendments would also make other changes to the section 482 regulations, including changing the interest-free period for certain intercompany trade receivables. Many written comments responding to the proposed regulations were received. A public hearing on the proposed regulations was held on November 17, 1986. The final regulations published in this document are adopted after considering all the comments received on the proposed regulations.

EXPLANATION OF THE FINAL REGULATIONS

Safe-haven interest rates

Section 1.482-2(a)(2)(iii) of the final regulations adopts the safe-haven interest rates contained in the proposed regulations without change. The range of safe-haven interest rates generally applicable under the final regulations are from 100 to 130 percent of the applicable Federal rate (AFR) as determined under section 1274(d) in effect on the date a loan between controlled entities is made, effective generally for loans made after May 8, 1986. Comments received on the proposed regulations were generally in favor of using the AFR mechanism to provide floating safe-haven interest rates under section 482, and commentators also favored the proposed range of safe-haven interest rates of from 100 to 130 percent of the AFR.

Interest-free period on intercompany transactions

The prior regulations. Section 1.482-2(a)(3) of the prior regulations provided that interest shall be charged on an indebtedness between controlled entities beginning on the day the indebtedness arises. An exception was provided in the prior regulations for indebtedness incurred in the ordinary course of business from sales, services, etc., between members of the group and not evidenced by a written instrument requiring the payment of interest (hereinafter referred to as "intercompany trade receivables"). Under this exception, interest need not be charged on intercompany trade receivables until six months after the debt arises (the "six month rule"), or until a later date if the taxpayer shows that the regular trade practice conducted by either it or others in its industry permits comparable balances with unrelated parties to remain outstanding for more than six months without charging interest (the "trade practice exception"). The period for which interest need not be charged on intercompany trade receivables is generally referred to as the "interest-free period".

The proposed regulations and comments. Under §1.482-2(a)(1)(iii) of the proposed regulations the six month interest-free period would be reduced to 60-days (the "60-day rule"), but the proposed regulations would also retain the trade practice exception. The definition of intercompany trade receivables is unchanged in the proposed regulations. The prior and the proposed regulations do not distinguish between intercompany trade receivables incurred in a trade or business conducted by the debtor member within the United States, and intercompany trade receivables incurred in a trade or business carried on by the debtor member outside the United States.

Most of the comments received on the proposed regulations addressed the proposed 60-day rule. Commentators stated that a 60-day rule would be commercially unreasonable, burdensome, and inconsistent with the implicit six month interest-free period built into sections 483 and 1274. Commentators also stated that a 60-day rule could require extensive tracing to determine that timely payment has been made. Comments critical of the 60-day rule were most often raised in the context of international intercompany transactions where there may be difficulties in arranging and transmitting payments that are not present in domestic transactions (for example, assembling documents necessary for customs clearing requirements and banking requirements for the purchase of foreign exchange). Commentators also argued that audit adjustments under section 482 requiring the accrual of interest would be more numerous and difficult to perform under a 60-day rule.

The final regulations. The final regulations published in this document provide for a basic interest-free period and for several exceptions to the basic interest-free period for certain classes of intercompany trade receivables. The portions of the final regulations relating to the interest-free period for intercompany trade receivables are effective for intercompany trade receivables arising after June 30, 1988.

Section 1.482-2(a)(1)(iii)(B) of the final regulations provides that interest is not required to be charged on an intercompany trade receivable before the first day of the third calendar month following the month in which the intercompany trade receivable arises. Under §1.482-2(a)(1)(iii)(C) of the final regulations, in the case of intercompany trade receivables incurred by the debtor member of the group in transactions in the ordinary course of a trade or business which is actively conducted by the debtor member outside the United States, interest is not required to be charged on such intercompany trade receivables before the first day of the fourth calendar month following the month in which the intercompany trade receivable arises. Under either of these provisions, the trade practice exception provided in §1.482-2(a)(1)(iii)(D) of the final regulations may be used to lengthen the interest-free period. For purposes of determining the interest-free period, the term "United States" includes any possession of the United States, and the term "foreign country" excludes any possession of the United States.

Under the above rules of the final regulations, the interest-free period on intercompany trade receivables will not be shorter than two full calendar months in the case of domestic intercompany trade receivables, or shorter than three full calendar months in the case of intercompany trade receivables incurred by the debtor member in a foreign business. If the trade practice exception is not used, the interest-free period will end on the last day of a calendar month. In the case of intercompany trade receivables incurred by the debtor member in a foreign business, the interest-free period will always include the end of a fiscal quarter. These rules are intended to simplify administration of a shorter interest-free period: one month's intercompany trade receivables may be treated as a single group having the same interest-free period, thereby limiting the number of intercompany trade receivables that must be tracked for compliance with the interest-free period rules.

Under §1.482-2(a)(1)(iii)(E) of the final regulations an additional exception for determining a longer interest-free period is provided for intercompany trade receivables attributable to related party purchases of property for resale to unrelated persons located in a foreign country. This longer interest-free period is equal to ten (10) calendar days plus the purchasing member's average collection period for sales to unrelated persons located in the same foreign country of products within the same product group that includes the property purchased from the related party. The interest-free period under this exception, however, may not exceed 183 days. This interest-free period is intended to approximate the collection period that the related party seller might have experienced if it made the sale itself.

For purposes of this exception a product group is based upon a three-digit grouping of the Standard Industrial Classification Code (three-digit SIC code). Rules for determining the average collection period are provided in §1.482-2(a)(1)(iii)(E)(2) of the final regulations. If the related party purchaser makes sales in more than one foreign country, or sells property in more than one product group in any foreign country, separate computations of its average collection period, by product group within each country, are required. The interest-free period under this exception is not available if the property sold to the unrelated party has been manufactured, produced, or constructed (within the meaning of §1.954-3(a)(4)) by the related party purchaser.

Safe-haven lease rates

The proposed regulations would delete the formula method for determining a safe-haven rental charge for leases of tangible depreciable property between controlled entities. The safe-haven rule for subleases would be retained. No comments were received on these portions of the proposed regulations and they are adopted without charge.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

It has been determined that this final rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required. Although a notice of proposed rulemaking that solicited public comment was issued, it has been concluded that these regulations are interpretative and that the notice and public procedure requirements of 5 U.S.C. 553 do not apply. Accordingly, these regulations are not subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS
(26 CFR Part 1)

Paragraph 1. The authority citation for Part 1 is amended by adding the following citations:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.  Section 1.482-2 also issued under 26 U.S.C. 482.

Par. 2. Paragraphs (a) and (c)(2) of §1.482-2 are revised to read as follows:

§1.482-2 Determination of taxable income in specific situations.

(a) Loans or advances—(1) Interest on bona fide indebtedness—(i) In general. Where one member of a group of controlled entities makes a loan or advance directly or indirectly to, or otherwise becomes a creditor of, another member of such group and either charges no interest, or charges interest at a rate which is not equal to an arm's length rate of interest (as defined in paragraph (a)(2) of this section) with respect to such loan or advance, the district director may make appropriate allocations to reflect an arm's length rate of interest for the use of such loan or advance.

(ii) Application of paragraph (a) of this section—(A) Interest on bona fide indebtedness. Paragraph (a) of this section applies only to determine the appropriateness of the rate of interest charged on the principal amount of a bona fide indebtedness between members of a group of controlled entities, including—

(1) Loans or advances of money or other consideration (whether or not evidenced by a written instrument), and

(2) Indebtedness arising in the ordinary course of business from sales, leases, or the rendition of services by or between members of the group, or any other similar extension of credit.

(B) Alleged indebtedness. This paragraph (a) does not apply to so much of an alleged indebtedness which is not in fact a bona fide indebtedness, even if the stated rate of interest thereon would be within the safe haven rates prescribed in paragraph (a)(2)(iii) of this section. For example, paragraph (a) of this section does not apply to payments with respect to all or a portion of such alleged indebtedness where in fact all or a portion of an alleged indebtedness is a contribution to the capital of a corporation or a distribution by a corporation with respect to its shares. Similarly, this paragraph (a) does not apply to payments with respect to an alleged purchase-money debt instrument given in consideration for an alleged sale of property between two controlled entities where in fact the transaction constitutes a lease of the property. Payments made with respect to alleged indebtedness (including alleged stated interest thereon) shall be treated according to their substance. See §1.482-2(a)(3)(i).

(iii) Period for which interest shall be charged—(A) General rule. This paragraph (a)(1)(iii) is effective for indebtedness arising after June 30, 1988. See 26 CFR §1.482-2(a)(3) (revised as of April 1, 1988) for indebtedness arising before July 1, 1988.

Except as otherwise provided in paragraphs (a)(1)(iii)(B) through (E) of this section, the period for which interest shall be charged with respect to a bona fide indebtedness between controlled entities begins on the day after the day the indebtedness arises and ends on the day the indebtedness is satisfied (whether by payment, offset, cancellation, or otherwise.) Paragraphs (a)(1)(iii)(B) through (E) of this section provide certain alternative periods during which interest is not required to be charged on certain indebtedness. These exceptions apply only to indebtedness described in paragraph (a)(1)(ii)(A)(2) of this section (relating to indebtedness incurred in the ordinary course of business from sales, services, etc., between members of the group) and not evidenced by a written instrument requiring the payment of interest. Such amounts are hereinafter referred to as "intercompany trade receivables". The period for which interest is not required to be charged on intercompany trade receivables under this paragraph (a)(1)(iii) is called the "interest-free period". In general, an intercompany trade receivable arises at the time economic performance occurs (within the meaning of section 461(h) and the regulations thereunder) with respect to the underlying transaction between controlled entities. For purposes of this paragraph (a)(1)(ii), the term "United States" includes any possession of the United States, and the term "foreign country" excludes any possession of the United States.

(B) Exception for certain intercompany transactions in the ordinary course of business. Interest is not required to be charged on an intercompany trade receivable until the first day of the third calendar month following the month in which the intercompany trade receivable arises.

(C) Exception for trade or business of debtor member located outside the United States. In the case of an intercompany trade receivable arising from a transaction in the ordinary course of a trade or business which is actively conducted outside the United States by the debtor member, interest is not required to be charged until the first day of the fourth calendar month following the month in which such intercompany trade receivable arises.

(D) Exception for regular trade practice of creditor member or others in creditor's industry. If the creditor member or unrelated persons in the creditor member's industry, as a regular trade practice, allow unrelated parties a longer period without charging interest than that described in paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(B) or (C) of this section (whichever is applicable) with respect to transactions which are similar to transactions that give rise to intercompany trade receivables, such longer interest-free period shall be allowed with respect to a comparable amount of intercompany trade receivables.

(E) Exception for property purchased for resale in a foreign country—(1) General rule. If in the ordinary course of business one member of the group (the "related purchaser") purchases property from another member of the group (the "related seller") for resale to unrelated persons located in a particular foreign country, the related purchaser and the related seller may use as the interest-free period for the intercompany trade receivables arising during the related seller's taxable year from the purchase of such property within the same product group an interest-free period equal the sum of—

(i) The number of days in the related purchaser's average collection period (as determined under paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(E)(2) of this section) for sales of property within the same product group sold in the ordinary course of business to unrelated persons located in the same foreign country, plus

(ii) Ten (10) calendar days.

The interest-free period under this paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(V), however, shall in no event exceed 183 days. The related purchaser does not have to conduct business outside the United States in order to be eligible to use the interest-free period of this paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(E). The interest-free period under this paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(E) shall not apply to intercompany trade receivables attributable to property which is manufactured, produced, or constructed (within the meaning of §1.954-3(a)(4)) by the related purchaser. For purposes of this paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(E) a product group includes all products within the same three-digit Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) Code (as prepared by the Statistical Policy Division of the Office of Management and Budget, Executive Office of the President.)

(2) Average collection period. An average collection period for purposes of this paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(E) is determined as follows:

(i) Step 1. Determine total sales (less returns and allowances) by the related purchaser in the product group to unrelated persons located in the same foreign country during the related purchaser's last taxable year ending on or before the first day of the related seller's taxable year in which the intercompany trade receivable arises.

(ii) Step 2. Determine the related purchaser's average month-end accounts receivable balance with respect to sales described in paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(E)(2)(i) for the related purchaser's last taxable year ending on or before the first day of the related seller's taxable year in which the intercompany trade receivable arises.

(iii) Step 3. Compute a receivables turnover rate by dividing the total sales amount described in subdivision (i) of this paragraph by the average receivables balance described in subdivision (ii) of this paragraph.

(iv) Step 4. Divide the receivables turnover rate determined under subdivision (iii) of this paragraph into 365, and round the result to the nearest whole number to determine the number of days in the average collection period.

If the related purchaser makes sales in more than one foreign country, or sells property in more than one product group in any foreign country, separate computations of an average collection period, by product group within each country, are required. If the related purchaser resells fungible property in more than one foreign country and the intercompany trade receivables arising from the related party purchase of such fungible property cannot reasonably be identified with resales in particular foreign countries, then solely for the purpose of assigning an interest-free period to such intercompany trade receivables under this paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(E), an amount of each such intercompany trade receivable shall be treated as allocable to a particular foreign country in the same proportion that the related purchaser's sales of such fungible property in such foreign country during the period described in paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(E)(2)(i) bears to the related purchaser's sales of all such fungible property in all such foreign countries during such period. An interest-free period under this paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(E) shall not apply to any intercompany trade receivables arising in a taxable year of the related seller if the related purchaser made no sales described in paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(E)(2)(i) from which the appropriate interest-free period may be determined.

(3) Illustration. The interest-free period provided under paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(E) of this section may be illustrated by the following example:

Example—(i) Facts. X and Y use the calendar year as the taxable year and are members of the same group of controlled entities within the meaning of section 482. For Y's 1988 calendar taxable year X and Y intend to use the interest-free period determined under this paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(E) for intercompany trade receivables attributable to X's purchases of certain products from Y for resale by X in the ordinary course of business to unrelated persons in country Z. For its 1987 calendar taxable year all of X's sales in country Z were of products within a single product group based upon a three-digit SIC code, were not manufactured, produced, or constructed (within the meaning of §1.954–3(a)(4)) by X, and were sold in the ordinary course of X's trade or business to unrelated persons located only in country Z. These sales and the month-end accounts receivable balances (for such sales and for such sales uncollected from prior months) are as follows:

Month	Sales	Accounts Receivable
January, 1987	$500,000	$2,835,850
February	600,000	2,840,300
March	450,000	2,850,670
April	550,000	2,825,700
May	650,000	2,809,360
June	525,000	2,803,200
July	400,000	2,825,850
August	425,000	2,796,240
September	475,000	2,839,390
October	525,000	2,650,550
November	450,000	2,775,450
December, 1987	650,000	2,812,600
TOTALS	$6,200,000	$33,665,160

(ii) Average collection period. X's total sales within the same product group to unrelated persons within country Z for the period are $6,200,000. The average receivables balance for the period is $2,805,430 ($ 33,665,160/12). The average collection period in whole days is determined as follows:

$$\text{Receivables Turnover Rate} = \frac{$6,200,000}{$2,805,430} = 2.21$$

rounded to the nearest whole day = 165 days.

(iii) Interest-free period. Accordingly, for intercompany trade receivables incurred by X during Y's 1988 calendar taxable year attributable to the purchase of property from Y for resale to unrelated persons located in country Z and included in the product group, X may use an interest-free period of 175 days (165 days in the average collection period plus 10 days, but not in excess of a maximum of 183 days). All other intercompany trade receivables incurred by X are subject to the interest-free periods described in paragraphs (a)(1)(iii)(B), (C), or (D), whichever are applicable. If X makes sales in other foreign countries in addition to country Z or makes sales of property in more than one product group in any foreign country, separate computations of X's average collection period, by product group within each country, are required in order for X and Y to determine an interest-free period for such product groups in such foreign countries under this paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(E).

(iv) Payment; book entries. (A) Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph (a)(1)(iv), in determining the period of time for which an amount owed by one member of the group to another member is outstanding, payments or other credits to an account are considered to be applied against the earliest amount outstanding, that is, payments or credits are applied against amounts in a first-in, first-out (FIFO) order. Thus, tracing payments to individual intercompany trade receivables is generally not required in order to determine whether a particular intercompany trade receivable has been paid within the applicable interest-free period determined under paragraph (a)(1)(iii). The application of this paragraph (a)(1)(iv)(A) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example—(i) Facts. X and Y are members of a group of controlled entities within the meaning of section 482. Assume that the balance of intercompany trade receivables owed by X to Y on June 1 is $100, and that all of the $100 balance represents amounts incurred by X to Y during the month of May. During the month of June X incurs an additional $200 of intercompany trade receivables to Y. Assume that on July 15, $60 is properly credited against X's intercompany account to Y, and that $240 is properly credited against the intercompany account on August 31. Assume that under paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(B) of this section interest must be charged on X's intercompany trade receivables to Y beginning with the first day of the third calendar month following the month the intercompany trade receivables arise, and that no alternative interest-free period applies. Thus, the interest-free period for intercompany trade receivables incurred during the month of May ends on July 31, and the interest-free period for intercompany trade receivables incurred during the month of June ends on August 31.

(ii) Application of payments. Using a FIFO payment order, the aggregate payments of $300 are applied first to the opening June balance, and then to the additional amounts incurred during the month of June. With respect to X's June opening balance of $100, no interest is required to be accrued on $60 of such balance paid by X on July 15, because such portion was paid within its interest-free period. Interest for 31 days, from August 1 to August 31 inclusive, is required to be accrued on the $40 portion of the opening balance not paid until August 31. No interest is required to be accrued on the $200 of intercompany trade receivables X incurred to Y during June because the $240 credited on August 31, after eliminating the $40 of indebtedness remaining from periods before June, also eliminated the $200 incurred by X during June prior to the end of the interest-free period for that amount. The amount of interest incurred by X to Y on the $40 amount during August creates bona fide indebtedness between controlled entities and is subject to the provisions of paragraph (a)(1)(iii)(A) of this section without regard to any of the exceptions contained in paragraphs (a)(1)(iii)(B) through (E).

(B) Notwithstanding the first-in, first-out payment application rule described in paragraph (a)(1)(iv)(A) of this section, the taxpayer may apply payments or credits against amounts owed in some other order on its books in accordance with an agreement or understanding of the related parties if the taxpayer can demonstrate that either it or others in its industry, as a regular trade practice, enter into such agreements or understandings in the case of similar balances with unrelated parties.

(2) Arm's length interest rate—(i) In general. For purposes of section 482 and paragraph (a) of this section, an arm's length rate of interest shall be a rate of interest which was charged, or would have been charged, at the time the indebtedness arose, in independent transactions with or between unrelated parties under similar circumstances. All relevant factors shall be considered, including the principal amount and duration of the loan, the security involved, the credit standing of the borrower, and the interest rate prevailing at the situs of the lender or creditor for comparable loans between unrelated parties.

(ii) Funds obtained at situs of borrower. Notwithstanding the other provisions of paragraph (a)(2) of this section, if the loan or advance represents the proceeds of a loan obtained by the lender at the situs of the borrower, the arm's length rate for any taxable year shall be equal to the rate actually paid by the lender increased by an amount which reflects the costs or deductions incurred by the lender in borrowing such amounts and making such loans, unless the taxpayer establishes a more appropriate rate under the standards set forth in paragraph (a)(2)(i) of this section.

(iii) Safe haven interest rates for certain loans and advances made after May 8, 1986—(A) Applicability—(1) General rule. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (a)(2) of this section, paragraph (a)(2)(iii)(B) applies with respect to the rate of interest charged and to the amount of interest paid or accrued in any taxable year—

(i) Under a term loan or advance between members of a group of controlled entities where (except as provided in paragraph (a)(2)(iii)(A)(2)(ii)) the loan or advance is entered into after May 8, 1986, and

(ii) After May 8, 1986 under a demand loan or advance between such controlled entities.

(2) Grandfather rule for existing loans. The safe haven rates prescribed in paragraph (a)(2)(iii)(B) of this section shall not apply, and the safe haven rates prescribed in 26 CFR §1.482-2(a)(2)(iii) (revised as of April 1, 1985) shall apply to—

(i) Term loans or advances made before May 9, 1986, and

(ii) Term loans or advances made before August 7, 1986, pursuant to a binding written contract entered into before May 9, 1986.

(B) Safe haven interest rate based on applicable Federal rate. Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph (a)(2), in the case of a loan or advance between members of a group of controlled entities, an arm's length rate of interest referred to in paragraph (a)(2)(i) of this section shall be for purposes of Chapter 1 of the Code—

(1) The rate of interest actually charged if that rate is—

(i) Not less than 100 percent of the applicable Federal rate (the "lower limit"), and

(ii) Not greater than 130 percent of the applicable Federal rate (the "upper limit"), or

(2) If either no interest is charged or if the rate of interest charged is less than the lower limit, then an arm's length rate of interest shall be equal to the lower limit, compounded semiannually, or

(3) If the rate of interest charged is greater than the upper limit, then an arm's length rate of interest shall be equal to the upper limit, compounded semiannually, unless the taxpayer establishes a more appropriate compound rate of interest under paragraph (a)(2)(i) of this section. However, if the compound rate of interest actually charged is greater than the upper limit and less than the rate determined under paragraph (a)(2)(i) of this section, or if the compound rate actually charged is less than the lower limit and greater than the rate determined under paragraph (a)(2)(i), then the compound rate actually charged shall be deemed to be an arm's length rate under paragraph (a)(2)(i). In the case of any sale-leaseback described in section 1274(e), the lower limit shall be 110 percent of the applicable Federal rate, compounded semiannually.

(C) Applicable Federal rate. For purposes of paragraph (a)(2)(iii)(B) of this section, the term "applicable Federal rate" means, in the case of a loan or advance to which this section applies and having a term of—

(1) Not over 3 years, the Federal short-term rate,

(2) Over 3 years but not over 9 years, the Federal mid-term rate, or

(3) Over 9 years, the Federal long-term rate, as determined under section 1274(d) in effect on the date such loan or advance is made. In the case of any sale or exchange between controlled entities, the lower limit shall be the lowest of the applicable Federal rates in effect for any month in the 3-calendar-month period ending with the first calendar month in which there is a binding written contract in effect for such sale or exchange (the "lowest 3-month rate", as defined in section 1274(d)(2)). In the case of a demand loan or advance to which this section applies, the "applicable Federal rate" means the Federal short-term rate determined under section 1274(d) (determined without regard to the lowest 3-month short term rate determined under section 1274(d)(2)) in effect for each day on which any amount of such loan or advance (including unpaid accrued interest determined under paragraph (a)(2) of this section) is outstanding.

(D) Lender in business of making loans. If the lender in a loan or advance transaction to which paragraph (a)(2) of this section applies is regularly engaged in the trade or business or making loans or advances to unrelated parties, the safe haven rates prescribed in paragraph (a)(2)(iii)(B) shall not apply, and the arm's length interest rate to be used shall be determined under the standards described in paragraph (a)(2)(i), including reference to the interest rates charged in such trade or business by the lender on loans or advances of a similar type made to unrelated parties at and about the time the loan or advance to which paragraph (a)(2) of this section applies was made.

(E) Foreign currency loans. The safe haven interest rates prescribed in paragraph (a)(2)(iii)(B) of this section do not apply to any loan or advance the principal or interest of which is expressed in a currency other than U.S. dollars.

(3) Coordination with interest adjustments required under certain other Code sections. If the stated rate of interest on the stated principal amount of a loan or advance between controlled entities is subject to adjustment under section 482 and is also subject to adjustment under any other section of the Code (for example, section 467, 483, 1274 or 7872), section 482 and paragraph (a) of this section may be applied to such loan or advance in addition to such other Code section. After the enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1984, Pub. L. 96-369, and the enactment of Pub. L. 99-121, such other Code sections include sections 467, 483, 1274 and 7872. The order in which the different provisions shall be applied is as follows:

(i) First, the substance of the transaction shall be determined; for this purpose, all the relevant facts and circumstances shall be considered and any law or rule of law (assignment of income, step transaction, etc.) may apply. Only the rate of interest with respect to the stated principal amount of the bona fide indebtedness (within the meaning of paragraph (a)(1) of this section), if any, shall be subject to adjustment under section 482, paragraph (a) of this section, and any other Code section.

(ii) Second, the other Code section shall be applied to the loan or advance to determine whether any amount other than stated interest is to be treated as interest, and if so, to determine such amount according to the provisions of such other Code section.

(iii) Third, whether or not the other Code section applies to adjust the amounts treated as interest under such loan or advance, section 482 and paragraph (a) of this section may then be applied by the district director to determine whether the rate of interest charged on the loan or advance, as adjusted by any other Code section, is greater or less than an arm's length rate of interest, and if so, to make appropriate allocations to reflect an arm's length rate of interest.

(iv) Fourth, section 482 and paragraphs (b) through (e) of this section, if applicable, may be applied by the district director to make any appropriate allocations, other than an interest rate adjustment, to reflect an arm's length transaction based upon the principal amount of the loan or advance and the interest rate as adjusted under paragraph (a)(3)(i), (ii) or (iii) of this section. For example, assume that two commonly controlled taxpayers enter into a deferred payment sale of tangible property and no interest is provided, and assume also that section 483 is applied to treat a portion of the stated sales price as interest, thereby reducing the stated sales price. If after this recharacterization of a portion of the stated sales price as interest, the recomputed sales price does not reflect an arm's length sales price under the principles of paragraph (e) of this section, the district director may make other appropriate allocations (other than an interest rate adjustment) to reflect an arm's length sales price.

(4) Examples. The principles of paragraph (a)(3) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). An individual, A, transfers $20,000 to a corporation controlled by A in exchange for the corporation's note which bears adequate stated interest. The district director recharacterizes the transaction as a contribution to the capital of the corporation in exchange for preferred stock. Under paragraph (a)(3)(i) of this section, section 1.482-2(a) does not apply to the transaction because there is no bona fide indebtedness.

Example (2). B, an individual, is an employee of Z corporation, and is also the controlling shareholder of Z. Z makes a term loan of $15,000 to B at a rate of interest that is less than the applicable Federal rate. In this instance the other operative Code section is section 7872. Under section 7872(b), the difference between the amount loaned and the present value of all payments due under the loan using a discount rate equal to 100 percent of the applicable Federal rate is treated as an amount of cash transferred from the corporation to B and the loan is treated as having original issue discount equal to such amount. Under paragraph (a)(3)(iii) of this section, section 482 and paragraph (a) of this section may also be applied by the district director to determine if the rate of interest charged on this $15,000 loan (100 percent of the AFR, compounded semiannually, as adjusted by section 7872) is an arm's length rate of interest. Because the rate of interest on the loan, as adjusted by section 7872, is within the safe haven range of 100–130 percent of the AFR, compounded semiannually, no further interest rate adjustments under section 482 and paragraph (a) of this section will be made to this loan.

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (2) except that the amount lent by Z to B is $9,000, and that amount is the aggregate outstanding amount of loans between Z and B. Under the $10,000 de minimis exception of section 7872(c)(3), no adjustment for interest will be made to this $9,000 loan under section 7872. Under paragraph (a)(3)(iii) of this section, the district director may apply section 482 and paragraph (a) of this section to this $9,000 loan to determine whether the rate of interest charged is less than an arm's length rate of interest, and if so, to make appropriate allocations to reflect an arm's length rate of interest.

Example (4). X and Y are commonly controlled taxpayers. At a time when the applicable Federal rate is 12 percent, compounded semiannually, X sells property to Y in exchange for a note with a stated rate of interest of 18 percent, compounded semiannually. Assume that the other applicable Code section to the transaction is section 483. Section 483 does not apply to this transaction because, under section 483(d), there is no total unstated interest under the contract using the test rate of interest equal to 100 percent of the applicable Federal rate. Under paragraph (a)(3)(iii) of this section, section 482 and paragraph (a) of this section may be applied by the district director to determine whether the rate of interest under the note is excessive, that is, to determine whether the 18 percent stated interest rate under the note exceeds an arm's length rate of interest.

Example (5). Assume that A and B are commonly controlled taxpayers and that the applicable Federal rate is 10 percent, compounded semiannually. On June 30, 1986, A sells property to B and receives in exchange B's purchase-money note in the amount of $2,000,000. The stated interest rate on the note is 9%, compounded semiannually, and the stated redemption price at maturity on the note is $2,000,000. Assume that the other applicable Code section to this transaction is section 1274. As provided in section 1274(a) and (b), the discount rate for purposes of section 1274 will be nine percent, compounded semiannually, because the stated principal amount of B's note does not exceed $2,800,000. Section 1274 does not apply to this transaction because there is adequate stated interest on the debt instrument using a discount rate equal to 9%, compounded semiannually, and the stated redemption price at maturity does not exceed the stated principal amount. Under paragraph (a)(3)(iii) of this section, the district director may apply section 482 and paragraph (a) of this section to this $2,000,000 note to determine whether the 9% rate of interest charged is less than an arm's length rate of interest, and if so, to make appropriate allocations to reflect an arm's length rate of interest.

(c) Use of tangible property ***

(2) Arm's length charge—(i) In general. For purposes of paragraph (c) of this section, an arm's length rental charge shall be the amount of rent which was charged, or would have been charged for the use of the same or similar property, during the time it was in use, in independent transactions with or between unrelated parties under similar circumstances considering the period and location of the use, the owner's investment in the property or rent paid for the property, expenses of maintaining the property, the type of property involved, its condition, and all other relevant facts.

(ii) Safe haven rental charge. See 26 CFR §1.482-2(c)(2)(ii) (revised as of April 1, 1985), for the determination of safe haven rental charges in the case of certain leases entered into before May 9, 1986, and for leases entered into before August 7, 1986, pursuant to a binding written contract entered into before May 9, 1986.

(iii) Subleases. (A) Except as provided in paragraph (c)(2)(iii)(B) of this section, where possession, use, or occupancy of tangible property, which is leased by the owner (lessee) from an unrelated party is transferred by sublease or other arrangement to the user, an arm's length rental charge shall be considered to be equal to all the deductions claimed by the owner (lessee) which are attributable to the property for the period such property is used by the user. Where only a portion of such property was transferred, any allocations shall be made with reference to the portion transferred. The deductions to be considered include the rent paid or accrued by the owner (lessee) during the period of use and all other deductions directly and indirectly connected with the property paid or accrued by the owner (lessee) during such period.

Such deductions include deductions for maintenance and repair, utilities, management and other similar deductions.

(B) The provisions of paragraph (c)(2)(iii)(A) of this section shall not apply if either—

(1) The taxpayer establishes a more appropriate rental charge under the general rule set forth in paragraph (c)(2)(i) of this section, or

(2) During the taxable year, the owner (lessee) or the user was regularly engaged in the trade or business of renting property of the same general type as the property in question to unrelated persons.

(b) List of exemptions. ***

(12) Indebtedness subject to section 482, but such indebtedness is exempt from the application of section 7872 only during the interest-free period, if any, determined under §1.482-2(a)(1)(iii) with respect to intercompany trade receivables described in §1.482-2(a)(1)(ii)(A)(ii). Subchapter G.—Corporations Used to Avoid Income Tax on Shareholders
Part II.—Personal Holding Companies

Section 541.—Imposition of Personal Holding Company Tax

26 CFR 1.541-1: imposition of tax.
(Also Sections 561, 852, 4982; 1.561-1, 1.852-1.)

Personal holding company and regulated investment company; liability for tax. A regulated investment company that is also a personal holding company is liable for tax under both sections 541 and 852(b)(1) of the Code on its retained income.

Rev. Rul. 88-41

ISSUE

If a regulated investment company that is also a personal holding company retains income, and thus has investment company taxable income and undistributed personal holding company income, is the company liable for tax under both sections 541 and 852(b)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

X is a regulated investment company (RIC) within the meaning of section 851 of the Code. X is also a personal holding company within the meaning of section 542(a). (RICs are not included among the exceptions from the definition "personal holding company" provided in section 542(c)). X files returns on a calendar year basis.

In its tax year ending December 31, 1988, X has taxable income of 100*x* dollars. That 100*x* dollars is also personal holding company income within the meaning of section 543 of the Code.

X distributes 90*x* dollars (90 percent) of its 100*x* dollars taxable income and, pursuant to sections 561 and 852(b)(2)(D) of the Code, is allowed a dividends paid deduction of 90*x* dollars for the distribution. This distribution fulfills the requirements of section 852(a). X retains the remaining 10*x* dollars of its taxable income. X has no adjustments to its 100*x* dollars of taxable income of a personal holding company except the dividends paid deduction of 90*x* dollars and the deduction allowable under section 545(b)(1) for certain federal income taxes.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 852(b)(1) of the Code, as amended by section 1071(a)(2) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984, 1984-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 557, and section 1878(j)(2) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 822, provides that there is imposed for each taxable year upon the investment company taxable income of every RIC a tax computed as provided in section 11, as though the investment company taxable income were the taxable income referred to in section 11.

Section 852(b)(1) further provides that, in the case of a RIC that is a personal holding company (as defined in section 542), the tax upon investment company taxable income shall be computed at the highest rate of tax specified in section 11(b). For tax years beginning on or after July 1, 1987, this rate is 34 percent.

Section 852(b)(2) of the Code defines investment company taxable income as the taxable income of the RIC with certain adjustments, including the deduction for dividends paid (as defined in section 561) but computed without regard to capital gain dividends and exempt-interest dividends.

In this situation, X has 100*x* dollars of taxable income reduced by 90*x* dollars for its dividends paid deduction, leaving investment company taxable income of 10*x* dollars. Under section 852(b)(1) of the Code, X must pay tax on this undistributed income because it is investment company taxable income. Because X is a RIC that is also a personal holding company, that tax is computed at the highest corporate rate under section 11(b). The 34 percent rate of tax is applied to the retained investment company taxable income to arrive at a RIC tax of 3.4*x* dollars in 1988.

Section 541 of the Code provides that in addition to the other taxes imposed by chapter 1, there is imposed for each tax year on the undistributed personal holding company income (as defined in section 545) of every personal holding company (as defined in section 542) a personal holding company tax equal to 28 percent of the undistributed personal holding company income.

Section 545(a) of the Code provides that undistributed personal holding company income means the taxable income of a personal holding company less certain adjustments and less the dividends paid deduction as defined in section 561.

Section 545(b)(1) of the Code provides that one of the adjustments allowed by section 545(a) is a deduction for federal income taxes accrued during the tax year, other than the accumulated earnings tax imposed by section 531 and the personal holding company tax imposed by section 541. Thus, in computing the personal holding company tax of X, a deduction is allowed for amounts accrued for tax on its investment company taxable income.

For 1988, X has 100*x* dollars of taxable income reduced by 90*x* dollars for its dividends paid deduction and 3.4*x* dollars for tax accrued on its investment company taxable income, leaving 6.6*x* dollars of undistributed personal holding company income. The 28 percent rate of tax is applied to this amount to arrive at a personal holding company tax of 1.848*x* dollars.

Thus, the effective rate of tax in 1988 on X's retained income of 10*x* dollars is 52.48 percent (3.4*x* dollars on its investment company taxable income and 1.848*x* dollars on its undistributed personal holding company income).

X may also be subject to the excise tax on undistributed income of regulated investment companies provided for in section 4982 of the Code.

HOLDING

X must pay tax under section 852(b)(1) of the Code on the 10*x* dollars investment company taxable income and under section 541 on the portion of the 10*x* dollars that is also undistributed personal holding company income.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953; PART 602.—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Consent Dividends

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary Regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations that amend the Income Tax Regulations under the consent dividend provisions of section 565 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. A review of the legislative history of section 565 has prompted a clarification of certain provisions of the regulations under section 565. The amendments to the regulations will provide the public with the new guidance needed to comply with section 565. The text of these temporary regulations also serves as the text of the proposed regulations  [page 920, this Bulletin].

DATE: These regulations, as well as the deletions to the existing final regulations, are effective for tax years ending after December 15, 1987.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains temporary regulations that amend the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 565 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to clarify the scope of the consent dividend provisions of the Code.

NEED FOR TEMPORARY REGULATIONS

The proper application of section 565 is dependent upon the Internal Revenue Service providing detailed specifications of the manner in which the requirements of the statute will be administered. As a result of a review of section 565, it has been determined that it is necessary to clarify the regulations under section 565. Because of the need for immediate guidance in this regard, the Internal Revenue Service has found it to be impractical to issue these temporary regulations either with notice and public comment procedure under section 553(b) of title 5 of the United States Code, or under the effective date limitation of section 553(d) of title 5.

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY OF CONSENT DIVIDEND PROVISIONS

The consent dividend provisions were enacted in 1938 as a relief measure against a then generally applicable tax on undistributed corporate profits. This tax formed a part of the basic corporate income tax. The consent dividend provisions were intended to apply equally as broadly as did the tax upon undistributed profits because the consent dividend provisions were intended to provide relief from that tax. The tax on undistributed profits had expired by the time the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 was enacted. The consent dividend provisions were retained in the 1954 Code as a relief measure for a corporation that was required to distribute its earnings but was prevented from distributing cash because of loan restrictions, insufficiency of liquid resources, or other reasons. However, the regulation under section 565 did not make clear that they apply only to corporations or other taxable entities required to distribute their earnings.

RESTRICTED APPLICABILITY OF CONSENT DIVIDEND PROVISIONS

Taxable entities required to distribute their earnings are corporations subject to the accumulated earnings tax, personal holding companies, foreign personal holding companies, regulated investment companies, and real estate investment trusts. The amendments to the regulations clarify that the consent dividend provisions apply only to these entities. These amendments do not affect those provisions of the temporary regulations under section 367 (sections 7.367(b)-9(f) and 7.367(b)-10(f)) which permit United States shareholders to increase their basis in foreign corporations involved in certain reorganizations and distributions by the amount of earnings and profits of lower-tier foreign corporations on the condition that an election is made to treat such earnings and profits as having been distributed as dividends through intervening corporations to the upper-tier foreign corporation. This procedure differs from a consent dividend election under section 565 in that the electing shareholder is not treated as having received a dividend, and the election is not made with respect to stock held directly by the electing shareholder. The basis adjustment under these provisions is therefore not a consent dividend under section 565, but it is made in accordance with a procedure that is similar in form to a consent dividend election under that section.

In addition, the Service understands that, in certain circumstances, members of affiliated groups filing consolidated returns have elected consent dividends under section 565, without regard to whether they are required to distribute earnings, for the purpose of preventing the application of §1.1502-32(g). Generally, where a subsidiary leaves a consolidated group, §1,1502-32(g) requires that the members of the group reduce the basis of any stock of the subsidiary that they own on the first day of the subsidiary's first separate return year by the amount of any basis increases in the stock under §1.1502-32 for all consolidated return years. For this purpose, a year in which a subsidiary is included in the consolidated return of another group is considered a separate return year (e.g., a year where the member of the affiliated group owning the stock of the subsidiary is acquired by another affiliated group filing a consolidated return).

As noted above, a subsidiary cannot make a consent dividend unless it is a corporation subject to the accumulated earnings tax, a personal holding company, a foreign personal holding company, a regulated investment company, or a real estate investment trust. The Service is studying the feasibility of changes in the consolidated return regulations that would alleviate the application of the §1.1502-32(g) adjustment for those corporations that do not qualify under §1.565-1 to make a consent dividend. Among the changes being considered is an exception similar to the exceptions under present law (such as §1.1502-13(f)(2)) that eliminates some of the effects of deconsolidation in certain circumstances where a group is acquired by another group filing consolidated returns. Guidance will be provided to taxpayers with respect to this issue in sufficient time to meet their tax return filing requirements.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291, REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT, AND PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

It has been determined that this temporary regulation is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required. A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the temporary regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

The collection of information requirements contained in this regulation have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. These requirements have been approved by OMB under control number 1545-0043.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Parts 1 and 602 are amended as follows:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS (26 CFR PART 1)

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 continues to read in part:

Authority: 26 CFR 7805. ***

Par. 2. Section 1.565-1 is hereby deleted.

Par. 3. The following new section is added immediately after §1.564-1.

§1.565-1T General rule (Temporary).

(a) Consent dividends. The dividends paid deduction, as defined in section 561, includes the consent dividends for the taxable year. A consent dividend is a hypothetical distribution (as distinguished from an actual distribution) made by:

(1) a corporation that has a reasonable basis to believe that it is subject to the accumulated earnings tax imposed in part I of subchapter G, chapter 1 of the Code, or

(2) a corporation described in part II (personal holding companies) or part III (foreign personal holding companies) of subchapter G or in part I (regulated investment companies) or part II (real estate investment trusts) of subchapter M, chapter 1 of the Code.

A consent dividend may be made by a corporation described in this paragraph to any person who owns consent stock on the last day of the taxable year of such corporation and who agrees to treat the hypothetical distribution as an actual dividend, subject to the limitations in section 565, §1.565-2T, and paragraph (c)(2) of this section, by filing a consent at the time and in the manner specified in paragraph (b) of this section.

(b) Making and filing of consents. (1) A consent shall be made on Form 972 in accordance with this section and the instructions on the form issued therewith. It may be made only by or on behalf of a person who was the actual owner on the last day of the corporation's taxable year of any class of consent stock, that is, the person who would have been required to include in gross income any dividends on such stock actually distributed on the last day of such year. Form 972 shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that is made under the penalties of perjury. In the consent such person must agree to include in gross income for his taxable year in which or with which the taxable year of the corporation ends a specific amount as a taxable dividend.

(2) See paragraph (c) of this section and §1.565-2T for the rules as to when all or a portion of the amount so specified will be disregarded for tax purposes.

(3) A consent may be filed at any time not later than the due date of the corporation's income tax return for the taxable year for which the dividends paid deduction is claimed. With such return, and not later than the due date thereof, the corporation must file Forms 972 duly executed by each consenting shareholder, and a return on Form 973 showing by classes the stock outstanding on the first and last days of the taxable year, the dividend rights of such stock, distributions made during the taxable year to shareholders, and giving all the other information required by the form. Form 973 shall contain or be verified by a written declaration that is made under the penalties of perjury.

(c) Taxability of amounts specified in consents. (1) The filing of a consent is irrevocable, and except as otherwise provided in section 565(b), §1.565-2T, and paragraph (c)(2) of this section, the full amount specified in a consent filed by a shareholder of a corporation described in paragraph (a) of this section shall be included in the gross income of the shareholder as a taxable dividend. Where the shareholder is taxable on a dividend only if received from sources within the United States, the amount specified in the consent of the shareholder shall be treated as a dividend from sources within the United States in the same manner as if the dividend had been paid in money to the shareholder on the last day of the corporation's taxable year. See paragraph (b) of this section relating to the making and filing of consents, and section 565(e) and §1.565-5T, with respect to the payment requirement in the case of nonresident aliens and foreign corporations.

(2) To the extent that the Commissioner determines that the corporation making a consent dividend is not a corporation described in paragraph (a) of this section, the amount specified in the consent is not a consent dividend and the amount specified in the consent will not be included in the gross income of the shareholder. In addition, where a corporation is described in paragraph (a)(1) but not paragraph (a)(2) of this section, to the extent that the Commissioner determines that the amount specified in a consent is larger than the amount of earnings subject to the accumulated earnings tax imposed by part I of subchapter G, such excess is not a consent dividend under paragraph (a) of this section and will not be included in the gross income of the shareholder.

(3) Except as provided in section 565(b), §1.565-2T and paragraph (c)(2) of this section, once a shareholder's consent is filed, the full amount specified in such consent must be included in the shareholder's gross income as a taxable dividend, and the ground upon which a deduction for consent dividends is denied the corporation does not affect the taxability of a shareholder whose consent has been filed for the amount specified in the consent. For example, although described in part I, II, or III of subchapter G, or part I or II of subchapter M, chapter I of the Code, the corporation's taxable income (as adjusted under section 535(b), 545(b), 556(b), 852(b)(2), or 857(b)(2), as appropriate) may be less than the total of the consent dividends.

(4) A shareholder who is a nonresident alien or a foreign corporation is taxable on the full amount of the consent dividend that otherwise qualifies under this section even though that payment has not been made as required by section 565(e) and §1.565-5T.

(5) Income of a foreign corporation is not subject to the tax on accumulated earnings under part I of subchapter G, chapter 1 of the Code except to the extent of U.S. source income, adjusted as permitted under section 535. See section 535(b) and (d) and §1.535-1(b). Therefore, foreign source earnings (other than those distributions subject to resourcing under section 535(d)) of a foreign corporation that is not described in paragraph (a)(2) of this section cannot qualify for consent dividend treatment. Accordingly, a consent dividend made by a foreign corporation described in paragraph (a)(1) of this section shall not be effective with respect to all of the corporation's earnings, but shall relate solely to earnings which would have been, in the absence of the consent dividend, subject to the accumulated earnings tax.

Par. 4. Section 1.565-2 is hereby deleted.

Par. 5. The following new section is added immediately after §1.565-1T.

§1.565-2T Limitations (Temporary).

(a) Amounts specified in consents filed by shareholders or other beneficial owners of a corporation described in §1.565-1T(a) are not treated as consent dividends to the extent that—

(1) They would constitute a preferential dividend; or

(2) They would not constitute a dividend (as defined in section 316),

if distributed in money to shareholders on the last day of the taxable year of the corporation. If any portion of any amount specified in a consent filed by a shareholder of a corporation described in the preceding sentence is not treated as a consent dividend under section 565(b) and this section, it is disregarded for all tax purposes. For example, it is not taxable to the consenting shareholder, and paragraph (c) of §1.565-1T is not applicable to this portion of the amount specified in the consent.

(b)(1) A preferential distribution is an actual distribution, or a consent distribution, or a combination of the two, which involves a preference to one or more shares of stock as compared with other shares of the same class or to one class of stock as compared with any other class of stock. See section 562(c) and §1.562-2.

(2) The application of section 565(b)(1) may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). The X Corporation, a personal holding company, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has 200 shares of stock outstanding, owned by A and B in equal amounts. On December 15, 1987, the corporation distributes $600 to B and $100 to A. As a part of the same distribution, A executes a consent to include $500 in his gross income as a taxable dividend although such amount is not distributed to him. The X Corporation, assuming the other requirements of section 565 have been complied with, is entitled to a consent dividends deduction of $500. Although the consent dividend is deemed to have been paid on December 31, 1987, the last day of the taxable year of the corporation, they constitute a single nonpreferential distribution of $1200.

Example (2). The Y corporation, a personal holding company, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has one class of consent stock outstanding, owned in equal amounts by A, B, and C. On December 15, 1987, the corporation makes a distribution in cash of $5,000 each to A and B, and $3,000 to C. The distribution is preferential. If A and B each receive a distribution in cash of $5,000 and C consents to include $3,000 in gross income as a taxable dividend, the combined actual and consent distribution is preferential. Similarly, if no one receives a distribution in cash, but A and B each consents to include $5,000 as a taxable dividend in gross income and C agrees to include only $3,000, the consent distribution is preferential.

Example (3). The Z Corporation, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis and is subject, for the taxable year in question, to the accumulated earnings tax, has only two classes of stock outstanding, each class being consent stock and consisting of 500 shares. Class A, with a par value of $40 per share, is entitled to two-thirds of any distribution of earnings and profits. Class B, with a par value of $20 per share, is entitled to one-third of any distribution of earnings and profits. On December 15, 1987, there is distributed on the class B stock $2 per share, or $1,000, and shareholders of the class A stock consent to include in gross income amounts equal to $2 per share, or $1,000. The distribution is preferential, inasmuch as the class B stock has received more than its pro rata share of the combined amounts of the actual distributions and the consent distributions.

(c) (1) An additional limitation under section 565(b) is that the amounts specified in consents which may be treated as consent dividends cannot exceed the amounts which would constitute a dividend (as defined in section 316) if the corporation had distributed the total specified amounts in money to shareholders on the last day of the taxable year of the corporation. If only a portion of such total would constitute a dividend, then only a corresponding portion of each specified amount is treated as a consent dividend.

(2) The application of section 565(b)(2) may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. The X Corporation, a personal holding company, which makes its income tax returns on the calendar year basis, has only one class of stock outstanding, owned in equal amounts by A and B. It makes no distributions during the taxable year 1987. Its earnings and profits for the calendar year 1987 amount to $8,000, there being at the beginning of such year no accumulated earnings or profits. A and B execute proper consents to include $5,000 each in their gross income as a dividend received by them on December 31, 1987. The sum of the amounts specified in the consents executed by A and B is $10,000, but if $10,000 had actually been distributed by the X corporation on December 31, 1987, only $8,000 would have constituted a dividend under section 316(a). The amount which could be considered as consent dividends in computing the dividends paid deduction for purposes of the accumulated earnings tax is limited to $8,000, or $4,000 of the $5,000 specified in each consent. The remaining $1,000 in each consent is disregarded for all tax purposes. The amount which could be considered as consent dividends in computing the dividends paid deduction for purposes of the personal holding company tax is $10,000 (assuming that the undistributed personal holding company income, determined without regard to distributions under section 316(b)(2), is equal to at least that amount). In that event, A and B would each include $5,000 in gross income as a dividend received on December 31, 1987.

Par. 6. Section 1.565-3 is hereby deleted.

Par. 7. The following new section is added immediately after §1.565-2T.

§1.565-3T Effect of consent (Temporary).

(a) The amount of the consent dividend that is described in paragraph (a) of §1.565-1T shall be considered, for all purposes of the Code, as if it were distributed in money by the corporation to the shareholder on the last day of the taxable year of the corporation, received by the shareholder on such day, and immediately contributed by the shareholder as paid-in capital to the corporation on such day. Thus, the amount of the consent dividend will be treated by the shareholder as a dividend. The shareholder will be entitled to the dividends received deduction under section 243 or 245 with respect to such consent dividend. The basis of the shareholder's consent stock in a corporation will be increased by the amount thus treated in his hands as a dividend which he is considered as having contributed to the corporation as paid-in capital. The amount of the current dividend will also be treated as a dividend received from sources within the United States in the same manner as if the dividend has been paid in money to the shareholders. Among other effects of the consent dividend, the earnings and profits of the corporation will be decreased by the amount of the consent dividends. Moreover, if the shareholder is a corporation, its accumulated earnings and profits will be increased by the amount of the consent dividend with respect to which it makes a consent.

(b) The application of section 565(c) to a corporate shareholder may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. Corporation A, a personal holding company and a calendar year taxpayer, has one shareholder, individual B, whose consent to include $10,000 in his gross income for the calendar year 1987 has been timely filed. A has $8,000 of earnings and profits in 1987 and had no accumulated earnings and profits at the beginning of 1987. A has $10,000 of undistributed personal holding company income (determined without regard to distributions under section 316(b)(2)) for 1987. B must include $10,000 in his gross income as a taxable income and is treated as having immediately contributed $10,000 to A as paid-in capital. See section 316(b)(2).

Par. 8. Section 1.565-5 is hereby deleted.

Par. 9. The following new section is added immediately after §1.565-4.

§1.565-5T Nonresident aliens and foreign corporations (Temporary).

In the event that any consent filed by a corporation that is described in paragraph (a) of §1.565-1T is made by a shareholder to whom the payment of a dividend in cash on the last day of the taxable year of the corporation would have made it necessary for the corporation to deduct and withhold any amount as a tax under section 1441 or section 1442, such consent, when filed by the corporation, must be accompanied by payment of the amount which would have been required to be deducted and withheld if the amount specified in such consent had, on the last day of the corporation's taxable year, been paid to the shareholder in cash as a dividend. Such payment must be in one of the following forms:

(a) Cash;

(b) United States postal money order;

(c) Certified check drawn on a domestic bank, provided that the law of the place where the bank is located does not permit the certification to be rescinded prior to presentation;

(d) A cashier's check of a domestic bank, or

(e) A draft on a domestic bank or a foreign bank maintaining a United States agency or branch and payable in United States funds.

The amount of such payment shall be credited against the tax imposed on the shareholder.

Par. 10. Section 1.565-6 is hereby deleted.

Par. 11. The following new section is added immediately after §1.565-5T.

§1.565-6T Definitions (Temporary).

(a) Consent stock. (1) The term "consent stock" includes what is generally known as common stock. It also includes participating preferred stock, the participation rights of which are unlimited.

(2) The definition of consent stock may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. If in the case of the X Corporation, a personal holding company, there is only one class of stock outstanding, it would all be consent stock. If, on the other hand, there were two classes of stock, class A and class B, and class A was entitled to 6 percent before any distribution could be made on class B, but class B was entitled to everything distributed after class A had received its 6 percent, only class B stock would be consent stock. Similarly, if class A, after receiving its 6 percent, was to participate equally or in some fixed proportion with class B until it had received a second 6 percent, after which class B alone was entitled to any further distributions, only class B stock would be consent stock. The same result would follow if the order of preferences were class A 6 percent, then class B 6 percent, then class A a second 6 percent, either alone or in conjunction with class B, then class B the remainder. If, however, class A stock is entitled to ultimate participation without limit as to amount, then it, too, may be consent stock. For example, if class A is to receive 3 percent and then share equally or in some fixed proportion with class B in the remainder of the earnings or profits distributed, both class A stock and class B stock are consent stock.

(b) Preferred dividends. (1) The term "preferred dividends" includes all fixed amounts (whether determined by percentage of par value, a stated return expressed in a certain number of dollars per share, or otherwise) the distribution of which on any class of stock is a condition precedent to a further distribution of earnings or profits (not including a distribution in partial or complete liquidation). A distribution, though expressed in terms of a fixed amount, is not a preferred dividend, however, unless it is preferred over a subsequent distribution within the taxable year upon some class or classes of stock other than one on which it is payable.

(2) The definition of preferred dividends may be illustrated by the following example:

Example. If, in the case of the X Corporation, there are only two classes of stock outstanding, class A and class B, and class A is entitled to a distribution of 6 percent of par, after which the balance of the earnings and profits are distributable on class B exclusively, class A's 6 percent is a preferred dividend. If the order of preferences is class A $6 per share, class B $6 per share, then class A and class B in fixed proportions until class A receives $3 more per share, then class B the remainder, all of class A's $9 per share and $6 per share of the amount distributable on class B are preferred dividends. The amount which class B is entitled to receive in conjunction with the payment to class A of its last $3 per share is not a preferred dividend, because the payment of such amount is preferred over no subsequent distribution except one made on class B itself. Finally, if a distribution must be $6 on class A, $6 on class B, then on class A and class B share and share alike, the distribution on class A of $6 and the distribution on class B of $6 are both preferred dividends.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER I, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Requirement for Certain Partnerships and S Corporations to Separately State Meal, Travel, and Entertainment Expenses

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations relating to the requirement for certain partnerships or S corporations to separately state meal, travel, and entertainment expenses. The text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text of the proposed regulations  [LR-29-87, page 927, this Bulletin].

DATE: The regulations are effective for taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1987.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Section 142 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (the Act) made significant changes to the rules for deducting meal, entertainment, and travel expenses. The Internal Revenue Service published Notice 87-23 in 1987-1 C.B. 467. The purpose of Notice 87-23 was to alert taxpayers to these changes. The Service published Notice 87-45 in 1987-1 C.B. 502. Notice 87-45 provided additional instructions to Form 1065 and Form 1120S concerning the treatment of expenses for meals, travel, and entertainment of certain 1986-87 fiscal year partnerships and S corporations.

In general, the changes made by the Act to the rules regarding deductions for meal, travel, and entertainment expenses are effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986. In the case of a partnership or an S corporation, deductions for meals, travel, and entertainment expenses are reflected in the taxable income of a partner or shareholder for the taxable year with which or within which the taxable year of the partnership or S corporation ends. Under section 702(a)(7) of the Internal Revenue Code, in the case of a partnership, and section 1366(a)(1)(A), in the case of an S corporation, expenses that are subject to provisions of the Act are to be accounted for separately in certain years, since these items will affect the tax liability of partners and shareholders if separately stated in such years. For example, a partnership with a fiscal year ending June 30, 1987, should separately state meal and entertainment expenses paid or incurred during such taxable year (including amounts paid or incurred prior to January 1, 1987) and such amounts are subject to the new rules, such as the 80 percent limitation, with respect to partners with taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1987. Accordingly, the changes made by the Act apply to expenses paid or incurred by partnerships or S corporations for taxable years ending after December 31, 1986, with respect to partners and S corporation shareholders whose taxable years begin on or after January 1, 1987.

However, because the application of the effective date provisions to partnerships and S corporations may impose substantial administrative burdens on taxpayers for expense paid or incurred prior to January 1, 1987, the temporary regulations do not apply to meal, travel, and entertainment expenses of partnerships and S corporations that are paid or incurred before January 1, 1987. Thus, the temporary regulations under sections 702(a)(7) and 1366(a)(1)(A) of the Code require partnerships and S corporations to separately state expenses paid or incurred after December 31, 1986, by partnerships or S corporations that have taxable years beginning before January 1, 1987, and ending with or within partners' or shareholders' taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1987. In addition, with respect to skybox rentals (subject to provisions of the Act) a separate statement is required for rents paid or incurred after December 31, 1986, by partnerships or S corporations that have taxable years beginning before January 1, 1989, and ending with or within partners' or shareholders' taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1987.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

No general notice of proposed rulemaking is required by 5 U.S.C. 553(b) for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the Regulatory Flexibility Act does not apply and no regulatory flexibility analysis is required for this rule. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis therefore is not required.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 continues to read in part:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805. ***

Par. 2. New §1.702-1T is added immediately after §1.702-1 to read as follows:

§1.702-1T Temporary regulations on requirement to separately state meal, travel, and entertainment expenses.

Each partner shall take into account separately his or her distributive share of meal, travel, and entertainment expenses paid or incurred after December 31, 1986, by partnerships that have taxable years beginning before January 1, 1987, and ending with or within partners' taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1987. In addition, with respect to skybox rentals under section 274(l)(2), each partner shall take into account separately his or her distributive share of rents paid or incurred after December 31, 1986, by partnerships that have taxable years beginning before January 1, 1989, and ending with or within partners' taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1987.

Par. 3. New §1.1366-1T is added immediately after §1.1361-1A to read as follows:

§1.1366-1T Temporary regulations on requirement to separately state meal, travel, and entertainment expenses.

Each shareholder shall take into account separately his or her pro rata share of meal, travel, and entertainment expenses paid or incurred after December 31, 1986, by S corporations that have taxable years beginning before January 1, 1987, and ending with or within shareholders' taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1987. In addition, with respect to skybox rentals under section 274(l)(2), each shareholder shall take into account separately his or her pro rata share of rents paid or incurred after December 31, 1986, by S corporations that have taxable years beginning before January 1, 1989, and ending with or within shareholders' taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1987.

There is need for immediate guidance with respect to the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason it is found impracticable to issue it with notice and public procedure under subsection (b) of section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Section 706.—Taxable Years of Partner and Partnership

26 CFR 1.706-1T: Taxable years of certain partnerships. (Temporary).

T.D. 8169

TITLE 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE—CHAPTER 1,SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953; PART 602—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Taxable Years of Certain Partnerships

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides temporary regulations relating to the appropriate taxable year for certain partnerships. The text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text of the proposed regulations  [page 924, this Bulletin]. The temporary regulations reflect an amendment to section 706(b) of the Internal Revenue Code with respect to the taxable years of certain partnerships as made by section 806 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 and provide guidance to partnerships with respect to the new provision.

DATES: The regulations contained in this document will be effective for partnership taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

BACKGROUND

Prior to its amendment by section 806 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (H.R. 3838, Pub. L. 99-514, "the Act", [1986-3 C.B. (Vol. 1) 1, 279], section 706(b) required a partnership adopting or changing a taxable year to use the same taxable year as the taxable year of all of its principal partners (or the calendar year, if all the partnership's principal partners did not have the same taxable year), unless the partnership established, to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury, a business purpose for selecting a different taxable year.

Section 706(b), as amended by section 806 of the Act, requires that any partnership (except where a business purpose for some other taxable year is established) must conform its taxable year to (a) the taxable year of one or more of its partners who have an aggregate interest in partnership profits and capital of greater than 50 percent, (b) if no taxable year is described in (a), the taxable year of all of its principal partners, or (c) if no taxable year is described in (a) or (b), the calendar year or such other year as may be prescribed by regulations.

This document, under the authority of section 706(b)(1)(B)(iii), prescribes rules for determining when the calendar year will not be an appropriate taxable year for the partnership and which year will be appropriate in such cases.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Section 1.706-1T(a) generally provides that, if a partnership is unable to determine its taxable year by reference to the taxable year of its partners owning a majority interest in partnership profits and capital (as described in section 706(b)(1)(B)(i)) or by reference to the taxable year of all of its principal partners (as described in section 706(b)(1)(B)(ii)), its taxable year is the year that results in the least aggregate deferral of income to the partners. Deferral to each partner is measured in terms of months from the end of the partnership's taxable year forward to the end of the partner's taxable year. The taxable year that results in the least aggregate deferral of income to the partners is determined under §1.706-1T(a)(2) by comparing the deferral that would result to the partners if a particular partner's taxable year were the partnership's taxable year. Rules are also provided to minimize the number of changes in the partnership's taxable year under section 706 (b)(1)(B)(iii) where there would be a de minimis change in the aggregate deferral to the partners.

REGULATORY FLEXIBILITY ACT, EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291, AND PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT OF 1980

No general notice of proposed rulemaking is required by 5 U.S.C. 553(b) for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. Chapter 6) does not apply and no Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is required for this rule. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that this temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required. The reporting requirements added by this document have been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. The reporting requirements have been approved by OMB under control number 1545-0099.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Parts 1 and 602 are amended as follows:

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 is amended by adding the following citation:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. section 7805.  Section 1.706-1T also issued under 26 U.S.C. 706(b).

Par. 2. A new §1.706-1T is added immediately following existing §1.706-1 to read as follows:

§1.706-1T Taxable years of certain partnerships (Temporary).

(a) Taxable year determined by reference to the partners—(1) In general. If for any taxable year a partnership's taxable year cannot be determined by reference to the taxable year of its partners owning a majority interest in partnership profits and capital (as described in section 706(b)(1)(B)(i)) or by reference to the taxable year of all its principal partners (as described in section 706(b)(1)(B)(ii)), then the partnership must determine its taxable year under section 706(b)(1)(B)(iii). Under section 706(b)(1)(B)(iii), the taxable year of the partnership, except as provided in paragraph (b) of this section, shall be the taxable year that results in the least aggregate deferral of income to the partners (as determined under paragraph (a)(2) of this section).

(2) Taxable year that results in the least aggregate deferral of income. The taxable year that results in the least aggregate deferral of income will be the taxable year of one or more of the partners in the partnership which will result in the least aggregate deferral of income to the partners. The aggregate deferral for a particular year is equal to the sum of the products determined by multiplying the month(s) of deferral for each partner that would be generated by that year and each partner's interest in partnership profits for that year. The partner's taxable year that produces the lowest sum when compared to the other partners' taxable years is the taxable year that results in the least aggregate deferral of income to the partners. If the calculation results in more than one taxable year qualifying as the taxable year with the least aggregate deferral, the partnership may select any one of those taxable years as its taxable year. However, if one of the qualifying taxable years is also the partnership's existing taxable year, the partnership must maintain its existing taxable year. The determination of the taxable year that results in the least aggregate deferral of income shall generally be made as of the beginning of the partnership's current taxable year. The District Director, however, may determine that the first day of the current taxable year is not the appropriate testing day and require the use of some other day or period that will more accurately reflect the ownership of the partnership and thereby the actual aggregate deferral to the partners where the partners engage in a transaction that has as its principal purpose the avoidance of the principles of this section. Thus, for example, the preceding sentence would apply where there is a transfer of an interest in the partnership that results in a temporary transfer of that interest principally for purposes of qualifying for a specific taxable year under the principles of this section. For purposes of this section, deferral to each partner is measured in terms of months from the end of the partnership's taxable year forward to the end of the partner's taxable year.

(3) Determination of the taxable year of a partner or partnership that uses a 52-53 week taxable year. For purposes of the calculation described in paragraph (a)(2) of this section, the taxable year of a partner or partnership that uses a 52-53 week taxable year shall be the same year determined under the rules of section 441(f) and the regulations thereunder with respect to the inclusion of income by the partner or partnership.

(4) Special de minimis rule. If the taxable year that results in the least aggregate deferral produces an aggregate deferral that is less than .5 when compared to the aggregate deferral of the current taxable year, the partnerhip's current taxable year shall be treated as the taxable year with the least aggregate deferral. Thus, the partnership's will not be permitted to change its taxable year. However, this de minimis rule will not apply to the first taxable period beginning after December 31, 1986.

(b) Business purpose. A partnership may have a taxable year other than the year described in paragraph (a) of this section if it establishes, to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, a business purpose for such taxable year in accordance with and under the procedures established in §1.442-1(b)(1). For purposes of this paragraph (b), any deferral of income to partners shall not be treated as a business purpose.

(c) Procedural requirements and effective date—(1) In general. The change in accounting period required by paragraph (a) of this section shall be treated as initiated by the partnership and made with the consent of the Commissioner. To effect the change, a partnership must show that the requirements of this section are satisfied in a statement setting forth the computations required to establish the taxable year that results in the least aggregate deferral of income to the partners under paragraph (a) of this section. The partnership must attach the statement to the income tax return for the short period involved in the change and must indicate the following at the top of page 1 of the return: "FILED UNDER §1.706-1T."

(2) Effective date—(i) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section, the rules of this section are effective for partnership taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

(ii) Special rule for first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986. A partnership otherwise required to change its accounting period for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986 to a year resulting in the least aggregate deferral of income to its partners under paragraph (a) of this section, may, at its option, delay the application of the rules of that paragraph until its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1987. In such a case, the partnership must conform its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986 to the calendar year and must apply the rules of paragraph (a) of this section to its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1987. See §1.702-3T(a)(1) regarding the availability of a 4-year spread provision with respect to a partnership required to change its taxable year for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986.

(iii) Special eligibility for 4-year spread; years beginning after December 31, 1987. Notwithstanding the provisions of §1.702-3T(a)(1) limiting the availability of the 4-year spread provisions to a partnership's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, if—

(A) A partnership is required under section 706(b)(1)(B)(iii) and paragraph (a) of this section to change to a taxable year that results in the least aggregate deferral of income to the partners for a partnership's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1987,

(B) The partnership did exercise its option, as provided in paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this section, to delay the application of the rules of paragraph (a) of this section until the partnership's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1987, and

(C) The partnership would have been required to change its accounting period under section 706(b)(1)(B)(iii) and paragraph (a) of this section for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1986, if paragraph (a) of this section had been applicable to such taxable year, the partners in the partnership will be eligible to utilize the 4-year spread provision provided in §1.702-3T (subject to the other requirements of that section) with respect to the partnership's change in accounting period required under section 706(b)(1)(B)(iii) and paragraph (a) of this section for the partnership's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1987.

(d) Examples. The principles of this section may be illustrated by the following examples:

Example (1). Partnership P is on a fiscal year ending June 30. Partner A reports income on the fiscal year ending June 30 and Partner B reports income on the fiscal year ending July 31. A and B each have a 50 percent interest in partnership profits. For its taxable year beginning July 1, 1987, the partnership will be required to retain its taxable year since the fiscal year ending June 30 results in the least aggregate deferral of income to the partners. This determination is made as follows:

Test 6/30:	Year End	Interest in Partnership Profits	Months of Deferral for 6/30 Year End	Interest x Deferral
Partner A	6/30	.5	0	0
Partner B	7/31	.5	1	.5
Aggregate deferral				.5

Test 7/31:	Year End	Interest in Partnership Profits	Months of Deferral for 7/31 Year End	Interest x Deferral
Partner A	6/30	.5	11	5.5
Partner B	7/31	.5	0	0
Aggregate deferral				5.5

Example (2). The facts are the same as in example (1) except that A reports income on the calendar year and B reports on the fiscal year ending November 30. For the partnership's taxable year beginning July 1, 1987, the partnership is required to change its taxable year to a fiscal year ending November 30 because such year results in the least aggregate deferral of income to the partners. This determination is made as follows:

Test 12/31:	Year End	Interest in Partnership Profits	Months of Deferral for 12/31 Year End	Interest x Deferral
Partner A	12/31	.5	0	0
Partner B	11/30	.5	11	5.5
Aggregate deferral				5.5

Test 11/30:	Year End	Interest in Partnership Profits	Months of Deferral for 11/30 Year End	Interest x Deferral
Partner A	12/31	.5	1	.5
Partner B	11/30	.5	0	0
Aggregate deferral				.5

Example (3). The facts are the same as in example (2) except B reports income on the fiscal year ending June 30. For the partnership's taxable year beginning July 1, 1987, each partner's taxable year will result in identical aggregate deferral of income. If the partnership's current taxable year was neither a fiscal year ending June 30 nor the calendar year, the partnership would select either the fiscal year ending June 30 or the calendar year as its taxable year. However, since the partnership's current taxable year ends June 30, it must retain its current taxable year.

Test 12/31:	Year End	Interest in Partnership Profits	Months of Deferral for 12/31 Year End	Interest x Deferral
Partner A	12/31	.5	0	0
Partner B	6/30	.5	6	3.0
Aggregate deferral				3.0

Test 6/30:	Year End	Interest in Partnership Profits	Months of Deferral for 6/30 Year End	Interest x Deferral
Partner A	12/31	.5	6	3.0
Partner B	6/30	.5	0	0
Aggregate deferral				3.0

Example (4). The facts are the same as in example (1) except that on December 31, 1987, partner A sells a 4 percent interest in the partnership to Partner C, who reports income on the fiscal year ending June 30, and a 40 percent interest in the partnership to Partner D, who also reports income on the fiscal year ending unaffected by the sale. However, for the taxable year beginning July 1, 1988, the partnership must determine the taxable year resulting in the least aggregate deferral as of July 1, 1988. In this case, the partnership will be required to retain its taxable year since the fiscal year ending June 30 continues to be the taxable year that results in the least aggregate deferral of income to the partners.

Example (5). The facts are the same as in example (4) except that Partner D reports income on the fiscal year ending April 30. As in example (4), the taxable year during which the sale took place is unaffected by the shifts in interests. However, for its taxable year beginning July 1, 1988, the partnership will be required to change its taxable year to the fiscal year ending April 30. This determination is made as follows:

Test 7/31:	Year End	Interest in Partnership Profits	Months of Deferral for 7/31 Year End	Interest x Deferral
Partner A	6/30	.06	11	.66
Partner B	7/31	.5	0	0
Partner C	6/30	.04	11	.44
Partner D	4/30	.4	9	3.60
Aggregate deferral				4.70

Test 6/30:	Year End	Interest in Partnership Profits	Months of Deferral for 6/30 Year End	Interest x Deferral
Partner A	6/30	.06	0	0
Partner B	7/31	.5	1	.5
Partner C	6/30	.04	0	0
Partner D	4/30	.4	10	4.0
Aggregate deferral				4.5

Test 4/30:	Year End	Interest in Partnership Profits	Months of Deferral for 4/30 Year End	Interest x Deferral
Partner A	6/30	.06	2	.12
Partner B	7/31	.5	3	1.50
Partner C	6/30	.04	2	.08
Partner D	4/30	.4	0	0
Aggregate deferral				1.70

§1.706-1T(a)(4) Test:

Current taxable year (June 30)	4.5
Less: Taxable year producing the least aggregate deferral (April 30)	1.7
Additional aggregate deferral (greater than .5)	2.8

Example (6). Partnership P has two partners, A who reports income on the fiscal year ending March 31, and B who reports income on the fiscal year ending July 31. A and B share profits equally. P has determined its taxable year under §1.706-1T(a)(2) to be the fiscal year ending March 31 as follows:

Test 3/31:	Year End	Interest in Partnership Profits	Deferral for 3/31 Year End	Interest x Deferral
Partner A	3/31	.5	0	0
Partner B	7/31	.5	4	2
Aggregate deferral				2

Test 7/31:	Year End	Interest in Partnership Profits	Deferral for 7/31 Year End	Interest x Deferral
Partner A	3/31	.5	8	4
Partner B	7/31	.5	0	0
Aggregate deferral				4

In May 1988, Partner A sells a 45 percent interest in the partnership to C, who reports income on the fiscal year ending April 30. For the taxable period beginning April 1, 1989, the fiscal year ending April 30 is the taxable year that produces the least aggregate deferral of income to the partners. However, under paragraph (a)(4) of this section the partnership is required to retain its fiscal year ending March 31. This determination is made as follows:

Test 3/31:	Year End	Interest in Partnership Profits	Deferral for 3/31 Year End	Interest x Deferral
Partner A	3/31	.05	0	0
Partner B	7/31	.5	4	2.0
Partner C	4/30	.45	1	.45
Aggregate deferral				2.45

Test 7/31:	Year End	Interest in Partnership Profits	Deferral for 7/31 Year End	Interest x Deferral
Partner A	3/31	.05	8	.40
Partner B	7/31	.5	0	0
Partner C	4/30	.45	9	4.05
Aggregate deferral				4.45

Test 4/30:	Year End	Interest in Partnership Profits	Deferral for 4/30 Year End	Interest x Deferral
Partner A	3/31	.05	11	.55
Partner B	7/31	.5	3	1.50
Partner C	4/30	.45	0	0
Aggregate deferral				2.05

§1.706-1T(a)(4)

Test:

Current taxable year (3/31)	2.45
Less: Taxable year producing the least aggregate deferral (4/30)	2.05
Additional aggregate deferral (less than .5)	.40

Section 708.—Continuation of Partnership

26 CFR 1.708-1: Continuation of partnership.

If a partnership terminates under section 708(b)(1)(B) of the Code and has no section 754 election in effect, it may make a section 754 election on its final return with respect to the transfer which caused the termination. See Rev. Rul. 88-42, page 265.

Section 709.—Treatment of Organization and Syndication Fees

26 CFR 1.709-2: Definitions.
(Also Sections 162, 212; 1.162-1, 1.212-1.)

Partnerships; treatment of the fee paid for a tax opinion. The fee paid by a syndicated limited partnership for the tax opinion used in the partnership's prospectus is a syndication expense chargeable by the partnership to a capital account and can not be amortized.

Rev. Rul. 88-4

ISSUE

Is the fee paid by a syndicated limited partnership for the tax opinion used in the partnership's prospectus a syndication expense under section 709 of the Internal Revenue Code?

FACTS

LP is a publicly syndicated limited partnership. LP engaged the services of A, a tax attorney, to prepare the tax opinion used in connection with the preparation of the tax section of the prospectus that was used to sell interests in LP. The fee paid to A covered the expense of researching, analyzing, developing, and drafting the opinion.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 162(a) of the Code provides that there shall be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business.

Section 212(3) of the Code provides that, in the case of an individual, there shall be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in connection with the determination, collection, or refund of any tax.

Section 709(a) of the Code provides that, except as provided in section 709(b), no deduction shall be allowed under chapter 1 of subtitle A of the Code to a partnership or to any partner for any amounts paid or incurred to organize a partnership or to promote the sale of (or to sell) an interest in such partnership.

Section 709(b) of the Code provides that amounts paid or incurred to organize a partnership may be allowed as a deduction ratably over a period of not less than 60 months beginning with the month in which the partnership begins business.

Section 1.709-2(a) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that organization expenses are expenses which: (1) are incident to the creation of the partnership, (2) are chargeable to capital account, and (3) are of a character which, if expended incident to the creation of a partnership having an ascertainable life, would (but for section 709(a) of the Code) be amortized over such life.

Section 1.709-2(b) of the regulations provides that syndication expenses are expenses connected with the issuing and marketing of interests in the partnership. Included in the category of syndication expenses are (1) legal fees for securities advice and for advice pertaining to the adequacy of tax disclosures in the prospectus or placement memorandum for securities law purposes and (2) accounting fees for the preparation of representations to be included in the offering materials. Syndication expenses are not subject to the election under section 709(b) of the Code and must be capitalized.

For most syndicated partnerships, federal or state securities rules require that the prospectus or private placement memorandum contain a tax opinion or tax section setting forth the tax consequences to the investors. Moreover, the presence of a tax opinion in an offering of partnership interests is viewed as an important promotional feature which is useful in marketing the interests to investors.

In this case, the expense of preparing the tax opinion (including the expense of legal research and analysis performed with respect to the opinion, as well as the expense of developing and drafting the opinion) was incurred to comply with securities laws and to promote the marketing of partnership interests. Thus, the expense of preparing the tax opinion is a syndication expense under section 709 of the Code. See Surloff v. Commissioner, 81 T.C. 210, 245 (1983).

Section 709 of the Code specifically prohibits deductions under chapter 1 for any expense of organizing or syndicating a partnership. Therefore, if an expense falls within the scope of section 709, no deduction is allowable unless the expense is an organization expense that can be amortized as provided in section 709(b). Since the expense of the tax opinion is the type of expense described in section 709, it may not be deducted under section 162(a) or section 212(3). In addition, since the expense of the tax opinion is a syndication expense rather than an organization expense, it may not be amortized under section 709(b). See

Rev. Rul. 85-32, 1985-1 C.B. 186, which holds that syndication fees may not be amortized; See also section 1.709-2(b) of the regulations.

HOLDING

The fee paid by a syndicated limited partnership for the tax opinion used in connection with the preparation of the partnership prospectus is a syndication expense that may not be amortized under section 709(b) of the Code or deducted under section 162(a) or section 212(3). The fee must be capitalized by the partnership.

Part II.—Contributions, Distributions, and Transfers
Subpart D.—Provisions Common to Other Subparts

Section 754.—Manner of Electing Optional Adjustment to Basis of Partnership Property

26 CFR 1.754-1: Time and manner of making election to adjust basis of partnership property. (Also Section 708; 1.708-1.)

Partnerships; basis; section 754 election. A partnership that terminates under section 708(b)(1)(B) of the Code and that does not have a section 754 election in effect, may make a section 754 election on its final return which will be effective for the transfer that caused the termination.

Rev. Rul. 88-42

ISSUE

If a partnership makes an election on its final return to adjust the basis of partnership property pursuant to section 754 of the Internal Revenue Code, will that election be effective for the incoming partner whose purchase of a 50-percent interest in the partnership causes the partnership to terminate under section 708(b)(1)(B), so that the bases of partnership assets are adjusted prior to their deemed distribution?

FACTS

In 1983, A and B formed the AB partnership and each received a 50-percent interest in AB. AB filed returns on a calendar year basis. On June 30, 1986, A sold A's 50-percent interest in AB to C. AB had not made a section 754 election as of the time of the sale. However, AB made the section 754 election in a written statement included with its timely filed partnership return for the short taxable year of January 1, 1986, to June 30, 1986.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 708(b)(1)(B) of the Code provides that a partnership shall be considered as terminated if within a 12-month period there is a sale or exchange of 50-percent or more of the total interest in partnership capital and profits.

Section 1.708-1(b)(1)(iii)(b) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that the termination of a partnership pursuant to section 708(b)(1)(B) of the Code closes the terminating partnership's taxable year on the date of the sale or exchange of a partnership interest which transfers an interest of 50-percent or more in both partnership capital and profits. See section 706(c)(1) and section 1.706-1(c) of the regulations.

Section 1.708-1(b)(1)(iv) of the regulations provides that if a partnership is terminated by a sale or exchange of an interest, the partnership is deemed to distribute its properties to the purchaser and the other remaining partners in proportion to their respective interests in the partnership properties. Immediately thereafter, the purchaser and the other remaining partners are deemed to contribute the properties to a new partnership.

Section 743(a) of the Code provides that the basis of partnership property shall not be adjusted as the result of a transfer of an interest in a partnership by sale or exchange or on the death of a partner unless the election provided by section 754 (relating to optional adjustment of basis of partnership property) is in effect with respect to such partnership.

Section 754 of the Code provides the manner in which a partnership shall file an election to adjust the basis of partnership property under section 743.

Section 1.754-1(a) of the regulations provides that an election made under section 754 of the Code applies to all property distributions and transfers of partnership interests taking place in the partnership taxable year for which the election is made and in all subsequent years unless revoked pursuant to section 1.754-1(c).

Section 1.754-1(b)(1) of the regulations provides that the election is made in a written statement filed with the partnership return for the taxable year during which the distribution or transfer occurs. For the election to be valid, the return must be timely filed in accordance with the regulations.

Section 1.754-1(b)(2) of the regulations sets forth an example of the application of section 1.754-1(b). In that example, an interest is sold in a partnership that had not previously made a section 754 election. The example holds that a section 754 election may be made in a written statement filed with the partnership return for the year in which that sale is made and that it will be effective for all distributions of property to a partner and to all transfers of interests in the partnership occurring in the year of sale and subsequent years,, unless revoked pursuant to section 1.754-1(c).

Rev. Rul. 86-73, 1986-1 C.B. 282, considers a sale of a 50-percent interest in a partnership that has a section 754 election in effect. The ruling concludes that the section 754 election in effect for the taxable year in which the sale occurs applies with respect to the incoming partner because that partner is considered to be a partner of the terminating partnership for the instant prior to its termination. Therefore, the bases of the partnership's assets must be adjusted prior to the termination and deemed distribution to the incoming partner.

In the present case, the sale of the 50-percent interest on June 30, 1986, to C terminates AB pursuant to section 708(b)(1)(B) of the Code, causing a short taxable year of January 1, 1986, to June 30, 1986. See section 1.708-1(b)(1)(iii)(b) of the regulations. The terminating partnership made a section 754 election on its final return. That election was effective for all property distributions and transfers of partnership interests made in the short year ending June 30, 1986. Applying the principles of Rev. Rul. 86-73, C is considered a partner of AB immediately prior to AB's termination and, thus, during AB's short year ended June 30, 1986 Therefore, the bases of the partnership assets will be correspondingly adjusted prior to the deemed distribution to C. If the new partnership, BC, wants to make a section 754 election, it will have to file a new election.

HOLDING

If a partnership makes an election on its final return to adjust the basis of partnership property pursuant to section 754 of the Code, that election is effective for the incoming partner whose purchase of a 50-percent interest in the partnership causes the partnership to terminate under section 708(b)(1)(B). The bases of partnership assets are adjusted pursuant to sections 743(b) and 755 prior to their deemed distribution to the incoming partner.

Subchapter L.—Insurance Companies
Part I.—Life Insurance Companies
Subpart C.—Life Insurance Deductions

Section 807.—Rules For Certain Reserves

26 CFR 1.807-1T: Mortality and morbidity tables (temporary).
(Also Section 846.)

Life insurance companies; interest rate. For purposes of section 807 of the Code, the applicable federal interest rate determined under section 846(c) for 1988 is announced that is used in computing the amount of a life insurance company's federally prescribed life insurance reserves.

Rev. Rul. 88-16

Section 10241 of the Revenue Act of 1987, 1987-3 C.B., amended section 807(d)(2)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code (relating to method of computing reserves for purposes of determining the income or loss of a life insurance company). Prior to the amendment, the interest rate to be applied in computing the amount of a life insurance company's federally prescribed life insurance reserves for any contract was the "prevailing state assumed interest rate" (generally, the highest assumed interest rate permitted to be used in at least 26 States in computing life insurance reserves for insurance or annuity contracts of that type as of the beginning of the calendar year in which the contract is issued). As amended, section 807(d)(2)(B) provides that the interest rate used to compute a life insurance company's life insurance reserves is the greater of the applicable federal interest rate or the prevailing state assumed interest rate. The amendment to section 807 is effective for contracts issued in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987.

Section 807(d)(4) of the Code, as amended, defines the term "applicable federal interest rate" to mean the annual rate determined by the Secretary under section 846(c)(2) for the calendar year in which the contract was issued. Section 846(c)(2) provides that the annual rate determined by the Secretary for any calendar year shall be a rate equal to the average of the applicable federal mid-term rates (as defined in section 1274(d) but based on annual compounding) effective as of the beginning of each of the calendar months in the test period. The test period is the most recent 60-calendar-month period ending before the beginning of the calendar year for which the determination is made, except that there shall be excluded from the test period any month beginning before August 1, 1986.

The applicable interest rate for 1988 determined under section 846(c) of the Code is 7.77 percent. Therefore, for purposes of section 807, the applicable federal interest rate for 1988 is 7.77 percent.

In the future, the applicable federal interest rate for purposes of sections 846(c) and 807 of the Code will be published yearly in the revenue ruling containing the applicable federal rates for December. For example, the applicable federal interest rate for 1989 for purposes of sections 846 and 807 will be published in the revenue ruling containing the applicable federal rates for December 1988.

Title 26.—INTERNAL REVENUE—CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Treatment of Salvage and Reinsurance Under Section 832(b)

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document contains temporary regulations relating to the treatment of salvage and reinsurance in determining the paid and unpaid losses of property and casualty insurance companies. The text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text of the proposed regulations for the notice of proposed rulemaking  [page 930, this Bulletin]. The temporary regulations are issued because the current treatment of salvage and reinsurance does not result in an accurate reflection of income for federal tax purposes. The regulations affect insurance companies taxable under section 831(a). The Service will issue guidance making it clear that the principles of these regulations also apply to the treatment of salvage and reinsurance in determining a life insurance company's paid and unpaid losses on contracts other than life insurance contracts. See sections 811(a), 807(c), and 816(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 and the regulations thereunder.

DATES: The regulations are effective as of January 1, 1988, and apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document amends the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) to provide rules under section 832(b)(5) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

EXPLANATIONS OF PROVISIONS

Under section 832(b) the gross income of a property and casualty insurance company includes its underwriting income. Underwriting income means premiums earned on insurance contracts during the taxable year less losses incurred and expenses incurred. Section 832(b)(5) provides that losses incurred are generally computed by deducting any increase in salvage and reinsurance recoverable from paid losses, and to that result adding any increase in unpaid losses. (The Tax Reform Act of 1986 [1986-3 C.B. (Vol.1) 1] provides for the discounting of unpaid losses to reflect the time value of money. The discounting of unpaid losses is expected to be the subject of another regulation project. That project is expected to address the proper treatment, under section 846(g)(2), of salvage and reinsurance attributable to unpaid losses, where such amounts are not taken into account in determining the unpaid losses shown in the annual statement filed by the taxpayer, and hence are not reflected in the taxpayer's "undiscounted unpaid losses," as defined in section 846(b)(1)).

Although the statute clearly requires that paid losses be adjusted to take into account salvage recoverable (i.e., salvage not reduced to cash or cash equivalents), this adjustment generally has not been made. In 1947, the Internal Revenue Service promulgated regulations under section 832 that provided for the exclusion from salvage recoverable of an item if any state in which the taxpayer transacted business prohibited the taxpayer from reporting such an item for annual statement purposes. Several states have rules prohibiting the reporting of any salvage recoverable. These rules reflect the generally conservative nature of state reporting measures, which are designed primarily to ensure the solvency of insurance companies. After the 1947 regulations were issued, many insurance companies began transacting business in states that prohibited the reporting of salvage recoverable. There remained, however, certain regional companies which did not transact business in such states. These companies were required to take salvage recoverable into account. Despite this disparity in treatment, the exclusion of salvage recoverable was upheld in Continental Insurance Co. v. United States, 474 F.2d 661 (Ct. Cl. 1973).

The exclusion of salvage recoverable, while consistent with state regulatory ends, does not result in an accurate reflection of income for federal tax purposes. Those purposes are best served by a close matching of income and expenses. The temporary regulations, therefore, amend §1.832-4(c) to require that paid losses be adjusted by all salvage recoverable attributable to such paid losses, regardless of how the salvage recoverable is reported for annual statement purposes.

Section 1.832-4(b) of the regulations provides that the taxpayer must establish "that the part of the deduction for 'losses incurred' which represents unpaid losses at the close of the taxable year comprises only actual unpaid losses stated in amounts which, based upon the facts in each case and the company's experience with similar cases, can be said to represent a fair and reasonable estimate of the amount the company will be required to pay." The temporary regulations amend §1.832-4(b) of the regulations to clarify that, in making a "fair and reasonable estimate of the amount the company will be required to pay," estimated recoveries on account of salvage and reinsurance attributable to unpaid losses must be taken into account.

Thus, the temporary regulations provide that salvage and reinsurance recoverable attributable to paid losses must be taken into account under section 832(b)(5)(A)(i) as an adjustment to paid losses. Estimated recoveries on account of salvage and reinsurance attributable to unpaid losses must be taken into account in calculating the reserve for unpaid losses under section 832(b)(5)(A)(ii).

In addition, the temporary regulations address the adjustments that must be made if the temporary regulations require an insurance company to change its method of accounting for salvage and reinsurance. The temporary regulations provide that the fresh start of section 1023(e) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 is not applicable to such a change in accounting method.

Finally, the temporary regulations make explicit that the term "salvage" includes subrogation claims. The temporary regulations do not thereby change the law concerning the meaning of salvage (as illustrated by Continental Insurance Co. v. United States, 474 F.2d 661 (Ct. Cl. 1973)), and no inference should be drawn with respect to any section of the Internal Revenue Code or the regulations thereunder that any change is intended.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has determined that the temporary rule is not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a regulatory impact analysis therefore is not required. A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553 for temporary regulations. Accordingly, these temporary regulations do not constitute regulations subject to the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6).

Amendments to the regulations

For the reasons set out in the preamble, Title 26, Chapter 1, Subchapter A, Part 1 of the Code of Federal Regulations is amended as set forth below:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS
(26 CFR Part 1)

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 continues to read as follows:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805.

Par. 2. Section 1.832-4 is redesignated as §1.832-4T and amended by revising the caption, adding a new sentence at the end of paragraph (a)(5), revising paragraphs (b) and (c), and adding paragraphs (d) and (e) to read as follows:

§1.832-4T Gross income (temporary).

• • • • •

(5)  See paragraph (b) of this section for rules relating to the treatment of salvage and reinsurance in determining unpaid losses.

(b) Every insurance company to which this section applies must be prepared to establish to the satisfaction of the district director that the part of the deduction for "losses incurred" which represents unpaid losses at the close of the taxable year comprises only actual unpaid losses stated in amounts which, based upon the facts in each case and the company's experience with similar cases, represent a fair and reasonable estimate of the amount the company will be required to pay. Estimated recoveries on account of salvage and reinsurance attributable to unpaid losses must be taken into account in the computation of unpaid losses. The amounts of such expected recoveries should be estimated based upon the facts in each case and the company's experience with similar cases. Amounts included in, or added to, the estimates of unpaid losses which, in the opinion of the district director, are in excess of the actual liability determined as provided in the preceding sentences will be disallowed as a deduction. The district director may require any such insurance company to submit such detailed information with respect to its actual experience as is deemed necessary to establish the reasonableness of the deduction for "losses incurred."

(c) That part of the deduction for "losses incurred" which representes an adjustment to losses paid for salvage and reinsurance recoverable shall include all salvage in course of liquidation, and all reinsurance in process of collection not otherwise taken into account as a reduction of losses paid, outstanding at the end of the taxable year. Salvage in course of liquidation includes all property (other than cash or cash equivalents), real or personal, tangible or intangible. Such salvage in course of liquidation shall be taken into account to the extent of the value thereof at the end of the taxable year as determined from a fair and reasonable estimate based upon either the facts in each case or the company's experience with similar cases. Cash or cash equivalents received during the taxable year with respect to items of salvage or reinsurance shall reduce losses paid during such taxable year. For purposes of this section the term "salvage" includes subrogation claims.

(d)(1) The treatment of salvage and reinsurance is a method of accounting. Every insurance company to which this section applies that did not treat salvage and reinsurance as provided in this section for the last taxable year beginning before January 1, 1988, must change its method of accounting with respect to salvage and reinsurance in the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1987. The change in method of accounting will result in a section 481(a) adjustment. The fresh start provision of section 1023(e) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 does not apply to the change in method of accounting required by this paragraph (d)(1).

(2) In the case of any insurance company required by paragraph (d)(1) of this section to change its method of accounting for any taxable year, such change shall be treated as initiated by the taxpayer and made with the consent of the Commissioner.

(3) Any insurance company required to change its method of accounting under paragraph (d)(1) of this section shall take the required adjustment into account as provided in applicable administrative procedures.

(e) This section is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1987. In computing unpaid losses for taxable years beginning before January 1, 1988, an insurance company to which this section applies is not required to take into account estimated recoveries on account of salvage attributable to unpaid losses. In addition, in computing paid losses for such taxable years, an insurance company to which this section applies is not required to take into account salvage recoverable if during such taxable years the inclusion of such salvage was prohibited by the laws of a state in which the company transacted business.

There is a need for immediate guidance with respect to the provisions contained in this Treasury decision. For this reason it is impracticable to issue this Treasury decision with notice and public procedure under section (b) of section 553 of Title 5 of the United States Code or subject to the effective date limitation of subsection (d) of that section.

Lawrence B. Gibbs,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Approved December 22, 1987.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Part III.—Provisions of General Application

Section 846.—Discounted Unpaid Losses Defined

The applicable interest rate determined under section 846(c) of the Code for 1988 is announced that is used in computing under section 807 the amount of a life insurance company's federally prescribed life insurance reserves. See Rev. Rul. 88-16, page 266.

Subchapter M.—Regulated Investment Companies and Real Estate Investment Trusts
Part I.—Regulated Investment Companies

Section 851.—Definition of Regulated Investment Company

New section 851(q), which provides that each fund of a series investment company is a separate corporation, renders Rev. Rul. 56-246 obsolete. See Rev. Rul. 88-14, page 405.

Section 852.—Taxation of Regulated Investment Companies and Their Shareholders

26 CFR 1.852-1: Taxation of regulated investment companies.

If a regulated investment company that is also a personal holding company retains income, and thus has investment company taxable income and undistributed personal holding company income, is the company liable for tax under both section 541 and 852(b)(1) of the Code? See Rev. Rul. 88-41, page 253.

Subchapter N.—Tax Based on Income from Sources Within or Without the United States
Part I.—Determination of Sources of Income

Section 864.—Definitions and Special Rules

26 CFR 1.864-2: Trade or business within the United States.

Trade or business within the U.S.; determination. The determination whether a taxpayer is engaged in a trade or business within the U.S. is highly factual and such a determination is not ordinarily made in an advance ruling. Rev. Rul. 73-227 revoked.

Rev. Rul. 88-3

Rev. Rul. 73-227, 1973-1 C.B. 338, examines the activities of X, the foreign financing subsidiary of a United States parent, and holds that the United States source interest income that X earns is effectively connected with a United States trade or business under section 864(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

Section 864(b) of the Code and the regulations promulgated thereunder provide rules for determining whether a foreign taxpayer is engaged in a trade or business within the United States. (These rules may differ in some respects from those used in determining whether a taxpayer is engaged in a trade or business under other sections of the Code.) The determination whether X is engaged in a trade or business within the United States must therefore be made by applying these rules to the facts described in the ruling. Rev. Rul. 73–227, however, does not do so. The ruling simply concludes without discussion of the applicable statute and regulations that X is engaged in a trade or business within the United States. Because the ruling does not discuss and apply the proper legal standard, its conclusion may be unsound.

In addition, the determination whether a taxpayer is engaged in a trade or business within the United States is highly factual. Such a determination is not ordinarily made in an advance ruling. See sections 2.01 and 4.01(2) of Rev. Proc. 87–6, 1987–1 C.B. 541.

Accordingly, Rev. Rul. 73–227 is revoked. Determinations under section 864 of the Code must be made by applying the regulations promulgated thereunder to the facts and circumstances of each case.

ISSUE

Is income received by local governmental authorities of England, Wales, and Scotland from certain United States investments allocable to their superannuation funds exempt from Federal income taxation under section 892 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, and therefore not subject to withholding under sections 1441 ot 1442 of the Code?

FACTS

The United Kingdom Superannuation Act of 1972 permits local governmental authorities in England, Wales, and Scotland to establish investment reserves in the form of superannuation funds ("Funds") to provide retirement and other benefits to government employees and certain other employees within their jurisdiction. In England and Wales, such Funds have been established by three types of local governmental authorities:

1. the non-metropolitan county councils established by the Local Government Act 1972;
2. the residuary bodies and district councils that, under sections 60 and 66 of the Local Government Act 1985, assumed responsibility for Funds previously established by the former metropolitan county councils and the Greater London Council; and
3. the inner and outer London Borough Councils established by the Local Government Act 1963.

In Scotland, Funds have been established by the regional councils, the Orkney Islands Council, and the Shetland Islands Council.

The county councils, district councils, residuary bodies, inner and outer borough councils, regional councils, and island councils ("Councils") were established by an act of Parliament. They provide governmental services to inhabitants within their jurisdiction. Upon dissolution, no assets of the Councils vest in any private person. Rather, such assets vest in a successor body designated by Parliament, or in Parliament itself. None of the Councils engages in commercial activities within or outside the United States.

Each Council may provide pension benefits from its Fund or otherwise to its own employees, employees of other United Kingdom governmental bodies, employees of certain educational institutions in the local jurisdictions, and eligible employees of certain bodies that are admitted into the Fund ("admitted bodies"). Admitted bodies are institutions that perform governmental or social services, such as associations for the blind, schools for the deaf, social centers for the elderly, port and harbor commissions, and library systems.

A Council establishes a Fund simply by allocating to a separate account specific assets that thereafter are held for Fund purposes. Each Council is responsible for the administration, collection, and investment of fund assets and is directly responsible to pensioners for payment of their pensions. Each Council is required to maintain a separate record of all receipts, payments, and earnings allocable to its Fund. The money and assets allocated to a Fund are the property of the Council and may be used as security for the Council's external borrowings. The right to collect contributions from employers and employees, the duty to pay pension benefits, and the obligation to invest or lend surplus moneys allocable to the Fund are rights, duties, and obligations enforceable by and against the Council and not the Fund.

Each Council invests a portion of the assets allocable to its Fund in stocks and securities of United States corporations and receives dividend and interest income with respect to such investments. None of these investments represents an investment in a controlled commercial entity as defined by section 892(a)(1)(B) of the Code, and no amounts are received as rents, royalties, or similar payments. These investments in United States stocks and securities are the sole activities of the Councils in the United States.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 892(a)(1) of the Code excludes from gross income and exempts from income taxation the income of foreign governments received from investments in the United States in stocks, bonds, or other domestic securities owned by such foreign governments; income received from financial instruments held in the execution of governmental financial or monetary policy; and interest on deposits in banks in the United States of moneys belonging to such foreign governments. Section 892(a)(2)(A) provides that this exclusion does not apply to income derived from the conduct of any commercial activity, whether within or outside the United States, or to income received from or by a controlled commercial entity. Sections 1441 and 1442 provide for withholding of tax on payments made to nonresident aliens and foreign corporations that are subject to tax under sections 871(a) and 881(a). Income exempt under section 892 is not subject to withholding under sections 1441 and 1442.

For purposes of section 892 of the Code, a foreign government consists only of integral parts or controlled entities of a foreign sovereign. Section 1.892-1(b)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that an integral part of a foreign sovereign is any person, body of persons, organization, agency, bureau, fund, instrumentality, or other body, however designated, that constitutes a governing authority of a foreign country. Section 1.892-1(b)(5) of the regulations provides that the rules that apply to a foreign sovereign apply to political subdivisions of a foreign country. Under these rules, the Councils are a governing authority of a foreign country for purposes of section 892.

Section 1.892-1(b)(2) of the regulations requires that the net earnings of the governing authority must be credited to its own account or to other accounts of the foreign sovereign, with no portion inuring to the benefit of any private person. The earnings of the Funds are used to provide benefits to both governmental and non-governmental employees. Earnings used to provide retirement benefits to the governmental employees are not considered to inure to the benefit of private persons; see Rev. Rul. 72-183, 1972-1 C.B. 213, which provides that income earned by a retirement fund for employees of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development is exempt from tax under section 892 of the Code.

Earnings used to provide retirement benefits to the non-governmental employees—persons employed by certain local educational institutions and by the admitted bodies—likewise do not inure to the benefit of private persons. Although the employing entities are not themselves integral parts of the foreign government, their activities are not conducted with a view towards the production of income and are therefore not commercial in nature. Cf. section 1.892-1(c)(1) of the regulations. Therefore, no part of any Fund earnings inures to the benefit of private persons, and income described in section 892(a) of the Code used by the Councils to provide retirement benefits to governmental employees, employees of certain educational institutions, and employees of admitted bodies is exempt under section 892.

The treatment of the Funds differs from that of an independent pension trust for purposes of section 892 of the Code. A pension trust is a separate juridical entity and must qualify as a controlled entity in order for its income to be potentially exempt under section 892. A pension trust will qualify as a controlled entity only if it is established exclusively for employees or former employees of a foreign government. See Rev. Rul. 84-28, 1984-1 C.B. 177.

The Funds established by the Councils provide pension benefits to some non-governmental employees. However, Funds are simply assets of the Councils and are not separate pension trusts. Therefore, the restrictions imposed on pension trusts do not apply.

HOLDING

Income received from investments allocable to the Funds maintained by the Councils is considered to be received by a foreign government within the meaning of section 892 of the Code. Therefore, income described in section 892(a) that is received by the Councils from investments allocable to the Funds is exempt from Federal income taxation under section 892 and is not subject to withholding under sections 1441 or 1442.

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953; PART 602—OMB CONTROL NUMBERS UNDER THE PAPERWORK REDUCTION ACT

Corporate Distributions and Certain Nonrecognition Exchange and Other Transfers Under Section 897(c), (d), (e), (g), (i) and (j) and Section 367(e)(2) and Withholding Under Section 1445(e)(5) and (6).

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides temporary Income Tax Regulations relating to certain dispositions of U.S. real property interests. The regulations provide rules for the exchange, distribution, or transfer of U.S. real property interests without recognition of gain under the Foreign Investment in Real Property Tax Act of 1980. The regulations also treat interests in certain partnerships as entirely U.S. real property interests for purposes of withholding on the proceeds from dispositions of such interests. In addition, the regulations provide rules with respect to the treatment of interests in publicly traded corporations. The text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document serves as the text of the proposed regulations  [INTL-491-87, page 921, this Bulletin].

DATES: Except as otherwise specifically provided, §§1.897-4AT, 1.897-5T, and 1.897-6T apply to exchanges, distributions, or transfers of U.S. real property interests occurring after June 18, 1980, and are effective as of that date. Changes and additions to portions of the existing regulations made by §§1.897-7T, 1.897-8T, 1.897-9T except paragraph (e), 1.1445-10T, and 1.1445-11T are generally effective after June 6, 1988. Paragraph (e) of §1.897-9T dealing with foreign governments and international organizations is effective July 1, 1986. The special rules of §1.1445-9T for section 1034 nonrecognition are effective after August 3, 1988.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

BACKGROUND

This document contains temporary Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 897(c), (d), (e), (g), (i) and (j) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as added by section 1122 of the Foreign Investment in Real Property Tax Act of 1980 ("FIRPTA") (94 Stat. 2599, 2682, Pub. L. 96-499)[1980-2 C.B. 509] and amended by section 831 of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (95 Stat. 172, 352, Pub. L. 97-34). This document also contains limited temporary Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under the authority of section 367(e)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as added by section 631(d)(1) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 2085, 2272, Pub. L. 99-514) [1986-3 (Vol.1) C.B. 1, 189]. The regulations are issued under the authority contained in section 897(d), (e), (g), and (j), section 1125(d) of FIRPTA, section 367(e)(2), section 1445(e)(5) and (6), and section 7805(a).

Section 897(a) of the Internal Revenue Code treats gain or loss derived by nonresident alien individuals or foreign corporations from the disposition of U.S. real property interest as if such gain or loss were effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business. Sections 897(d), (e), and (g) provide rules for the application of section 897(a) to certain distributions and nonrecognition exchanges. Section 897(c) provides, inter alia, a rule excepting from treatment as U.S. real property interests certain interests in publicly traded domestic corporations. The temporary regulations under section 367(e)(2) relate to the liquidation of certain corporations holding U.S. real property interests. The regulations under section 1445(e)(6) require withholding in certain instances on the disposition of partnership interests and on the distribution of U.S. real property interests by partnerships.

DISCUSSION

Section 897(d) in general

Section 897(d)(1) provides, in general, that gain shall be recognized by a foreign corporation on its distribution, including by way of liquidation or redemption, of a United States real property interest, except to the extent otherwise provided in regulations. The gain recognized is the excess of the fair market value of such interest as of the time of the distribution over its adjusted basis.

Section 897(d)(2) provides that gain is not recognized under section 897(d)(1) if certain conditions are satisfied. The conditions are that, at the time of the receipt of the property, the distributee would be subject to income taxation on a subsequent disposition of the property, and the basis of the property is no greater than the adjusted basis of such property before the disposition increased by the amount of gain recognized by the distributing corporation.

Distributions by Domestic Corporations

Generally, the basis of property received by a foreign shareholder from a domestic corporation in a section 301 distribution is determined under section 301(b). Section 897(f) provides that, in the case of a distribution of a United States real property interest by a domestic corporation to a foreign shareholder, such shareholder's basis shall not exceed the adjusted basis of the property before the distribution in the hands of the domestic corporation increased by gain recognized by the domestic corporation on the distribution that is subject to U.S. taxation and increased by any U.S. tax paid by or on behalf of the foreign shareholder with respect to the distribution.

If a corporation that is a United States real property holding corporation distributes property to a foreign shareholder with respect to its stock, the foreign shareholder is treated as having disposed of a United States real property interest. Gain or loss is recognized to the extent that part or all of the distribution is treated under sections 301(c)(3)(A), 302(a), or 331(a) as made in full payment in exchange for stock.

If a United States real property holding corporation completely liquidates under section 331(a) after the repeal of the General Utilities doctrine, and all gain is recognized at the U.S. corporate level under section 336(a), there is no further shareholder level tax under section 897(a) with respect to the section 331 exchange. Under the cleansing provision of section 897(c)(1)(B), the shares in the U.S. corporation are not treated as U.S. real property interests.

If a corporation (other than certain corporations making an effective election under section 897(i)) that is a United States real property holding corporation distributes property after July 31, 1986 and after the repeal of the General Utilities doctrine under sections 332 and 334(b)(1) to an 80 percent foreign corporate shareholder with respect to its stock, the foreign corporate shareholder is not treated as having disposed of a United States real property interest in a recognition transaction. The foreign corporate shareholder's basis in the U.S. real property interest will be the same as in the hands of the domestic corporation. The consequences of the transaction under section 367(e)(2) are also clarified.

Rules are provided for foreign corporations that have elected under section 897(i) to be treated as domestic corporations for purposes of section 897. A rule is also provided for section 333 elections.

Distributions by Foreign Corporations

A foreign corporation that distributes a United States real property interest must recognize gain, but not loss, on the distribution except as otherwise provided. Gain is not recognized by a foreign corporation if, at the time of the distribution, the recipient shareholder would be subject to United States taxation in accordance with the provisions of the regulations on a subsequent disposition of the United States real property interest, and the recipient shareholder's basis in the United States real property interest is equal to or less than the basis of the property in the corporation's hand increased by the amount of gain recognized by the corporation. Regulations for determining the distributee's basis in the distributed property are provided.

The distributing foreign corporation in a liquidation distribution to its 80 percent foreign corporate shareholder after July 31, 1986, under sections 332(a), 337(a) and 367(e)(2) shall not recognize gain on the U.S. real property interests distributed.

Regulations are provided for certain section 355 distributions by foreign corporations and the distribution of domestic corporation stock by a foreign corporation in a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(C), (D), or (F). The Service invites comments concerning alternative methods of treating the distribution of domestic corporation stock by a foreign corporation in an inbound reorganization such as basis adjustments. An anti-abuse rule that treats certain stock transfers followed by a liquidation as an inbound reorganization is also provided.

A foreign corporation may not use section 337 as in effect prior to the Tax Reform Act of 1986 to sell a U.S. real property interest.

The regulations also include a provision for the section 897(l) credit in complete liquidations.

General Nonrecognition Rules

Nonrecognition of gain or loss may be obtained with respect to certain distributions or exchanges under proposed §§1.897-5T and 1.897-6T of United States real property interests if the interests are subject to United States taxation on subsequent disposition. Certain procedural requirements must also be fulfilled. If a recipient waives the otherwise applicable benefits of a United States income tax treaty, an interest otherwise qualifying shall be considered to be subject to United States taxation upon its subsequent disposition.

Section 897(e) in general

Section 897(e)(1) provides that any nonrecognition provision shall apply to a transaction only in the case of an exchange of a United States real property interest for an interest the sale of which would be subject to United States taxation.

Section 897(e)(2) authorizes the Secretary to issue necessary or appropriate regulations to prevent the avoidance of Federal income taxes. These regulations provide the extent to which nonrecognition provisions shall apply under section 897, and the extent to which transfers of property in reorganizations shall be treated as sales of property at fair market value.

Nonrecognition Exchanges

The regulation provides that a nonrecognition provision shall apply to a transfer of a United States real property interest by a foreign person only to the extent that a United States real property interest is exchanged for a United States real property interest which immediately following the exchange would be subject to United States taxation upon its disposition. An interest is subject to United States taxation upon its disposition in accordance with the general nonrecognition rules described above. A nonrecognition provision is any provision of the Code which provides that gain or loss shall not be recognized if the requirements of that provision are met. If the nonrecognition provision does not apply, then the interest transferred is subject to taxation under section 897.

If a nonrecognition provision applies to the transfer of a United States real property interest, then the basis of the property received by the transferor is determined under the generally applicable rules. The basis of the exchanged property received by the transferee is determined under the generally applicable rules. If the transferor recognizes gain on the exchange of a United States real property interest, then the transferee's basis in the property will be increased if the generally applicable rules so provide.

A transferor that receives nonqualifying property, such as a foreign real property interest, in addition to United States real property interests subject to United States tax on disposition must recognize gain or loss equal to the lesser of either (1) the sum of the cash received plus the fair market value of the nonqualifying property received, or (2) the gain or loss realized with respect to the United States real property interest transferred. Specific rules are provided for mixed exchanges where both a United States real property interest and other property (including cash) is transferred in exchange both for qualifying and nonqualifying property.

Rules are also provided for certain foreign to foreign transfers in section 361 transactions, and contributions to capital under section 897(j).

Anti-Abuse Provisions

Rules denying nonrecognition with respect to certain tax avoidance transfers are provided. These include certain transfers by foreign persons to domestic corporations, basis adjustment for certain related person transactions, and the rearrangement of ownership to gain a treaty benefit.

Partnership Interests—Section 897(g) and Section 1445(e)

An interest in a partnership in which fifty percent or more in value of the gross assets consist of U.S. real property interests and ninety percent or more of the value of the gross assets consist of U.S. real property interests and cash or cash equivalents is considered entirely a U.S. real property interest for purposes of withholding on dispositions of such interests.

Section 1034 Rollovers—Sections 897(e) and 1445

A rule is provided under section 897(e) that permits a nonresident alien individual to utilize section 1034 on the sale of a principal residence that is a U.S. real property interest when another U.S. real property interest is purchased and used as a principal residence within a two year period before or after the sale. Gain recognition is required if the principal residence purchased is not a U.S. real property interest. Special withholding rules under section 1445 are also provided with respect to the sale of a principal residence for more than $300,000.

Section 897(i) Elections—U.S. real property holding corporation status required

A rule is provided under section 897(i) that requires that a foreign corporation making an election under that provision must be a U.S. real property holding corporation.

Section 897(a)—Definition of foreign persons

The definition of foreign person in the regulations under section 897(a) is clarified to explain under which circumstances a foreign government is taxable under (or subject to) sections 897, 1445, and 6039C.

Section 897(c)(3) in general

Section 897(c)(3) excepts certain interests in a U.S. real property holding corporation from treatment as a U.S. real property interest. Dispositions by foreign persons of interests in a U.S. corporation which are not treated as U.S. real property interests are not subject to tax under section 897. Beneficial ownership of an interest of five percent or less of any class of stock of a domestic corporation which is regularly traded on an established securities market is not treated as a U.S. real property interest. In addition, the current regulations provide that any other interest in a domestic U.S. real property holding corporation is not treated as a U.S. real property interest if the fair market value of the interest is five percent or less of the fair market value of the regularly traded class of stock of the U.S. real property holding corporation with the lowest fair market value. The regulations under section 897(c)(3) are being modified in the following respects.

Interests Traded on Foreign Securities Markets

Interests in a domestic corporation traded on foreign securities markets must be registered pursuant to the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (the "1934 Act"), 15 U.S.C. 78, to be treated as "regularly traded" interests for purposes of section 897(c)(3). This rule is modified to provide an alternative reporting requirement for corporations not otherwise required to register under the 1934 Act. In lieu of registration with the SEC, such corporations may file with the Service a report disclosing the beneficial owners of interests greater than 5 percent of any class of interests in the corporation which are traded on foreign securities markets, and such other identifying information as the Service requires. In addition, a class of interest traded on foreign securities markets must satisfy certain volume requirements to be treated as regularly traded within the meaning of section 897(c)(3).

Non-Regularly Traded Interests in Publicly Traded Corporations

Beneficial ownership of an interest in a domestic U.S. real property holding corporation which is not itself regularly traded is treated as a U.S. real property interest only if the fair market value of the interest on the date it was acquired is greater than five percent of the fair market value of the regularly traded class of interests of the U.S. real property holding corporation having the lowest fair market value. This rule is modified to provide that beneficial ownership of an interest in a class of non-regularly traded convertible interests in a domestic U.S. real property holding corporation will be treated as a U.S. real property interest only if the interest is greater than 5 percent of the fair market value of the class of stock into which the interest is convertible.

Need for Temporary Regulations

These regulations, if adopted, would generally apply to all transactions occurring after June 18, 1980. However, §1.897-5T(b)(2)(iv) applies only to certain transactions occurring after July 31, 1986; §§1.897-7T, 1.897-8T, and 1.1445-10T apply only to certain transactions occurring 30 days after publication of this document in the Federal Register, and §1.1445-9T applies only to certain transfers occurring 90 days after publication of this document in the Federal Register.

The temporary regulations will clarify unsettled law in this area, and provide taxpayers with needed immediate guidance. Many taxpayers have not been able to effectuate transactions, such as corporate reorganizations, because of the lack of regulatory guidance. This effective date is also necessary to prevent avoidance of tax.

The effective date for §1.897-5(b)(2)(iv) corresponds with the effective date of the repeal of the General Utilities doctrine. The concepts underlying the repeal of the General Utilities doctrine are incorporated in the proposed regulations. The effective date of paragraph (e) of §1.897-9T corresponds with the effective date of the amendment of section 892 by the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

The extraordinary, retroactive regulatory relief from the rules of section 897(d) and (e) has been provided because these regulations are considered to be issued under unusual circumstances.

For all of these reasons, this regulation is not issued subject to the public notice requirements of 5 U.S.C. section 553(b) or to the effective date limitation of paragraph (d) of that section.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

It has been determined that these temporary regulations are not a major rule as defined in Executive Order 12291 and that a Regulatory Impact Analysis is therefore not required. It has also been determined that these regulations will not have a significant impact on a substantial number of small entities. Few small entities would be affected by these regulations. A regulatory flexibility analysis, therefore, is not required under the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6). The collection of information contained in these regulations has been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget in accordance with the requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980. These requirements have been approved by OMB.

§1.897-5T Corporate distributions (Temporary).

(a) Purpose and scope. This section provides rules concerning the recognition of gain or loss and adjustments to basis required with request to certain corporate distributions that are subject to section 897. Paragraph (b) of this section provides rules concerning such distributions by domestic corporations, including distributions under section 301, distributions in redemption of stock, and distributions in liquidation. Paragraph (c) sets forth rules concerning distributions by foreign corporations, including distributions under sections 301 and 355, distributions in redemption of stock, and distributions in liquidation. Finally, various rules generally applicable to distributions subject to this section, as well as to transfers subject to §1.897-6T, are set forth in paragraph (d). The rules contained in this section are also subject to the tax avoidance rules of §1.897-6T (c).

(b) Distributions by domestic corporations—(1) Limitation of basis upon dividend distribution of U.S. real property interest. Under section 897(f), if any domestic corporation (distributing corporation) distributes a U.S. real property interest to a shareholder that is a foreign person (distributee) in a distribution to which section 301 applies, then the basis of the distributed U.S. real property interest in the hands of the foreign distributee shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of section 301(d), and shall not exceed—

(i) The adjusted basis of the property before the distribution in the hands of the distributing corporation, increased by

(ii) The sum of—

(A) Any gain recognized by the distributing corporation on the distribution, and

(B) Any U.S. tax paid by or on behalf of the distributee with respect to the distribution.

(2) Distributions by U.S. real property holding corporations which are taxable exchanges of stock under generally applicable rules. If a domestic corporation, stock in which is treated as a U.S. real property interest, distributes property with respect to such stock to a foreign shareholder, the distributee shall be treated as having disposed of a U.S. real property interest, and shall recognize gain or loss on the stock of such domestic corporation to the extent that, with respect to the distributees—

(i) Part or all of the distribution is treated pursuant to section 301(c)(3)(A) as a sale or exchange of stock;

(ii) Part or all of the distribution is treated pursuant to section 302(a) as made in part or full payment in exchange for stock; or

(iii) Part or all of the distribution is treated pursuant to section 331(a) as made in full payment in exchange for stock.

Stock in a domestic corporation shall not be considered a U.S. real property interest pursuant to the provisions of §1.897-2(f)(2) if the corporation does not hold any U.S. real property interests and has disposed of all of its U.S. real property interests owned within the previous five years in transactions in which the full amount of gain was recognized under the rules of §1.897-2(f)(2). If gain is recognized at the corporate level on either a distribution of a U.S. real property interest or a sale of a U.S. real property interest in a liquidation, such distribution or sale shall be considered a disposition for purposes of §1.897-2(f)(2). With regard to the consequences of a distribution from a U.S. real property holding corporation under section 355(a), see §1.897-6T(a)(1) and (4).

(3) Section 332 liquidations of U.S. real property holding corporations—(i) General rules. Exchanges that are subject to section 897(e) are normally covered by §1.897-6T(a)(1), (2) and (3). This paragraph (b)(3) provides rules concerning the application of section 897(e) and the general principles of §1.897-6T(a)(1), (2) and (3) to section 332 liquidations of U.S. real property holding corporations.

(ii) Distribution to a foreign corporation under section 332 after June 18, 1980, and before the repeal of the General Utilities doctrine. Except for distributions under paragraph (b)(3)(iii) of this section (relating to section 332 and former section 334(b)(2)), the rules of this paragraph (b)(3)(ii) shall apply to section 332 distributions after June 18, 1980, and before January 1, 1990, pursuant to section 336(a) as in effect prior to the effective dates of the amendments made by section 631 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986. A foreign corporation that meets the stock ownership requirements of section 332(b) with respect to stock in a domestic corporation that is a U.S. real property interest shall not, after December 31, 1984, be subject to taxation by reason of section 367(a). The foreign corporation shall recognize gain pursuant to section 897(e)(1) on such stock upon the receipt of property in a section 332(a) liquidation from such domestic corporation, but only to the extent that the property received constitutes property other than a U.S. real property interest. The gain on the stock in the domestic corporation to be recognized by the foreign corporation pursuant to section 897(e)(1) shall be determined by multiplying the gain realized on the distribution by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction shall be the fair market value of the property other than U.S. real property interests received by the foreign corporation on the distribution, and the denominator shall be the fair market value of all property received by the foreign corporation on the distribution. The bases of the distributed U.S. real property interests in the hands of the foreign corporation shall be the same as the bases in the hands of the domestic corporation. The bases of the property other than U.S. real property interests in the hands of the foreign corporation shall be the same as the bases in the hands of the domestic corporation, plus any gain recognized by the foreign corporation on the distribution allocated among such assets in proportion to the potential gain inherent in each such asset at the time of distribution. However, the basis of each asset is limited to its fair market value. Property, other than a U.S. real property interest that is distributed by the domestic corporation, shall not be considered to be distributed by the domestic corporation pursuant to a section 332 liquidation (that is, the foreign corporation shall not be considered to be a corporation for purposes of section 332) if the requirements of section 367(a) are not satisfied. See, for example, sections 1245(b)(3) and 1250(d)(3) regarding the consequences to the distributing domestic corporation if the requirements of section 367(a) are not satisfied.

(iii) Distribution to a foreign corporation under section 332 and former section 334(b)(2) after June 18, 1980. The rules of this paragraph (b)(2)(iii) shall apply to section 332 distributions after June 18, 1980 where the basis of the distributed property in the hands of the foreign corporation is determined under section 334(b)(2) as in effect prior to the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982. A foreign corporation that meets the stock ownership requirements of section 332(b) with respect to stock in a domestic corporation that is a U.S. real property interest shall recognize gain on the receipt of property in a section 332(a) liquidation where section 334(b)(2) applies to the extent that the fair market value of the distributed assets that are not U.S. real property interests exceeds the basis of such assets determined under section 334(b)(2) (for example, if the liquidation does not occur immediately upon the purchase of stock in the domestic corporation). The gain recognized shall not exceed the excess of the fair market value of the stock of the domestic corporation in the hands of the foreign corporation at the time of the distribution over the shareholder's adjusted basis in such stock. The basis of the distributed U.S. real property interests in the hands of the foreign corporation shall be determined under section 334(b)(2), by reference to the adjusted basis of the stock with respect to which the distribution was made. The basis of such property other than U.S. real property interests shall be tentatively determined under section 334(b)(2), and then increased by any gain recognized by the foreign corporation on the distribution allocated among such assets in proportion to the potential gain inherent in each such asset at the time of distribution (computed using the tentative basis as determined under section 334(b)(2)). The basis of each asset is limited, however, to its fair market value.

(iv) Distribution to a foreign corporation under section 332 after July 31, 1986 and after the repeal of the General Utilities doctrine. The rules of this subdivision (iv) shall apply to section 332 distributions after July 31, 1986, pursuant to section 337(a) as in effect after the effective dates of the amendments of section 631 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

(A) Liquidation of domestic corporation. A foreign corporation that meets the stock ownership requirements of section 332(b) with respect to stock in a domestic corporation that is a U.S. real property interest (except a foreign corporation that has made an effective election under section 897(i) and the stock of which is treated as a U.S. real property interest) shall not recognize any gain under sections 367(a) or 897(e)(1) on the receipt of property in a section 332(a) liquidation. The domestic corporation shall not recognize gain under section 367(e)(2) on the distribution of U.S. real property interests (other than stock in a former U.S. real property holding corporation which is treated as a U.S. real property interest) to the foreign corporation. The domestic corporation shall recognize gain under section 367(e)(2) on the distribution of stock in a former U.S. real property holding corporation which is treated as U.S. real property interest. With respect to the recognition of gain or loss by the domestic corporation under section 367(e)(2) on the distribution of property other than U.S. real property interests, see the regulations under section 367(e)(2). The basis of the distributed U.S. real property interests (other than stock in a former U.S. real property holding corporation) in the hands of the foreign corporation shall be the same as it was in the hands of the domestic corporation. The basis of any property (other than U.S. real property interests) and stock in a former U.S. real property holding corporation that is a U.S. real property interest in the hands of the foreign corporation shall be the same as it was in the hands of the domestic corporation increased by any gain recognized by the distributing corporation on the distribution that was subject to U.S. taxation.

(B) Liquidation of certain foreign corporations making a section 897(i) election. A foreign corporation that meets the stock ownership requirements of section 332(b) with respect to stock in another foreign corporation, that has made an effective election under section 897(i) and the stock of which is treated as a U.S. real property interest, shall recognize gain pursuant to section 897(e)(1) on such stock upon the receipt from the distributing foreign corporation of property that is not a U.S. real property interest, and that is not used by the distributee foreign corporation in the conduct of a trade or business within the United States (if the distibutee foreign corporation is not a resident of a country with which the United States maintains an income tax treaty) or in a permanent establishment within the United States (if the distributee foreign corporation is a resident of a country with which the United States maintains an income tax treaty). The gain on the stock in the foreign corporation (making an effective election under section 897(i)) to be recognized by the distributee foreign corporation pursuant to section 897(e)(1) shall be determined by multiplying the gain realized on the distribution by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction shall be the fair market value of the property received by the distributee foreign corporation upon which it must recognize gain, and the denominator of the fraction shall be the fair market value of all property received by the distributee foreign corporation on the distribution. The distributing foreign corporation shall not recognize gain under section 367(e)(2) on the distribution of U.S. real property interests to the distributee foreign corporation. With respect to the recognition of gain or loss under section 367(e)(2) on the distribution of property other than U.S. real property interests, see the regulations under section 367(e)(2). The basis of the distributed U.S. real property interests in the hands of the distributee foreign corporation shall be the same as it was in the hands of the distributing foreign corporation. The basis of the property upon which the distributee foreign corporation recognized gain in the hands of the distributee foreign corporation shall be the same as the basis in the hands of the distributing foreign corporation, plus any gain recognized by the distributee foreign corporation on the receipt of such property allocated among such property in proportion to the potential gain inherent in each such property at the time of the distribution. In regard to the basis of any other property received by the distributee foreign corporation in the liquidation, see the regulations under section 367(e)(2). However, the basis of each asset is limited to its fair market value.

(v) Transfer of foreign corporation stock followed by a section 332 liquidation treated as a reorganization. If a nonresident alien or foreign corporation transfers the stock of a foreign corporation that owns a U.S. real property interest to a domestic corporation in exchange for stock of the domestic corporation (or its domestic or foreign parent corporation) in a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(B) or in an exchange under section 351(a), and if the foreign corporation then distributes the U.S. real property interest to the domestic corporation in a liquidation described in section 332(a) within five years of the transfer of the stock of the foreign corporation to the domestic corporation, then the transfer of the foreign corporation stock and the liquidation shall be treated as a reorganization described in section 368(a)(1)(C) or (D). The rules of §1.897-6T(a)(1) shall apply to the transfer of the U.S. real property interest to the domestic corporation in exchange for domestic corporation stock, and the rules of §1.897-5T(c)(4) shall apply to the distribution of domestic corporation stock by the foreign corporation. However, the rules of this paragraph (b)(3)(v) shall not apply if the transfer of the foreign corporation stock and the liquidation under section 332(a) are separate and independent transactions justified by substantial and verifiable business purposes.

(4) Section 897(i) companies. Except as otherwise provided herein for purposes of this section and §1.897-6T, a foreign corporation that has made a valid election under section 897(i) shall be treated as a domestic corporation and not as a foreign corporation in determining the application of section 897. For rules concerning the making of a section 897(i) election, see §§1.897-3 and 1.897-8T. In regard to section 367(e)(2) and foreign corporations that have made an effective election under section 897(i), see paragraph (b)(3)(iv) of this section.

(5) Examples. The following examples illustrate the rules of this paragraph (b). In each example there is no applicable income tax treaty to which the United States is a party.

Example (1). (i) A is a nonresident alien who owns 100 percent of the stock of DC, a U.S. real property holding corporation. DC's only asset is Parcel P, a U.S. real property interest, with a fair market value of $500,000 and an adjusted basis of $300,000. DC completely liquidates in 1987 and distributes Parcel P to A in exchange for the DC stock held by A.

(ii) Under section 336(a), DC must recognize gain to the extent of the excess of the fair market value ($500,000) over the adjusted basis ($300,000), or $200,000.

(iii) A does not recognize any gain under section 897(a) because the DC stock in the hands of A is no longer a U.S. real property interest under paragraph (b)(2) of this section and paragraph 2(f) of §1.897-2. A does recognize gain (if any) under section 331(a); however, the gain is not subject to taxation under section 871(a). A's adjusted basis in Parcel P is $500,000.

(iv) If DC did not recognize all of the gain on the disposition under a transitional rule to section 631 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, then paragraph (b)(2) of this section and paragraph 2(f) of §1.897-2 would not apply to A. A would recognize gain (if any) under paragraph (b)(2) because the distribution is treated as in full payment in exchange for the DC stock under section 897(a).

Example (2). (i) FC, a Country F corporation, owns 100 percent of the stock of DC, a U.S. real property holding corporation. FC's basis in the stock of DC is $400,000, and the fair market value of the DC stock is $800,000. DC owns a U.S. real property interest with an adjusted basis of $350,000 and a fair market value of $600,000. DC also owns other assets that are not U.S. real property interests that have an adjusted basis of $125,000 and a fair market value of $200,000. DC completely liquidates in 1985 and distributes all of its property to FC in exchange for the DC stock held by FC.

(ii) Under paragraph (b)(3)(ii) of this section, FC recognizes $100,000 of gain under section 897(a) on the disposition of the DC stock. This is determined by multiplying FC's gain realized ($400,000) by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the fair market value of the property other than U.S. real property interests ($200,000), and the denominator of the fraction is the fair market value of all property received ($800,000). FC takes a carryover adjusted basis in the U.S. real property interest ($350,000). FC's adjusted basis in the assets that are not U.S. real property interests ($200,000) is the basis of those assets in the hands of DC ($125,000) plus the gain recognized by FC on the distribution ($100,000) not to exceed the fair market value ($200,000).

Example (3). (i) FC, a Country F corporation, owns 100 percent of the stock of DC, a U.S. real property holding corporation. DC's basis in the stock of DC is $300,000, and the fair market value of the DC stock is $500,000. DC owns Parcel P, a U.S. real property interest, with an adjusted basis of $250,000 and a fair market value of $400,000. DC also owns all of the stock of DX, a former U.S. real property holding corporation whose stock is a U.S. real property interest, with an adjusted basis of $50,000 and a fair market value of $100,000. DC completely liquidates in 1987 and distributes all of its property to FC in exchange for the DC stock held by FC.

(ii) Under paragraph (b)(3)(iv)(A) of this section, DC recognizes $50,000 of gain on the distribution to FC of the DX stock. DC does not recognize any gain for purposes of section 367(e)(2) on the distribution to FC of Parcel P.

(iii) Under paragraph (b)(3)(iv)(A) of this section, FC's disposition of its DC stock is not treated as a disposition of a U.S. real property interest. Under section 334(b)(1), FC takes a carryover adjusted basis of $250,000 in Parcel P. FC takes an increased basis of $100,000 in the DX stock which is equal to DC's basis ($50,000) increased by the gain recognized by DC ($50,000).

(iv) The result would be the same if FC had made an effective election under section 897(i).

(6) Section 333 elections—(i) General rule. A foreign shareholder that elects section 333 as in effect prior to its repeal by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 upon the distribution of property in a liquidation by a domestic corporation whose stock is treated as a U.S. real property interest shall recognize gain on such stock to the extent that—

(A) The property received by the foreign shareholder constitutes property other than U.S. real property interests subject to U.S. taxation upon its disposition as specified by paragraph (a)(1) of this section, or

(B) The basis of a U.S. real property interest subject to U.S. taxation upon its disposition in the hands of the recipient foreign shareholder exceeds the basis of the U.S. real property interest in the hands of the liquidating domestic corporation.

In determining the amount of gain recognized by the foreign shareholder, the foreign shareholder shall be considered to have exchanged the domestic corporation stock for all the property distributed on a proportionate fair market value basis. The gain recognized on a respective portion of domestic corporation stock shall not exceed the gain realized on that portion. Property other than U.S. real property interests subject to U.S. taxation upon disposition shall have a fair market value basis in the hands of the foreign shareholder. The basis of U.S. real property interests subject to U.S. taxation upon disposition shall be the basis of the proportionate part of the domestic corporation stock cancelled or redeemed in the liquidation, increased in the amount of gain recognized (other than gain recognized under this section) by the shareholder in respect to that proportionate part of the domestic corporation stock.

(ii) Example. The rules of paragraph (b)(6)(i) of this section may be illustrated by the following example.

Example. (i) A is a citizen and resident of Country F with which the U.S. does not have an income tax treaty. A owns all of the stock of DC, a U.S. real property holding corporation. The DC stock has a fair market value of $1,000,000. A acquired the DC stock in two purchases. The basis of one lot of the DC stock is $150,000, and the basis of the other lot is $650,000.

(ii) DC owns Parcel P, a U.S. real property interest, with a fair market value of $750,000 and an adjusted basis of $400,000. DC's only other property is equipment with a fair market value of $250,000 and an adjusted basis of $100,000. DC does not have any earnings and profits.

(iii) DC completely liquidates in 1985 in accordance with section 333 by distributing Parcel P and the equipment to A. A elects section 333 treatment.

(iv) A is considered as having exchanged 75 percent (fair market value of Parcel P/fair market value of all property distributed) of the DC stock for Parcel P. A realized gain of $150,000 on that portion of the DC stock ($750,000 − $600,000). All of the gain of $150,000 is recognized under section 897(a) because A's basis in Parcel P under section 334(c) ($600,000) would exceed DC's basis in Parcel P ($400,000) by at least the amount of realized gain. A takes a basis of $750,000 in Parcel P.

(v) A is considered as having exchanged 25 percent (fair market value of equipment/fair market value of all property distributed) of the DC stock for the equipment. A realized gain of $50,000 on that portion of the DC stock ($250,000 − $200,000). All of the gain of $50,000 is recognized under section 897(a). A takes a basis of $250,000 in the equipment.

(c) Distributions of U.S. real property interests by foreign corporations—(1) Recognition of gain required. If a foreign corporation makes a distribution (including a distribution in liquidation or redemption) of a U.S. real property interest to a shareholder (whether foreign or domestic), then, except as provided in paragraph (c)(2), (3) or (4) of this section, the distributing corporation shall recognize gain (but not loss) on the distribution under section 897(d)(1). The gain recognized shall be equal to the excess of the fair market value of the U.S. real property interest (as of the time of the distribution) over its adjusted basis. Except as otherwise provided, the distributee's basis in the distributed U.S. real property interest shall be determined under the otherwise applicable sections of the Code. The distributee (whether domestic or foreign) of a foreign corporation in a liquidation under section 332 shall take the foreign corporation's basis in the distributed U.S. real property interest increased by any gain recognized (and subject to U.S. income taxation) by the foreign corporation on the distribution of such U.S. real property interest.

(2) Recognition of gain not required—(i) Statutory exception rule. Under section 897(d)(2)(A), gain shall not be recognized by a distributing foreign corporation if—

(A) At the time of the receipt of the distributed U.S. real property interest, the distributee would be subject to U.S. income taxation on a subsequent disposition of the U.S. real property interest, determined in accordance with the rules of paragraph (d)(1) of this section;

(B) The basis of the distributed U.S. real property interest in the hands of the distributee is not greater than the adjusted basis of such property before the distribution, increased by the amount of gain (if any) recognized by the distributing corporation upon the distribution and added to the adjusted basis under the otherwise applicable provisions; and

(C) The distributing corporation complies with the filing requirements of paragraph (d)(1)(iii) of this section.

(ii) Section 332 liquidations—(A) In general. A distributing foreign corporation that meets the requirements of paragraph (c)(2)(i) in a section 332(a) liquidation shall not recognize gain on the distribution of U.S. real property interests to a foreign corporation meeting the stock ownership requirements of section 332(b) if the distributing corporation complies with the procedural requirements of paragraph (d)(1)(iii). Whether a foreign corporation recognizes gain on the distribution of U.S. real property interests to a U.S. corporation meeting the stock ownership requirements of section 332(b) depends upon whether the U.S. corporation satisfies the subject to tax requirement provided in paragraph (d)(1)(i) (in addition to the procedural requirements of paragraph (d)(1)(iii)). With respect to section 332 distributions by a foreign corporation occurring after July 31, 1986, section 367(e)(2) shall not affect the application of section 337(a) (as in effect after the Tax Reform Act of 1986) and paragraph (c)(2)(i) of this section to the distribution of a U.S. real property interest.

(B) Recognition of gain required in certain section 332 liquidations. Notwithstanding the other rules of this paragraph (c), a foreign corporation shall, pursuant to the authority conferred by section 897(e)(2), recognize gain on its distribution after May 5, 1988 of a U.S. real property interest to a domestic corporation meeting the stock ownership requirements of section 332(b) if—

(1) the foreign corporation has not made an election under section 897(i), and any gain on the stock in the foreign corporation would be subject to U.S. taxation if an election were made on the date of the liquidation; and

(2) The distribution of the U.S. real property interest by the foreign corporation to the domestic corporation pursuant to section 332(a) occurs less than five years after the date of the last gain from the disposition of stock of the foreign corporation that would be subject to payment of tax under section 1.897-3(d)(2)(i) if an election under section 897(i) were made by the foreign corporation on the date of its liquidation. With regard to the treatment of certain foreign corporations as domestic corporations under section 897(i), however, see §§1.897-3 and 1.897-8T.

(iii) Examples. The rules of this paragraph (c)(2) may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). (i) DC, a domestic corporation, owns 100 percent of the stock of FC, a Country F corporation. FC's only asset is Parcel P, a U.S. real property interest, with a fair market value of $500x and an adjusted basis of $100x. In September 1987, FC liquidates under section 332(a) and transfers Parcel P to DC. The transitional rules contained in section 633 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 concerning the repeal of the General Utilities doctrine would not be applicable to a subsequent distribution or disposition of assets by DC.

(ii) Assume that FC complies with the filing requirements of paragraph (d)(1)(iii). DC will be subject to U.S. income taxation on a subsequent disposition of Parcel P under the rules of paragraph (d)(1). The basis of Parcel P in the hands of DC will be $100x under section 334(b)(1), and thus no greater than the basis of Parcel P in the hands of FC. FC does not recognize any gain under the rules of paragraph (c)(1) of this section on the distribution because the exception of paragraph (d)(2)(i) applies.

Example (2). If in Example (1) the distribution by FC to DC occurred in September 1985, and DC sold or exchanged Parcel P under sections 336(a) or 337(a) as in effect prior to the Tax Reform Act of 1986, then FC must recognize gain of $400x on the distribution of Parcel P. The gain must be recognized because Parcel P in the hands of DC is not considered subject to U.S. income taxation on a subsequent disposition under the rules of paragraph (d)(1) of this section.

(3) Limitation of gain recognized under paragraph (c)(1) of this section for certain section 355 distributions—(i) In general. Under paragraph (c)(1) of this section, a foreign corporation that distributes stock in a domestic corporation that constitutes a U.S. real property interest in a distribution to which section 355 applies shall recognize gain on the distribution to the extent that the fair market value of the distributed stock exceeds its adjusted basis in the hands of the distributing foreign corporation. The gain recognized shall be limited under this paragraph (c)(3), however, to the amount by which the aggregate basis of the distributed stock in the hands of the distributees exceeds the aggregate adjusted basis of the distributed stock in the hands of the distributing corporation. The distributees' basis in the distributed U.S. real property interest shall be determined under the otherwise applicable provisions of section 358. (Thus, the distributees' basis in the distributed U.S. real property interest shall be determined without any increase for any gain recognized by the foreign corporation).

(ii) Example. The rules of paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section may be illustrated by the following example.

Example. (i) C is a citizen and resident of Country F. C owns all of the stock of FC, a Country F corporation. The fair market value of the FC stock is 1000x, and C has a basis of 600x in the FC stock. Country F does not have an income tax treaty with the United States.

(ii) In a transaction qualifying as a distribution of stock of a controlled corporation under section 355(a), FC distributes to C all of the stock of DC, a U.S. real property holding corporation. C does not surrender any of the FC stock. The DC stock has a fair market value of 600x, and FC has an adjusted basis of 200x in the DC stock. After the distribution, the FC stock has a fair market value of 400x.

(iii) Under paragraph (c)(3)(i) of this section, FC must recognize gain on the distribution of the DC stock to C equal to the difference between the fair market value of the DC stock (600x) and FC's adjusted basis in the DC stock (200x). This results in a potential gain of 400x. Under section 358, C takes a 360x adjusted basis in the DC stock. Provided that FC complies with the filing requirements of paragraph (d)(1)(iii) of this section, the gain recognized by FC is limited under paragraph (c)(3)(i) to 160x because (A) this is the amount by which the basis of the DC stock in the hands of C (360x) exceeds the adjusted basis of the DC stock in the hands of FC (200x), and (B) at the time of receipt of the DC stock, C would be subject to U.S. taxation on a subsequent disposition of the stock.

(iv) C's adjusted basis in the DC stock is not increased by the 160x recognized by FC.

(4) Distribution by a foreign corporation in certain reorganizations—(i) In general. Under paragraph (c)(1) of this section, a foreign corporation that transfers property to another corporation in an exchange under section 361(a) for stock of a domestic corporation which is a United States real property holding corporation immediately after the transfer in a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(C), (D) or (F) shall recognize gain under section 897(d)(1) on the distribution (whether actual or deemed) of the stock of the domestic corporation received by the foreign corporation to its shareholders (whether domestic or foreign). See §1.897-6T(a) of the regulations for the consequences to the foreign corporation of the exchange of its property for the domestic corporation stock.

(ii) Statutory exception. Pursuant to the exception provided in section 897(d)(2)(A), no gain shall be recognized by the foreign corporation on its distribution of the domestic corporation stock if—

(A) At the time of the distribution, the distributee (i.e., the exchanging shareholder in the section 354 exchange) would be subject to U.S. taxation on a subsequent disposition of the stock of the domestic corporation, determined in accordance with the rules of paragraph (d)(1) of this section;

(B) The distributee's adjusted basis in the stock of the foreign corporation immediately before the distribution was no greater than the foreign corporation's basis in the stock of the domestic corporation determined under section 358; and

(C) The distributing corporation complies with the filing requirements of paragraph (d)(1)(iii) of this section.

(iii) Regulatory limitation on gain recognized. If the requirements of subdivisions (A) and (C) of paragraph (c)(4)(ii) are met, the amount of any gain recognized by the foreign corporation shall not exceed the excess of the distributee's basis in the stock of the foreign corporation immediately before the distribution over the foreign corporation's basis in the stock of the domestic corporation immediately before the distribution as determined under section 358.

(iv) Examples. The rules of paragraph (c)(4) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). (i) A, a nonresident alien, organized FC, a Country W corporation, in September 1980 to invest in U.S. real estate. In 1986, FC's only asset is Parcel P, a U.S. real property interest with a fair market value of $600,000 and an adjusted basis to FC of $200,000. Parcel P is subject to a mortgage with an outstanding balance of $100,000. The fair market value of the FC stock is $500,000, and A's adjusted basis in the stock is $100,000. FC does not have liabilities in excess of the adjusted basis in Parcel P. The United States does not have a treaty with Country W that entitles FC to nondiscriminatory treatment as described in section 1.897-3(b)(2) of the regulations.

(ii) Pursuant to a plan of reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(D), FC transfers Parcel P to DC, a newly formed domestic corporation, in exchange for DC stock. FC distributes the DC stock to A in exchange for A's FC stock.

(iii) FC's exchange of Parcel P for the DC stock is a disposition of a U.S. real property interest. Under §1.897-6T(a)(1), there is an exchange of a U.S. real property interest (Parcel P) for another U.S. real property interest (DC stock) so that no gain is recognized on the exchange under section 897(e). DC takes FC's basis of $200,000 in Parcel P under section 362(b). Under section 358(a)(1), FC takes a $100,000 basis in the DC stock because FC's substituted basis of $200,000 in the DC stock is reduced by the $100,000 of liabilities to which Parcel P is subject.

(iv) Under section 897(d)(1) and paragraph (c)(4)(i) of this section, FC generally must recognize gain on the distribution of the DC stock received in exchange for FC's assets equal to the difference between the fair market value of the DC stock ($500,000) and FC's adjusted basis in the DC stock prior to the distribution ($100,000). This results in a potential gain of $400,000. Under section 358(a)(1), A takes a basis in the DC stock equal to the basis in the FC stock of $100,000. Provided that FC complies with the filing requirements of paragraph (d)(1)(iii) of this section, no gain is recognized by FC on the distribution of the DC stock under the statutory exception to the general rule of section 897(d)(1) provided in section 897(d)(2)(A) and paragraph (c)(4)(ii) of this section because (1) A's basis in the DC stock ($100,000) does not exceed FC's adjusted basis in the DC stock ($100,000) immediately prior to the distribution and (2) A, at the time of receipt of the DC stock, would be subject to U.S. taxation on a subsequent disposition of the stock.

(v) The FC stock in the hands of A is not a U.S. real property interest because FC is a foreign corporation that has not elected to be treated as a domestic corporation under section 897(i). Accordingly, the exchange of the FC stock by A for DC stock is not a disposition of a U.S. real property interest under section 897(a).

Example (2). The facts are the same as in Example (1), except that A purchased the FC stock in September 1983 for $100,000 from S, a nonresident alien, and that S had a basis of $40,000 in the FC stock at the time of the sale to A. The results are the same as in Example 1.

Example (3). (i) The facts are the same as in Example 1, except that A's adjusted basis in the FC stock prior to the reorganization is $300,000. Following the distribution, A takes its basis of $300,000 in the FC stock as its basis in the DC stock pursuant to section 358(a)(1).

(ii) FC does not qualify under the statutory exception of paragraph (c)(4)(ii) to the general recognition rule of section 897(d)(1) and paragraph (c)(4)(i) of this section because A's basis in the DC stock ($300,000) exceeds FC's adjusted basis in the DC stock ($100,000) immediately prior to the distribution. However, provided that FC complies with the filing requirements of paragraph (d)(1)(iii) of this section, the gain recognized by FC is limited to $200,000 under the regulatory limitation of gain provided by paragraph (c)(4)(iii). This is the excess of A's basis in the FC stock immediately before the distribution ($300,000) over A's adjusted basis in the DC stock immediately before the distribution ($100,000).

(iii) A takes a basis of $300,000 in the DC stock under section 358(a)(1). A's basis in the DC stock is not increased by the gain recognized by FC. DC takes a basis of $200,000 in Parcel P under section 362(b).

Example (4). (i) The facts are the same as in Example (3), except that the United States has an income tax treaty with Country W entitling FC to nondiscriminatory treatment under section 1.897-3(b)(2) of the regulations. A valid election under section 897(i) is made to treat FC as a U.S. corporation.

(ii) FC is treated as a domestic corporation for purposes of section 897 and is not required to recognize gain under section 897(d)(1) and paragraph (c)(4)(i) of this section on the distribution of the DC stock as described in Example (3) (If a valid section 897(i) election were not made, the result would be same as in Example (3).)

(iii) The FC stock in the hands of A is a U.S. real property interest because an election was made under section 897(i) to treat FC as a U.S. corporation. The exchange of the FC stock for DC stock by A is a disposition of a U.S. real property interest. Under section 897(e)(1) and paragraph (a) of §1.897-6T, A does not recognize gain on the exchange because there is an exchange of a U.S. real property interest (the FC stock) for another U.S. real property interest (the DC stock). Under section 358(a)(1), A takes as its basis in the DC stock A's basis in the FC stock ($300,000).

(5) Sales of U.S. real property interests by foreign corporations under section 337. Section 337 as in effect prior to the Tax Reform Act of 1986 shall not apply to any sale or exchange (including a deemed section 337 sale pursuant to an election under section 338(a) to treat a stock purchase as an asset acquisition) of a U.S. real property interest by a foreign corporation.

(6) Section 897(l) credit. If a foreign corporation adopts a plan of complete liquidation and if, solely by reason of section 897(d) and this section, section 337(a) (as in effect before the Tax Reform Act of 1986) does not apply to sales or exchanges of, or section 336 (as in effect before the Tax Reform Act of 1986) does not apply to distributions of, United States real property interests by the liquidating corporation, then—

(i) The amount realized by the shareholder on the distribution shall be increased by its proportionate share of the amount by which the tax imposed by chapter 1 of the Code, as modified by the provisions of any applicable U.S. income tax treaty, on the liquidating corporation would have been reduced if section 897(d) and this section had not been applicable, and

(ii) For purposes of the Code, the shareholder shall be deemed to have paid, on the last day prescribed by law for the payment of the tax imposed by subtitle A of the Code on the shareholder for the taxable year, an amount of tax equal to the amount of increase in the amount realized described in subdivision (i) of this paragraph (c).

The special rule provided by this paragraph (c)(5) applies only to shareholders who are United States citizens or residents, and who have held stock in the liquidating corporation continuously since June 18, 1980. This special rule also only applies for the first taxable year of any such shareholder in which the shareholder receives a distribution in complete liquidation from the foreign corporation.

(7) Other applicable rules. For rules concerning exemption of gain pursuant to a U.S. income tax treaty, withholding of tax from distributions, and other applicable rules, see paragraph (d) of this section. For the treatment of liquidations described in section 334(b)(2)(A) of certain foreign corporations acquired before November 6, 1980, see §1.897-4.

(d) Rules of general application—(1) Interests subject to taxation upon later disposition—(i) In general. Pursuant to the otherwise applicable rules of this section and §1.897-6T, nonrecognition of gain or loss may apply with respect to certain distributions or exchanges of U.S. real property interests if any gain from a subsequent disposition of the interests that are distributed or received by the transferor in the exchange would be included in the gross income of the distributee or transferor and be subject to U.S. taxation. Gain is considered subject to U.S. taxation if the gain is included on the income tax return of a U.S. tax paying entity even if there is no U.S. tax liability (for example, because of net operating losses or an investment tax credit). Gain is not considered subject to U.S. taxation if the gain is derived by a tax exempt entity. A real estate investment trust is considered to be a pass-through entity for purposes of the rule of taxability of this paragraph (d)(1)(i). Thus, for example, a tax exempt entity holding an interest in a real estate investment trust is not subject to tax. A domestic corporation (including a foreign corporation that makes an effective section 897(i) election after receipt of the U.S. real property interest) shall not be considered subject to U.S. taxation on a subsequent disposition of a U.S. real property interest if it received the U.S. real property interest prior to the effective date of the repeal of sections 336(a) or 337(a) as in effect prior to the Tax Reform Act of 1986, unless the U.S. real property interest has not been sold or exchanged by the domestic corporation prior to such effective date in a transaction to which either section 336(a) or section 337(a) (as in effect prior to such effective date) applied. In addition, an interest shall be considered to be subject to U.S. taxation upon its subsequent disposition only if the requirements set forth in subdivision (iii) of this paragraph (d)(1) are met.

(ii) Effects of income tax treaties—(A) Effect of treaty exemption from tax. Except as otherwise provided in subdivision (C) of this paragraph (d)(1)(ii), a U.S. real property interest shall not be considered to be subject to U.S. taxation upon a subsquent disposition if, at the time of its distribution or exchange, the recipient is entitled pursuant to the provisions of a U.S. income tax treaty to an exemption from U.S. taxation upon a disposition of the interest.

(B) Effect of treaty reduction of tax. If, at the time of a distribution or exchange, a distributee of a U.S. real property interest in a distribution or a transferor who receives a U.S. real property interest in an exchange would be entitled pursuant to the provisions of a U.S. income tax treaty to reduced U.S. taxation upon the disposition of the interest, then a portion of the interest received shall be treated as an interest subject to U.S. taxation upon its disposition, and, therefore, that portion shall be entitled to nonrecognition treatment under the rules of this section or §1.897-6T. The portion of the interest that is treated as subject to U.S. taxation is determined by multiplying the fair market value of the interest by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the amount of tax that would be due pursuant to the provisions of the applicable U.S. income tax treaty upon the recipient's disposition of the interest, determined as of the date of the distribution or transfer. The denominator of the fraction is the amount of tax that would be due upon such disposition but for the provisions of the treaty. However, nonrecognition treatment may be preserved in accordance with the provisions of subdivision (C) of this paragraph (d)(1)(ii). With regard to the provisions of this paragraph, see Article XIII(9) of the United States-Canada Income Tax Convention.

(C) Waiver of treaty benefits to preserve nonrecognition. Notwithstanding the provisions of subdivisions (A) and (B) of this paragraph (d)(1)(ii), an interest shall be considered to be subject to U.S. taxation upon its subsequent disposition if, in accordance with paragraph (d)(1)(iii)(F) of this section, the recipient waives the benefits of a U.S. income tax treaty that would otherwise entitle the recipient to an exemption from (or reduction of) U.S. tax upon a disposition of the interest.

(iii) Procedural requirements. If a U.S. real property interest is distributed or transferred after December 31, 1987, the transferor or distributor (that is a nonresident alien individual or a foreign corporation) shall file an income tax return for the taxable year of the distribution or transfer. Also, if a U.S. real property interest is distributed or transferred in a transaction before January 1, 1988, with respect to which nonrecognition treatment would not have been available under the express provisions of section 897(d) or (e) of the Code but is available under the provisions of this section or §1.897-6T, then the person that would otherwise be subject to tax by reason of the operation of section 897 must file an income tax return for the taxable year of the distribution or transfer. This requirement is satisfied by filing a tax return or an amended tax return for the year of the distribution or transfer by May 5, 1989, or by the date that the filing of the return is otherwise required. The person filing the return must attach thereto a document setting forth the following:

(A) A statement that the distribution or transfer is one to which section 897 applies;

(B) A description of the U.S. real property interest distributed or transferred, including its location, its adjusted basis in the hands of the distributor or transferor immediately before the distribution or transfer, and the date of the distribution or transfer;

(C) A description of the U.S. real property interest received in an exchange;

(D) A declaration signed by an officer of the corporation that the distributing foreign corporation has substantiated the adjusted basis of the shareholder in its stock if the distributing corporation has nonrecognition or recognition limitation under paragraph (c)(3) or (4) of this section;

(E) The amount of any gain recognized and tax withheld by any person with respect to the distribution or transfer;

(F) Identification by name and address of the distributee or transferee, including the distributee's or transferee's taxpayer identification number (if any);

(G) The treaty and article (if any) under which the distributee or transferor would be exempt from U.S. taxation on a sale of the distributed U.S. real property interest or the U.S. real property interest received in the transfer; and

(H) A declaration, signed by the distributee or transferor or its authorized legal representative, that the distributee or transferor shall treat any subsequent sale, exchange, or other disposition of the U.S. real property interest as a disposition that is subject to U.S. taxation, notwithstanding the provisions of any U.S. income tax treaty or intervening change in circumstance.

A person who has provided or filed a notice described in §1.1445-2(d)(2)(iii) or §1.1445-5(b)(2)(ii) in connection with a transaction may satisfy the requirement of this paragraph (d)(1)(iii) by attaching to his return a copy of that notice together with any information or declaration required by this subdivision not contained in that notice.

(2) Treaty exception to imposition of tax. If gain that would be currently recognized pursuant to the provisions of this section or §1.897-6T is subject to an exemption from (or reduction of) U.S. tax pursuant to a U.S. income tax treaty, then gain shall be recognized only as provided by that treaty, for dispositions occurring before January 1, 1985. For dispositions occurring after December 31, 1984, all gain shall be recognized as provided in section 897 and the regulations thereunder, except as provided by Articles XIII(9) and XXX(5) of the United States-Canada Income Tax Convention or other income tax treaty entered into force after June 6, 1988. With regard to Article XXX(5) of the Income Tax Treaty with Canada, see, Rev. Rul. 85-76, 1985-1 C.B. 409. With regard to basis adjustments for certain related person transactions, see §1.897-6T(c)(3).

(3) Withholding. Under sections 1441 and 1442, as modified by the provisions of any applicable U.S. income tax treaty, a corporation must withhold tax from a dividend distribution to which section 301 applies to a shareholder that is a foreign person, if the dividend is considered to be from sources inside the United States. For a description of dividends that are considered to be from sources inside the United States, see section 861(a)(2). Under section 1445, withholding is required with respect to certain dispositions and distributions of U.S. real property interests.

(4) Effect on earnings and profits. With respect to adjustments to earnings and profits for gain recognized to a distributing corporation on a distribution, see section 312 and the regulations thereunder.

(e) Effective date. Except as otherwise specifically provided in the text of these regulations, this section shall be effective for transfers, exchanges, distributions and other dispositions occurring after June 18, 1980.

§1.897-6T Nonrecognition exchanges applicable to corporations, their shareholders, and other taxpayers, and certain transfers of property in corporate reorganizations (Temporary).

(a) Nonrecognition exchanges—(1) In general. Except as otherwise provided in this section and in §1.897-5T, for purposes of section 897(e) any nonrecognition provision shall apply to a transfer by a foreign person of a U.S. real property interest on which gain is realized only to the extent that the transferred U.S. real property interest is exchanged for a U.S. real property interest which, immediately following the exchange, would be subject to U.S. taxation upon its disposition, and the transferor complies with the filing requirements of paragraph (d)(1)(iii) of §1.897-5T. No loss shall be recognized pursuant to section 897(e) or the rules of this section unless such loss is otherwise permitted to be recognized. In the case of an exchange of a U.S. real property interest for stock in a domestic corporation (that is otherwise treated as U.S. real property interest), such stock shall not be considered a U.S. real property interest unless the domestic corporation is a U.S. real property holding corporation immediately after the exchange. Whether an interest would be subject to U.S. taxation in the hands of the transferor upon its disposition shall be determined in accordance with the rules of §1.897-5T(d)(1).

(2) Definition of "nonrecognition" provision. A "nonrecognition provision" is any provision of the Code which provides that gain or loss shall not be recognized if the requirements of that provision are met. Nonrecognition provisions relevant to this section include, but are not limited to, sections 332, 351, 354, 355, 361, 721, 731, 1031, 1033, 1034 and 1036. For purposes of section 897(e), sections 121 and 453 are not nonrecognition provisions.

(3) Consequence of nonapplication of nonrecognition provisions. If a nonrecognition provision does not apply to a transaction, then the U.S. real property interest transferred shall be considered exchanged pursuant to a transaction that is subject to U.S. taxation by reason of the operation of section 897. See, however, §1.897-5T(d)(2) with respect to the treaty exceptions to the imposition of tax. If a U.S. real property interest is exchanged for an interest the disposition of which is only partially subject to taxation under chapter 1 of the Code (as modified by the provisions of any applicable U.S. income tax treaty), then any nonrecognition provision shall apply only to the extent that the interest received in the exchange would be subject to taxation under chapter 1 of the Code, as modified. For example, the exchange of a U.S. real property interest for an interest in a partnership will receive nonrecognition treatment pursuant to section 721 only to the extent that a disposition of the partnership interest will be subject to U.S. taxation by reason of the operation of section 897(g).

(4) Section 355 distributions treated as exchanges. If a domestic corporation, stock in which is treated as a U.S. real property interest, distributes stock in a foreign corporation or stock in a domestic corporation that is not a U.S. real property holding corporation to a foreign person under section 355(a), then the foreign person shall be considered as having exchanged a proportionate part of the stock in the domestic corporation that is treated as a U.S. real property interest for stock that is not treated as a U.S. real property interest.

(5) Section 1034 rollover of gain—(i) Purchase of foreign principal residence. A nonresident alien individual shall not be entitled to nonrecognition under section 1034 on the sale of a principal residence when the new principal residence acquired is not a U.S. real property interest.

(ii) Purchase of U.S. principal residence. A nonresident alien individual who sells his principal residence that is a U.S. real property interest and, within a period beginning two years before the date of such sale and ending on the date (with extensions) of filing his income tax return for the taxable year of the sale of the principal residence, purchases and uses another U.S. real property interest as a principal residence, shall, to the extent provided by section 1034, not recognize gain on the sale of the principal residence. If the individual has not purchased another U.S. real property interest as a principal residence at the time of the filing of the return for the year of sale, the individual must file a timely income tax return for the year of sale without claiming the benefit of section 1034. If the individual subsequently purchases another U.S. property interest as a principal residence that otherwise qualifies under section 1034 after the due date of the income tax return for the year of the sale of the principal residence and before a date that is two years after the sale of the principal residence, the individual may then apply section 1034 by filing an amended income tax return for the year of the sale of the principal residence and claim a refund. A nonresident alien may not claim the benefits of section 1034 unless such individual files a complete and timely income tax return with the appropriate forms for the year of the sale of the principal residence. The rules of this paragraph (a)(5)(ii) shall first apply to the sale of principal residences after June 6, 1988. A nonresident alien individual who sells his principal residence that is a U.S. real property interest on or before June 6, 1988, shall, to the extent provided by section 1034, not recognize gain on the sale of the principal residence if the new principal residence is a U.S. real property interest.

(6) Determination of basis. If a nonrecognition provision applies to the transfer of a U.S. real property interest pursuant to the provisions of this section, then the basis of the property received in the exchange shall be determined in accordance with the rules generally applicable with respect to such nonrecognition provision. Similarly, the basis of the exchanged property in the hands of the transferee shall be determined in accordance with the rules that generally apply to such transfer.

(7) Examples. The rules of paragraph (a)(1) through (6) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples. In each instance, the filing requirements of paragraph (d)(1)(iii) of §1.897-5T have been satisfied.

Example (1). (i) A is a citizen and resident of Country F with which the U.S. does not have an income tax treaty. A owns Parcel P, a U.S. real property interest, with a fair market value of $500,000 and an adjusted basis of $300,000. A transfers Parcel P to DC, a newly formed U.S. real property holding corporation wholly owned by A, in exchange for DC stock.

(ii) Under paragraph (a)(1) of this section, A has exchanged a U.S. real property interest (Parcel P) for another U.S. real property interest (DC stock) which is subject to U.S. taxation upon its disposition. The nonrecognition provisions of section 351(a) apply to A's transfer of Parcel P.

(iii) Under paragraph (a)(6) of this section, the basis of the DC stock received by A is determined in accordance with the rules generally applicable to the transfer. A takes a $300,000 adjusted basis in the DC stock under the rules of section 358(a)(1).

Example (2). (i) A is a citizen and resident of Country F who is stationed in Washington, DC as a full-time employee of an international organization. A sells his principal residence in Washington, and in the same taxable year A purchases another principal residence in Washington. The cost of the new residence exceeds the adjusted sales price of the old residence.

(ii) Under section 7701(b), A is a nonresident alien for U.S. tax purposes, and is subject to taxation under section 897(a). Under paragraphs (a)(1) and (5)(ii) of this section, A is considered to have exchanged a U.S. real property interest (the old principal residence) for another U.S.real property interest (the new principal residence) which is subject to U.S. taxation upon its disposition. The nonrecognition and basis provisions of section 1034(a) apply to A.

Example (3). If in Example (2) A had instead purchased a new principal residence in Country F, there would be an exchange of a U.S. real property interest for property that is not a U.S. real property interest. Under paragraph (a)(5)(i) of this section, A would recognize gain under section 897(a) on the disposition of the old principal residence.

Example (4). (i) B is a citizen and resident of Country F with which the U.S. does not have an income tax treaty. B owns stock in DC1, a U.S. real property holding corporation. In a reorganization qualifying for nonrecognition under section 368(a)(1)(B), B exchanges the DC1 stock under section 354(a) for stock in DC2, a U.S. real property holding corporation.

(ii) A does not recognize any gain under paragraph (a)(1) of this section on the exchange of the DC1 stock for DC2 stock because there is an exchange of a U.S. real property interest (the DC1 stock) for another U.S. real property interest (the DC2 stock) which is subject to U.S. taxation upon its disposition.

Example (5). (i) C is a citizen and resident of Country F with which the U.S. does not have an income tax treaty. C owns all of the stock of DC, a U.S. real property holding corporation. The fair market value of the DC stock is 500x, and C has a basis of 100x in the DC stock.

(ii) In a transaction qualifying as a distribution of stock of a controlled corporation under section 355(a), DC distributes to C all of the stock of FC, a foreign corporation that has not made a section 897(i) election. C does not surrender any of the DC stock. The FC stock has a fair market value of 200x. After the distribution, the DC stock has a fair market value of 300x.

(iii) Under the rules of paragraph (a)(4) of this section, C is considered to have exchanged DC stock with a fair market value of 200x and an adjusted basis of 40x for FC stock with a fair market value of 200x. Because the FC stock is not a U.S. real property interest, C must recognize gain of 160x under section 897(a) on the distribution. C takes a basis of 200x in the FC stock. C's basis in the DC stock is reduced to 60x pursuant to section 358(a).

Example (6). (i) A is an individual citizen and resident of Country F. F has an income tax treaty with the United States that exempts gain from the sale of stock, but not real property, by a resident of F from U.S. taxation. In 1981, A transferred Parcel P, an appreciated U.S. real property interest, to DC, a U.S. real property holding corporation, in exchange for DC stock. A owned all of the stock of DC.

(ii) Under the rules of paragraph (a)(1) of this section, A must recognize gain on the transfer of Parcel P. Even though there is an exchange of a U.S. real property interest for another U.S. real property interest, there is gain recognition because the U.S. real property interest received (the DC stock) would not have been subject to U.S. taxation upon a disposition immediately following the exchange. A may not convert a U.S. real property interest that was subject to taxation under section 897 into a U.S. real property interest that could be sold without taxation under section 897 due to a treaty exemption.

Example (7). (i) A, a nonresident alien, organized FC1, a Country W corporation in September 1980 to invest in U.S. real property. FC1's only asset is Parcel P, a U.S. real property interest with a fair market value of $500,000 and an adjusted basis of $200,000. The FC1 stock has a fair market value of $500,000 and A's basis in the FC1 stock is $100,000. The United States does not have a treaty with Country W.

(ii) A, organized FC2, a Country W corporation in July 1987. FC2 organized DC in August 1987. Pursuant to a plan of reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(C), FC1 transfers Parcel P to DC in exchange for FC2 voting stock. As a result of the transfer, DC is a U.S. real property holding corporation wholly owned by FC2. The FC2 stock used by DC in the acquisition had been transferred by FC2 to DC as part of the plan of reorganization. FC1 distributes the FC2 stock to A in exchange for A's FC1 stock.

(iii) FC1's exchange of Parcel P for the FC2 stock under section 361(a) is a disposition of a U.S. real property interest. FC1 must recognize gain of $300,000 under section 897(e) and paragraph (a)(1) of this section on the exchange because the FC2 stock received in exchange for Parcel P is not a U.S. real property interest.

(iv) Under section 362(b), DC takes a basis of $500,000 in Parcel P. FC2 takes a basis of $500,000 in the DC stock. A takes a basis of $100,000 in the FC2 stock under section 358(a)(1). Section 897(d) and paragraph (c)(1) of §1.897-5T do not apply to FC1's distribution of the FC2 stock because the FC2 stock is not a U.S. real property interest.

Example (8). The facts are the same as in Example (7), except that the United States has a treaty with Country W that entitles FC1 and FC2 to nondiscriminatory treatment as described in §1.897-3(b)(2). FC1, but not FC2, makes a valid section 897(i) election prior to the transaction.

(ii) FC1's transfer of Parcel P to DC in exchange for FC2 stock is not subject to section 897(e) and paragraph (a)(1) of this section because FC1 made an election under section 897(i). DC takes a basis of $200,000 in Parcel P under section 362(b).

(iii) FC1's distribution of the FC2 stock to A in exchange for the FC1 stock is not subject to the section 897(d) and paragraph (c)(1) of §1.897-5T because FC1 made an election under section 897(i).

(iv) A must recognize gain on the exchange under section 354(a) of the FC1 stock for the FC2 stock. A exchanged a U.S. real property interest (the FC1 stock) for an interest which is not a U.S. real property interest (the FC2 stock). A recognizes gain of $400,000. Under section 1012, A takes a $500,000 basis in the FC2 stock.

Example (9). (i) The facts are the same as in Example (7) except that the United States has a treaty with Country W that entitles FC1 and FC2 to nondiscriminatory treatment as described in §1.897-3(b)__(2). FC2, but not FC1, makes a valid section 897(i) election prior to the transaction.

(ii) FC1's exchange of Parcel P for the FC2 stock under section 361(a) is a disposition of a U.S. real property interest. FC1 does not recognize any gain under section 897(e) and paragraph (a)(1) of this section because there is an exchange of a U.S. real property interest (Parcel P) for another U.S. real property interest (the FC2 stock). DC takes a basis of $200,000 in Parcel P under section 362(b). FC2 takes a basis of $200,000 in the DC stock.

(iii) FC1's distribution of the FC2 stock to A in exchange for the FC1 stock is subject to section 897(d) and paragraph (c)(1) of §1.897-5T. Because A takes a basis of $100,000 in the FC2 stock under section 358(a) (which is less than the $200,000 basis of the FC2 stock in the hands of FC1), and A would be subject to U.S. taxation under section 897(a) on a subsequent disposition of the FC2 stock, FC1 does not recognize any gain under paragraph (c)(1) of §1.897-5T due to the statutory exception of paragraph (c)(2)(i) of that section, provided that FC1 complies with the filing requirements of paragraph (d)(1)(C) of §1.897-5T.

(iv) Since the FC1 stock was not a U.S. real property interest, its disposition by A in the section 354(a) exchange for FC2 stock is not subject to section 897(e) and paragraph (a)(1) of this section.

Example (10). The facts are the same as in Example (7), except that the United States has a treaty with Country W that entitles FC1 and FC2 to nondiscriminatory treatment as described in §1.897-3(b)(2). FC1 and FC2 made valid section 897(i) elections prior to the transactions.

(ii) FC1's transfer of Parcel P to DC in exchange for FC1 stock is not subject to section 897(e) and paragraph (a)(1) of this section because FC1 made an election under section 897(i). DC takes a basis of $200,000 in Parcel P under section 362(a). FC2 takes a basis of $200,000 in the DC stock.

(iii) FC1's distribution of the FC2 stock to A in exchange for the FC1 stock is not subject to section 897(d) and paragraph (c)(1) of §1.897-5T because FC1 made an election under section 897(i).

(iv) A does not recognize any gain on the exchange of the FC1 stock for the FC2 stock under section 354(a). Under paragraph (a)(1) of this section, there is an exchange of a U.S. real property interest (FC1 stock) for another U.S. real property interest (FC2 stock). A takes a basis of $100,000 in the FC2 stock under section 358(a).

(8) Treatment of nonqualifying property—(i) In general. If, under paragraph (a)(1) of this section, a nonrecognition provision would apply to an exchange but for the fact that nonqualifying property (cash or property other than U.S. real property interests) is received in addition to property (U.S. real property interests) that is permitted to be received under paragraph (a)(1) of this section, then the transferor shall recognize gain under this section equal to the lesser of—

(A) The sum of the cash received plus the fair market value of the nonqualifying property received, or

(B) The gain realized with respect to the U.S. real property interest transferred.

However, no loss shall be recognized pursuant to this paragraph (a)(8) unless such loss is otherwise permitted to be recognized.

(ii) Treatment of mixed exchanges. In a mixed exchange where both a U.S. real property interest and other property (including cash) is transferred in exchange both for property the receipt of which would qualify for nonrecognition treatment pursuant to paragraph (a)(1) of this section and for other property (including cash) which would not so qualify, the transferor will recognize gain in accordance with the rules set forth in subdivisions (A) through (C) of this paragraph (a)(8)(ii).

(A) Allocation of nonqualifying property. The amount of nonqualifying property (including cash) considered to be received in exchange for U.S. real property interests shall be determined by multiplying the fair market value of the nonqualifying property received by a fraction ("real property fraction"). The numerator of the fraction is the fair market value of the U.S. real property interest transferred in the exchange. The denominator of the fraction is the fair market value of all property transferred in the exchange.

(B) Recognition of gain. The amount of gain that must be recognized, and that shall be subject to U.S. taxation by reason of the operation of section 897, shall be equal to the lesser of:

(1) The amount determined under subdivision (A) of this paragraph (a)(8)(ii), or

(2) The gain or loss realized with respect to the U.S. real property interest exchanged.

(C) Treatment of other amounts. The treatment of other amounts received in a mixed exchange shall be determined as follows:

(1) The amount of nonqualifying property (including cash) considered to be received in exchange for property (including cash) other than U.S. real property interests shall be treated in the manner provided in the relevant nonrecognition provision. Such amounts shall be determined by subtracting the amount determined under subdivision (A) of this paragraph (a)(8)(ii) from the total amount of nonqualifying property received in the exchange.

(2) The amount of qualifying property considered to be received in exchange for U.S. real property interests shall be treated in the manner provided in paragraph (a)(1) of this section. Such amount shall be determined by multiplying the total fair market value of qualifying property received in the exchange by the real property fraction described in subdivision (A) of this paragraph (a)(8)(ii).

(3) The amount of qualifying property considered to be received in exchange for property other than U.S. real property interests shall be treated in the manner provided in the relevant nonrecognition provision. Such amount shall be determined by subtracting the amount determined under subdivision (2) of this paragraph (a)(8)(ii)(C) from the total fair market value of qualifying property received in the exchange.

(iii) Example. The rules of paragraph (a)(8)(ii) of this section may be illustrated by the following example.

Example. (i) A is an individual citizen and resident of country F. Country F does not have an income tax treaty with the United States. A is the sole proprietor of a business located in the United States, the assets of which consist of a U.S. real property interest with a fair market value of $1,000,000 and an adjusted basis of $700,000 and equipment used in the business with a fair market value of $500,000 and an adjusted basis of $250,000. A decides to incorporate the business, and on January 1, 1987, A transfers his assets to domestic corporation DC in exchange for 100 percent of the stock of DC, with a fair market value of $900,000. In addition, A receives a long term note (constituting a security) from DC for $600,000, bearing arm's length interest and repayment terms. DC has no assets other than those received in the exchange with A. Pursuant to section 897(c)(2) and §1.897-2, DC is a U.S. real property holding corporation. Therefore, the stock of DC is a U.S. real property interest. Assume that the note from DC constitutes an interest in the corporation solely as a creditor as provided by §1.897-1(d)(4) of the regulation. A complies with the filing requirements of paragraph (d)(1)(iii) of §1.897-5T.

(ii) Because the note from DC would not be subject to U.S. taxation upon its disposition, it is nonqualifying property for purposes of determining whether A is entitled to receive nonrecognition treatment pursuant to section 351 with respect to his exchange of the U.S. real property interest. Thus, A must recognize gain in the manner provided in paragraph (a)(8)(ii) of this section. Pursuant to paragraph (a)(8)(ii)(A), the amount of nonqualifying property received in exchange for the real property interests is determined by multiplying the fair market value of such property ($600,000) by the real property fraction. The numerator of the fraction is $1,000,000, the fair market value of the real property transferred by A. The denominator is $1,500,000, the fair market value of all property transferred by A. Thus, A is considered to have received $400,000 of the note in exchange for the real property ($600,000 × $1,000,000/$1,500,000). Pursuant to paragraph (a)(8)(ii)(B), A must recognize the lesser of the amount initially determined or the gain realized with respect to the U.S real property interest. Therefore, A must recognize the $300,000 gain realized with respect to the real property.

(iii) Pursuant to paragraph (a)(8)(ii)(C) of this section, A is considered to have received $200,000 of the note in exchange for equipment $600,000 [total value of note received] minus $400,000 [portion of note received in exchange for real property]), $600,000 of the stock in exchange for real property ($900,000 [total value of stock received] times $1,000,000/1,500,000 [proportion of property exchanged consisting of real property]), and $300,000 of the stock in exchange for equipment ($900,000 [total value of stock received] minus $600,000 [portion of stock received in exchange for real property). All three amounts are entitled to nonrecognition treatment pursuant to section 351.

(iv) Pursuant to paragraph (a)(2) of this section, A's basis in the stock and note received and DC's basis in the U.S. real property interest and equipment will be determined in accordance with the generally applicable rules. The $400,000 portion of the note received in exchange for the real property interest is other property. Pursuant to section 358(a)(2), A takes a fair market value ($400,000) basis for that portion of the note. Pursuant to section 358(a)(1), A's basis in the property received without the recognition of gain (the DC stock and the other portion of the note) will be equal to the basis of the property transferred ($950,000 [$700,000 basis of U.S. real property interest plus $250,000 basis of equipment]), decreased by the fair market value of the other property received ($400,000 portion of the note), and increased by the amount of gain recognized to A on the transaction ($300,000). Thus, A's basis in the stock and the nonrecognition portion of the note is $850,000 ($950,000 − $400,000 + $300,000). Under §1.358-2(b)(2) of the regulations, the $850,000 is allocated between the stock and the nonrecognition portion of the note in proportion to their fair market values. A takes a basis of $697,000 in the DC stock ($850,000 × 900,000/1,100,000). A takes a basis of $153,000 in the nonrecognition portion of the note ($850,000 × 200,000/1,100,000). A's basis in the note is $553,000 ($400,000 + $153,000). DC's basis in the property received from A will be determined under section 362(a). DC takes a basis of $1,000,000 in the real property interest (A's basis of $700,000 increased by the $300,000 of gain recognized by A on it). DC takes a basis of $250,000 in the equipment (A's basis of $250,000).

(9) Treaty exception to imposition of tax. If gain that would be currently recognized pursuant to the provisions of this section is subject to an exemption from, or reduction of, U.S. tax pursuant to a U.S. income tax treaty, then gain shall be recognized only as provided by that treaty for dispositions occurring before January 1, 1985. For dispositions occurring after December 31, 1984, all gain shall be recognized as provided in section 897 and the regulations thereunder, except as provided by Articles XII(9) and XXX(5) of the United States-Canada Income Tax Convention or other income tax treaty entered into after June 6, 1988. In regard to Article XXX(5) the Income Tax Treaty with Canada, see, Rev. Rul. 85-76, 1985-1 C.B. 409.

(b) Certain foreign to foreign exchanges—(1) Exceptions to the general rule. Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a)(1) of this section and pursuant to authority conferred by section 897(e)(2), a foreign person shall not recognize gain, in the instances described in paragraph (b)(2) of this section, on the transfer of a U.S. real property interest to a foreign corporation in exchange for stock in a foreign corporation, but only if the transferee's subsequent disposition of the transferred U.S real property interest would be subject to U.S. taxation, as determined in accordance with the provisions of §1.897-5T (d)(1), if the filing requirements of paragraph (d)(1)(iii) of §1.897-5T have been satisfied, if one of the five conditions set forth in paragraph (b)(2) exists, and if one of the following three forms of exchange takes place.

(i) The exchange is made by a foreign corporation pursuant to section 361(a) in a reorganization described in section 368(a)(1)(D) or (F) and there is an exchange of the transferor corporation stock for the transferee corporation stock under section 354(a); or

(ii) The exchange is made by a foreign corporation pursuant to section 361(a) in a reorganization described in section 368(a)(1)(C); there is an exchange of the transferor corporation stock for the transferee corporation stock (or stock of the transferee corporation's parent in the case of a parenthetical C reorganization) under section 354(a); and the transferor corporation's shareholders own more than fifty percent of the voting stock of the transferee corporation (or stock of the transferee corporation's parent in the case of a parenthetical C reorganization) immediately after the reorganization; or

(iii) The U.S. real property interest exchanged is stock in a U.S. real property holding corporation; the exchange qualifies under section 351(a) or section 354(a) in a reorganization described in section 368(a)(1)(B); and immediately after the exchange, all of the outstanding stock of the transferee corporation (or stock of the transferee corporation's parent in the case of a parenthetical B reorganization) is owned in the same proportions by the same nonresident alien individuals and foreign corporations that, immediately before the exchange, owned the stock of the U.S. real property holding corporation.

If, however, a nonresident alien individual or foreign corporation which received stock in an exchange described in subdivision (iii) of this paragraph (b)(1) (or the transferee corporation's parent) disposes of any of such foreign stock within three years from the date of its receipt, then that individual or corporation shall recognize that portion of the gain realized with respect to the stock in the U.S. real property holding corporation for which foreign stock disposed of was received.

(2) Applicability of exception. The exception to the provisions of paragraph (a)(1) provided by paragraph (b)(1) shall apply only if one of the following five conditions exists.

(i) Each of the interests exchanged or received in a transferor corporation or transferee corporation would not be a U.S. real property interest as defined in §1.897-1(c)(1) if such corporations were domestic corporations; or

(ii) The transferee corporation (and the transferee corporation's parent in the case of a parenthetical B or C reorganization) is incorporated in a foreign country that maintains an income tax treaty with the United States that contains an information exchange provision; the transfer occurs after May 5, 1988; and the transferee corporation (and the transferee corporation's parent in the case of a parenthetical B or C reorganization) submit a binding waiver of all benefits of the respective income tax treaty (including the opportunity to make an election under section 897(i)), which must be attached to each of the transferor and transferee corporation's income tax returns for the year of the transfer; or

(iii) The transferee foreign corporation (and the transferee corporation's parent in the case of a parenthetical B or C reorganization) is a qualified resident as defined in section 884(e) and any regulations thereunder of the foreign country in which it is incorporated; or

(iv) The transferee foreign corporation (and the transferee corporation's parent in the case of a parenthetical B or C reorganization) is incorporated in the same foreign country as the transferor foreign corporation; and there is an income tax treaty in force between that foreign country and the United States at the time of the transfer that contains an exchange of information provision; or

(v) The transferee foreign corporation is incorporated in the same foreign country as the transferor foreign corporation; and the transfer is incident to a mere change in identity, form, or place of organization of one corporation under section 368(a)(1)(F).

For purposes of any election by a transferee foreign corporation (or the transferee corporation's parent in the case of a parenthetical C reorganization) to be treated as domestic corporation under section 897(i) and §1.897-3 where the exchange was described in subdivisions (i) or (ii) of paragraph (b)(1) of this section, any prior dispositions of the transferor foreign corporation stock will be subject to the requirements of §1.897-3(d)(2) upon an election under section 897(i) by the transferee foreign corporation (or the transferee foreign corporation (or the transferee corporation's parent in the case of a parenthetical C reorganization).

(3) No exceptions. No exception to recognition of gain under paragraph (a)(1) of this section is provided for the transfer of a U.S. real property interest by a foreign person to a foreign corporation in exchange for stock in a foreign corporation other than as provided in this paragraph (b). Thus, no exception is provided where—

(i) Such exchange is made pursuant to section 351 and the U.S. real property interest transferred is not stock in a U.S. real property holding corporation; or

(ii) Such exchange is made pursuant to section 361(a) in a reorganization described in section 368(a)(1) that does not qualify for nonrecognition of gain under this paragraph (b). With regard to the treatment of certain foreign corporations as domestic corporations under section 897(i), see §§1.897-3 and 1.897-8T.

(4) Examples. The rules of paragraph (b)(1) and (2) of this section may be illustrated by the following examples. In each instance, the filing requirements of paragraph (d)(1)(iii) of §1.897-5T have been satisfied.

Example (1). (i) FC is a Country F corporation that has not made a section 897(i) election. FC owns Parcel P, a U.S. real property interest, with a fair market value of $450x and an adjusted basis of 100x.

(ii) FC transfers Parcel P to FS, its wholly owned Country F subsidiary, in exchange for FS stock under section 351(a). FS has not made a section 897(i) election. Under the rules of paragraph (a)(1) of this section, FC must recognize gain of 350x under section 897(a) because the FS stock received in the exchange is not a U.S. real property interest. No exception to the recognition rule of paragraph (a)(1) is provided under this paragraph (b) for a transfer under section 351(a) of a U.S. real property interest (that is not stock in a U.S. real property holding corporation) by a foreign corporation to another foreign corporation in exchange for stock of the transferee corporation.

Example (2). (i) FC is a Country F corporation that has not made a section 897(i) election. FC owns several U.S. real property interests that have appreciated in value since FC purchased the interests. FP, a Country F corporation, owns all of the outstanding stock of FC. Country F maintains an income tax treaty with the United States.

(ii) For valid business purposes, FC transferred substantially all of its assets including all of its U.S. real property interests to FS in 1989 under section 361(a) in a reorganization in exchange for FS stock. FS is a newly formed Country F corporation that is owned by FC. The transfer qualifies as a reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(D). FC immediately distributes the FS stock to FP in exchange for the FC stock and FC dissolves. FP has no gain or loss on the exchange of the FC stock for the FS stock under section 354(a).

(iii) Under the rules of paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section, FC does not recognize any gain on the transfer of the U.S. real property interests to FS under section 361(a) in the reorganization under section 368(a)(1)(D) because FS would be subject to U.S. taxation on a subsequent disposition of the interests, as required by paragraph (b)(1) of this section; there is an exchange of stock under section 354(a), as required by paragraph (b)(1)(i); and FC and FS are incorporated in Country F which maintains an income tax treaty with the United States, as required by paragraph (b)(2)(iv).

(5) Contributions of property. A foreign person that contributes a U.S. real property interest to a foreign corporation as paid in surplus or as a contribution to capital (including a contribution provided in section 304(a)) shall be treated, for purposes of section 897(j) and this section, as exchanging the U.S. real property interest for stock in the foreign corporation.

(c) Denial of nonrecognition with respect to certain tax avoidance transfers—(1) In general. The provisions of §1.897-5T and paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section are subject to the rules of this paragraph (c).

(2) Certain transfers to domestic corporations—(i) General rule. If a foreign person transfers property, that is not a U.S. real property interest, to a domestic corporation in a nonrecognition exchange, where—

(A) The adjusted basis of such property transferred exceeded its fair market value on the date of the transfer to the domestic corporation;

(B) The property transferred will not immediately be used in, or held by the domestic corporation for use in, the conduct of a trade or business as defined in §1.897-1(f); and

(C) Within two years of the transfer to the domestic corporation, the property transferred is sold at a loss;

then, it will be presumed, absent clear and convincing evidence to the contrary, that the purpose for transferring the loss property was the avoidance of taxation on the disposition of U.S. real property interests by the domestic corporation. Any loss recognized by the domestic corporation on the sale or exchange of such property shall not be used by the domestic corporation, either by direct offset or as part of a net operating loss or capital loss carryback or carryover to offset any gain recognized from the sale or exchange of a U.S. real property interest by the domestic corporation.

(ii) Example. The rules of paragraph (c)(2)(i) of this section may be illustrated by the following example.

Example. A is an individual citizen and resident of country F, which does not have an income tax treaty with the U.S. On January 1, 1987, A transfers a U.S. real property interest with a basis of $100,000 and a fair market value of $600,000 to domestic corporation DC in exchange for all of the stock of DC. On October 20, 1987, A transfers stock of a publicly traded domestic corporation with a basis in his hands of $900,000 and a fair market value of $500,000, in exchange for additional stock of DC. The stock of the publicly traded domestic corporation does not constitute an asset used or held for use in DC's trade or business. If DC sells the stock of the publicly traded domestic corporation before October 20, 1989 and recognizes a loss, the loss may not be used to offset any gain recognized on the sale of the U.S. real property interests by DC.

(3) Basis adjustment for certain related person transactions. In the case of any disposition after December 31, 1979, of a U.S. real property interest to a related person (within the meaning of section 453(f)(1)), the basis of the interest in the hands of the person acquiring such interest shall be reduced by the amount of any gain which is not subject to taxation under section 871(b)(1) or 882(a)(1) because the disposition occurred before June 19, 1980 or because of any treaty obligation of the United States. If a foreign corporation makes an election under section 897(i), and the stock of such corporation was transferred between related persons after December 31, 1979 and before June 19, 1980, then such stock shall be treated as a U.S. real property interest solely for purposes of this paragraph (c)(3).

(4) Rearrangement of ownership to gain treaty benefit. A foreign person who directly or indirectly owns a U.S. real property interest may not directly or indirectly rearrange the incidents of ownership of the U.S. real property interest through the use of nonrecognition provisions in order to gain the benefit of a treaty exemption from taxation. Such nonrecognition will not apply to the foreign transferor. The transferor will recognize gain but not loss on the transfer under section 897(a).

(d) Effective date. Except as specifically provided otherwise in the text of the regulations, paragraphs (a) through (c) shall be effective for transfers, exchanges and other dispositions occurring after June 18, 1980. Paragraph (a)(5)(ii) of this section shall be effective for exchanges and elections occurring after June 6, 1988.

§1.897-7T Treatment of certain partnership interests as entirely U.S. real property interests under sections 897(g) and 1445(e) (Temporary).

(a) Rule. Pursuant to section 897(g), an interest in a partnership in which, directly or indirectly, fifty percent or more of the value of the gross assets consist of U.S. real property interests, and ninety percent or more of the value of the gross assets consist of U.S. real property interests plus any cash or cash equivalents shall, for purposes of section 1445, be treated as entirely a U.S. real property interest. For purposes of section 897(g), such interest shall be treated as a

U.S. real property interest only to the extent that the gain on the disposition is attributable to U.S. real property interests (and not cash, cash equivalents or other property). Consequently, a disposition of any portion of such partnership interest shall be subject to partial taxation under section 897(a) and full withholding under section 1445(a). For purposes of this paragraph, cash equivalent means any asset readily convertible into cash (whether or not denominated in U.S. dollars) including, but not limited to, bank accounts, certificates of deposit, money market accounts, commercial paper, U.S. and foreign treasury obligations and bonds, corporate obligations and bonds, precious metals or commodities, and publicly traded instruments.

(b) Effective date. Section 1.897-7T shall be effective for transfers, exchanges, distributions and other dispositions occurring after June 6, 1988.

§1.897-8T Status as a U.S. real property holding corporation as a condition for electing section 897(i) pursuant to §1.897-3 (Temporary).

(a) Purpose and scope. This section provides a temporary regulation that, if and when adopted as a final regulation, will be added to paragraph (b) of §1.897-3. Paragraph (b) of this section would then appear as paragraph (b)(4) of §1.897-3.

(b) General conditions. The foreign corporation upon making an election under section 897(i) (including any retroactive election) must qualify as a U.S. real property holding corporation as defined in paragraph (b)(1) of §1.897-2.

(c) Effective date. Section 1.897-8T shall be effective as of June 6, 1988, with respect to foreign corporations making an election under section 897(i) after May 5, 1988.

§1.897-9T Treatment of certain interest in publicly traded corporations, definition of foreign person, and foreign governments and international organizations. (Temporary).

(a) Purpose and scope. This section provides a temporary regulation that, if and when adopted as a final regulation, will be added as new paragraphs (c)(2)(iii)(B),(k), (n) and (q) of §1.897-1. Paragraph (b) of this section would then appear as paragraph (c)(2)(iii)(B) of §1.897-1. Paragraph (c) of this section would then appear as paragraph (k) of §1.897-1. Paragraph (d) of this section would then appear as paragraph (n) of §1.897-1. Paragraph (e) of this section would then appear as paragraph (q) of §1.897-1.

(b) Any other interest in the corporation (other than an interest solely as a creditor) if on the date such interest was acquired by its present holder it had a fair market value greater than the fair market value on that date of 5 percent of the regularly traded class of the corporation's stock with the lowest fair market value. However, if a non-regularly traded class of interests in the corporation is convertible into a regularly traded class of interests in the corporation, an interest in such non-regularly traded class shall be treated as a U.S. real property interest if on the date it was acquired by its present holder it had a fair market value greater than the fair market value on that date of 5 percent of the regularly traded class of the corporation's stock into which it is convertible. If a person holds interests in a corporation of a class that is not regularly traded, and subsequently acquires additional interests of the same class, then all such interests must be aggregated and valued as of the date of the subsequent acquisition. If the subsequent acquisition causes that person's interests to exceed the applicable limitation, then all such interests shall be treated as U.S. real property interests, regardless of when acquired. In addition, if a person holds interests in a corporation of separate classes that are not regularly traded, and if such interests were separately acquired for a principal purpose of avoiding the applicable 5 percent limitation of this paragraph, then such interests shall be aggregated for purposes of applying that limitation. This rule shall not apply to interests of separate classes acquired in transactions more than three years apart. For purposes of paragraph (c)(2)(iii) of §1.897-1, section 318(a) shall apply (except that section 318(a)(2)(C) and (3)(C) shall each be applied by substituting "5 percent" for "50 percent").

(c) Foreign person. The term "foreign person" means a nonresident alien individual (including an individual subject to the provisions of section 877), a foreign corporation as defined in paragraph (l) of this section, a foreign partnership, a foreign trust or a foreign estate, as such persons are defined respectively by §1.871-2 and by 7701 and the regulations thereunder. A resident alien individual, including a nonresident alien with respect to whom there is in effect an election under section 6013(g) or (h) to be treated as United States resident, is not a foreign person. With respect to the status of foreign governments and international organizations, see paragraph (e) of this section.

(d) Regularly traded—(1) General rule—(i) Trading requirements. A class of interests that is traded on one or more established securities markets is considered to be regularly traded on such market or markets for any calendar quarter during which—

(A) Trades in such class are effected, other than in de minimis quantities, on at least 15 days during the calendar quarter;

(B) The aggregate number of the interests in such class traded is at least 7.5 percent or more of the average number of interests in such class outstanding during the calendar quarter; and

(C) The requirements of paragraph (d)(3) of this section are met.

(ii) Exceptions.—(A) In the case of the class of interests which is held by 2,500 or more record shareholders, the requirements of paragraph (d)(1)(i)(B) of this section shall be applied by substituting "2.5 percent" for "7.5 percent".

(B) If at any time during the calendar quarter 100 or fewer persons own 50 percent or more of the outstanding shares of a class of interests, such class shall not be considered to be regularly traded for purposes of sections 897, 1445 and 6039C. Related persons shall be treated as one person for purposes of this paragraph (d)(1)(ii)(B).

(iii) Anti-abuse rule. Trades between related persons shall be disregarded. In addition, a class of interests shall not be treated as regularly traded if there is an arrangement or a pattern of trades designed to meet the requirements of this paragraph (d)(1). For example, trades between two persons that occur several times during the calendar quarter may be treated as an arrangement or a pattern of trades designed to meet the requirements of this paragraph (d)(1)

(2) Interests traded on domestic established securities markets. For purposes of sections 897, 1445 and 6039C, a class of interests that is traded on an established securities market located in the United States is considered to be regularly traded for any calendar quarter during which it is regularly quoted by brokers or dealers making a market in such interests. A broker or dealer makes a market in a class of interests only if the broker or dealer holds himself out to buy or sell interests in such class at the quoted price. Stock of a corporation that is described in section 851(a)(1) and units of a unit investment trust registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. sections 80a-1 to 80a-2) shall be treated as regularly traded within the meaning of this paragraph.

(3) Reporting requirement for interests traded on foreign securities markets. A class of interests in a domestic corporation that is traded on one or more established securities markets located outside the United States shall not be considered to be regularly traded on such market or markets unless such class is traded in registered form, and—

(i) The corporation registers such class of interests pursuant to section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, 15 U.S.C., sec. 78, or

(ii) The corporation attaches to its federal income tax return a statement providing the following:

(A) A caption which states "The following information concerning certain shareholders of this corporation is provided in accordance with the requirements of §1.897-9T."

(B) The name under which the corporation is incorporated, the state in which such corporation is incorporated, the principal place of business of the corporation, and its employer identification number, if any;

(C) The identity of each person who, at any time during the corporation's taxable year, was the beneficial owner of more than 5 percent of any class of interests of the corporation to which this paragraph (d)(3) applies;

(D) The title, and the total number of shares issued, of any class of interests so owned; and

(E) With respect to each beneficial owner of more than 5 percent of any class of interests of the corporation, the number of shares owned, the percentage of the class represented thereby, and the nature of the beneficial ownership of each class of shares so owned.

Interests in a domestic corporation which has filed a report pursuant to this paragraph (d)(3)(ii) shall be considered to be regularly traded on an established securities market only for the taxable year of the corporation with respect to which such a report is filed.

(4) Coordination with section 1445. For purposes of section 1445, a class of interests in a corporation shall be presumed to be regularly traded during a calendar quarter if such interests were regularly traded within the meaning of this paragraph during the previous calendar quarter.

(e) Foreign governments and international organizations. A foreign government shall be treated as a foreign person with respect to U.S. real property interests, and shall be subject to sections 897, 1445, and 6039C on the disposition of a U.S. real property interest except to the extent specifically otherwise provided in the regulations issued under section 892. An international organization (as defined in section 7701(a)(18)) is not a foreign person with respect to U.S. real property interests, and is not subject to sections 897, 1445, and 6039C on the disposition of a U.S. real property interest. Buildings or parts of buildings and the land ancillary thereto (including the residence of the head of the diplomatic mission) used by the foreign government for a diplomatic mission shall not be a U.S. real property interest in the hands of the respective foreign government.

(f) Effective date. Section 1.897-9T with the exception of paragraph (e) shall be effective for transfers, exchanges, distributions and other dispositions occurring on or after June 6, 1988. Paragraph (e) of this section shall be effective for transfers, exchanges, distributions and other dispositions occurring on or after July 1, 1986.

Par. 4. Section 1.1445-2 is amended by removing paragraph (d)(2)(iii), effective after August 3, 1988, and by removing paragraph (d)(2)(iv), effective after June 6, 1988. Section 1.1445-2 is also amended by removing paragraph (d)(6), effective after June 6, 1988. Paragraph (d)(6) is hereby reserved.

Par. 5. Section 1.1445-5 is amended by removing paragraphs (b)(2)(iii), (b)(8)(v), and (c)(2)(i), effective after June 6, 1988. Paragraphs (b)(8)(v) and (c)(2)(i) are hereby reserved.

Par. 6. The following new sections are added immediately after §1.1445-8T.

§1.1445-9T Special rule for section 1034 nonrecognition (Temporary).

(a) Purpose and scope. This section provides a temporary regulation that, if and when adopted as a final regulation, will add a new paragraph (d)(2)(iii) to §1.1445-2. Paragraph (b) of this section would then appear as paragraph (d)(2)(iii) of §1.1445-2.

(b) No particular form is required for a transferor's notice to a transferee that the transferor is not required to recognize gain or loss with respect to a transfer. The notice must be verified as true and signed under penalties of perjury by a responsible officer in the case of a corporation, by a general partner in the case of a partnership, and by a trustee or equivalent fiduciary in the case of a trust or estate. The following information must be set forth in paragraphs labeled to correspond with the designation set forth below:

(1) A statement that the document submitted constitutes a notice of a nonrecognition transfer pursuant to the requirements of §1.1445-2(d)(2);

(2) The name, identifying number (if any), and home address (in the case of an individual) or office address (in the case of an entity) of the transferor submitting the notice;

(3) A statement that the transferor is not required to recognize any gain or loss with respect to the transfer;

(4) A brief description of the transfer;

(5) A brief summary of the law and facts supporting the claim that recognition of gain or loss is not required with respect to the transfer; and

(6) If the transferor claims nonrecognition on the sale or exchange of a principal residence under section 1034(a) and another principal residence in the United States has not been purchased as of the date of sale of the principal residence, either (i) a copy of an executed binding contract for purchase by the transferor of a further principal residence in the United States with a purchase price exceeding the adjusted sales price of the old principal residence or (ii) an affidavit by the transferor signed under penalties of perjury stating that the transferor intends to complete purchase of another principal residence within the United States with a purchase price exceeding the adjusted sales price of the old principal residence by April 15 of the year following the taxable year of the sale of the principal residence, and that the transferor is expected to continue to be employed or stationed in the United States for a period of two years from the sale of the principal residence. If the transferor's adjusted sales price of the old principal residence exceeds the transferor's cost of purchasing another principal residence in the United States, withholding shall be required at the rate of ten percent on the portion of the gross amount realized on the sale or exchange of the principal residence equal to such excess.

(c) Effective Date. The rules of this section are effective with respect to sale of a principal residence after August 3, 1988.

§1.1445-10T Special rule for Foreign governments (Temporary).

(a) This section provides a temporary regulation that, if and when adopted as a final regulation, will add a new paragraph (d)(6) to §1.1445-2. Paragraph (b) of this section would then appear as paragraph (d)(6) of §1.1445-2.

(b) Foreign government—(1) As transferor. A foreign government is subject to U.S. taxation under section 897 on the disposition of a U.S. real property interest except to the extent specifically otherwise provided in the regulations issued under section 892. A foreign government that disposes of a U.S. real property interest that is not subject to taxation as specifically provided by the regulations under section 892 may present a notice of nonrecognition treatment pursuant to paragraph (d)(2) of this section that specifically cites the provision of such regulation, and thereby avoids withholding by the transferee of the property. A foreign government that disposes of a U.S. real property interest or the transferee of the property may obtain a withholding certificate from the Internal Revenue Service that confirms the applicability of section 892, but neither is required to do so. Rules concerning the issuance of withholding certificates are provided in §1.1445-3.

(2) An transferee. A foreign government or international organization that acquires a U.S. real property interest is fully subject to section 1445 and the regulations thereunder. Therefore, such an entity is required to withhold tax upon the acquisition of a U.S. real property interest from a foreign person.

(c) Effective date. The rules of this section shall be effective for transfers, exchanges, distributions and other dispositions occurring on or after June 6, 1988.

§1.1445-11T Special rules requiring withholding under §1.1445-5 (Temporary).

(a) Purpose and scope. This section provides temporary regulations that, if and when adopted as a final regulation, will add certain new paragraphs within §1.1445-5(b) and (c). The paragraphs of this section would then appear as set forth below. Paragraph (b) of this section would then appear as paragraph (b)(8)(v) of §1.1445-5. Paragraph (c) of this section would then appear as paragraph (c)(2)(i) of §1.1445-5. Paragraph (d) of this section would then appear as paragraph (g) of §1.1445-5.

(b) Disposition of interests in partnerships, trusts, and estates. The provisions of section 1445(e)(5), requiring withholding upon certain dispositions of interests in partnerships, trusts, and estates, that own directly or indirectly a U.S. real property interest shall apply to dispositions on or after the effective date of a later Treasury decision under section 897(g) of the Code except in the case of dispositions of interests in partnerships in which fifty percent of the value of the gross assets consist of U.S. real property interests and ninety percent or more of the value of the gross assets consist of U.S. real property interests plus any cash or cash equivalents. The provisions of section 1445(e)(5), shall apply, however, to dispositions after June 6, 1988, of interests in partnerships in which fifty percent or more of the value of the gross assets consist of U.S. real property interests, and ninety percent or more of the value of the gross assets consist of U.S. real property interests plus any cash or cash equivalents. See paragraph (d) of this section.

(c) Transactions covered elsewhere. No withholding is required under this paragraph (c) with respect to the distribution of a U.S. real property interest by a partnership, trust, or estate. Such distributions shall be subject to withholding under section 1445(e)(4) and paragraph (f) of this §1.1445-5 on the effective date of a later Treasury decision published under section 897(g) of the Code. No withholding is required at this time for distributions described in the preceding sentence. See paragraph (b)(8)(iv) of this §1.1445-5. No withholding is required under this paragraph with respect to the disposition of an interest in a trust, estate, or partnership except in the case of a partnership in which fifty percent or more of the value of the gross assets consist of U.S. real property interests, and ninety percent or more of the value of the gross assets consist of U.S. real property interests plus any cash or cash equivalents. See paragraph (b)(8)(v) of §1.1445-5. Withholding shall be required as provided in section 1445(e)(5) and paragraph (g) of this section with respect to the disposition after June 6, 1988, of an interest in a partnership in which fifty percent or more of the value of the gross assets consist of U.S. real property interests, and ninety percent or more of the value of the gross assets consist of U.S. real property interests plus any cash or cash equivalents.

(d) Dispositions of interests in partnerships, trusts, and estates—(1) Withholding required on disposition of certain partnership interests. Withholding is required under section 1445(e)(5) and this paragraph with respect to the disposition by a foreign partner of an interest in a domestic or foreign partnership in which fifty percent or more of the value of the gross assets consist of U.S. real property interests, and ninety percent or more of the value of the gross assets consist of U.S. real property interests plus any cash or cash equivalents. For purposes of this paragraph cash equivalents means any asset readily convertible into cash (whether or not denominated in U.S. dollars), including, but not limited to, bank accounts, certificates of deposit, money market accounts, commercial paper, U.S. and foreign treasury obligations and bonds, corporate obligations and bonds, precious metals or commodities, and publicly traded instruments. The taxpayer on filing an income tax return for the year of the disposition may demonstrate the extent to which the gain on the disposition of the interest is not attributable to U.S. real property interests. A taxpayer is also permitted by §1.1445-3 to apply for a withholding certificate in instances where reduced withholding is appropriate.

(2) Withholding not required—(i) Transferee receives statement that interest in partnership is not described in paragraph (1). No withholding is required under paragraph (d)(1) of this section upon the disposition of a partnership interest otherwise described in that paragraph if the transferee is provided a statement, issued by the partnership and signed by a general partner under penalties of perjury no earlier than 30 days before the transfer, certifying that fifty percent or more of the value of the gross assets does not consist of U.S. real property interests, or that ninety percent or more of the value of the gross assets of the partnership does not consist of U.S. real property interests plus cash or cash equivalents.

(ii) Reliance on statement not permitted. A transferee is not entitled to rely upon a statement described in paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section if, prior to or at the time of the transfer, the transferee either—

(A) Has actual knowledge that the statement is false, or

(B) Receives a notice, pursuant to §1.1445-4.

Such a transferee's withholding obligations shall apply as if the statement had never been given, and such a transferee may be held fully liable pursuant to §1.1445-1(e) for any failure to withhold.

(iii) Belated notice of false statement. If, after the date of the transfer, a transferee receives notice that a statement provided under paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section is false, then such transferee may rely on the statement only with respect to consideration that was paid prior to the receipt of the notice. Such a transferee is required to withhold a full 10 percent of the amount realized from the consideration that remains to be paid to the transferor. Thus, if 10 percent or more of the amount realized remains to be paid to the transferor, then the transferee is required to withhold and pay over the full 10 percent. The transferee must do so by withholding and paying over the entire amount of each successive payment of consideration to the transferor, until the full 10 percent of the amount realized has been withheld and paid over. Amounts so withheld must be reported and paid over by the 20th day following the date on which each such payment of consideration is made. A transferee that is subject to the rules of this §1.1445-10T(d)(2)(iii) may not obtain a withholding certificate pursuant to §1.1445-3, but must instead withhold and pay over the amounts required by this paragraph.

(e) Effective date. The rules of this section are effective for transactions after June 6, 1988.

T.D. 8201

TITLE 26—INTERNAL REVENUE.—CHAPTER 1, SUBCHAPTER A, PART 1.—INCOME TAX; TAXABLE YEARS BEGINNING AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1953

Section 904(f) Transition Rules

AGENCY: Internal Revenue Service, Treasury.

ACTION: Temporary regulations.

SUMMARY: This document provides temporary regulations relating to transition rules for implementing the changes made to section 904(f) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 [1986-3 (Vol.1) C.B. 1]. The regulations provide the public with the immediate guidance needed to comply with that Act and will affect individuals and entities claiming the foreign tax credit. The text of the temporary regulations set forth in this document also serves as the text of the proposed regulations cross-referenced in the notice of proposed rulemaking in  [INTL-932-86, page 915, this Bulletin].

DATES; These temporary regulations apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, and are effective after December 31, 1986.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

BACKGROUND

This document contains Temporary Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under section 904 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

NEED FOR TEMPORARY REGULATIONS

The proper application of section 904(f) is dependent upon the Internal Revenue Service's detailed specifications of the manner in which the requirements of the statue will be administered. Because of the need for immediate guidance in this regard, the Internal Revenue Service has found it to be impractical to issue these temporary regulations either with notice and public comment procedure under section 553(b) of title 5 of the United States Code, or under the effective date limitation of section 553(d) of title 5.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISIONS

Prior Law

Prior to 1987, if a taxpayer sustained a foreign source loss with respect to income in a separate limitation category, the loss was treated as offsetting the taxpayer's U.S. source income before offsetting foreign source income subject to another separate limitation. A foreign tax credit was allowed for the taxpayer's other foreign source income if that income was subject to foreign tax. Thus, it was possible for a taxpayer to enjoy a double benefit in a single taxable year in the form of reduced U.S. source income and a foreign tax credit.

Statutory Provision

Section 1203 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 amended section 904(f) by adding paragraph (5) at the end thereof which requires that a foreign source loss with respect to any income category first offset the taxpayer's foreign source income subject to other separate limitations for the taxable year on a proportionate basis before the loss offsets the taxpayer's U.S. source income.

Explanation of Temporary Regulations

The Tax Reform Act of 1986 changed the order in which foreign source losses offset U.S. source and foreign source income of a taxpayer and expanded the number of separate limitation categories for income. The Temporary Regulations contained in this document provide transition rules for the treatment of overall foreign losses incurred by a taxpayer in taxable years beginning before January 1, 1987 (pre-effective date years), that are recaptured in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986 (post-effective date years). In addition, transition rules are provided for an overall foreign loss that is part of a net operating loss incurred in a pre-effective date year which is carried forward to a post-effective date year and for an overall foreign loss that is part of a net operating loss incurred in a post-effective date year which is carried back to a pre-effective date year.

§1.904(f)-13T
Transition rules

Paragraph (a)(1) provides that an overall foreign loss incurred in a pre-effective date year shall be recaptured in post-effective date years by recharacterizing income received in the income category described in section 904(d) as in effect for post-effective date years that is analogous to the income category for which the overall foreign loss account was established. For example, an overall foreign loss incurred with respect to the income category described in section 904(d)(1)(B) (Dividends from a DISC or former DISC) as in effect for pre-effective date years shall be recaptured from income earned in the income category described in section 904(d)(1)(F) (Dividends from a DISC or former DISC) as in effect for post-effective date years.

Paragraph (a)(2)(i) provides, in general, that an overall foreign loss incurred in the general limitation category of section 904(d)(1)(E), as in effect for pre-effective date years, shall be recaptured from the taxpayer's post-effective date general limitation income, financial services income, shipping income and dividends from each noncontrolled section 902 corporation. If the sum of the taxpayer's general limitation income, financial services income, shipping income and dividends from each noncontrolled section 902 corporation for a taxable year subject to recapture exceeds the pre-effective date overall foreign loss to be recaptured, then the amount of each type of separate limitation income that will be treated as U.S. source income is determined pursuant to a formula set forth in paragraph (a)(2)(i).

Paragraph (a)(2)(ii) provides an exception to the general rule for recapture of an overall foreign loss in the general limitation category of section 904(d)(1)(E) as in effect for pre-effective date years if a taxpayer can demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Internal Revenue Service that the loss is attributable, in sums certain, to one or more separate categories of section 904(d)(1), as in effect for post-effective date taxable years. In such a case, the taxpayer may recapture the loss (in the amounts demonstrated) from those limitation categories only.

Paragraph (a)(3) provides that an overall foreign loss incurred by a taxpayer in a pre-effective date year shall be recaptured to the extent thereof before recapture of post-effective date overall foreign losses.

Paragraph (b) provides that an overall foreign loss that is part of a net operating loss incurred in a pre-effective date taxable year which is carried forward to a post-effective date year will be allocated first to income in the income category analogous to the income category set forth in section 904(d) as in effect for pre-effective date taxable years in which the loss occurred. If the loss exceeds income in the analogous income category, the loss shall be allocated to other foreign source income earned by the taxpayer in accordance with the rules set forth in section 904(f)(5). Losses remaining after application of section 904(f)(5) shall be allocated to the taxpayer's U.S. source income, which will create an addition to the taxpayer's overall foreign loss account.

Paragraph (c)(1) provides that an overall foreign loss that is part of a net operating loss incurred by the taxpayer in a post-effective date taxable year which is carried back to a pre-effective date taxable year shall be allocated first to income in the pre-effective date income category analogous to the income category set forth in section 904(d) as in effect for post-effective date taxable years in which the loss occurred. The general limitation income category for pre-effective date years shall be treated as the income category that is analogous to post-effective date general limitation income, financial services income, shipping income, dividends from each noncontrolled section 902 corporation and high withholding tax interest income.

Paragraph (c)(2) provides that if an overall foreign loss carried back to a pre-effective date taxable year exceeds the foreign source income in the analogous category for the carry back year, the remaining loss shall be allocated against U.S. source income as set forth in §1.904(f)-3. An addition to an overall foreign loss account resulting from the carry back of a net operating loss shall be treated as having been incurred by the taxpayer in the year in which the loss arose and shall be subject to recapture pursuant to section 904(f) as in effect for post-effective date years.

Paragraph (c)(3) provides that to the extent that an overall foreign loss carried back as part of a net operating loss exceeds the separate limitation income to which it is allocated and the U.S. source income of the taxpayer for the taxable year, the loss shall be allocated pro rata to other separate limitation income of the taxpayer for the taxable year. However, there shall be no recharacterization of separate limitation income pursuant to section 904(f)(5) as a result of the allocation of the net operating loss to other separate limitation income of the taxpayer.

Paragraph (d) provides that for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, and before January 1, 1991, the rules set forth in §1.904(f)-6 shall apply for purposes of recapturing general limitation and foreign oil related income (FORI) overall foreign losses incurred in taxable years beginning before January 1, 1983 (pre-1983). For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1990, the rules set forth in §1.904(f)-13T shall apply for purposes of recapturing pre-1983 general limitation and FORI overall foreign losses.

Paragraph (e) provides that the rules set forth in paragraph (a)(2) shall apply for purposes of recapturing overall foreign losses incurred in taxable years beginning before January 1, 1983, that were computed on a combined basis in accordance with §1.904(f)-1(c)(1).

NONAPPLICABILITY OF EXECUTIVE ORDER 12291

The Treasury Department has determined that these temporary regulations are not subject to review under Executive Order 12291. Accordingly, a Regulatory Impact Analysis is not required.

SPECIAL ANALYSES

A general notice of proposed rulemaking is not required by 5 U.S.C. 553(b) for temporary regulations. Accordingly, the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U.S.C. chapter 6) does not apply and no Regulatory Flexibility Analysis is required for this rule.

Adoption of amendments to the regulations

Accordingly, 26 CFR Part 1 is amended as follows:

INCOME TAX REGULATIONS
(26 CFR Part 1)

Paragraph 1. The authority for Part 1 continues to read in part:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805. ***

Par. 2. New §1.904(f)-13T is added immediately after §1.904(f)-6. Sections 1.904(f)-7 through §1.904(f)-12 are reserved. The added section reads as follows:

§1.904(f)-13T Transition rules.

(a) Recapture in years beginning after December 31, 1986, of overall foreign losses incurred in taxable years beginning before January 1, 1987—(1) In general. If a taxpayer has a balance in an overall foreign loss account at the end of its last taxable year beginning before January 1, 1987 (pre-effective date years), the amount of that balance shall be recaptured in subsequent years by recharacterizing income received in the income category described in section 904(d) as in effect for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986 (post-effective date years), that is analogous to the income category for which the overall foreign loss account was established, as follows:

(i) Interest income as defined in section 904(d)(1)(A) as in effect for pre-effective date taxable years is analogous to passive income as defined in section 904(d)(1)(A) as in effect for post-effective date years;

(ii) Dividends from a DISC or former DISC as defined in section 904(d)(1)(B) as in effect for pre-effective date taxable years is analogous to dividends from a DISC or former DISC as defined in section 904(d)(1)(F) as in effect for post-effective date taxable years;

(iii) Taxable income attributable to foreign trade income as defined in section 904(d)(1)(C) as in effect for pre-effective date taxable years is analogous to taxable income attributable to foreign trade income as defined in section 904(d)(1)(G) as in effect for post-effective date years;

(iv) Distributions from a FSC (or former FSC) as defined in section 904(d)(1)(D) as in effect to pre-effective date taxable years is analogous to distributions from a FSC (or former FSC) as defined in section 904(d)(1)(H) as in effect for post-effective date taxable years;

(v) For general limitation income as described in section 904(d)(1)(E) as in effect for pre-effective date taxable years, see special rule in paragraph (a)(2) of this section.

(2) Rule for general limitation losses—(i) In general. Overall foreign losses incurred in the general limitation category of section 904(d)(1)(E), as in effect for pre-effective date taxable years, that are recaptured in post-effective date taxable years shall be recaptured from the taxpayer's general limitation income, financial services income, shipping income, and dividends from each noncontrolled section 902 corporation. If the sum of the taxpayer's general limitation income, financial services income, shipping income and dividends from each noncontrolled section 902 corporation for a taxable year subject to recapture exceeds the overall foreign loss to be recaptured, then the amount of each type of separate limitation income that will be treated as U.S. source income shall be determined as follows:

Overall foreign loss subject to recapture × Amount of income in each separate category from which the loss may be recaptured Sum of income in all separate categories from which the loss may be recaptured.

This allocation shall be made after application of section 905(f)(5).

(ii) Exception. If a taxpayer can demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Internal Revenue Service that an overall foreign loss in the general limitation category of section 904(d)(1)(E), as in effect for pre-effective date taxable years, is attributable, in sums certain, to one or more separate categories of section 904(d)(1), as in effect for post-effective date taxable years, then the taxpayer may recapture the loss (in the amounts demonstrated) from those separate categories only.

(3) Priority of recapture of overall foreign losses incurred in pre-effective date taxable years. An overall foreign loss incurred by a taxpayer in pre-effective date taxable years shall be recaptured to the extent thereof before the taxpayer recaptures an overall foreign loss incurred in a post-effective date taxable year.

(4) Examples. The following examples illustrate the application of paragraph (a).

Example (1). X corporation is a domestic corporation which operates a branch in Country Y. For its taxable year ending December 31, 1988, X has $800 of financial services income, $100 of general limitation income and $100 of shipping income. X has a balance of $100 in its general limitation overall foreign loss account which resulted from an overall foreign loss incurred during its 1986 taxable year. X is unable to demonstrate to which of the income categories set forth in section 904(d)(1) the loss is attributable. In addition, X has a balance of $100 in its shipping overall foreign loss account attributable to a shipping loss incurred during its 1987 taxable year. X has no other overall foreign loss accounts. Pursuant to section 904(f)(1), the full amount in each of X corporation's overall foreign loss accounts is subject to recapture since $200 (the sum of those amounts) is less than 50% of X's foreign source taxable income for its 1988 taxable year, or $500. X's overall foreign loss incurred during its 1986 taxable year is recaptured before the overall foreign loss incurred during its 1987 taxable year as follows: $80 ($100 × 800/1000) of X's financial services income, $10 ($100 × 100/1000) of X's general limitation income, and $10 ($100 × 100/1000) of X's shipping income will be treated as U.S. source income. The remaining $90 of X corporation's shipping income will be treated as U.S. source income for the purpose of recapturing X's $100 overall foreign loss attributable to the shipping loss incurred in 1987. $10 remains in X's shipping overall foreign loss account for recapture in subsequent taxable years.

Example (2). The facts are the same as in Example (1) except that X has $800 of financial services income, $100 of general limitation income, a $100 dividend from a noncontrolled section 902 corporation and a ($100) shipping loss for its taxable year ending December 31, 1988. Pursuant to paragraph (a)(2) of this section, the rules of section 904(f)(5) apply before recapture of overall foreign losses. Therefore, the ($100) shipping loss incurred by X will be allocated to its separate limitation income as follows: $80 ($100 × 800/1000) will be allocated to X's financial services income, $10 ($100 × 100/1000) will be allocated to its general limitation income and $10 ($100 × 100/1000) will be allocated to X's dividend from the noncontrolled section 902 corporation. Accordingly, after allocation of the 1988 shipping loss, X has $720 of financial services income, $90 of general limitation income, and a $90 dividend from its noncontrolled section 902 corporation. Pursuant to section 904(f)(1), the full amount in each of X corporation's overall foreign loss accounts is subject to recapture since $200 (the sum of those amounts) is less than 50% of X's foreign source taxable income for its 1988 taxable year, or $450. X's overall foreign loss incurred during its 1986 taxable year is recaptured as follows; $80 ($100 × 720/900) of X's financial services income, $10 ($100 × 90/900) of its general limitation income and $10 ($100 × 90/900) of its dividend from the noncontrolled section 902 corporation will be treated as U.S. source income. Accordingly, after application of section 904(f), X has $100 of U.S. source income, $640 of financial services income, $80 of general limitation income and a $80 dividend from its noncontrolled section 902 corporation for its 1988 taxable year. X must establish a separate limitation loss account for each portion of the 1988 shipping loss that was allocated to its financial services income, general limitation income and dividends from its noncontrolled section 902 corporation. X's overall foreign loss account for the 1986 general limitation loss is reduced to zero. X still has a $100 balance in its overall foreign loss account that resulted from the 1987 shipping loss.

Example (3). Y is a domestic corporation which has a branch operation in Country Z. For its 1988 taxable year, Y has $5 of shipping income, $15 of general limitation income and $100 of financial services income. Y has a balance of $100 in its general limitation overall foreign loss account attributable to its 1986 taxable year. Y has no other overall foreign loss accounts. Pursuant to section 904(f)(1), $60 of the overall foreign loss is subject to recapture since 50% of Y's foreign source income for 1988 is less than the amount of its overall foreign loss for 1986. Y can demonstrate that the entire $100 overall foreign loss was attributable to a shipping limitation loss incurred in 1986. Accordingly, only Y's $5 of shipping limitation income received in 1988 will be treated as U.S. source income. Because Y can demonstrate that the 1986 loss was entirely attributable to a shipping loss, none of Y's general limitation income or financial services income received in 1988 will be treated as U.S. source income.

Example (4). The facts are the same as in Example (3) except that Y can only demonstrate that $50 of the 1986 overall foreign loss account was attributable to a shipping loss incurred in 1986. Accordingly, Y's $5 of shipping limitation income received in 1988 will be treated as U.S. source income. The remaining $50 of the 1986 overall foreign loss that Y cannot trace to a particular separate limitation will be recaptured and treated as U.S. source income as follows: $43 ($50 × 100/115) of Y's financial services income will be treated as U.S. source income and $7 ($50 × 15/115) of Y's general limitation income will be treated as U.S. source income.

(b) Treatment of overall foreign losses that are part of net operating losses incurred in pre-effective date taxable years which are carried forward to post-effective date taxable years—(1) Rule. An overall foreign loss that is part of a net operating loss incurred in a pre-effective date taxable year which is carried forward, pursuant to section 172, to a post-effective date taxable year will be allocated first to income in the category analogous to the income category set forth in section 904(d) as in effect for pre-effective date taxable years in which the loss occurred. The analogous category shall be determined under the rules of paragraph (a) of this section. If the loss exceeds income in the analogous income category (or categories) to which the loss is carried, the overall foreign loss shall be allocated to other foreign source income (if any) earned by the taxpayer in the carry over year in accordance with the rules set forth in section 904(f)(5). If a loss remains after application of section 904(f)(5), the loss shall be allocated to U.S. source income, which will create an addition to the taxpayer's overall foreign loss account.

(2) Example. The following example illustrates the rule of paragraph (b)(1).

Example. Z is a domestic corporation which has a branch operation in Country D. For its taxable year ending December 31, 1988, Z has $100 of passive income and $200 of general limitation income. Z also has a $60 net operating loss which was carried forward pursuant to section 172 from its 1986 taxable year. The net operating loss resulted from an overall foreign loss attributable to a general limitation loss. Z can demonstrate that the loss is a shipping loss. Therefore, the net operating loss will be treated as a shipping loss for Z's taxable year. Pursuant to section 904(f)(5), the shipping loss will be allocated as follows: $20 ($60 × 100/300) will be allocated to Z's passive income and $40 ($60 × 200/300) will be allocated to Z's general limitation income. Accordingly, after application of section 904(f), Z has $80 of passive income and $160 of general limitation income for its 1988 taxable year. Although no addition to Z's overall foreign loss account for shipping income will result from the NOL carry forward, shipping income earned by Z in subsequent taxable years will be subject to recharacterization as passive income and general limitation income pursuant to the rules set forth in section 904(f)(5).

(c) Treatment of overall foreign losses that are part of net operating losses incurred in post-effective data taxable years which are carried back to pre-effective date taxable years—

(1) Allocation to analogous income category. An overall foreign loss that is part of a net operating loss incurred by the taxpayer in a post-effective date taxable year which is carried back, pursuant to section 172, to a pre-effective date taxable year shall be allocated first to income in the pre-effective date income category analogous to the income category set forth in section 904(d) as in effect for post-effective date taxable years in which the loss occurred. Except for the general limitation income category, the pre-effective date income category that is analogous to a post-effective date income category shall be determined under paragraph (a)(i) through (iv) of this section. The general limitation income category for pre-effective date years shall be treated as the income category that is analogous to the post-effective date categories for general limitation income, financial services income, shipping income, dividends from each noncontrolled section 902 corporation and high withholding tax interest income. If the net operating loss resulted from separate limitation losses in more than one post-effective date income category and more than one loss is carried back to pre-effective date general limitation income, then the losses shall be allocated to the pre-effective date general limitation income based on the following formula:

$$\text{Pre-effective date general limitation income} \times \frac{\text{Loss in each post-effective date separate limitation category that is analogous to pre-effective date } \textit{general limitation income}}{\text{Loss in all post-effective categories that are analogous to pre-effective date general limitation income.}}$$

(2) Allocation to U.S. source income. If an overall foreign loss is carried back to a pre-effective date taxable year and the loss exceeds the foreign source income in the analogous category for the carry back year, the remaining loss shall be allocated against U.S. source income as set forth in §1.904(f)–3. The amount of the loss that offsets U.S. source income must be added to the taxpayer's overall foreign loss account. An addition to an overall foreign loss account resulting from the carry back of a net operating loss incurred by a taxpayer in a post-effective date taxable year shall be treated as having been incurred by the taxpayer in the year in which the loss arose and shall be subject to recapture pursuant to section 904(f) as in effect for post-effective date taxable years.

(3) Allocation to other separate limitation categories. To the extent that an overall foreign loss that is carried back as part of a net operating loss exceeds the separate limitation income to which it is allocated and the U.S. source income of the taxpayer for the taxable year to which the loss is carried, the loss shall be allocated pro rata to other separate limitation income of the taxpayer for the taxable year. However, there shall be no recharacterization of separate limitation income pursuant to section 904(f)(5) as a result of the allocation of a net operating loss to other separate limitation income of the taxpayer.

(4) Examples. The following examples illustrate the rules of paragraph (c)(1).

Example (1). X is a domestic corporation which has a branch operation in Country A. For its taxable year ending December 31, 1987, X has a $60 net operating loss which is carried back pursuant to section 172 to its taxable year ending December 31, 1985. The net operating loss resulted from a shipping loss; X had no U.S. source income in 1987. X had $20 of general limitation income, $40 of DISC limitation income and $10 of U.S. source income for its 1985 taxable year. The $60 NOL is allocated first to X's 1985 general limitation income to the extent thereof ($20) since the general limitation income category of section 904(d) as in effect for pre-effective date taxable years is the income category that is analogous to shipping income for post-effective date taxable years. Therefore, X has no general limitation income for its 1985 taxable year. Next, pursuant to section 904(f) as in effect for pre-effective date taxable years, the remaining $40 of the NOL is allocated first to X's $10 of U.S. source income and then to $30 of X's DISC limitation income for its 1985 taxable year. Accordingly, X has no U.S. source income and $10 of DISC limitation income for its 1985 taxable year after allocation of the NOL. X has a $10 balance in its shipping overall foreign loss account which is subject to recapture pursuant to section 904(f) as in effect for post-effective date taxable years. X will not be required to recharacterize, pursuant to section 904(f)(5), subsequent shipping income as DISC limitation income.

Example (2). Y is a domestic corporation which has a branch operation in Country B. For its taxable year ending December 31, 1987, X has a $200 net operating loss which is carried back pursuant to section 172 to its taxable year ending December 31, 1986. The net operating loss resulted from a ($100) general limitation loss and a ($100) shipping loss. Y had $100 of general limitation income and $200 of U.S. source income for its taxable year ending December 31, 1986. The separate limitation losses are allocated pro rata to Y's 1986 general limitation income as follows: $50 of the ($100) general limitation loss ($100 × 100/200) and $50 of the ($100) shipping loss ($100 × 100/200) is allocated to Y's $100 of 1986 general limitation income. The remaining $50 of Y's general limitation loss and the remaining $50 of Y's shipping loss are allocated to Y's 1986 U.S. source income. Accordingly, Y has no foreign source income and $100 of U.S. source income for its 1986 taxable year. Y has a $50 balance in its general limitation overall foreign loss account and a $50 balance in its shipping overall foreign loss account, both of which will be subject to recapture pursuant to section 904(f) as in effect for post-effective date taxable years.

(d) Recapture of FORI and general limitation overall foreign losses incurred in taxable years beginning before January 1, 1983. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, and before January 1, 1991, the rules set forth in §1.904(f)-6 shall apply for purposes of recapturing general limitation and foreign oil related income (FORI) overall foreign losses incurred in taxable years beginning before January 1, 1983 (pre-1983). For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1990, the rules set forth in this section shall apply for purposes of recapturing pre-1983 general limitation and FORI overall foreign losses.

(e) Recapture of pre-1983 overall foreign losses determined on a combined basis. The rules set forth in paragraph (a)(2) of this section shall apply for purposes of recapturing overall foreign losses incurred in taxable years beginning before January 1, 1983, that were computed on a combined basis in accordance with §1.904(f)-1(c)(1).

Part IV.—Domestic International Sales Corporations
Subpart A.—Treatment of Qualifying Corporations

Section 993.—Definitions

26 CFR 1.993-1: Definition of qualified export receipts.

DISC; definitions; qualified export receipts. Gross receipts from the sale in 1984 of personal care products ot overseas U.S. military post and base exchanges and commissary stores are qualified export receipts under section 993(a)(1) of the Code. Rev. Rul. 73-71 is modified.

Rev. Rul. 88-11

ISSUE

Are the gross receipts of a domestic international sales corporation ("DISC") from the sale in 1984 of personal care products to commissary stores and post and base exchanges located on United States military installations in foreign countries "qualified export receipts" under section 993(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986?

FACTS

X, a domestic corporation, manufactures personal care products. During 1984, X sold these products to Y, a domestic corporation owned by X that qualified as a DISC for 1984 under section 992(a) of the Code. Y resold the product to post and base exchanges and commissary stores located on United States military installations in foreign countries. The products were "export property" within the meaning of section 993(c).

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 993(a)(1) of the Code defines the "qualified export receipts" of a DISC to include gross receipts from the sale of export property. Section 993(a)(2)(C) provides in part that the Secretary may exclude from qualified export receipts the receipts of a DISC from the sale of export property for the use of the United States or any instrumentality thereof, where the use of the property is required by law or regulations.

Rev. Rul. 73-71, 1973-1 C.B. 361, considers whether receipts from a DISC's sale of export property to the Department of Defense for resale at overseas post and base exchanges and commissaries constitute qualified export receipts. The ruling holds that the post and base exchange receipts are qualified export receipts, but the commissary receipts are not because the Department of Defense purchases commissary property using appropriated funds that are subject to the Armed Services Procurement Regulations. The ruling does not cite a provision of those regulations requiring the use of the property.

Section 1.993-1(j)(4)(i) of the Income Tax Regulations, promulgated after Rev. Rul. 73-71 was issued, provides that receipts from a DISC's sale of export property to the Department of Defense for overseas use are not qualified export receipts if the property is purchased from appropriated funds that are subject to any provisions of the Armed Forces Procurement Regulations, or of any Department of Defense appropriations act, that restricts use of the funds to the procurement of items that are grown, reprocessed, reused, or produced in the United States. No law or regulation applicable to the commissary sales contains this restriction; in fact, the Armed Forces Procurement Regulations explicitly exempt property purchased for commissary resale from any such requirement. See 32 C.F.R. section 6-103.7 (1984). The portion of Rev. Rul. 73-71 dealing with commissary sales is therefore inconsistent with section 1.993-1(j)(4)(i) of the Income Tax Regulations.

HOLDING

Y's gross receipts from the sale in 1984 of personal care products to overseas United States military post and base exchanges and commissary stores are qualified export receipts under section 993(a)(1) of the Code.

EFFECT ON OTHER REVENUE RULINGS

Rev. Rul. 73-71 is modified.

Subchapter O.—Gain or Loss on Disposition of Property
Part II.—Basis Rules of General Application

Section 1012.—Basis of Property—Cost

26 CFR 1.1012-1: Basis of property.

In order to determine the basis of each item in an investment unit, consisting of a share of common stock and a separately tradeable contingent payment right, the purchase price of the unit must be allocated between the share of common stock and the contingent payment right on the basis of the fair market value of each on the date of issuance. See Rev. Rul. 88-31, page 302.

Part III.—Common Nontaxable Exchanges

Section 1032.—Exchange of Stock for Property

If a corporation issues an investment unit, consisting of a share of common stock and a contingent payment right that for federal income tax purposes is a cash settlement put option, it recognizes no gain or loss on the repurchase (including payment on the right) or the lapse of the right. See Rev. Rul. 88-31, page 302.

Section 1033.—Involuntary Conversions

26 CFR 1.1033(a)-2: Involuntary conversion into similar property, into money or into dissimilar property.

Federal income tax consequences of an election under section 1033 of the Code pursuant to section 1071 where qualified replacement property is not obtained by the taxpayer within the time prescribed by section 1033(a). See Rev. Rul. 88-39, page 299.

Section 1059.—Corporate Shareholder's Basis in Stock Reduced by Nontaxed Portion of Extraordinary Dividends

Election; fair market value; corporations; aggregation of dividends. For purposes of the dividend aggregation rules in section 1059(c)(3)(A) and 1059(c)(3)(B) of the Code, rules are provided for determining the fair market value of stock if a corporate shareholder makes the election under section 1059(c)(4).

Rev. Rul. 88-49

ISSUE

If a corporate shareholder makes the election under section 1059(c)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code to substitute the fair market value of stock as of the day before the ex-dividend date for the shareholder's adjusted basis in the stock in determining whether a dividend is "extraordinary," how is the fair market value determined in situations to which the dividend aggregation rules in section 1059(c)(3)(A) and 1059(c)(3)(B) apply?

FACTS

Situation 1.

On November 30, 1986, corporation W purchased common stock in corporation X for $90 a share. During 1987, X made dividend distributions, as shown in Table 1, which W received. On July 1, 1987, W sold its shares of X stock for $90.20 a share. W made the election under section 1059(c)(4) of the Code to substitute the fair market value of the X stock for W's adjusted basis in that stock in determining whether the aggregated dividend is an extraordinary dividend.

Table 1

Amount of Dividend	Declaration Date	Payment Date	Ex-Dividend Date	FMV on Day Before Ex-Dividend Date
$5.00	February 1, 1987	March 31, 1987	March 1, 1987	$100
$4.80	April 1, 1987	May 31, 1987	May 1, 1987	$ 95

Situation 2.

On November 30, 1986, corporation Y purchased common stock in corporation Z for $90 a share. During 1987, Z made dividend distributions, as shown in Table 2, which Y received. On December 1, 1987, Y sold its shares of Z stock for $80 a share. Y made the election under section 1059(c)(4) of the Code to substitute the fair market value of the Z stock for Y's adjusted basis in the stock in determining whether the dividends are extraordinary.

$6.00	October 1, 1987	November 30, 1987	November 1, 1987	$86

Situation 3.

The facts are the same as in Situation 2 except that Y did not sell its Z stock on December 1, 1987, and, as shown in Table 3, in the spring of 1988, Z made an additional dividend distribution, which Y received. On May 1, 1988, Y sold its shares of Z stock for $103 a share. Y made the election under section 1059(c)(4) of the Code to substitute the fair market value of the Z stock for Y's adjusted basis in the stock in determining whether the dividends are extraordinary.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1059(a)(1) of the Code, as amended by section 614(a)(1) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (1986 Act), 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 168, provides that, in general, if a corporation receives an extraordinary dividend with respect to any share of stock and such corporation has not held such stock for more than 2 years before the dividend announcement date, the basis of such corporation in such stock shall be reduced (but not below zero) by the nontaxed portion of the dividend.

Section 1059

Under section 1059(b) of the Code, the nontaxed portion of any dividend generally equals the amount of any deduction allowable with respect to such dividend under section 243, 244, or 245.

Under section 1059(c)(1) of the Code, the term "extraordinary dividend" generally means any dividend with respect to a share of stock if the amount of the dividend equals or exceeds the "threshold percentage" (5 percent for preferred stock, 10 percent otherwise, as specified in section 1059(c)(2)) of the taxpayer's adjusted basis in the share of stock.

Under section 1059(c)(3)(A) of the Code, all dividends that are received by a taxpayer with respect to any share of stock and that have ex-dividend dates within the same period of 85 consecutive days are treated as one dividend. Under section 1059(c)(3)(B), all dividends that are received by a taxpayer with respect to any share of stock and that have ex-dividend dates during the same period of 365 consecutive days are treated as extraordinary dividends if the aggregate of the dividends exceeds 20 percent of the taxpayer's adjusted basis in the stock (determined without regard to section 1059).

Section 1059(c)(4) of the Code, as added by section 614(b) of the 1986 Act, 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 169, provides that if the taxpayer establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary the fair market value of any share of stock as of the day before the ex-dividend date, the taxpayer may elect to apply sections 1059(c)(1) and (3) by substituting this value for the taxpayer's adjusted basis.

Rev. Proc. 87-33, 1987-2 C.B. 402, provides guidance to corporate shareholders on how to establish the fair market value of stock for purposes of the election under section 1059(c)(4) of the Code.

Section 1059(d)(6) of the Code defines the term "dividend announcement date," with respect to any dividend, as the date on which the corporation declares, announces, or agrees to the payment of the dividend, whichever is the earliest.

Under section 614(f) of the 1986 Act, 1986-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 171, section 1059(c)(4) of the Code generally applies to dividends declared after July 18, 1986, in tax years ending after that date.

Section 1059 was added to the Code by section 53(a) of the Tax Reform Act of 1984, 1984-3 (Vol. 1) C.B. 73. Congress was concerned with several types of tax-motivated transactions that were encouraged primarily by the fact that a corporation owning stock in another corporation generally is allowed a dividend deduction (equal to 80 percent under section 243(a)(1), 85 percent prior to the amendment by section 611(a)(1) of the 1986 Act) of the amount of any dividends received with respect to that stock. A corporation would buy stock in another corporation (before the ex-dividend date) in anticipation of receiving a large (extraordinary) dividend that would be eligible for the dividends received deduction and that would reduce the value of the stock after receipt of the dividend. After receiving the dividend, the corporation would then sell the stock and claim the loss resulting from the decline in value of the stock as short-term capital loss that could offset unrelated short-term capital gain. See S. Rep. No. 169, 98th Cong., 2d Sess. 170 (1984).

Congress enacted section 1059 of the Code to prevent this type of transaction and similar tax-motivated transactions. As orginally enacted, section 1059 provided generally that if a corporate shareholder received an extraordinary dividend on stock and disposed of the stock without having held it for more than 1 year, then the basis of the stock must be reduced by the nontaxed portion of the dividend.

Section 1059 of the Code proved to be an inadequate deterrent to the tax-motivated transactions at which the provision was directed because, simply by holding stock beyond the 1-year holding period, taxpayers were able to obtain the tax benefits that Congress intended to curtail. Therefore, in the 1986 Act Congress amended section 1059 by providing for a holding period beginning 2 years before the dividend announcement date, rather than the original holding period extending 1 year after the date of acquisition.

Congress decided, however, that it was appropriate:

> to mitigate the application of [the modification of the holding period] to extraordinary dividends as defined under present law where the shareholder can demonstrate that the stock has significantly appreciated since the shareholder's original investment. Accordingly, the [Senate] bill provides an alternative test for whether a dividend is extraordinary based on the fair market value of the stock, but only in situations in which the taxpayer is able to establish the fair market value of the stock to the satisfaction of the Commissioner.

S. Rep. No. 313, 99th Cong., 2d Sess. 250 (1986), 1986-3 (Vol. 3) C.B. 250.

The above-described legislative history indicates that although section 1059 of the Code was enacted as an anti-abuse provision, the legislative intent of the fair market value election in section 1059(c)(4) was to provide relief from the basis reduction rule of section 1059(a)(1) in situations where the fair market value of stock has significantly appreciated.

Section 1059(c)(3)(A) of the Code treats dividends received by a taxpayer within the same 85-day aggregation period as one dividend. By contrast, section 1059(c)(3)(B) treats dividends received by a taxpayer within the 365-day aggregation period as separate dividends, although the amounts of those dividends are aggregated for purposes of making the extraordinary dividend determination. Because the aggregation periods operate differently, different rules are appropriate for determining the fair market value of stock under the two aggregation rules.

The proper value to use in the case of the 85-day aggregation period is the fair market value of the stock on the day before the first ex-dividend date. Under section 1059(c)(3)(A) of the Code, multiple dividends within the aggregation period should have the same tax result as a single dividend for the aggregated amount. A single dividend has only one ex-dividend date, and the value of the day before that ex-dividend date has not yet been reduced by the stock going ex-dividend. Analogously, because section 1059(c)(3)(A) treats multiple dividends as a single dividend, only one ex-dividend date in the 85-day aggregation period should be used in applying the test, and the value taken into account should be unaffected by the stock being ex-dividend with respect to any portion of the aggregated dividends. The only date the value of the stock is unaffected by the payment of the dividends is the day before the first ex-dividend date. Moreover, if favorable market conditions cause the fair market value of the stock to increase, using a value other than that on the day before the first ex-dividend date, such as the highest value, could result in an extraordinary dividend being cured by a subsequent dividend. In other words, the aggregated dividend tested against the higher value might not be extraordinary, even though the first dividend, standing alone, would have been extraordinary. There is no reason to believe that section 1059(c)(3)(A) contemplates the possibility of such a cure.

With respect to the 365-day aggregation period, the Code does not treat multiple dividends as one. Rather, the aggregate amount of dividends is used to determine whether each dividend is extraordinary. Because the election in section 1059(c)(4) is designed to mitigate the effects of appreciation, the rule for determining fair market value must take into account that over a 365-day period there is a greater likelihood of appreciation in the value of the stock than over the 85-day period. The fair market value on the day before the first ex-dividend date will not reflect subsequent appreciation in the value of the stock within the 365-day aggregation period. However, the use of a weighted average of the fair market values of the stock on the days before the ex-dividend dates most accurately reflects the value of the stock when the multiple dividends are made. Therefore, for purposes of the 365-day aggregation period of section 1059(c)(3)(B), corporate shareholders making the section 1059(c)(4) election must use the weighted average of the fair market values of the stock on the days before the ex-dividend dates.

HOLDINGS

Situation 1. Because the February 1, 1987, and April 1, 1987, dividends have ex-dividend dates within the same period of 85 consecutive days, section 1059(c)(3)(A) of the Code requires that the two dividends be treated as one dividend in the amount of $9.80. In determining whether that dividend is an extraordinary dividend within the meaning of section 1059(c), W must use the fair market value of the X stock ($100) on February 28, 1987, because that fair market value was the fair market value of the X stock on the day before the first ex-dividend date in the aggregation period. Because the amount of the aggregated dividend ($9.80) does not equal to exceed 10 percent of the fair market value ($100) of the X stock on February 28, 1987, the dividend is not an extraordinary dividend under section 1059(c).

Situation 2.

Because the February 1, 1987, June 1, 1987, and October 1, 1987, dividends have ex-dividend dates within the same period of 365 consecutive days, section 1059(c)(3)(B) of the Code requires that the amounts of the three dividends be aggregated. In determining whether the three dividends are extraordinary dividends, Y must use the weighted average of the fair market values of the Z stock on the days before the ex-dividend dates. Because the aggregated amount of the three dividends ($19) exceeds 20 percent of that weighted average ($92.68, which was derived as [(7 × $99) + (6 × $92) + (6× $86)]/19, the three dividends are treated as extraordinary dividends. Moreover, because Y did not hold the Z stock for more than 2 years before the dividend announcement dates, Y must reduce its basis in the Z stock by the nontaxed portion of the dividends.

Situation 3.

Because, as in Situation 2, the February 1, 1987, June 1, 1987, and October 1, 1987, dividends have ex-dividend dates within the same period of 365 consecutive days, and because the aggregated amount of these dividends exceeds 20 percent of the weighted average of the fair market value of the Z stock on the days before the three ex-dividend dates, the three dividends are extraordinary.

Section 1059(c)(3)(B) of the Code requires that the amounts of the June 1, 1987, October 1, 1987, and March 1, 1988, dividends be aggregated to test for extraordinary dividends, because these dividends also have ex-dividend dates within a period of 365 consecutive days. Every 365 day period must be tested independently. The aggregated amount of these three dividends ($19) does not exceed 20 percent of the weighted average fair market value of $100.42 ([(6 × $92) + (6 × $86) + (7 × $120)]/19). However, because the June 1, 1987, and October 1, 1987, dividends are already extraordinary dividends, these two dividends remain extraordinary. Only the March 1, 1988, dividend is not an extraordinary dividend.

Part V.—Changes to Effectuate F.C.C. Policy

Section 1071.—Gain From Sale or Exchange to Effectuate Policies Of F.C.C.

26 CFR 1.1071-2: Nature and effect of election.
(Also Section 1033; 1.1033(a)-2.)

Sale to effectuate policies of F.C.C.; elections. A taxpayer who elected on a timely filed return the provisions of section 1033 of the Code pursuant to section 1071(a) and subsequently was unable to acquire qualified replacement property within the time prescribed by section 1033(a) may not then elect on a return for a subsequent year to reduce the basis of other depreciable property pursuant to section 1071(a) and section 1.1071-3 of the regulations.

Rev. Rul. 88-39

ISSUE

If a taxpayer elected under section 1071(a) of the Internal Revenue Code to treat the sale of a broadcasting station as an involuntary conversion within the meaning of section 1033(a) but was unable to acquire replacement property, may the taxpayer subsequently elect to defer recognition of the gain on such sale by reducing the basis of other depreciable property in accordance with the regulations under section 1071(a)?

FACTS

The taxpayer, a domestic corporation, was required by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) to sell a broadcasting station. The taxpayer received a certificate from the FCC stating that the sale was necessary to effectuate a change in policy of the FCC with respect to ownership or control of broadcasting stations.

The taxpayer sold the station in 1984. When the taxpayer filed its federal income tax return for 1984, it attached a statement, in duplicate, electing under section 1071(a) of the Code to treat the sale as an involuntary conversion under section 1033. The statement was signed in the manner required by section 1.1071-4(a) of the Income Tax Regulations. The taxpayer also attached a copy of the certificate received from the FCC.

Unable to find qualified replacement property, the taxpayer, in its 1986 return, sought to elect under section 1071(a) of the Code and section 1.1071-3 of the regulations to reduce the basis of depreciable property that it had owned immediately after the 1984 sale or had acquired in the year of sale.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Section 1071(a) of the Code provides that if the sale or exchange of property (including stock in a corporation) is certified by the FCC to be necessary or appropriate to effectuate a change in a policy of, or the adoption of a new policy by, the FCC with respect to the ownership and control of radio broadcasting stations, such sale or exchange, upon election by the taxpayer, shall be treated as an involuntary conversion within the meaning of section 1033.

Further, section 1071(a) of the Code and section 1.1071-3(a)(1) of the regulations provide that the part of the gain, if any, on such sale or exchange to which section 1033 is not applied shall nevertheless not be recognized, if the taxpayer so elects, to the extent that that part of the gain is applied to reduce the basis for determining gain or loss on sale or exchange of property of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation under section 167 remaining in the hands of the taxpayer immediately after the sale or exchange, or acquired in the same tax year. Any election made by the taxpayer under section 1071 shall be made by a statement to that effect in the return for the tax year in which the sale or exchange takes place, and such election shall be binding for the tax year and all subsequent tax years.

Section 1.1071-2(a) of the regulations states:

> (1) A taxpayer entitled to the benefits of section 1071 in respect of a sale or exchange of property may elect—
>
> (i) To treat such sale or exchange as an involuntary conversion under the provisions of section 1033; or
>
> (ii) To treat such sale or exchange as an involuntary conversion under the provisions of section 1033, and in addition elect to reduce the basis of property, in accordance with the regulations prescribed in [section] 1.1071-3, by all or part of the gain that would otherwise be recognized under section 1033; or
> (iii) To reduce the basis of property, in accordance with the regulations prescribed in [section] 1.1071-3, by all or part of the gain realized upon the sale or exchange.

Section 1.1071-2(a)(2) of the regulations states that the effect of section 1.1071-2(a)(1) is, in general, to grant the taxpayer an election to treat the proceeds of the sale or exchange as the proceeds of an involuntary conversion subject to the provisions of section 1033 of the Code, and a further election to reduce the basis of certain property owned by the taxpayer by the amount of the gain realized upon the sale or exchange to the extent of the portion of the proceeds which is not treated as the proceeds of an involuntary conversion.

Section 1.1071-3(a)(1) of the regulations provides that the election to reduce basis under section 1071 of the Code applies only with respect to the cost or other basis of property that is of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation under section 167, and is either in the hands of the taxpayer at the time of the sale or exchange or acquired by the taxpayer in the same taxable year as the year of the sale or exchange.

Section 1.1071-4(a) of the regulations provides that an election under section 1071 of the Code to reduce the basis of property and an election under such section to treat the sale or exchange as an involuntary conversion under section 1033 may be exercised independently of each other. An election under section 1071 must be filed with the return for the tax year in which the sale or exchange occurs. Where practicable, the certificate of the FCC should be filed with the election.

Section 1033(a) of the Code provides that if property is involuntarily converted into money and the taxpayer, during the period specified, purchases other property similar or related in service or use to the property so converted, then at the election of the taxpayer the gain shall be recognized only to the extent that the amount realized upon such conversion exceeds the cost of such other property. As a general rule the converted property must be replaced before the expiration of two years after the close of the first tax year in which any part of the gain upon the conversion is realized.

In Cloutier v. United States, 709 F.2d 480 (7th Cir. 1983), the court held that an election pursuant to section 1071 of the Code may not be made on an amended federal income tax return. The Internal Revenue Service agrees with this holding. See Rev. Rul. 79-277, 1979-2 C.B. 300. However, in dicta, the Cloutier opinion indicates that a taxpayer who makes a valid election under section 1071 to defer the recognition of gain under section 1033 but is unable to find suitable replacement property can change its election and instead defer the recognition of gain by reducing the basis of depreciable property in accordance with section 1.1071-3 of the regulations. 709 F.2d at 484-85. The Service disagrees with this conclusion. This revenue ruling explains the Service's position that a taxpayer cannot make a subsequent election to reduce basis.

Section 1071 of the Code provides two methods by which a taxpayer may defer the gain resulting from the sale or exchange of property if such sale or exchange is appropriately certified by the FCC. First, the taxpayer may treat the sale or exchange as an involuntary conversion under section 1033 and determine the amount of gain to be recognized under the provisions of section 1033, as modified by section 1071, together with the regulations prescribed under such sections. Second, the taxpayer may elect to defer the gain by reducing the basis of qualified depreciable property by the amount of such gain. Section 1071(a) and the regulations thereunder provide, however, that such other property must be in the hands of the taxpayer immediately after the sale or exchange, or acquired in the same tax year. In addition, the regulations state that in the case of property in the hands of the taxpayer, the time of reduction of the basis is the date of the sale or exchange; in all other cases the time of reduction of the basis is the date of acquisition. See section 1.1071-3(a)(1). Thus, in no event could the time of the reduction in basis be later than the end of the tax year in which the sale or exchange occurred.

Section 1071(a) of the Code and the regulations thereunder further provide that an election under that section is binding for the tax year of the sale or exchange and all subsequent tax years. The regulations thereunder state that the alternative elections under section 1071 to reduce the basis of property or to treat the sale or exchange as an involuntary conversion under section 1033 may be exercised independently of each other. Section 1.1071-4(a) of the regulations. The legislative history of section 112(m) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1939 (the predecessor of section 1071) indicates that the alternative elections are "separate and distinct elections which may be exercised independently of each other. However, either election once made is binding as to the particular sale or exchange for the taxable year and all subsequent taxable years." H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 1079, 78th Cong., 2d Sess. 50 (1944), 1944 C.B. 1059, 1066.

The last sentence discussing this issue in the conference committee report is particularly relevant. It states:

> An election to reduce the basis of property remaining in the hands of the taxpayer may not be made with respect to any portion of the proceeds of the sale or exchange used to establish a replacement fund pursuant to an election to have the benefits of section 112(f) [the predecessor of section 1033] even though the entire amount of such fund is not subsequently expended in the acquisition of property similar or related in service or use to the property disposed of.

H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 1079 at 50, 1944 C.B. at 1066.

Thus, Congress intended that if a taxpayer elected to treat a sale or exchange as an involuntary conversion and it was necessary to establish a replacement fund because the property could not be replaced immediately, then any unexpended portions of the fund could not be subsequently used to reduce the basis of property remaining in the hands of the taxpayer. Section 1033 of the Code no longer requires the use of a replacement fund. This does not, however, diminish the significance of the legislative intent to prohibit the consecutive use of section 1033 and the basis reduction provisions of section 1071 on the same proceeds from a qualifying sale or exchange. Such a conclusion is supported by the regulations, which, as noted above, require that the reduction in basis take place no later than the end of the tax year in which the sale or exchange occurs.

An example in section 1.1071-2(c) of the regulations illustrates how a taxpayer, with respect to a single transaction, can avail itself of the two elections provided under section 1071 of the Code. In the example, unlike the facts presented by this revenue ruling, the taxpayer acquired qualified replacement property under section 1033 prior to filing its return for the taxable year in which the sale or exchange eligible for FCC certification took place. The example demonstrates how, on the return for the taxable year in which the sale or exchange takes place, the taxpayer may allocate the sale or exchange proceeds between section 1033 replacement property and basis reduction under section 1.1071-3 of the regulations.

In addition, with respect to a single transaction, a taxpayer may also use a combination of the two elections provided in section 1071 of the Code, even though the taxpayer does not acquire replacement property under section 1033 of the Code prior to filing its return for the tax year in which the sale or exchange took place. On this return, the taxpayer may both elect to reduce the basis of assets by a specified amount of the gain realized on the sale or exchange and also elect to treat the sales proceeds, less the amount of gain so specified, as the proceeds of an involuntary conversion. By acquiring qualifying replacement property within the time period prescribed by section 1033(a)(2), the taxpayer may then avoid recognition of some or all of the part of the gain that was realized on the sale or exchange and that was not applied to reduce basis. No further basis reduction is then available for the amount that was so treated as the proceeds of an involuntary conversion but that was not used to purchase replacement property within the time period prescribed by section 1033(a)(2). See section 1.1033(a)-2(c)(2) for regulations applicable to the remaining portion of the sales proceeds.

If a taxpayer, however, makes both elections provided for in section 1.1071-2(a)1(ii) of the regulations, then the elections must be made on its return for the tax year in which the property is sold or exchanged, and the taxpayer must specify in those elections the amount that is subject to each. Even though the taxpayer cannot determine until the end of the 2-year replacement period the amount of gain that section 1033 of the Code requires to be recognized rather than deferred, specification of the amount subject to each of the elections may not be postponed until that time. That is, a taxpayer that makes both elections under section 1071 must make the elections on its return for the tax year of the sale or exchange, must identify in that return the amounts subject to each election, and may not defer until the end of the replacement period the specification of those amounts. A taxpayer attempting to defer that specification would be attempting to elect, with respect to the same proceeds, both involuntary conversion treatment and basis reduction. This would be contrary to the congressional intent that these are separate and independent elections.

HOLDING

If a taxpayer elected on a timely filed return the provisions of section 1033 of the Code pursuant to section 1071(a) and subsequently was unable to acquire qualified replacement property within the time prescribed by section 1033(a), the taxpayer may not then elect on a return for a subsequent year to reduce the basis of other depreciable property pursuant to section 1071(a) and section 1.1071-3 of the regulations. In addition, under Cloutier and Rev. Rul. 79-277, such an election to reduce basis cannot be made on an amended return for the tax year in which the sale or exchange took place.

Part VII.—Wash Sales; Straddles

Section 1092.—Straddles

26 CFR 1.1092(b)-2T: Treatment of holding periods and losses with respect to straddle positions.

If a holder of an investment unit, consisting of a share of common stock and a contingent payment payment right that for federal income tax purposes is a cash settlement put option, realizes a loss on the sale of the right, recognition of the loss generally is deferred until the share of stock is sold. See Rev. Rul. 88-31, below.

Subchapter P.—Capital Gains and Losses
Part III.—General Rules for Determining Capital Gains and Losses

Section 1222.—Other Terms Relating to Capital Gains and Losses

If a taxpayer holds a corporation's contingent payment right that for federal income tax purposes is a cash settlement put option, any gain or loss realized by the holder on the sale, lapse, or exercise of the right is recognized as short- or long-term capital gain or loss, depending on the holding period of the right. See Rev. Rul. 88-31, below.

Part IV.—Special Rules for Determining Capital Gains and Losses

Sections 1234.—Options to Buy or Sell

(Also Sections 1012, 1032, 1092, 1222, 1234A; 1.1012-1, 1.1092(b)-2T.)

Options; contingent payment right. If a corporation issues an investment unit consisting of a share of common stock and a contingent payment right the value of which varies inversely with the value of the stock, the contingent payment right is a cash settlement put option. The tax consequences to the corporate issuer and a holder of a unit or contingent payment right are addressed in various circumstances.

Rev. Rul. 88-31

ISSUES

1. If a corporation issues investment units such that each unit consists of a share of its common stock and a separately tradeable contingent payment right the value of which varies inversely with the value of the stock, what is the proper characterization of the contingent payment right for federal income tax purposes?

2. What are the federal income tax consequences to a taxpayer that holds both a share of the issuing corporation's common stock and a contingent payment right if the taxpayer sells the right or the share of stock, or if the taxpayer receives a payment upon maturity of the right? Alternatively, what are the tax consequences to a taxpayer that holds only a contingent payment right if the taxpayer sells the right or receives a payment upon maturity of the right?

3. What are the federal income tax consequences to the corporate issuer of the investment units upon the issuance of the units, upon a repurchase of a contingent payment right, or upon a payment by the issuer upon maturity of a right?

FACTS

X is a domestic corporation the common stock of which is widely held and publicly traded on a national securities exchange. In order to raise capital, X publicly issued investment units (Units), each of which consisted of one share of X common stock and one contingent payment right (Right). For a short period after the issuance of a Unit, the common stock and the Right were not separately transferable. Thereafter, the Right and the common stock could be traded separately on a national securities exchange.

The Units were issued for $10 each on a date when the X common stock was trading at $8 per share. The Rights provide that on the date (Payment Date) two years from the issue date, X will pay to the holder of a Right an amount (Payment) equal to $11 minus the then market price of a share of X common stock, subject to a maximum of twice the value, as of the Payment Date, of a share of X common stock. In any event, a $0.10 minimum Payment will be made in satisfaction of each Right.

Thus, under the terms of a Right, the maximum Payment that the holder of a Right may receive is $7.33, which will be received if the market price of X common stock on the Payment Date is $3.67. ($11 minus $3.67 equals $7.33, which does not exceed twice the value of X common stock ($3.67 × 2 = $7.34).) If the market price of X common stock on the Payment Date is less than $3.67, the holder will be limited to a payment of twice the value of the stock. Accordingly, the value of a Right varies inversely with the value of the underlying X common stock at X common stock prices between $10.90 and $3.67.

At its election, X can make the Payment by transferring its common stock of equal value (determined as of the Payment Date), by paying cash, or by transferring any combination of its common stock and cash. On the Payment Date, the rights of a holder of a Right will terminate without any action by the holder and will be automatically converted to the right to receive the Payment. The Payment, whether in cash, X common stock, or any combination thereof, will be mailed to holders of the Rights within five business days following the Payment Date.

The holder of a Right does not possess the right to vote, the right to receive dividends, the right to receive assets on liquidation of X, or the pre-emptive, preferential, or other right of first refusal to subscribe for or purchase stock of X

1. Characterization of the Rights

The federal income tax consequences of the issuance of the Units, sale of a Unit or a Right, or payment, or receipt of Payment, upon maturity of a Right first depend on whether the Rights are regarded as property separate from the common stock or are regarded as an attribute of the common stock giving the holder of a Unit the right to a distribution with respect to the stock. For the Rights to be considered an attribute of the stock, the right to Payment on the Payment Date generally must be inseparable from the other rights inherent in the stock. Rev. Rul. 75-33, 1975-1 C.B. 115, concerns a contingent right that is attached to convertible preferred stock to receive additional dividends if certain events occur during a 10-year period. The ruling concludes that the contingent right is a right inherent in the stock because the right is extinguished on conversion of the preferred stock into common stock. Compare Rev. Rul. 78-142, 1978-1

C.B. 111 (finding a single item of property), with Rev. Rul. 70-108, 1970-1 C.B. 78 (finding two items of property).

In the present situation, because the Rights may be traded separately from the stock, a holder of a Right could receive the Payment on the Payment Date without owning a share of stock in X. The short period after issuance during which the Rights cannot be traded separately from the common stock does not significantly affect the fact that the properties generally may be traded separately. In addition, a holder of both a Right and a share of X stock may receive Payment on the Right without giving up the share of X stock. Thus, the Rights are unlike conversion rights on certain instruments, which rights are not separate from the property that may be converted pursuant to the rights. Moreover, the value of the Rights varies inversely with the value of the common stock. Accordingly, for federal income tax purposes, the Rights are property that is separate from the common stock.

In order to determine the basis of each item of separate property that comprises the Unit, the $10 purchase price of a Unit must be allocated between the share of common stock and the Right on the basis of the fair market value of each on the date of issuance. Cf. section (1.1012-1(d) of the Income Tax Regulations. Thus, the portion of the $10 purchase price of the Unit that is attributable to the fair market value of the common stock on the date of issuance, $8, is the cost and basis of the stock, and the balance of the purchase price, $2, is the cost and basis of the Right. Section 1012 of the Code.

The federal income tax consequences resulting from transactions involving the Rights, as property separate from the common stock, depend on the nature of these Rights.

A "put" is an option to sell specified property, including corporate stock, at a stipulated price (the strike price) on or before a specific future date. This option to sell is granted by the writer to the holder and is generally granted for consideration, such as a cash payment. See Rev. Rul. 78-182, 1978-1 C.B. 265. A put is distinguishable from a stock purchase right, such as a call or a warrant. The value of a stock purchase right increases as the value of the stock increases. In contrast, as the value of the underlying property decreates, the value of the put increases. Thus, there is an inverse relationship between the value of a put and the value of the underlying property.

Section 1234(c)(2)(A) of the Code provides that, for purposes of section 1234(a) and (b), a cash settlement option shall be treated as an option to buy or sell property. Section 1234(c)(2)(B) defines a cash settlement option as any option that on exercise settles in (or could be settled in) cash or property other than the underlying property. Thus, cash settlement options call for, or permit, payment of trading profits or losses rather than delivery of the underlying property.

Over a wide range of reasonably anticipated values of X common stock, the holder of a Right in the instant case is in an economic position identical to the holder of a put with respect to X common stock. This is so because, in that range, the value of a Right increases as the value of the X common stock decreases. Further, the holder of a Right has a right to receive property based on the selling price of the X stock on a specific future date which right was granted for consideration. The fact that the holder of the Right does not have to deliver the underlying property to X but receives the payment as if the holder had purchased the property and sold it to X is characteristic of a cash settlement put option. Accordingly, for federal income tax purposes, a Right is a cash settlement put option. The facts that the Payment may be made in either cash or X stock at the option of X, that the Payment is to be made on a specified date, and that the Payment is limited by a ceiling of $7.33 and a floor of $0.10 are not inconsistent with characterizing a Right as a cash settlement put option. See section 1234(c)(2)(B) of the Code.

2. Tax Consequences to the Holder

Rev. Rul. 78-182, 1978-1 C.B. at 267, holds that the cost of a put is a nondeductible capital expenditure.

Section 1234(a)(1) of the Code provides, in relevant part, that, in the case of the holder of an option to buy or sell property, the gain or loss attributable to the sale or exchange of, or loss attributable to the failure to exercise, the option is considered gain or loss from the sale or exchange of property with the same character as the property to which the option relates would have in the hands of the taxpayer. Section 1234(a)(2) provides that, if an option lapses (that is, expires without being exercised), it is deemed to have been sold or exchanged on the date it expires. Section 1234(c)(2)(A) provides that a cash settlement option is treated as an option to buy or sell property for purposes of section 1234(a) or (b). The purpose of section 1234(c)(2)(A) is "to clarify that gain or loss on the sale, exchange, lapse, or exercise of the [cash settlement] option is capital gain or loss with respect to grantors or holders." H.R. Rep. No. 861, 98th Cong., 2d Sess. 904 (1984), 1984-3 (Vol. 2) C.B. 158. Accordingly, if a cash settlement option is in fact settled in cash, the transaction is treated as a sale or exchange of the option. Thus, if the underlying property would be a capital asset in the hands of the taxpayer, gain or loss on the transaction is considered gain or loss from the sale or exchange of a capital asset.

Section 1234A of the Code provides, in relevant part, that gain or loss attributable to the cancellation, lapse, expiration, or other termination of a right or obligation with respect to personal property (as defined in section 1092(d)(1)) which is (or on acquisition would be) a capital asset in the hands of the taxpayer shall be treated as gain or loss from the sale of a capital asset.

Section 1092(c)(1) of the Code provides that a "straddle" means offsetting positions with respect to personal property. Pursuant to section 1092(c)(2)(A), a taxpayer holds offsetting positions with respect to personal property if there is a substantial diminution of the risk of loss from holding any position with respect to personal property by reason of holding one or more other positions with respect to personal property, whether or not of the same kind.

Section 1092(d)(2) of the Code defines a "position" as an interest, including a futures or forward contract or option, in personal property.

Section 1092(d)(1) of the Code defines the term "personal property" as any personal property of a type which is actively traded. Section 1092(d)(3)(B)(I) provides that stock is "personal property" if the stock is part of a straddle in which at least one of the offsetting positions is an option with respect to that stock or substantially similar stock or securities.

Section 1092(a)(1)(A) of the Code provides that any loss with respect to one or more positions shall be taken into account for any taxable year only to the extent that the amount of such loss (the deferred loss) exceeds the unrecognized gain (if any) with respect to one or more positions which were offsetting positions with respect to one or more positions from which the loss arose. Section 1092(a)(1)(B) states that any loss which may not be taken into account under section 1092(a)(1)(A) for any taxable year can be carried forward to the succeeding taxable year, subject to the limitations of section 1092(a)(1)(A). Section 1092(a)(3)(A) provides that for any position held by the taxpayer at the close of the taxable year, unrecognized gain is the amount of gain that would be taken into account if the position were sold at its fair market value on the last business day of the taxable year.

Section 1.1092(b)-2T(a)(1) of the temporary Income Tax Regulations provides that a taxpayer's holding period for any position that is part of a straddle does not begin earlier than the date that the taxpayer no longer holds directly or indirectly (through a related person or flow-through entity) an offsetting position with respect to that position. However, pursuant to section 1.1092(b)-2T(a)(2), this holding period rule does not apply to a position that, before a straddle that includes such position is established, is held by a taxpayer for the long-term capital gains holding period (or longer).

Section 1.1092(b)-2T(b)(1) of the temporary regulations provides that a loss sustained on the disposition of one or more positions of a straddle is treated as long-term capital loss if: (i) on the date the taxpayer entered into the loss position, the taxpayer held directly or indirectly (through a related person or flowthrough entity) one or more offsetting positions with respect to the loss position; and (ii) all gain or loss with respect to one or more positions in the straddle would be treated as long-term capital gain or loss if such positions were disposed of on the day the taxpayer entered into the loss position.

In the present situation, as concluded above, a Right is a cash settlement put option, which is treated as an "option to buy or sell property" under section 1234(c)(2) of the Code. Therefore, a Right is an option within the meaning of section 1092(d)(3)(B)(i)(I). Because a Right serves to diminish substantially a stockholder's risk of loss from a decline in value of the X common stock, the Unit is a straddle as defined in section 1092(c)(1). A taxpayer is a holder of a straddle during the period the taxpayer holds both a Right and a share of X stock, regardless whether they were acquired as a Unit or separately.

For purposes of the following analysis, it is assumed that Rights or shares of X common stock are capital assets in the hands of the holder thereof, that the holder is not a dealer, and that no other positions offsetting to either the Rights or shares of X common stock are held by the holder thereof or by a related person to the holder within the meaning of section 1092(d)(4)(B) of the Code.

Sale of a Right

If a purchaser of a Unit sells the Right prior to the Payment Date, any gain or loss realized is a short-term capital gain or loss. Section 1.1092(b)-2T(a)(1) of the temporary regulations. Pursuant to section 1092(a) of the Code, if a loss is realized on the sale of the Right, recognition of the loss generally is deferred until the share of stock is sold. If, however, the loss from sale of a Right exceeds the unrecognized gain with respect to the stock, the loss can be recognized currently to the extent of the excess. The deferred loss can be carried forward to a succeeding taxable year subject to the rule set forth in section 1092(a)(1)(B). Under section 1.1092(b)-2T(a)(1), the holding period for the stock begins on the date the Right is sold.

If a taxpayer acquires only a Right and, at the time of the acquisition of the Right, the taxpayer has held a share of X common stock for less than the long-term capital gains holding period, or if the taxpayer acquires only a Right and then acquires a share of X common stock during a period less than the long-term capital gains holding period after the acquisition of the Right, the tax consequences to the taxpayer on the sale of the Right are the same as the tax consequences with respect to a taxpayer that purchased the Right, and the share of X common stock as a Unit.

If, at the time of the acquisition of the Right, a taxpayer has held a share of X common stock for the long-term capital gains holding period (or longer), any loss on the sale of the Right is a long-term capital loss. Section 1.1092(b)-2T(b)(1) of the temporary regulations. However, any gain on the sale of a Right under these circumstances is short-term capital gain. Section 1.1092(b)-2T(a)(1).

If, at the time of acquisition of a share of X common stock, a taxpayer has held a Right for the long-term capital gains holding period (or longer), the holding period for the Right begins on the date it was originally acquired, and any gain or loss on a sale of the Right is a long-term capital gain or loss. Section 1.1092(b)-2T(a)(2).

Lapse of a Right

If the value of the X common stock as of the Payment Date is $10.90 or more, a taxpayer holding a Right receives a Payment of $0.10 from X. The return of this de minimis amount in all events does not detract from the fact that, in substance, the Right has lapsed. The taxpayer's loss equals the amount paid for the Right less the $0.10 paid by X. For example, if the taxpayer acquired the Right on the issuance of the Units, the taxpayer's loss is $1.90 ($2.00 − $0.10). The characterization of the loss as short or long term and the timing of the recognition of the loss is the same in the case of a lapse of a Right as in the case of its sale, as discussed above. Section 1234A of the Code.

Receipt of Payment on the Payment Date

If a taxpayer holds a Right on the Payment Date and receives a Payment of more than $0.10, the taxpayer is treated as having exercised a cash settlement put option. As discussed above, exercise of a cash settlement option is treated as a sale or exchange of the option. Accordingly, the taxpayer realizes capital gain or loss in an amount equal to the difference between the amount of the Payment and the premium paid for the Right. The characterization of the gain or loss as short or long term and the timing of the recognition of the loss is the same in the case of a Payment as in the case of the sale of a Right, as discussed above.

If the Payment is made in X stock, the amount of the Payment is the fair market value of the stock. The taxpayer's basis in the X, stock equals the fair market value of that stock. Section 1012 of the Code. The holding period for the X stock begins on the day after the Payment Date. Rev. Rul. 70-598, 1970-2 C.B. 168.

Sale of Stock

If a taxpayer owns a Right and a share of X common stock, and sells the share of X common stock while retaining the Right, the characterization of the gain or loss as short or long term and the timing of the recognition of the loss on the sale of the share of X common stock is determined under the same principles that apply to the sale of a Right, as discussed above.

Taxpayer Acquires Only a Right

If the taxpayer acquires only a Right and either sells the Right or receives a Payment on the Payment Date, section 1092 of the Code and the regulations thereunder do not apply to the sale, lapse, or exercise of the Right. Accordingly, any gain or loss realized by the taxpayer on the sale, lapse, or exercise of a Right is recognized as a short- or long-term capital gain or loss, depending on the holding period for the Right. Section 1222.

3. Tax Consequences to the Issuer

If the writer of a put is also the issuer of the stock that is subject to the put, the rules applicable to a writer of a put apply, unless specific rules applying to transactions in which a corporation deals in its own stock override the rules applicable to the writer of a put.

Rev. Rul. 78-182 holds that the premium received for writing a put is not included in income at the time of receipt. Instead, it is carried in a deferred account until the writer's obligation expires through the passage of time, until the writer purchases the underlying stock pursuant to the exercise of the put, or until the writer engages in a closing transaction.

Section 1234(b)(1) of the Code provides that, in the case of a writer of an option in "property" as defined in section 1234(b)(2)(B), gain or loss from any closing transaction with respect to, and gain on lapse of, the option in property shall generally be treated as a gain or loss from the sale or exchange of a capital asset held for less than the long-term capital gains holding period. A closing transaction is defined in section 1234(b)(2)(A) as any termination of the taxpayer's obligation under an option in property other than through the exercise or lapse of the option. As discussed above, if a cash settlement option is in fact settled in cash, the transaction is treated as a sale or exchange of the option. Thus, for purposes of section 1234(b)(2)(A), cash settlement is treated as a closing transaction.

Section 1032(a) of the Code provides that no gain or loss shall be recognized to a corporation on the receipt of money or other property in exchange for stock (including treasury stock) of such corporation. Section 1032(a) further provides that no gain or loss shall be recognized by a corporation with respect to any lapse or acquisition of an option to buy or sell its stock (including treasury stock).

In the present situation, the writer of the Rights, which are cash settlement put options, is also the issuer of the stock that is the subject of the Rights. Section 1032(a) of the Code provides specific rules governing the tax consequences to an issuer on the lapse or acquisition of an option to buy or sell its stock. Since cash settlement of an option is treated as a sale or exchange of the option, transfer of Payment upon maturity of the Rights is treated as an acquisition of a put option with respect to the issuer's stock. Therefore, pursuant to section 1032(a), X recognizes no gain or loss on repurchase of the Rights (including transfer of Payment) or on their lapse (for example, a payment of $0.10). X also does not recognize a gain if it makes the Payments by issuing its own stock to a holder. See Rev. Rul. 62-617, 1962-2 C.B. 59.

Because, as discussed above, X recognizes no gain or loss on the repurchase of the Rights, or on Payment, X also recognizes no gain or loss on the issuance of the Rights, and X does not have to establish a deferred account for the proceeds from the issuance of the Rights.

HOLDINGS

1. A Unit issued by X is comprised of two separate items of property, a share of X common stock and a Right. A purchaser of a Unit has a basis in the common stock of $8 and a basis in the Right of $2. For federal income tax purposes, a Right is a cash settlement put option.

2. Because a Right substantially diminishes a stockholder's risk of loss from a decline in value of the X common stock and a Right constitutes an option within the meaning of section 1092(d)(3)(B)(i)(I) of the Code, a Unit is a straddle as defined in section 1092(c)(1). A taxpayer is a holder of a straddle during the period the taxpayer holds both a Right and a share of X common stock, regardless whether they were acquired as a Unit or separately.

The characterization of any gain or loss as short or long term and the timing of the recognition of any loss is governed by section 1092(a) of the Code and the temporary regulations under section 1092(b) in the following situations: The taxpayer is a holder of a straddle consisting of a Right and a share of X common stock and (a) the taxpayer sells the Right or the share of X common stock prior to the Payment Date, (b) the Right lapses (that is, there is a Payment of $0.10), or (c) the taxpayer receives a Payment of more than $0.10 on the Payment Date.

If the taxpayer acquires only a Right and then either sells the Right or receives a Payment on the Payment Date, section 1092 of the Code and the regulations thereunder do not apply. Accordingly, any gain or loss recognized by the taxpayer on the sale of the Right or on the lapse of or on the exercise of the Right is a short- or long-term capital gain or loss, depending on the holding period for the Right.

3. X recognizes no gain or loss on the issuance of the Units, on repurchase of the Rights (including transfer of Payment), or on lapse of the Rights.

Section 1234A.—Gains or Losses from Certain Terminations

If a holder of a corporation's contingent payment right that for federal income tax purposes is a cash settlement put option receives a minimum payment of a de minimis amount upon termination of the right, the right is treated as lapsing and the characterization of the loss as short or long term and the timing of the recognition of the loss is the same as in the case of a sale of the right. See Rev. Rul. 88-31, page 302.

Section 1253.—Transfers of Franchises, Trademarks, and Trade Names

Franchises; amortization deductions. If a franchise is transferred by a franchisee, then the transferee of the franchise may amortize the acquisition cost allocable to the franchise rights under section 1253(d)(2) of the Code.
